NYNE prayers are sett in the begi_~ni_~ge which doo last unto this prayer helisthemaht hazaram wherof the firste 8 are a preparatyon of the way to worke and to prepare the worke to obtayne but the 9 is off the effect of this worke as for the fyrst 8 they oughte to be sayd euery day that yow wil worke very early in the morninge before the breke of the daye and no more to be sayd that day and the 9 owght alwayes to be sayd in the beginninge of the prayers that foloweth those 8 and in the ende of them also,

after that there be othere 8 prayers folowing which be called the 8 termes and the be good to cause yow to obtayne your request at godes hande, so upon y^e fryday after that yow haue truly repented your selfe and confessyd yow shall fast breade and water and very early in the morninge before the breke of the daye thoe shalt say 10 prayers which thow shalte fynde wrytten after that is to say the 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and these muste ye saye wt greate deuocyon.

After that yow shall pawse a whyle remembring your petycion and rehersing it and then shall ye saye the 8 termes afore wrytten and in the ende of euery terme yow shall powse a lytle and rehearse your petycyon. After y^t [45r] when yow haue thus donne once in the morninge yow must doo so agayne abowt the 3 hower and lykewyse abowt the middaye & then yow may dyne.

The day folowinge y^t is to saye upon saturday yow moste doo euen as ye did the day before in any wyse upon the sonday yow shall doo lykewyse sauinge y^t yow shall nott fast but that yow may eatte fyshe or fleshe as ye will but moderately. Then after none, that is to saye when ye haue prayed 3 tymes, then in the nyghte folowinge shall be reuelyd unto yow by an angell whether yow shall obtayne your petycyon or noo.

Yf your petycyon be graunted then shall ye doo as yow shall be tawght in this booke, and yf hit be denyed then shall yow awayte another tyme and in the meane whyle ye shall prepare your selfe better that yow may obtayne your petycyon:

But here is to be noted that this prayer, "O Jesu the sonne," etc. with that prayer that foloweth, "Elyminator" be cause it is parte of the same prayer owght to be sayde thryse after euery tyme of your prayinge softly and allwayes at the ende of them to rehearse your petycyon then yf y^t be put backe that thow doest nott obtayne, then doo as yow dyd the fryday saturday and sonday before sauynge that upon the sonday in stede of your fast yow shall geue almose ["alms"] to 3 poore folke charytably and wt good deuocyon.

after that in the fyrst moone that is to say the munday folowinge doo as ye dydest before and after the same maner lykewyse the 2, 3, and 4 moone or munday and so euen to the ende that ^padneture god will haue mercy upon thé, but in the latter prayers Yu must change thy petycyon that is to saye Yu shallte nott desyer of god to graunte thé thy petycyon butt onely that he wyll haue mercy upon thé.

And it is to be noted that he that will saye those prayers or suche lyke must be chaste and cleane and he must say them with greate deuocyon and he that doth otherwyse he shall be openly plagued of god, in those greke, [45v] hebrue and chaldey prayers there be the most sacred and hooly names of god and his holy angells which owght nott to be spoke_~ of man but only thorow the mercy of godd, and when thow arte put bakke of thy request thow oughtst not to dispayre but truely to confesse thy selffe and not to dissemble with god and to serche thy conscyence thorowly and to geue almose ["alms"] largely, and to cause dyuerse massys to be sayd, and to say dyuers prayers knelyng upon thy knees and with bitter teeres to entrete and besiche almighty god to be merciful unto y^e ffor thus were the wyse men wont to doo to cume to theyr

This is Trithemius' most notorious work. On the surface it is a system of angel magic, but within is a highly sophisticated system of cryptography. It claims to contain a synthesis of the science of knowledge, the art of memory, magic, an accelerated language learning system, and a method of sending messages without symbols or messenger. In private circulation, the Steganographia brought such a reaction of fear that he decided it should never be published. He reportedly destroyed the more extreme portions (presumably instructions for prophecy/divination) but it continued to circulate in mss form and was eventually published posthumously in 1606.

Many of the details of the spirits described here also occur in Lemegeton.

Note on orthography: Because this work deals with hidden writing I have made every effort to preserve the original orthography. Because of the limitations of HTML, tildes (~) which appear above certain letters in the original text are here represented by the letter followed by the tilde, i.e.  is here written 'u~'. They generally represent 'n' or 'm'.  = 'q_e' = 'que'. The typographer's marks 'Schwartz' and 'Roth' evidently refer to text written with black and red ink in the original manuscript.

NTIQVISSIMOS Sapientes, quos Græco sermone Philosophos appellamus, si quæ vel naturæ, vel artis reperissent arcana, ne in prauorum hominum notitiam deuenirent, variis occultasse modis atque figuris, eruditissimorum opinio est. Moysen quoque israeliticae gentis famosissimum Ducem in descriptione creationis Coeli & Terrae ineffabilia mysteriorum arcana verbis operuisse simplicibus, doctiores quique Iudaeorum confirmant. Diuus etiam & inter nostros eruditissimus Hieronymus tot pene in Apocalypsi Ioannis mysteria latere affirmat, quot verba Graecorum Sapientes non paruae apud suos aestimationis praetereo: nostrossque & Philosophos & Poetas doctissimos intermitto, qui fabulis conscribendis operam nauantes, aliud imperitis, atque aliud eruditis hominib. vnus narrationis serie sagaci adinuatione tradiderunt. Hos ego Sapientiae studiosissimos amatores et si propter ingenij tarditaters perfecte imitari nequeo: admirari tamen & qua possum sedulitate legere non omitto. Quia cum illos magna praecaeteris hominibus proprio studio excogitasse considero, meipsum quadam violentia confricans, vt incalescam, ad aliqualem vel cum nouissimis imitationem praecedetium impello. Nec me penitus, vt reor, fefellit opinio; quippe qui & multa, quae prius nesciueram, per continuum legendi studium didici: & cogitationibus meis adinuestigandum secretiora & prorsus arcana caeteris aditum reseraui. Nam et si non sum tantae vel eruditionis vel industriae, vt me illum antiquorum sapientum mysteria occultandi modum apprehendisse ex omni parte ausim profiteri: modos tamen quosdam & multos & varios, non penitus (vt mihi videtur) contemnendos reperi, quibus mentis meae secretissimam intentionem alteri hanc artem scienti, quam latissime voluero, secure & absque illusione, suspicione, vel deprehensione cuiuscunque per apertos vel nuntios vel literas possum intimare. Et huius secretissimae artis ad inuentionem nouam ad instantiam Serenissimi Principis, Dom. Philippi, Comitum Palatini Rheni, Ducisque Bauariae, ac Sacri Romani Imperij Principis Electoris semper inuictissimi, Philosophorum omnium sapientissimi Mecoenatis, quo nullus mihi dignior visus est, cui hoc magnum secretum reueletur, literis comme~daui, & non sine maximis laboribus in subiectum volumen compositaui. Ne autem hoc magnum secretum in aures vulgarium imperitorum aut prauorum hominum perueniat, officij mei rationem existimaui non vltimam, ita illud, quoniam mysteria docet intelligere nescientem, mysterijs obuoluere, vt nemo futurus sit ex imperitorum numero, nemo nisi studiosissimus, qui huius scientiae arcanum sua possit virtute perfecte & ad intentionem nostram penetrare ad plenum, nisi per receptionem à docente, quam Hebraei Cabalam, mysterijs praepositam occultissimis, appellant. Nec minus Reipub, noceret huius secretissimae artis in improbos & reprobos diuulgata notitia, quam prodesset in bonos. Quoniam quidem sicut boni & virtutum studiosi homines omnib. adinuentis vtuntur ad bonum & communem vtilitatem: ita mali & reprobis non modo ex malis, verum & ex bonis atque sanctissimis institutis occasiones sibi veniunt, quib. deteriores fiant. Simile huic nostro secretissimo & alioquin vtili Reipubl. atque honestissimo adinuento contingere potest; vt sicut bonis & sanctissimis hominib. instrumentum se praebet ad optima, ita peruersis & impijs ministerium exhibeat ad scelerata. Nam sicut bonus & honestatis amator, voluntatis suae secretum, pro bono priuato vel cōmuni, alteri hanc artem scienti, quando & quotiens voluerit, secure, secrete, & absque aliqua suspicione cuiuscunque mortalis, perfecte, copiose & integerrime per patentes omnibus, apertas vel clausas literas (ita vt nemo, quantum libet eruditus, aut curiosus, quicquam valeat suspicari de secreto mittentis, nec, etiam si suspicatur, deprehendere) omni tempore notificare potest, & ad quamlibet distantiam locorum intimare & exprimere: ita & peruersus quisque lubricus, aut malitiosus, etiam Latini sermonis penitus antea ignarus, mox vt hanc artem consequutus fuerit (quam me docete in biduo ad longissimum consequi poterit) iam deinceps Latino sermone, compositione congrua literas scribet qualibet narratione apertas, pulchras & satis ornatas, ad me vel ad alium in hac arte peritum, quibus voluntatis suae arcanum mihi soli pernium tantis mysterijs virtute Cabalistica obuoluet, vt à nemine penitus, quantumcunque studioso vel erudito, sine huius artis, de quibus sum dicturus, spiritibus valeat penetrari. Scriberet iam deinceps doctus & indoctus, vir & mulier, puer & senex, bonus & malus, pudicus & lasciuus, Latino vel quocunque sermone sibi noto, per omnia climata mundi literas Latinas, Graecas aut barbaras omni suspicione carentes, quib. aliud nescientibus artem exhiberet in patulo, atque aliud scientib. in occulto. Nec tuta inter coniugatos fides contracta sacramento, hac scientia publicata in reprobos, iam deinceps maneret: dum vxor, licet Latini sermonis hacentus inscia, per verba pudica, honesta atque sanctissima cuius libet linguae vel idiomatis iam satis docta, malam & impudicam amatoris adulteris seu fornicatoris mentem & intentionem, licet viro perferente literas ac collaudante, vt optimas, latissime intelligere, suumque desiderium eodem modo quam late & copiose voluerit, illi securissime eisdem vel alijs literis pulchra & satis admodum ornata serie posset remandare. Enimuero licet haec scientia in se sit optima, & Reipubl. satis vtilis; tamen si ad prauorum notitiam perueniret, (quod Deus prohibeat) totus Reipub. ordo per successum temporis non modice posset turbari: fidesque periclitari publica, literae omnes, instrumenta, conscriptiones, ipse denique hominum sermones in grauissimam suspensionem verti: nemo iam literis. quantum libet sanctis & honestis, absque pauore crederet. sed fidem epistolis rarus adhiberet. Quoniam quantum cunque honesta & pudica verba fuerint: semper dolus, fraus, deceptio, subesse putaretur; fierentque homines ad omnia pauidi, & non minus in amicos, quam in aduersarios vt plurimum suspiciosi. Nec fieri quisquam, etiāsi mille vixerint annis, tã doctus & expertus in hac scie~tia cum suo doctore poterit, vt non relinquuntur infiniti modi, secrete, occultissime & scurissime in hac ipsa arte scribendi, & pro voluntate cuius libet alicuius experti operadi ad omnia suffice~tes, quos ipse cum suo praeceptore nōdum apprehendit. Nam quem ad modu~ aorij spiritus boni & mali à summo Deo creati in ministerium & profectum nostrum (per quorum intelligentiā omnia istius artis secreta reuelātur) sunt nobis sine numero infiniti & penitus incōprehensibiles: ita nec huius artis nostrae, quam Steganographiam (secreta & arcana & mysteria, nulli mortalium, quantumcunque studioso vel erudito, patula continentem perfecte) appellamus, omnes modi, viae, differentiae, qualitates & operationes in aeternum poterunt ad plenam fieri penetrabiles. Est enim haec scientia chaos infinitae altitudinis, quod nemo perfecte comprehendere potest: quia quantumlibet in hac arte doctus & expertus fueris, semper tamen minus apprehendisti, quam illud est, quod nescis. Habet enim haec profunda secretissimaque ars eam proprietatem, vt discipulum magistro facile reddat incomparabiliter, vt ita dixerim, doctiorem: modo sit à natura ad procedendum dispositus, & in his, quae in traditione Cabalistica percepit, studiosus. Et ne quis huius operis lector futurus cu~ in processu saepe offenderit nomina, officia, ordines, differentias, proprietates, orationes, & quaslibet alias operationes spirituum, per quorum intelligentias haec secreta huius scientiae omnia clauduntur & aperiuntur; me Necromanticum & Magu~, vel cum daemonib. pactum contraxisse, vel qualibet alia superstitione vsum, vel vtentem credat vel existimet: necessarium duxi & oportunit, famam & nomen meum à tantta labe, iniuria, culpa & macula solenni protestatione in hoc prologo cum veritate vendicando praeseruare. Dico ergo & coram Omnipotenti Deo, quem nihil penitus latere potest, & coram Iesu Christo, vnigenito filio eius, qui iudicturus est viuos & mortuos, in veritate dico, iuro & protestor: Omnia & singula, quae in hoc opere dixi, vel dicturus sum, ormnesq; huius scientiae, vel artis proprietates, modi, figurae, o perationes, traditiones, receptiones, formationes, adinuationes, institutiones, mutationes, alterationes, & vniuersa quae ad eius speculationem, inuentionem, consecutionem, operationem & practicam, vel in parte vel in toto pertinent, & omnia quae in hoc nostro volumine continentur, veris catholicis & naturalibus principiis innituntur, fiuntque omnia & singula cum Deo, cum bona conscientia sine iniuria Christianae fidei, cum integritate Ecclesiasticae traditionis, sine superstitione quacunque, sine indololatria, sine omni pacto malignorum spirituum explicito vel implicito; sine suffumigatione, adoratione, veneratione, cultu, sacrificio, oblatione daemonum, & sine omni culpa vel peccato tam veniali quam mortali: fiuntque omnia & singula cum veritate, rectitudine, synceritate & puritate. Vt huius adinuationis scientia, & practica ad bonum vsum, non dedeceat virum sapientem, Christianum bonum atq; fidelem. Nam & ego Christianus sum, & monasticae conuersationi voluntarie addictus: cupioq; non aliter viuere & conuersari, quam veru~ deceat Christianum & monachum sub regula Diui patris Benedicti professum: ipsamq; fidem Catholicam secundum traditionem S. Romanae Ecclesiae suscepi à cunabulis, baptizatus in nomine Patris, & Filij, & Spiritus sancti, quam cu~ ipsa & vniuersali Christianorum Ecclesia teneo, credo, & quã diu vixero, cu~ Dei auxilio semper inuiolatam firmiter seruãs, corde, ore & opere tenebo, nec vnquam ab ipsa deuiare quacuq; occasione inte~do. Procul ego sit à me, aut discere aut docere aliquid, que sit Christianae fidei & puritati contrarium, sanctis morbus noxiu~ aut regulari proposito quomodolibet aduersum. Deu~ timeo, & in eius cultu~ iurauì, à quo nec viuus, nec (vt confido) mortuus separabor.

Hanc protestationem meam non sine causa toti huic operi nostro praepot. propterea quod nouerim plures esse futuros: qui cum ea, quae scripsimus, intelligere nequeant, ad iniurias conuersi, bona & sancta studia nostra malis artibus aut superstitiosis adinuationibus sint concessuri. His, cum futuri sint, & omnibus quicunque haec nostra synthemata sunt lecturi, atte~te supplicamus, vt si hanc secretam traditionem nostram intellexerint, perpetuo seruent occultam, nec mysteria tam miranda transfundant in publicum. Si vero non intellexerint (quod multis scimus futurum) discant prius, quam reprehendant. Enimuero temerarium se iudicem ostendit, qui priusquam causae veritatem agnouerit, profert de ea sententiam. Discite prius hanc artem, & postea iudicate: quam si nequiueritis intelligere, non ipsam (quia bona est) sed obtusa ingenia vestra reprobate. Scio enim & certus sum, neminem sanaw mentis hoc opus nostrum posse reprehendere: nisi ipsum contingat penitus ignorare. Eos autem, quibus familiaris est sapientiam spernere, quam didicisse, nec opto nec vellem haec mystica nostra penetrare.

CAP. I.

CVIVS CLAVIS ET OPERATIO TENETUR

à spiritu principali Pamersyel, anoyr madriel per ministerium ebra sothean abrulges itrasbiel. Et nadres ormenu itules rablion hamorphiel. Ad hos fit commissio omnium cum exorcismo.

HVIVS primi capituli est multum difficilis & periculis plena operatio, propter superbiam & rebellionem spirituum eius, qui non obediunt alicui, nisi fuerit in hac arte expertissimus. Nouitijs enim & minus in arte probatis non solum non obediunt, sed etiam si nimis vrgeantur, eos frequenter laedunt, & varijs illusionibus offendunt. Maliciosi & infideles sunt super omnes alios aëreos spiritus, & nulli penetus nisi maximis sacramentis compulsi obediunt, & bsecretum quod eis committitur saepè infideliter alijs astendunt. Nam mox vt emissi fuerint cum literis auolant, & ad eum cui mittuntur, sine ordine irrumpentes, sicut populus sine duce fugiens de praelio, furiosi properant & aërem suo clamore replentes saepè omnibus in Circuitu mittentis arcana manifestant. Consulimus ergò, vt nemo in hac arte operaturus illos compellat, nec eorum ministeria anciè requirat. Quia proterui & infideles sunt: cum plures ex his quos consequenter dicemus inuenire possit satis beneuolos, qui vltro sese offerant ad obedientiam paratos. Si quis autem proteruiam eorum experiri omnino voluerit & probare ea quae diximus esse vera, hunc modum obseruandum nouerit. Praeparet chartam in quam scripturus est cum inuocatione diuini nominis, in nomine Patris & Filij & Spiritus S. Deinde verò scribat in ea quamcuncue narrationem voluerit simplicem & apertam, quam omnes legentes intelligât, latino, patrio vel quolibet alio sermone. Cum autem sederit ad scribendum versus Oriem, ita spiritus compellat. Hæc cum dixerit, videritque sibi spiritus ad obsequendum præsentem, continuet opus inceptum. Quod si nondum apparuerint, totiens repetatiam dicta, donec compareant: aut penitus intermittat, ne nimium compulsi lædant operantem. Cum autem literas compleueris, intentas mitte eas cum nuncio ad amicum in arte probatum, quas cum receperit, dicat istam coniurationem. Lamarton anoyr bulon madriel traschon ebrasothea panthenon nabrulges Camery itrasbier rubanthy nadres Calmosi ormenulan, ytules demy rabion hamorphyn. His dictis mox intelliget mentem tuam perfecte, spiritibus iam vltro se cum impetu offerentibus & clamantibus, ita vt plerunque & alij præsentem secretum mittentis percipere valeant. Sed obserua, vt in omnibus literis quas mittis hac arte conscriptas proprium signum infigas, vt is cui scribis sciat, per quos spiritus sis operatus. Quoniam si ipse operaretur per alios ad intelligendum, & tu per alios ad mittendum nunquam in æternum obedient ei, sed pro indebita opertione & illum læderent, & secretum tuum minime reuelarent. Omnes enim spiritus quibus in hac arte vtimur, ordines & officia sibi commissa tantum custodiunt, & de aliis nullatenus intermittunt. Considera diligenter omnia quæ in isto capitulo diximus, & facilius poteris intelligere quæ in sequentibus dicturi sumus. Et vt eâ quæ diximus com probemus exemplo, ponamus intentionem nostram in sermone vulgari, quam consequenter notificabimus amico modo prædicto.

AD NOTIFICANDVM HOC SECRETVM

Vasallo cum latiori intentione mittentis scribatur sic vel alio modo:

Roth.

Omnipote~s sempiternæ Deus qui omnia creasti ex nihilo, miserere nostri per vnigeniti filij tui in cruce

morientis amarissimam passionem, qui cōceptus de spiritu sancto sine cōmixtione virili natus est ex purissima semper Virgine Maria tradensque se pro nobis voluntarie in morte~ suo sanctissimo cruore animas nostras morie~s de morte liberavit. Exaudi nos miseros ô clementissime pater, & per eiusdem filij tui dulcissimi Domini nostri Iesu Christi sacratissimi sanguinis effusione~ indulge nobis peccata nostra & infunde cordibus nostris gratiã tuã, vt te in omnib. & super omnia syncero feruore diligentes mādatis tuis semper cu~ deuotione obediamus, & mutuo amore iugiter proficie~tes nihil deinceps amemus terrenu~, nihilquæramus caducum. Tu enim es Dominus Deus noster, qui nos ad imagine~ & similitudinem tuam ab initio creasti cum nō essemus: & per dilectu~ filium tuum redemisti, cum perijssimus: quem mortuum pro peccatis nostris & sepultum tertia diea~ mortuis resuscitasti, eumque gaudentibus suis discipulis, viuum per dies quadraginta in multa consolatione ostendisti. Ipsum verum Deum & hominem pura & firmissima confessione tecum in tua incircumscriptibili maiestate sine fine regnātem in fine mundi denuo credimus esse venturum ad iudicandum viuos & mortuos, & redditurum vnicuique nostrum secundum opera sua. Per ipsum te rogamus, ô Clementissime pater, exaudi nos & miserere nobis nunc & in illa terribili hora, in qua per ipsum filium tuum iudicandi sumus. Respice in nos misericordissime Deus: sumus enim fragiles, & miserandi peccatores, bonis operibus nudi, qui sanctissimam Maiestatem tuam peccando in multis offendimus. Sed misericordia tua conuersi ad poenitentiam pro peccatis nostris lachrymantes gemimus: per Iesum Christum filium tuum humiliter deprecantes, vt auertas indignationem tuam à nobis, indulgeasque nobis clementer transacta crimina, perducens nos præsentī terminato exilio ad amoenitatem patriæ Coelestis. Ioan. Trithemius scripsit.

Huiusmodi narrationem simplicem & apertam vel aliam quamcunque volueris quam omnes legant & intelligant & quæ nihil contineat secreti, quamque non verearis in omnium deuenire conspectum, scribas in charta præmissa, quam diximus coniuratione Spirituum facie versa ad orientem, qua scripta intentionem tuam secretam quam volueris scire absentem coram spiritibus exprime, contestans eos vt agant fideliter, statimque auolabunt. Cum literas tuas acceperit is cui mittuntur, signo orientis cognito facie conuersus ad Orientem dicat coniurationem quam præmisimus: Lamarton, anoyr: & statim intelliget tuam intentionem secretam, quam Spiritibus commisisti pro certo.

Orientem hic velim intelligas non vbi Sol quolibet die oritur, sed eum locum in quo a principio creatus fuit, quem, æquinocbialem appellamus. Nisi enim hanc considerationem obserues diligentissime, non poteris in hac arte habere profectum. Sed etiam nunc te seriem istius tabulæ docebo ita, vt ex Vno spiritu intelligas omnes. Capiamus itaque Malgaras pro exemplo, per quem fit operatio huius artis in nono Capitulo præsentis libri primi. Occidentalis est, signum eius est tale  habet sub te triginta qui præsunt diei, & habent Imperium magnum fugandi Spiritus tenebrarum. His subiecti sunt alij 30. qui præsunt nocti & versantur in tenebris semper, nec veniunt ad lucem, nisi per imperium suorum principum, quibus omni tempore sunt subiecti. Et isti rursus sub se habent tanquam custodes & ministros pleno iure subiectes aliquando 30. aliquando 20. aliquando 10. & aliquando omnes, cum omnibus simul egrediuntur ad imperium suorum principum, tali scilicet ordine. Vt quot eorum numero per operantem Virtutum magnarum imperio vocati fuerint ex secundo vel tertio ordine, tot etiam seruitores & custodes cum ipsis veniant ad principalem, qui est Malgaras. Iterum sub istis sunt alij tanquam nuntij & ianitores: sine certo numero, qui sæpe cum ipsis mixti conueniunt: Horum spirituum omnium nomina non tenemus. Sed quæ scire necessarium est operantem, in quolibet capitulo exprimemus. Et nota, quod omnes isti spiritus sunt cum suo imperatore principalis quilibet inplaga orbis deputata sibi, vt patet in tabula.

CAP. II.

CVIVS PRINCEPS VOCATVR PADIEL

Roth.

CVIM, sicut præcedenti Capitulo diximus, Pamersiel cum Spiritibus suis dictis, implacabilis & infidelis sit, nec obediat passim omnibus in hac arte operari cupientibus, sed vix in ea expertissimis: volumus in hoc præsentī Capitulo artem facere tutiorem, & modum operandi in ea demonstrare per Spiritus meliores qui sint beneuoli, prompti & hilares ad obediendum vocanti, qui debito modo & tempore vocati veniant sine mora: & quod eis fuerit commissum fideliter perferant sine omni fallacia. Primus autem principalis huius operationis imperator & præsidens dicitur Padiel nomine Subsolanus, mansione orbiculari; quæ est prima mansio post orientem. Is habet sub se decem millia qui præsunt diei & omnibus operationibus huius artis diurnis, qui præcipiunt & educunt Spiritus nocturnos in tenebris latitantes, qui sunt numero ducenta millia, omnes fugiunt lucem & diem, præter vnum qui est nuntius ad Spiritus præsidentes: omnes boni & beneuoli sunt, nec lædunt operantem nisi sit malitiosus, vel minus in arte peritus. Non opus est omnes simul aduocare, sed pauci sufficiunt & aliquando vnus satisfacere potest operanti, siue operatio nocturna sit, siue diurna. Nam cum sint beneuoli, quieti & tranquilli: frequentius soliuagi sunt, quam in multitudine tumultuosi. Cum ergo volueris operari per eos, & mentis tuæ secretum alicui, quantumcunq; absenti, peripsos intimare: sic facito. Scribe in chartam præparatam antea debito modo, sicut scis, quamcunque narrationem volueris & in quacunque lingua; quia indifferens est: cum ille non ex charta, sed ex Spiritibus mentem tuam percepturus sit, quam scribens, vertes te ad sub solanum, qua perfecta dicas istam coniurationem. Padiel aporsy mesarpon omeuas peludyn malpreaxo. DELATVS est quispiam apud principem, cui aliquod crimen imponitur læsæ maiestatis vel quodlibet aliud: vult cum puniri per suum officialem a quo longe disiungitur, sed ei scribere id ipsum non vult, ne manifestatis literis qualibet occasione reus fiat ausatus, & fugiat, vel coadiunctis sibi viribus amicorum resistat, vel quippiam contra principem aut patriæ leges moliatur sinistrum. Sinceram charitatem. Mitto tibi orationem pro deuotione poenitentium, satis pulchre compositam, breuemque, quam integra mentis meæ beneuolentia in te sola possidere non voluit, & est talis ut sequitur. Libera nos Iesu Christe æterne saluator bonorum omnium & indulge reorum delicta, gemitusque nostros exaudi, mitigans tempestates vitiorum, renouansque conscientia vetustatem, ad æternam nos reducito paradysum. Bone Iesu remitte nobis exorantibus peccata nostra: quoniam grauiter offendimus & sæpe relapsi sumus. Dulcissime saluator infirmitates nostras sana, quæsumus. Benignus esto rogantibus te Iesu pyssime & nos famulos tuos supplicantes exaudi. Homines sumus assiduis miseriis inuoluti maximisque tempestatibus immersi. Erue nos, tribulorum consolator victoriosissime; quoniam vita nostra assidua in foelicitate sepulta corrumpitur. Miserere tantum Iesu clementissime saluator, respice humilitatem te amātium & non permittas demerginos exules in luto & turpitudine vitiorum, in amore sæculi. Hucusque torpentes iacuimus, vicijsque innodati nostram paruipendimus salutem, futurique examinis minime recordati sumus. Benignissime Creator esto propitius famulis tuis, & salue lachrymantes quos decepit miserrima vanitas mundi, viam (proh dolor) Veritatis negleximus omnes, sed libera nos luto infixos exulesque: quoniam Saluator noster tu es Iesu; qui neminem despicias gaudium indeficiens & sempiterna foelicitas sanctorum es spes nostra, Christianorum gloria, Angelorum lumen, remunerator inuictorum Martyrum, corona virginum, honestas viduarum. Bone Iesu exaudi nos humiles, clamantes ad te, libera nos de præsentis exilio, concedens nobis gratiam, vt sine fine viuamus, viuifica quæsumus non miseros seruos tuos exules, quos redemisti, vt zelum Iustitiæ verum consequamur. Conserua nos omnipotens Deus, maiestas infinita, misericordia incircumscripta, æterna salus nobilium animorum. Amen. Finis orationis Ioan. Trithemij Abbatis.

TERTIAE mansionis ad Eurum primus & supremus omnium Spiritus vocatur Camuel, valde beneuolus & promptus ad mittendum suos substitutos ad eum qui in hac scientia secundum formam debitam operatur. Paucos quidem habet ministros, sed omnes bonos, volutarios & fideles, videlicet decem, qui præsunt, diei & totidem qui præsunt nocti, qui semper bini mittuntur ad operantem ex vtroq; ordine, cum hi qui præsunt diei, non fugiunt tenebras, nec illi qui præsunt nocti, lucem. Semper vbi necessitas expostulat in omni commissione operantis alter iuuatur ab altero: & quando apparent visibiles, tunc vnus cernitur in habitu pulchro mixti coloris, & alius in forma lucidi splendoris astare consuevit. Sæpe tamen apparent solo effectus sensibili quidem, sed non videntur, nisi cum ita placuerit operanti. Iste vero Camuel cum ministris & subseruatoribus suis auctoritatem habet atque virtutem nunciandi absenti amico statum, voluntatem, conditionem, viam, itinera, aduentum, & recessum mittentis, quando voluerit ipse qui operatur in hac arte. Cum ergo volueris, operarisque pro tua voluntate, per angelos huius mansionis: oportet te scire inprimis, qui sint decem angeli Camuelis, que præsunt diei & quot quilibet eorum habeat substitutos, & ita similiter de nocturnis: quod vt scias perfecte: præsentem tabulam considerabis.

O Iesu Christe crucifixe, respice humilitatem nostram quoniam miseri sumus, infoelices, multisque tribulationibus vexamur. QVARTAM mansionem ab Oriente in Euro-austro tenet magnus princeps Asiel cum spiritibus suis, quorum decem præsunt operationibus in hac arte diurnis, & 20. nocturnis. Horum omnium potestas & officium est nuntiare ea quæ pertinent ad amorem mulierum. Habent autem hi 30. tanquam principales sub se, & totidem alios quos mittunt per ordinem ad officia sua, cum fuerint per operantem debito modo vocati. Rursus sub istis iterum sunt alij, quorum magnus est numerus. Tu autem cum volueris per principem huius mansionis in Steganographia operari, non opus est omnes subiectos ei spiritus aduocare, sed sufficit tibi vnus aut duo, siue operatio sit nocturna siue diurna. S*Vmma humani generis nobilitas summaque virtus est Deum pure amare, ipsius gloriam quærere, & eum rectitudine mentis adorare. Humilitas enim puri cordis regnabit in Coelis patientia sublimabit, sola mens hominis nudi, Deum timentis diligentisq̃ ad nobilitatem veram constituetur. Deum ama, mundum sperne; sæculum iniquitatum fuge, ama religione~, fraternam charitatem, pacis vinculum, recteque conuersantium vnitatem. Christus in Euangelio monet: Nõ oportere nos sollicitari circa humanas curas superfluas. Habentes (inquit Sanctus Apostolus) necessaria tantum, simus contenti. Habeamus itaque Dei amorem & Zelum iustitiæ: quoniam vere solidæ diuitiæ sunt, puritas animi, simplicitas cordis, negligentia honoris terreni, venustatis emundatio, morumq̃ sanctorum institutio. Simus intenti operibus bonis, ne vitia nos obruant, viuamus innocentes in omni rectitudine tanquam crastino morituri. Deum amemus purissimo corde, seruantes solícite mandata eius cum humilitate pro peccatis lugeamus omni tempore pijssimum Saluatorem deprecantes quatenum nobis vitia remittat, sui amorem cordisque humilitatem infundat. Deseramus istius mundi concupiscentias & vanos falsosq̃ honores obitum nostrum sedulo cogitantes. Viuere virtuose, proximum diligere, iniuriam nulli facere, Deum timere, eleemosynas dare, famelicos reficere, bonos defendere, prauorum vitia redarguere, orationibus insistere, gloriam mundi contemnere, lectionibusque incumbere, thesauri Christianorum sunt Vana enim gloria mundi repente ruitura est, falsæ etiam diuitiæ, quas breui exspirantes reliquemus inuiti, sola iustitia est nostra foelicitas. Note on orthography: Because this work deals with hidden writing I have made every effort to preserve the original orthography. Because of the limitations of HTML, tildes (~) which appear above certain letters in the original text are here represented by the letter followed by the tilde, i.e. ũ is here written 'u~'. They generally represent 'n' or 'm'. ñ = 'q_e' = 'que'. The typographer's marks 'Schwartz' and 'Roth' evidently refer to text written with black and red ink in the original manuscript.

Subcircium appellamus: qui habet sub se 40. duces in die, & totidem in nocte: qui sunt super Thesauro.

NCIMA mansio totius orbis vocatur Subcircius à vento videlicet, qui ex illa parte venire confuevit.

Ad hanc plagam moratur magnus princeps qui vocatur Vsiel, habens sub se 40. principes, qui præsunt operationibus diurnis, & 40. qui præsunt nocturnis. Horum officium est nuntiare occultos & subterraneos Thesauros, & omnia, quæ ad rationem Thesaurorum pertinere videntur. Ex his paucos, & quot sunt in operationibus Steganographiæ hoc loco sufficientes, nominabimus: & reliquos cum aliis ad proprium capitulum in fine huius libri nominandos referuamus. Et nota, q_e duces istius mansionis, quando vocantur ab operante, libenter & cum maxima hilaritate venire consueuerunt. Et quamuis multos habeant famulos: numquam tamen vidi, quod aliquem eorum secum adduxerint saltem visibilem. Si quis autem vellet vti ministerio famulorum: posset, quoniam sub principibus sunt, & coguntur eis in omnibus obedire, si operator fuerit talis, vt nouerit eos debite vocare vel etiam compellere, si tardius apparere voluerint.

Mitto tibi orationem quam edidi in nuptiis cuiusdam mei amici. Deus omnium Creator humanisq_e generis Redemptor, omniumq_e Saluator, ne genus humanum periret, etiam nuptiarum sacramentum instituit: legimus enim quod primo homini~ Euam iunxerit mulierem, dixeritq_e: CRESCITE ET MULTIPLICAMINI: legem instituens conseruãdæ humanitatis. Postea Deus incarnatus dignatus est nuptias sanctificare miraculo. De Deo bene merentur seruantes cõstituta, hominibus autem plus conferunt, qui pudicum coniugium Zelo prolis assumunt. Vos ergo qui coniugium honestum assumitis iure laudauerim Saluatoris nostri exemplo. Ille nãq_e miraculis, ego vero verbis institutum rite nuptiarum necessarium sacrame~tum collaudabo: sim licet non nuptus, iure nuptias tamen laudabo. Enimuero si tollatur coniugium, deficere & rueret totum genus humanum. Vsu enim nuptiarum genus extat humanum, quamuis ruinosum, debile & corruptibile: quod tame~ sine nuptiis non perseueraret. Sed hoc agite vos vt fæcunditas vestrarum nuptiarum decorata sit moribus & conuersatione sancta, & nemini scandalum ponente. Inprimis Deam amate, continue operibus misericordiæ cum iusticia incumbentes, impietatem fugite, rectitudinem colite, bonos amatem, laudes Deus semper dicite, pauperibus cum eleemosynis subuenite, mandatis Dei obedite. Veritatem nolite deserere, Dei ministros honorate Ecclesiis, decimas soluite, peregrinos hospitate, innoce~tes liberate, famelicos pascite, maiorib⁹ vestris obedite, proximos vestros honeste diligite, iniuriam nulli penitus irrogantes Christianam religionem deuotissime colite: vanos, noxios superstitiososque mores gentilium abhorrete. Doctrinas Euangelicas seruare & viuere secundum præcepta Dei. Carnis voluptates fugite, vosq_e honestos & bonos exhibete, puritatem mentis solícite custodie~tes nolite maculare. Mementote obsecro, quid in sancto Euangelio Christus Dominus noster clamauerit: Beati mundi corde: qui se munditiam animæ in luto corpore propter Deum custodiunt. Munditia autem corda continuis humilimisque orationibus non destituatur: quoniam oratio mentem purificat, æstuantes refrigerat, temptationes diaboli procul fugat. Hinc sanctus Apostolus Paulus docet vos sedulis & deuotis orationibus insistere, vt noxias tentationes possitis superare. Coniungimus vos matrimonio, quatenus genus vestrum legis decreto propagaatum construetis: non vt affluere noxijs voluptatibus debeatis. Voluptates enim carnis interficiunt animam, corrumpuntque humana substantiæ nobilissimam dignitatem futurorum. Itaq_e horum memores scitote vos viatores esse, reuersuros ad patriam, ad quam estis reuocati Breuissima est vita præsens: iocunditasq_e seculi velocissime terminatur. DOST Geradiem sequitur Buriel, princeps quidem magnus, sed peruersus & nequam, qui omnes alios spiritus (& maxime principes) odit, persequitur, detestatur: sed non minus odio habetur ab illis: lucem timet & fugit cum omnib. ducibus & famulis suis, nec vnquam venire consuevit nisi in nocte, & hoc frequenter cum magno horrore & pauore operantis, maxime si non fuerit perfectus in arte, constans & fortis animo. Et frequenter apparet in specie serpentis, habet caput virgineum, caudam & totum corpus serpentinum, sibilans terribiliter. Adiuratus debito modo, verbis humanis loquitur, habet sub se duces & principes, quos in ministerium mittere consuevit cum famulis & seruis eorum, quorum multitudo est pene innumerabilis. Dux apparere confuevit in forma qua diximus: famuli autem solent frequenter apparere, tanquam simiæ aut ioculatores, ludentes & saltantes ex alto ad terram, mirabili phantasia. Cum per istos principes operari volueris: non præsumas, nisi post solis occasum, incipere operationem tuam: quia non obediunt, nisi in nocte. In hac tabula posuimus vnum & triginta spiritus principales, qui presunt, quilibet in officio & in ordine suo, omnibus operationibus Steganographiæ nostræ, de quibus in hoc primo libro nostro sumus locuti: supponentes vnicuiq; characterem sibi appropriarum: numerum & ordinem principum, ducum, comitum, seruorum & subseruientium in propriis gradibus quoq; subiungentes, ne quis in hac arte studere cupiens propter diuersitatem operationum incidat in errorem. Magna quidem huius artis mysteria non nisi à studiosissimis viris penetrari possunt, illis videlicet, quos amor secretorum & natura promoueat ad perserutandum, & qui desiderio scientiæ cōsequendæ nullum subire laborem honestum & possibilem recusent. Homines autem pigri obtusiq; ingenio, & quos nec amor incendit ad studium secretorum sapie~tiæ, nec natura iuuat, cum hanc nostræ adinventionis arte~ secretissimam intelligere nequiverint: non nobis imputandum, sed suæ potius socordiæ, pigritiæ & malitiæ asscribendum intelligant: Quippe qui aut voluptatibus carnis mundialibusq; curis immersum habentes ingenium, his perlustrandis cum diligentia vacare nequent: aut sciam sapie~tes aut doctissimos arbitantes, nostras compositiones tanquam indignas suis lectionibus contemnunt. Aderunt etiam non nulli ita pristinis alienisq; traditonibus consistere assueti: vt quicquid in illis nō didicerint, aut impossibile aut superstitiosum arbitrentur. Nihil istis ad huius profundæ artis scie~tiam ineptius, qui aut nolunt aut nequeunt altissima eius speculari. Cæteru~ eos, qui & apti & voluntarij sunt studere in hac arte (si qui futuri sunt) vt proficere possint, in fine huius libri paucis admonere statuimus. In primis monendi sunt, quatenus arte~ ipsam semper teneant occultam: ne prauoru~ manus & notitiam penetret, qui multa & execranda scelers per ipsam facerent. Nam etsi ars ipfa per se veraciter fit bona: tamen eius practica non minus ad malum per impios, quam ad bonum conduceret per bonos. Maneat ergo inter bonos secretum, quod noceret inter malos publicatum. Nec tame~ scientiam istam boni propterea debebunt contemnere, quia malis ad malum proficit; sicut nec gladium spernit, qui homine~ prosternit. Deinde monendi sunt huius artis studiosi, ne præsumant ad operandum in ea procedere: nifi prius in omnibus, quæ requiru~tur ad practicam scientiam, perfecte fuerint instituti. Non enim me fugit, quantis rem periculis subijciant, qui minus periti in ea operari aliquid tentauerint aliquando.

Item qui bene institutus in hac scie~tia voluerit operari per eam: diligenter obseruare meminerit (secundum ea quæ diximus tam in circulo quam in singulis tabulis atq; capitulis) differentiam, loca, nomina, ordines & officia supremoru~ Spirituum, duces quoq; eorundem, & quot sint comites in numero; quem ordinem obseruent, & quot præsent substitutis: vt nouerit hec in cōiuratione exprimere. Nisi enim omnia ista dilige~ter custodierit artis operator, non poterit proficere, nec ad intentionis suæ effectum peruenire. Rursus diligenter attendat, quando vnusquisq; & ad quæ officia fide arcana nuncianda spiritus sit vocandus, & ad quam orbis plagam habitet: ne erret vel in locis, vel in omnibus singulorum aliquorum ve, quos vocare voluerit.

Item sit auisatus omnis in hac scientia operaturus, vt attendat diligentissimè, vt coniurationum verba debite pronunciet, in quibus magna vis operationis nostræ consistit: quoniam dum in coniurationibus error cōmittitur: spiritus vocati & vocandi nō solum non obediunt; sed etiam omnino reluctantur. Consequenter vero præmonitus sit, ne alterum vocet pro altero, sed vnumquemq; in ordine, tempore & officio suo: quemadmodum à nobis pene in omnibus istius libri cap. sufficie~ter est dictum. Nam si vel ex errore, vel ex qualibet alia neglige~tia, alterum vocauerit pro altero: nihil in operatione sua proficeret, sed periculū sibi potius prouocarete

Item in coniurationibus & spirirus, qui vocatur, cum suis substitutis exprimat ex nomine, & causa vocationis antea statuatur in intentione: nec fiat operationis actus in rebus leuibus & prophanis, quas alter alteri alioquin sine periculo siue per literas, siue per nuncios secure poterit intimare. Nō enim nisi in magnis & arduis nunciandis, quæ publicata vel damnum vel periculum inferrent operanti, hac arte vtendum est. Item necessarium est omni operanti in hac arte scire naturas spirituum, qui sint boni, qui mali, qui prompti & beneuoli ad obedientia~, qui duri atq; rebelles. Rursus, qui nocturnis operationibus præsent, & qui diurnis: quia nisi naturas spirituum antequam incipiat operari nouerit: cum difficultate maxima proficiet: & facile vertetur in stuporem. Item qui spiritus vocati coram operante appare~t visibiles: præmisso verbo arcano, co~mittat duci siue comiti mentis suæ secretu~ verbis debitis & appropriatis sub silentio: quia non est opus ad spiritu~ loqui voce extensa sed vtatur submissa. Cauendum etiam summopere tam operanti q~ recipienti, ne in alioru~ hominum ha~c artem ignorantium presentia operentur quicq~ ad Steganographiam pertinens, du~ ad locum secretum possunt habere accessum. Quod si nequiverint esse soli, sed coactus inter alios operari cõtigerit: agant ta~ secrete, tam prudenter, & cum tanta industria, vt circumsede~tium nullus quicq~ de præsentia Spirituum intelligat. Sunt. n.omnes Spiritus in ministerium istius artis deputati eiufmodi naturæ & conditionis, vt & tumultum hominum penitus detestentur & fugiant, & publicum odiant conuentum. Item caue~dum quoq; est operanti, ne Spiritus quoq~ sine literis, vel saltem caractere imperatoris eius dirigat: quoniam vbi ipsum characterem impressum non conspicit, obedire vocanti & arcanum perferri C alicui penitus contemnit.

Literas aute~ duplici ex causa mittimus, quamuis arcanum sine literis per solum Spiritu~ nunciare possemus: vt videlicet homines perfere~tes characterem à suspitione seruemus, & spiritum ipso characterem alligatum amico ad obediendum coarctemus.

INCIPIT LIBER SECVNDVS STEGA- NOGRAPHIÆ IOANNIS TRITHEMII ABBATIS

Spanheimensis ad Serenissimum Principem, Dominum Philippum, Comitem Palatinum Rheni, Ducemque Bauariæ, Sacrti Imperii Archidapiferum ac Principem Electorem. PRÆFATIO.

IN præcedenti libro, Dei summi auxilio freti, vnum & triginta per ordinem spiritus supremos artis nostræ Imperatores cum ducibus, comitibus & seruitoribus suis nobis ad operationem necessariis non sine magno sudore digessimus: quorum et si ad omnium arcanorum nunciationem, quantumlibet secretam, ministeria copiose omni operanti sufficiant: ne quid tamen eorum, quæ ad perfectionem huius artis conducere possunt, videremur obmittere: libro primo secundum statuimus copulare. Cum autem singulis horis diei & noctu spiritus singuli per quorundam sapientum træditionem sint ad varias operationes diuersosque & mirandos effectus deputati: placuit nobis eorum ordinem duntaxat, non superstitionem, imitari: vt sumamus sine læsione Christiani nominis ab eis quod nobis ad nostrum conducit propositum: reliqua vero tanquam magicis artibus plena, & fidei nostræ contraria spernendo transeamus. Singulis itaque horis tam diurnis quam nocturnis deputatos per secretum Salomonis, cognominati Hermetis in suo de Magia volumine Spiritus principales tanquam artis supremos imperatores cum cæteris officialibus, nobis ad operationem propositam necessariis, assumentes prosequemur: dabimusq; & modum & doctrinam omnibus in hac arte studiosis, quibus mentium suarum cõceptum secretum & arcanum qualibet hora tutiori consilio patefaciant amicis. Quilibet namque princeps suis Spiritibus, ducibus, comitibus & seruitoribus tanquam speculator præsidet: ad cuius præceptum vocati à nobis legitimo carmine veniunt: arcana commissa perferunt, & se nobis obedientes promptosque in omnibus ostendunt. Sed cum denuo Spirituum mentionem sini habiturus, rursus mihi reor esse præfandum: Nihil in hac arte nostra haberi friuolum: nihil Euangelicæ traditioni aut Catholicæ fidei contrarium: nihil omnino tradi superstitiosum. Omniæ enim, quæ vel in præcedente volumine diximus, vel in sequentibus dicturi sumus, naturalibus, licitis & honestis sunt subnixa principijs: solisque peregrinis institutionibus velatum mysterium, & verba nominibus inuoluta spirituum, lectorem requirunt eruditum. Vtimur enim ministerio Spiritus ad velandum secretum, quod noceret reprobis publicatum. Et ne quis in horarum supputatione ex errore deficiat: horas planetarum tam in die, quam in nocte, nos accepisse noscat.

P RIMÆ horæ diei, quæ in ortu solis sumit exordium, Spiritus & Imperator Samael dicitur: qui habet sub suo imperio duces, comites, & subseruitores plurimos: qui vocati per operantem in hac hora duntaxat in Steganographia veniunt: Arcanum quod eis committitur perferunt, sed venire extra horam penitus contemnunt. Et nota, quod duces & primi Samaelis principes raro mittuntur ab eo ministerium huius scientiæ quippe qui magicis & nocturnis illusionibus hominum concitandis gerunt officium.

Comites autem cum seruatoribus suis ad ministerium huius artis specialiter deputati sunt: in quod etiam sine ducum presentia crebrius mittuntur: qui cum sint ex supremo inter spiritus ordine: aliquantulum superbos se & rebelles exhibere vocantibus solent: nec facile alicui nisi peritissimo in arte Steganographiæ sine labore & periculo obtem pereant: procaces enim sunt, & ad illusiones irrisionesq; hominum promptissimi, deridentq; & subsannant maxime illos, quos in arte Steganographiæ minus offenderint esse peritos. Eos autem, quos audaces, constantes & expertos in arte ipsa considerant, reuerentur & metuunt, eorumq; mandatis cum tremore & reuerentia promptissime semper obediunt. Iam itaq; ex comitibus eorum, qui nobis sunt necessarij in operationibus Steganographiæ hac hora, nomina referemus.

CVIVS HORA VOCATVR AALACHO, ET AN-

gelus eius supremus Imperator appellatur Dardariel: qui habet sub suo imperio duces, comites & spiritus multos.

DECIMA hora noctis vocatur
Aalacho, & Spiritus eius imperator supremus appellatur Dardariel, habens sub suo imperio multos potentissimos principes & duces: qui præsunt comitibus & ministerialibus pene infinite. Sunt autem ipsi duces supra modum beneuoli, hilares & iucundi:
& delectantur conuersari cum hominibus. Suntque operantibus in arte bene institutis obedientissimii. Et nota, quod ducum istorum infinitus est numerus, quia pene totus aer repletus est: & numerari non possunt. Dicit aute~ Salomon Hermes: & nos sumus experti, quod inter duces, comites & ministeriales Spiritus Dardarielis multi sunt boni, vtilis & honestissimi, qui hominibus. semper prodesse cupiunt, cohortantes eos semper quodam inuisibili magisterio ad bonum, ad honestatem, pacem, concordiam, ad integritatem fidei, ad amorem Dei, & obseruantiam mandatorum eius, ad contemptum mundi, ad supernæ foelicitatis desiderium, & ad omne bonum. Isti sunt boni & sanctissimi Spiritus, qui Deum amant, venerantur & habent, qui delectantur esse cum hominibus sanctis & Deum timentibus, quia sunt eis protectores deputati à Deo Creatore omnium. Alij autem sunt mali & pessimi apostatæ á Deo, omnium bonoru~ inimici, qui continue temptant mortales, & insidiantur hominibus. Et quicquid boni Spiritus ad honorem Dei instituunt, hoc isti semper destruere & reuocare conantur. Et aer isti malignis Spiritibus plenus est: inter homines currunt & discurrunt inuisibiliter, semper incitantes eos ad malum: & incautos secum trahunt ad infernum. Per istos malos Spiritus Dardarielis fiunt infinita maleficia, non solum apud Christianos, sed etiam apud infideles: & maxime, decipiunt mulierculas ad malitiam promptiores. Et quicunq; per eos maleficijs insistere voluerint, erunt in malis super omnes alios maleficos potentes & æterno incendio digni. Nos autem qui non malum, sed bonum & [134] docere & operari semper pro viribus cupimus; non ex malis, sed ex bonis Spiritibus duces nobis nuncios paucos ponamus.

IN QVO DOCEBIMVS MODVM ET FORMAM

generalem accedendi ad hanc artem ea sine periculo, cum maxima vtilitate.

VICVNQVE ad huius artis
nostræ occultæ scientiam accedere desiderat: quicunque operari per eam mirabilia & multis commodosa periculis optat: in primis oportet eum ornatum esse virtutibus, & conscientiae mundae, ac voluntatis bonae, ad Deum, ad seipsum & ad proximum: ne sit inclinatus ad nocendum alicui, neque commercia turpitudinis quaerat. Deinde necesse est, ut sit bonis artibus literarum aliquantulum imbutus, & maxime in scientia astrorum, ut sciat generales motus, cursus, discursus, mutationes, ordines, naturas, situs, ortus, occasus, & effectus stellarum, signorum & planetarum: quia sine istorum competenti scientia nemo potest ad huius artis promfunda habere accessum. Consequenter necesse est, ut praecipitorem habeat in arte perfectum & expertum: quia non, nisi paucis & in multis eruditissimis, & maxime in magicis peritis ad hanc scientiam venire sine praeceptore, possibile credimus. Oportet autem praeceptorem non solum in scientia esse probatum & expertum sed etiam fidelem, probum & Deum timentem: quia quanto fuerit cum Deo in bona conuersatione purior, tanto erit in huius scientiæ operatione securior: Spiritus enim virtutibus obtemperant. [138] Cum itaq; ad hanc artem quisquam accessurus est, accipiat eum praeceptor, & ducat in locum aliquem secretum & mundum: sit tempus tranquillum & serenum, & luna in oppositione completa, sole clare splendente: & sit Mercurius in ascendente coniunctus Veneri aut Ioui, si fieri potest: sintq; Saturnus remoti & Mars: quia si ipsi aut alter eorum fuerint cum ascendente, non eriinstitutio perfecta. In primis iurabit instituendus in arte hoc iurat mentum:

Ego N. iuro & promitto per virtutem omnipotentis Dei, per sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, per resurrectionem mortuorum & extremum iudicium, & per salutem animæ meæ in fide sancta catholica omnipotenti
Deo, beatæ Mariæ virgini, omnibus Sanctis, & tibi N. quod hanc artem Steganographiæ omnibus diebus vitæ meæ occultam fideliter seruabo: nec docebo illam aliquem sine tua voluntate & consensu. Insuper in eadem virtute iuro & promitto, quod hac scientia non vtar contra Deum & eius mandata:
nec contra Ecclesiam sanctam Romanam & vniuersalem seu ministros eius, neque contra iustitiam æquitatem. Sic me Dcus adiuuet, & sic saluet in extremo iudicio.

Deinde præceptor legat sequentem coniurationem in lingua mystica, & interpretetur eam, & omnes coniurationes in hoc opere contentas, coram discipulo: ne suspicetur, aliquid esse diabolicum, superstitiosum aut Deo contrarium, vel pactum cum dæmonibus implicite vel explicite quomodolibet latenter esse absconditum.

PRÆFATIO.

POSTQVAM, auxiliante Domino nostro Iesu Christo Salvatore fidelium animarum, primos artis nostræ libros duos compleuimus, in quibus Steganographiam nostram vtcunq_e descripsimus: oportet nos hunc tertium librum illis coniungere, & mirabilibus adinuentis mirabilia copulare. Inuenti in quodam libro cuiusdam antiqui Philosophi, qui dictus est Menastor, esse possibile, vt quadã arte mentis nostræ conceptum amico notum faciamus, quantumlibet absenti, in 24. horis, sine verbis, sine libris, & sine nuncio, perfectissime, latissime & secretissime. Cum autem desiderio sciendi vehementissime ducerer: coepi velle experiri dictionum veritatem: & post multos labores tandem inueni ipsam scientiam experientia probatam. Maximum est huiusmodi artis secretum & tantis obscuritatibus inuolutum, vt nulli facile sit peruiu~. Menastor enim nimis obscure & paucis verbis mysterium inuoluit: tantisq_e viribus, vt secretum maneat, vsus est, vt post eum adhuc nullus reperiri potuerit, qui ausus sit eius sermonem aliquo documento facere clariorem. Ego autem metuens, tam mirabile opus propter nimiam obscuritatem vilipendi ab imperitis, aut tandem igni cremari: cu~ in eo multis probationibus iam diu sim expertus: ita illud literis commendare apertioribus volui, vt & viris eruditis ac in magicis studiosissimis, cum Dei auxilio, possit aliquatenus fieri peruium: & tamen imperitis Rapophagis omni tempore maneat occultatum, & nullatenus eorum obtuso intellectui cognitum.

Dixit autem Menastor: Septem sunt planetæ, quibus septem præsunt Angeli, & illis sunt 21. spiritus subiecti, per quos nunciantur arcana. Horum nomina per tabulam exponamus.

Isti sunt septem Angeli planetarum secundum traditionem antiquorum sapientum, quorum quilibet ducit Mundum annis trecentis quinquaginta quatuor mensibus bis binis in ordine suo. Orifiel est Angelus Saturni, qui à principio creationis gubernauit Mundum annis 354. mensibus 4. Postea Venus, deinde Iuppiter, post illum Mercurius, ac deinde Mars, postea Luna, postremo Sol. Quilibet annis 354. mensibus 4. suum Angelum in tabula sibi communi scriptum dominium Mundi habuisse describitur. Itaque tempore diuuij ferunt sapientes Samaelem Angelum Martis seruiuisse Imperio regiminis: Gabrielem autem Angelum Lunæ tempore confusionis linguarum: Michaelem Angelum Solis, tempore exitus Israelis de Ægypte. Et quidem si quis assertioni præfatæ adhibet fidem, per semet ab origine Mundi facile mutationes temporum, & gubernationem Angelorum vsque ad suam ætatem præscripto ordine poterit supputare. Nos autem ea, quæ nostro conducunt proposito, prosequentes, septem Angelis planetarum prædictis 21. subiectos alios spiritus, hoc est, vniciue tres non ambigimus secundum huiusmodi artis nostræ institutionem: per quos intentionis nostræ operamur effectum. Ordinem planetarum consuetum obseruabimus, à supremo omnium Saturno incipientes vsque ad Lunam: primo cuius libet principalis angeli operationem conscribentes, ac deinde subseruientiam: & capitula per ordinem coniungentes.

CAP. I.

DE ORIFIELE, PRIMO ET SVPREMO ANGELO

Saturni, & de operationibus, quæ fiunt per eum.

ATVRNVS, planetarum omnium altior & supremus motu natura tardus, frigidus, quia remotus, difficilis, grauis, á puncto sui principii 650. annis vsque ad punctum prime stationis in quo libet signo mentibus commorans 30. naturali proprio motu mouetur 626. Eius primus & supremus Angelus vocatur, secundum opinionem antiquorum, Orifiel, qui habet sub se alios tres principales Spiritus, videlicet Sadael, Poniel & Morifiel, de quibus suo dicemus & loco & ordine, Per hunc autem Orifielem magnum Saturni Angelum fiunt multæ & diuersæ operationes in Steganographia. Per ipsum possumus mentis nostræ arcanum notu~ facere amico, artem scienti, vbicunque fuerit: per literas si placet: vel etiam sine literis & alia multa mirabilia facere, que nemo intelligit alius, qui in hac nostra scientia imperitus fuerit. Itaque volens per hunc Angelum in Steganographia quippiam operari, maxime in die Saturni, & in his rebus, negociis & causis, que pertinent ad Saturnum: in primis necesse est, vt motus eius noueris varios & diuersos. Et varios primum, purum, proprium, mixtum, rectum, retrogradum & confusum. Et in his omnibus non solum generales regulas ab Astronomis traditas (quia licet maxime conducant huic scientiæ nostræ, tamen non penitus sufficiunt) sed etiam particulares sciat necesse est. Pro fundamento igitur præsuppositis tabulis & regulis de motibus planetarum, quos omnino scire operantem in hac arte necessarium est: speciales regulas & tabellas punctualium motuum per singula capitula huius operis adiecimus, sine quarum obseruatione nemo in hac arte poterit operari. Et nota, quod dies cuius libet planetæ in quatuor partes æquales diuiditur, quarum primam, i. horas inæquales tres angelus ipsius planetæ principalis obtinet: & reliquas tres partes eius substituti per ordinem consequuntur. Exempli gratia; In die Saturni Orifiel, primus angelus eius tres horas ab ortu solis inæquales, quæ dicuntur horæ planetarum, possidet: secundas tres primus Angelus eius Sadael. Tertias tenet Poniel secundus: & quartas tres horas Morifiel Angelus Orifielis tertius. Sub primis tribus horis diei tam Saturni quam cæterarum stellarum in rebus Saturno appropriatis operandum est per Orifielem; sub secundis per Sadaelem; sub tertijs per Ponielem: & sub vltimis tribus per Morisielem. Et omnes operationes secundum motum Saturni aut prosperum effectum accipiunt aut debilem. Sed iam tabulam punctualis ponamus.

Medio motu Saturni in secundum diem, gradum & horam ex tabulis communibus cognito, diligenter in primis obseruandum scias; vtru~ sit directus an retrogradus; purus, proprius, mixtus aut confusus. Hoc aute~ ex tabulis communibus non inuenies. Id circo præscriptam tabulam ordinauimus, in qua punctum principij motus eius & finis poteris inuenire qualibet hora, diuisis gradibus simul intercurrentibus in particulis minutorum. Ita videlicet ad quodlibet minutum in duas, tres vel quatuor partes horarias secundum proportionem motus puri aut confusi, hoc est, aliorum planerarum coniunctione & separatione obseruata, diuidatur: impossibile est enim vel per stellas vel per Spiritus stellarum te posse ad effectum huius artis peruenire, nisi motu punctuali cognito & diligentissime obseruato tuas operationes ad qualitates planetarum proprias noueris præcise ordinare. Nam in diuersis gradibus, signis, diebus, horis, minutis, secundis, tertijs & quartis planetarum effectus, quo ad hanc scientiam, diuersimode variantur. In quolibet enim gradu 25. mutationes diuersas obseruauimus & inuenimus: vnde & quemlibet gradum in totidem partes diuidere principales necessarium nobis videbatur. Ista autem diuisio non habet locum per omnes gradus, sed in illis duntaxat, in quibus stellæ nobis ad hanc artem conducentes oriuntur, cum quibus fit operatio ad significandum absentibus omne, quod volumus, ministerio Spirituum sine literis, sicut dicemus. Itaque prima tabula diuisionis graduum motus Saturni, quam præmisimus, primæ quartæ diei vel noctis deseruit perpetuo in his, quæ pertinent ad operationem Saturni & principium eius; secunda vero ad secundas tres horas, tertia ad tertias, & quarta ad quartas. Deinde subiecimus punctualem ordinem motus ipsius Saturni in ascendendo, quando videlicet fuerit in vno ex primis quatuor signis, quæ sunt Aries, Taurus, Gemini & Cancer. De reliquis octo signis etiam tabulam ordinabimus conseuentem.

VAMVIS in præsentī capitulo specialis nobis tractatus habendus sit de motibus Saturni & spiritibus eius, ac de operationibus in Steganographia per ipsos: ne tamen semel oportune dicta cogamur in quolibet capitulorum repetere: monendus lector studiosus fuerat, vt eorum quæ in hoc ipso capitulo dicimus, etiam in sequentibus studeat esse memor. Sunt autem singulorum planetarum varij motus & in diuersos alios omnes subtilissime partiuntur. Motus purus & proprius multiplex est, & varijs subtilissimis diuisionibus variatur. Directus, retrogradus, mixtus & confusus, to* ferme punctis variantur, quot à principio sui motus in circulo diuelluntur. Quid dicam te coniunctione ipsorum planetarum ad inuicem? Nam, sicut Ptolomæus in Gentiloquio ait, centum viginti coniunctiones in ipsis planetis, videlicet binariæ 21. ternariæ 35. quaternariæ 35. quinariæ 21. senariæ 7. & septenaria vna. Et de hi* suo loco dicemus. De cæteris autem motibus quamuis dare certum terminum non possumus propter infinitam diuersitatem, quibus quotidie punctis crescentibus aut minuentibus, variantur ignorantes: ad plenum tamen, quantum nos obseruare potuimus, inuenimus diuisiones plus quam 300000. in quibus omnes huius artis operationes, quo ad effectum, sæpe variantur. Et nisi quis valde expertus in omnibus his, fuerit scieritque motus ipsorum planetarum medios perfecte, ac deinde minutissimas diuisiones punctuales, quæ ex quartis, tertiis, secundis minutis & gradibus in æqualibus subtilissime diuisis proueniunt: facile in veros ei rores incidet, & graue periculum vix euadet. Ad perfectam itaque huius scientiæ institutionem tres tabulas ordinauimus: in quarum prima motum Saturni secundum quatuor partes, tam diē quam noctis, proprium videlicet & purum, ad punctualem radicem reduximus, & ad verum ascendentis cuiuslibet signi punctum ordinauimus. Incipientes a primo gradu Arietis, puncto 641, 8II & 69. totum Zodiacum in secunda tabula complexi sumus. Deinde in eadem secunda tabula motum Saturni in quolibet duodecim signorum ad omnes quartas diē & noctis ita digessimus ad minutias, vt qualibet hora nobis gradu ascendentis, in quo fuerit Saturnus ipse, cognito, clare patescere possit radix ipsius punctualis, semel autem terminata calculatur alicuius quod nostra ætas nescio si vnquam pertingere possit, tabula denuo á capite sui principij incipienda est. In tertia tabula septenariam coniunctionem Saturni cum cæteris planetis, quæ vnica est, ad proportionem puncti reduximus; per quam omnes coniunctiones 120. facile ad punctum reducantur. In eadem tabula purus motus planetarum omnium per punctualem principij cuiuslibet diuisionem, progressionem & elongationem à puncto in quolibet motu cognoscitur, si medius motus antea perfecte habeatur. Nam sine cognitione medij; motus impossibile est aliquem ad practicam huius scientiæ posse accedere. Rursus etiam si medium motum & verum similiter perfectissime intelligas, nihil tibi ad huius scientiæ cognitionem proderit, nisi præscriptas tres tabulas ad omnes punctos diuisionum in motibus planetarum a gradibus inæqualibus æqualiter sumptos per minutias singulas ad integrum intelligas. Sed iam ad operationem procedamus.

Cognitis autem omnibus, intellectisque perfecte his, quæ diximus, & auxiliante Deo, dicturi sumus: cum volueris in hac profundissima speculatione operari: in primis oportet te scire ortum, exaltationem & occasum omnium stellarum octauæ Sphæræ, per quas fit operatio: & quantum quælibet distet ab alia. Sunt autem. Stellæ, per quas operamur ad nunciandum secretu~ quodcunque absenti siue verbis siue scriptis & sine homine nuncio, septingentæ numero, quarum nomina, loca, ortus, occasus, eleuationes, distantias, accessus regressus in libro speciali descripsimus, quos nimis studiosum esset hic denuo inserendo repetere. Itaque obseruata stella in omnibus sicut oportet, & cognoto puncto ascendentis in quo Saturnus eadem hora fuerit, si per ipsum fit operatio: diligentissime considera qualitatem motus ipsius, vtrum sit directus an retrogradus, purus an mixtus, proprius an cum alijs impedimentis aspectuum malorum coniunctus, discretus an confusus. Deinde punctu~ principij motus in eodem signo tam ipsius Saturni quam cæterorum planetarum ei coniunctorum ex tabulis communibus, & his quas præmisimus, subtilissime & proprie calculatum scribe in charta munda: & quantum sit progressus, quantum eleuatus, quantumve depressus, diligenter obserua. Hoc idem facies in cæteris planetis, Saturno vel illi, per quem fit operatio, coniunctis: Simili modo diligentissime obserua, quo aspectu se mutuo planetæ aspiciant, an trigonus, quadr. coniunctio vel sext. Quia in ipsis latet huius operationis maxima vis. Ite~ ante omnia obserues, in qua quarta sit Saturnus non solum quo ad diē aut nocte~, sed etiam quo ad signum in quo est, & quo ad annos à principio mundi, quando fuit in domo, sua primo creatus: quia omnia ista sunt necessaria. Et nota, quaudo Orifiel angelus Saturni regit mundum in suo ordine, quod regimen ducet annis 354. mensibus quatuor. Tunc omnis operatio huius profundissimæ scientiæ, quæ pertinet ad opera Saturni, & quæ fit per eu~, facitis eft, & sine magno labore: perspicuu~ consequetur effectum. Et simile de cæteris planetis est obseruandum. Quicumque ergo, cognitis principiis huius artis, sine diffcultate voluerit operari per eam, per illum planetam operetur, cuius angelus principalis isto tempore orbem gubernare facili calculatione inuenitur. Igitur, calculatis diligentissime omnibus, processurus ad operationem, obserua, quis angelus Saturni præsit illi quartæ diē aut noctis: & nomen eius scribe cum nomine stellæ, per quam vis operari, quam te videre necesse est. Omni autem tempore stellas tibi necessarias videre poteris, arte quam tradidimus, siue in diē siue in nocte. Deinde scribe in eadem chartula cætera, quæ scis secretissima, cum en causto ad hoc nostro more præparato; sicut scis. Postea pone schedulam ipsam, quam scripsisti, ante te super mensam & scribe in aliam chartam mentis tuæ conceptum, quod vis scire absentem: & inuolue has duas schedulas ad inuicem, & pone in loco eminentiori ante te super mensam aut pulpitem. Et dic coniurationem ad Spiritum, per quem operari, sibi appropriatam. Aut si malueris sine scriptis omnino nunciare secretum per Spiritum, vel sine Spiritu, in tuo arbitrio sit positum. Eiusdem namque operationis est, cum Spiritu vel sine Spiritu secretum nunciare amico, paucis alteratis, sicut suo loco dicemus. Iam differentia operationum Saturni & Angelorum eius secundum quatuor quartas principales cum coniurationibus vnicuique per ordinem appropriatis componemus: quibus vtendum est, cum per Spiritum nunciatur arcanum.

De primo Angelo Saturni, qui est pincipalis, & vocatur Ori-fiel, qui primam quartam Saturni obseruat.

PRIMVS & pincipalis angelus Saturni, sicut in præcedentibus diximus, vocatur Orifiel, qui cum cæteris angelis planetarum in ordine suo orbem regit annis 354. mensibus quatuor. Hic habet primam partem tam in die, quam in nocte: & per eum fit operatio ab ortu Solis in die, & ab occasu Solis in nocte, vsque ad tertiam horam inclusiue in omnibus, quæ ad Saturnum pertinent, & in eius die ac nocte, sicut diximus. Cum itaque in prima quarta Saturni aliquid volueris, nuntiare absenti sine verbis, & sine literis: tum Spiritus Saturni non alius, quam Orifiel, tibi vocandus est: quia per eum poteris omnia nunciare perfectissime. In primis considera, in quo signo sit iste Saturnus, & in quo gradu, & an sit directus vel retrogradus, & quibus planetis sit coniunctio. De primo ponamus exemplum: Ecce Saturnus iam est in 25. grad. Tauri, die 28. mensis Aprilis anni præsentis, qui est Domini 1500. Nunc itaque ducamus 25. per 25. & fiunt 600. hos diuidamus per quatuor quartas æquales: & manebunt cuilibet quartæ 150. compleamus omnes gradus Saturni in signo Tauri & erunt 30. Ducamus at eum 3. per 25. in toto, & fiunt 750. Reijciamus quatuor gradus superfluos à medio terciæ, quartæ & remanebunt 650. Accipiamus nunc punctum motus Saturni ex tabula ad præsentem diem & horam: & scire poterimus, quis sit ortus, eleuatio & occasus Angeli Orifielis cum Saturno in prima quarta: quibus cognitis, facilis erit operatio nostra.

His diligentissime consideratis; Orifielem Angelum Saturni constat esse separatim á Saturno 25. gradibus, & 15. minutis: & est ad Oriente~, à primo puncto motus Saturni 625. gradationibus distans, à fine motus 25. minutis. His cognitis, fac imaginem ex cera, vel pinge in charta~ nouam figuram Orifielis in modu~ viri barbati & nudi, stantis super tauru~ varij coloris, habentis in dextra librum, & in sinistra calamum: quem dum facis, dic: Fiat hæc imago magni Orifielis plena, perfecta & apta nunciare mentis meæ secretum N. filio N. amico meo secure, fideliter & integre, Ame~. Scribe in fronte nomen tuum cum encausto ex oleo rosarum temperato, & in pectore nomen amici tui absentis dicens, Hæc est imago N. filij N. cui per Angelum Saturni Orifielem nunciatur mentis mentis meæ conceptu~, Amen. In fronte imaginis scribe Merion & in pectore Troesda. Deinde coniunge ambas imagines simul, dicens: In nomine Patris & Filij & Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Audi Orifiel princeps Stellæ Saturni, & per virtutum omnipotentis Dei adiuro te, ausculta: præcipio & mando tibi per virtute~ istius imaginis tuæ, vt nuncies N. filio N. hanc intentionem meam (explicetur intentio) quantocyus secure, secrete & fideliter, nihil obmittens coru~, quæ eu~ volo scire, & quæ tibi commendaui. In nomine Patris & Filij & Spiritus sancti, Amen. Deinde inuolue ipsas imagines sic coniunctas simul pa~no mundo loto cum aqua albisine, & pone eas in vas mobile, qe appellant sapientes Indie pharnat alronda: & cooperi illud superius diligenter cu~ corio raso, ac pone in introitu alicuius habitationis clausæ, vbicunq; volueris ad spacium 24. horaru~: & sine omni hæsitacione tuum desideriu~ intra illas 24. horas perfecte adimpletur: scietq; amicus tuus absens intentionem in omni forma perfectissime, sicut eam super imaginem dixisti (quantumcunq; prolixa fuerit) & quicquid ilium ex te scire volueris, sciet in illis 24. horis perfecte & secretissime: ita quod nunquam in æternum aliquis homo potent hoc percipere aut scire sine voluntate tua aut amici tui. Et est magnum secretum, quod nullus sapientu~ ante nos literis commendare ausus fuit. Amicus autem ille tuus si quid te scire voluerit ex suis negotiis: cum eodem spiritu te potest facere certiore~ intra idem spacium 24. horaru~: modo sit in hac arte bene perfectus. Tu autem, 24. horis elapsis, leua imagines de loco, in quo positæ sunt: & reponere eas, quia omni tempore Orifielis per eas operari potes non solum ad illum amicum tuum, sed ad quoscunq; alios, mutato duntaxat nomine ipsius amici in illius nomen, quem volueris aliquid scire. Et nota, quod non oportet ipsas imagines depingi pulchras aut curiosas: sed quantumcunq; simplices fuerint, nihil refert: modo habeant aliquam similitudinem proportionatam, ita vt imagines hominum esse cognoscantur. Qui autem eas pulchre depingere voluerit & poterit: nihil impedit, nec prodest.

Loco angeli Sadaelis ex consideratione stollæ fixæ ad punctum motus Saturni inuento, fac dus imagines (eo modo, quo diximus in operatione præcedenti) Orifielis cum inscriptionibus, contestationibus & alijs singulis, quæ ibi dicta sunt. Quibus completis, pone ipsas imagines super quinq; ramusculos herbæ thrasnote extra domum in loco securo & secreto, & dic super eas: In nomine + patris & + filij & + Spiritus Sancti, Amen. [Sunt ... rubræ] Sicut istas duas imagines Sadaelis angeli & N. filij N. amici mei simul coniunctas super hos quinque ramos mobiles posui, ita tibi Sadael in virtute Orifielis principis tui magni præcipio, vt mentis meæ secretum, quod tibi explicando commisi, sine mora ad notitiam præfati perferas amici. His dictis dimitte ibidem imagines per 24. horas; & fiet quod voluisti: scietque amicus tuus omne quod super imagines dixisti, perfectissime ac secrete. Item si volueris de aliquo absente scire, quomodo valeat, & verum statum eius in 24. horis: quantum cunque longe sit, isto modo scire poteris. ET OMNIA QVÆ FIVNT IN MVNDO, CONSTELLATIONE OBSERVATA, PER HANC ARTE SCIRE POTERIS.

TErtius angelus Saturni vocatur Pomiel, qui est in ordine secundus sub Orifiele, principali angelo Saturni: præsidet horæ Saturninæ septimæ, octauæ & nonæ, tam in die quam in nocte, in omnibus, quæ pertinent ad operationem Saturni. Locum eius, quoniam cum suo mouetur ordine ad stellas fixas 25. gradibus ab Oriente, per tabulas dispositis suis horis, ita inuenies.

ECVNDVS Angelus Saturni vocatur Sadael, qui est primus sub Orifiele in ordine constitutus, & habet secundam partem post suum principem, tam in die quam in nocte, in operibus & temporibus Saturni: hoc est, quartam, quintam, & sextam horas inæquales. Cum itaque in his tribus horis aliquid nunciare volueris ad amicum absentem in viginti quatuor horis, sine literis, sine verbis & sine nuncio: fac id per omnia & singula, quæ in operatione præcedenti diximus: & obserua punctum secundi motus Saturni in gradibus suis ad signum, in quo planeta ipse mouetur, & qualis sit motus, & vbi sit Spiritus mouens astrum, quantum recesserit, & quantum eleuetur a centro sui motus, quantumcunque distet a puncto quolibet totius circuli siue sphæræ. Ad horum scientiam consequendam est tabula hæc.

SECRET THINGS,

DOCTRINE OF SPIRITS

with many curious and rare secrets (hitherto not generally known;)

THE ART OF DRAWING SPIRITS INTO CRYSTALS, &c.

Of the making of the Chrystal and the Form of Preparation for a Vision.

Procure of a lapidary good clear pellucid crystal, of the bigness of a small orange, i.e. about one inch and a half in diameter; let it be globular or round each way alike; then, when you have got this crystal, fair and clear, without any clouds or specks, get a small plate of pure gold to encompass the crystal round one half; let this be fitted on an ivory or ebony pedestal, as you may see more fully described in the drawing, [figure 1]. Let there be engraved a circle (A) round the crystal with these characters around inside the circle next the crystal

; afterwards the name "Tetragrammaton". On the other side of the plate let there be engraven "Michael, Gabriel, Uriel, Raphael;" which are the four principal angels ruling over the Sun, Moon, Venus and Mercury; but on the table on which the crystal stands the following names, characters, &c. must be drawn in order.

First, The names of the seven planets and angels ruling them, with their seals or characters. The names of the four kings of the four corners of the earth. Let them be all written within a double circle, with a triangle on a table; on which place the crystal on its pedestal: this being done, thy table is complete (as in the Fig. D,) and fit for the calling of the spirits; after which thou shalt proceed to experiment, thus:

In what time thou wouldest deal with the spirits by the table and crystal, thou must observe the planetary hour; and whatever planet rules in that hour, the angel governing the planet thou shalt call in the manner following; but first, say this short prayer:

"Oh, God! who art the author of all good things, strengthen, I beseech thee, thy poor servant, that he may stand fast, without fear, through this dealing and work; enlighten, I beseech thee, oh Lord! the dark understanding of thy creature, so that his spiritual eye may be opened to see and know thy angelic spirits descending here in this crystal: (then lay thy hand on the crystal saying,) and thou, oh inanimate creature of God, be sanctified and consecrated, and blessed to this purpose, that no evil phantasy may appear in thee; or, if they do gain ingress into this creature, they may be constrained to speak intelligibly, and truly, and without the least ambiguity, for Christ's sake. Amen. And forasmuch as thy servant here standing before thee, oh, Lord! desires neither evil treasures, nor injury to his neighbour, nor hurt to any living creature, grant him the power of descrying those celestial spirits or intelligences, that may appear in this crystal, and whatever good gifts (whether the power of healing infirmities, or of imbibing wisdom, or discovering any evil likely to afflict any person or family, or any other good gift thou mayest be pleased to bestow on me, enable me, by thy wisdom and mercy, to use whatever I may receive to the honour of thy holy name. Grant this for thy son Christ's sake. Amen."

Then taking your ring and pentacle, put the ring on the little finger of your right hand; hang the pentacle round thy neck ; (Note, the pentacle may be either wrote on clean virgin parchment, or engraven on a square plate of silver and suspended from thy neck to the breast), then take your black ebony wand, with the gilt characters on it and trace the circle, (Fig. 7. C D E F,) saying,

"In the name of the blessed Trinity, I consecrate this piece of ground for our defence; so that no evil spirit may have power to break these bounds prescribed here, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

Then place the vessel for the perfumes between thy circle and the holy table on which the crystal stands, and, having fire therein, cast in thy perfumes, saying,

"I conjure thee, oh thou creature of fire! by him who created all things both in heaven and earth, and in the sea, and in every other place whatever, that forthwith thou cast away every phantasm from thee, that no hurt whatsoever shall be done in any thing. Bless, oh Lord, this creature of fire, and sanctify it that it may be blessed, and that they may fill up the power and virtue of their odours; so neither the enemy, nor any false imagination, may enter into them; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen."

Now, this being done in the order prescribed, take out thy little book, which must be made about seven inches long, of pure white virgin vellum or paper, likewise pen and ink must be ready to write down the name, character, and office, likewise the seal or image of whatever spirit may appear (for this I must tell you that it does not happen that the same spirit you call will always appear, for you must try the spirit to know whether he be a pure or impure being, and this thou shalt easily know by a firm and undoubted faith in God.)

Now the most pure and simple way of calling the spirits or spirit is by a short oration to the spirit himself, which is more effectual and easy to perform than composing a table of letters; for all celestial operations, the more pure and unmixed they are, the more they are agreeable to the celestial spirits: therefore, after the circle is drawn, the book, perfumes, rod, &c. in readiness, proceed as follows:

(After noticing the exact hour of the day, and what angel rules that hour, thou shalt say,)

"In the name of the blessed and holy Trinity, I do desire thee, thou strong mighty angel, Michael, [Or any other angel or spirit] that if it be the divine will of him who is called Tetragrammaton &c. the Holy God, the Father, that thou take upon thee some shape as best becometh thy celestial nature, and appear to us visibly here in this crystal, and answer our demands in as far as we shall not transgress the bounds of the divine mercy and goodness, by requesting unlawful knowledge; but that thou wilt graciously shew us what things are most profitable for us to know and do, to the glory and honour of his divine Majesty, who liveth and reigneth, world without end. Amen.

"Lord, thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven; -- make clean our hearts within us, and take not thy Holy Spirit from us.

"O Lord, by thy name, we have called him, suffer him to administer unto us. And that all things may work together for thy honour and glory, to whom with thee, the Son, and blessed Spirit, be ascribed all might, majesty and dominion. Amen"

Note, In these dealings, two should always be present; for often a spirit is manifest to one in the crystal when the other cannot perceive him; therefore if any spirit appear, as there most likely will, to one or both, say,

"Oh, Lord! we return thee our hearty and sincere thanks for the hearing of our prayer, and we thank thee for having permitted thy spirit to appear unto us which we, by thy mercy, will interrogate to our further instruction, through Christ. Amen."

Interrog. 1. In the name of the holy and undefiled Spirit, the Father, the begotten Son, and Holy Ghost, proceeding from both, what is thy true name?

If the spirit answers, Michael, then proceed.

Quest. 2. What is thy office? 3. What is thy true sign or character? 4. When are the times most agreeable to thy nature to hold conference with us?

Wilt thou swear by the blood and righteousness of our Lord Jesus Christ, that thou art truly Michael?

(Here let him swear, then write down his seal or character in thy book, and against it, his office and times to be called, through God's name; also write down any thing he may teach thee, or any responses he may make to thy questions or interrogations, concerning life or death, arts or sciences, or any other thing;) and then shalt thou say,

"Thou great and mighty spirit, inasmuch as thou camest in peace and in the name of the ever blessed and righteous Trinity, so in this name thou mayest depart, and return to us when we call thee in his name to whom every knee doth bow down. Fare thee well, Michael; peace be between us, through our blessed Lord Jesus Christ. Amen."

Then will the spirit depart; then say,

"To God the Father, eternal Spirit, fountain of Light, the Son, and Holy Ghost, be all honour and glory, world without end. Amen."

Michael

I shall here set down the Table of the names of Spirits and Planets governing the Hours; so thou shalt easily know by inspection, what Spirit and Planet governs every Hour of the Day and Night in the Week.

Note, The day is divided into twelve equal parts, called Planetary Hours, reckoning from sunrise to sunset, and, again, from the setting to the rising; and to find the planetary hour, you need but to divide the natural hours by twelve, and the quotient gives the length of the planetary hours and odd minutes, which shews you how long a spirit bears rule in that day; as Michael governs the first and the eighth hour on Sunday, as does the ☉. After you have the length of the first hour, you have only to look in the Table, as if it be the fourth hour, on Sunday, you see in the Table that the ☾ and Gabriel rules; and so for the rest it being so plain and easy you cannot err.

Probably spurious. Appended to Henrici Cor. Agrippae ab Nettesheym, de occulta philosophia libri III, Parisiis. Ex officina Iacobi Dupuys. 1567. English translation in Francis Barrett's The Magus, p. 135bis.

...ght this booke of Dr. Biggs for a Guinea

revealed to Dr. John Dee by the Angels.

This writing begining (not at [Arney Vah] etc. but) at Oxar Varmol is the 2nd Page of the first leaf of the famous Book shown in the stone, which consisted of 49 lines or Rows & every Row of 49 words or letters. The first 40 of this Page have a word in every little square which could not wel be contained in the little Cells of a square table in this Book - Therefore they are writ thus at large as you see. But the 9 last Rows of this Page had but one Letter a piece, & are accordingly set down at the end hereof, pag. 5. All the other leaves of that Book had but a single Letter in each little square & so they are set down, as here after follows in this Book. Vide l.5 Ms. pag. 142, 143 etc.

The first Page of that first Leaf is not (it ought to be) all transcribed here before this 2nd Page save only the 49, or last, Row beginning (Arney Vah etc.) But they may be seen (& (if thought fit) copied out thence) in l. 5to Ms. p. 150, 151, etc. [The preceding note is by Elias Ashmole.]

MONAS HIEROGLYPHICA

('THE HIEROGLYPHIC MONAD')

by Dr. JOHN DEE

Antwerp, 1564.

Translated by J.W. Hamilton-Jones, 1947.

To the most excellent Majesty of the famous King Maximilian

[Dedication omitted by J.W. Hamilton-Jones.]

THEOREM I

It is by the straight line and the circle that the first and most simple example and representation of all things may be demonstrated, whether such things be either non-existent or merely hidden under Nature's veils.

THEOREM II

Neither the circle without the line, nor the line without the point, can be artificially produced. It is, therefore, by virtue of the point and the Monad that all things commence to emerge in principle.

That which is affected at the periphery, however large it may be, cannot in any way lack the support of the central point.

THEOREM III

Therefore, the central point which we see in the centre of the hieroglyphic Monad produces the Earth, round which the Sun, the Moon, and the other planets follow their respective paths. The Sun has the supreme dignity, and we represent him by a circle having a visible centre.

THEOREM IV

Although the semicircle of the Moon is placed above the circle of the Sun and would appear to be superior, nevertheless we know that the Sun is ruler and King. We see that the Moon in her shape and her proximity rivals the Sun with her grandeur, which is apparent to ordinary men, yet the face, or a semi-sphere of the Moon, always reflects the light of the Sun. It desires so much to be impregnated with solar rays and to be transformed into Sun that at times it disappears completely from the skies and some days after reappears, and we have represented her by the figure of the Horns (Cornucopia).

THEOREM V

And truly I give the completion of the idea of the solar circle by adding a semicircle for the Moon, for the morning and the evening were the first day, and it was therefore in the first (day) that the Light of the Philosophers was made (or produced).

THEOREM VI

We see here that the Sun and the Moon are supported upon the right-angled Cross. This Cross may signify very profoundly, and for sufficient reasons in our hieroglyph, either the Ternary or the Quaternary. The Ternary is made by the two straight lines having a copulative centre.

The Quaternary is produced by the four straight lines enclosing four right angles. Either of these elements, the lines or the right angles, repeated twice, therefore, afford us in the most secret manner the Octad, which I do not believe was known to our predecessors, the Magi, and which you should study with great attention. The threefold magic of the first Fathers and the wise men consisted in Body, Soul and Spirit. Therefore, we have here the first manifested Septenary, that is to say, two straight lines with a common point which make three, and the four lines which converge to form the central point in separating the first two.

THEOREM VII

The Elements being far from their accustomed places, the homogeneous parts are dislocated, and this a man learns by experiment, for it is along the straight lines that they return naturally and effectively to these same places. Therefore, it will not be absurd to represent the mystery of the four Elements, in which it is possible to resolve each one into elementary form, by four straight lines running in four contrary directions from one common and indivisible point. Here you will notice particularly that the geometers teach that a line is produced by the displacement of a point: we give notice that it must be the same here, and for a similar reason, because our elementary lines are produced by a continual cascade of droplets as a flux in the mechanism of our magic.

THEOREM VIII

Besides, the kabbalistic extension of the Quaternary according to the common formula of notation (because we say one, two, three, and four) is an abridged or reduced form of the Decad. This is because Pythagoras was in the habit of saying: 1+2+3+4 make 10. It is not by chance that the right-angled Cross -- that is to say, the twenty-first letter of the Roman alphabet, which was considered as being formed by four straight lines -- was taken by the most ancient of the Roman Philosophers to represent the Decad.

Further, they have defined the place where the Ternary conducts its force into the Septenary.

THEOREM IX

We see that all this accords perfectly with the Sun and Moon of our Monad, because, by the magic of the four Elements, an exact separation upon their original lines must be made; following which the circulatory conjunction within the solar complement through the peripheries of these same lines is performed, because however long a given line may be, it is possible to describe a circle passing through its extremes, following the laws of the geometricians. Therefore, we cannot deny how useful the Sun and the Moon are to our Monad, in conjunction with the decadal proportion of the Cross.

THEOREM X

The following figure of the zodiacal sign Aries , in use amongst the astronomers, is the same for all the world (a sort of erection both cutting and pointed), and it is understood that it indicates the origin of the fiery triplicity in that part of the sky.

Therefore, we have added the astronomical sign Aries to signify that in the practice of this Monad the use of fire is required.

We finish the brief hieroglyphic consideration of our Monad, which we would sum up in one only hieroglyphic context:

The Sun and the Moon of this Monad desire that the Elements in which the tenth proportion will flower, shall be separated, and this is done by the application of Fire.

THEOREM XI

The mystical sign of the Ram, composed of two semicircles connected by one common point, is very justly attributed to the place of the equinoctial nycthemeron, because the period of twenty-four hours divided by means of the equinox denotes most secret proportions.

This I have said in respect of the Earth.

THEOREM XII

The very ancient wise men and Magi have transmitted to us five hieroglyphical signs of the planets, all of which are composed out of the signs used for the Moon and the Sun, together with the sign of the Elements and the hieroglyphical sign of Aries, the Ram, which will become apparent to those who examine these figures:

Each one of these signs will not be difficult to explain according to the hieroglyphical manner in view of our fundamental principles, already posited. To begin with, we will speak in paraphrases of those which possess the characteristics of the Moon:

following that, of those which possess a solar character. When our lunar nature, by the science of the Elements, had accomplished the first revolution round our Earth, then it was called, mystically, Saturn.

Afterwards, at the following revolution, it was named Jupiter, and holds a very secret figure. Then the Moon, developed by yet a third journey, was represented very obscurely again by this figure which it was their custom to call Mercury . You see how this is Lunar. That it must be conducted through a fourth revolution will not be contrary to our most secret design, whatever certain sages may say. In this manner the pure magical spirit, by its spiritual virtue, will perform the work of the albification at the place of the Moon; to us alone and as it were in the middle of a natural day he will speak hieroglyphically without words, SATURNUS.			MARS.

	24	Jupiter.			Venus.
		Mercurius.			Mercurius.

introducing and imprinting these four geogonic figures in the pure Earth very simply prepared by us: this last figure being in the middle of all the others.

THEOREM XIII

Now regard the mystical character of Mars! Is it not formed from the hieroglyphs of the Sun and Aries, the magistrery of the Elements partly intervening? And that of Venus -- I wish to know is it not produced from that of the Sun and the Elements according to the best exponents? Therefore, the planets look towards the solar periphery and the work of revivification.

In the progression we will notice this other Mercury will appear who is truly the twin brother of the first: for by the complete Lunar and Solar magic of the Elements, the Hieroglyph of this Messenger speaks to us very distinctly, and we should examine it carefully and listen to what it says. And (by the Will of God) it is the Mercury of the Philosophers, the greatly celebrated microcosm and ADAM. Therefore, some of the most expert were inclined to place him in a position of, and give him a rank equal to, the Sun himself.

This we cannot perform in the present epoch unless we add to this coralline crystal work a certain SOUL separated from the body by the pyrognomic art. It is very difficult to accomplish this and very perilous because of the fire and the sulphur which the breath contains within it. But certainly this Soul can perform marvellous things. For example, join it by indissoluble ties to the disc of the Moon (or at least of Mercury) by Lucifer and Fire. In the third place, it is necessary that we should show (in order to demonstrate our Septenary number) that it is the Sun of Philosophers itself. You will observe the exactitude as well as the clarity with which this anatomy of our Hieroglyphic Monad corresponds to what is signified in the arcana of these two theorems.

THEOREM XIV

It is therefore clearly confirmed that the whole magistrery depends upon the Sun and the Moon. Thrice Greatest Hermes has repeatedly told us this in affirming that the Sun is its father and the Moon is its mother: and we know truly that the red earth (terra lemnia) is nourished by the rays of the Moon and the Sun which exercise a singular influence upon it.

THEOREM XV

We suggest, therefore, that Philosophers should consider the action of the Sun and the Moon upon the Earth. They will notice that when the light of the Sun enters Aries, then the Moon, when she enters the next sign, that is to say Taurus, receives a new dignity in the light and is exalted in that sign in respect of her natural virtues. The Ancients explained this proximity of the luminaries -- the most remarkable of all -- by a certain mystic sign under the name of the Bull. It is very certain that it is this exaltation of the Moon to which in their treatises the astronomers from the most ancient times bear witness. This mystery can be understood only by those who have become the Absolute Pontiffs of the Mysteries. For the same reason they have said that Taurus is the house of Venus -- that is to say, of conjugal love, chaste and prolific, for nature rejoices in nature, as the great Ostanes concealed in his most secret mysteries. These exaltations are acquired by the Sun, because he himself, after having undergone many eclipses of his light, received the force of Mars, and is said to be exalted in this same house of Mars which is our Ram (Aries).

This most secret mystery is clearly and perfectly shown in our Monad by the hieroglyphic figure of Taurus, which is here represented, and by that of Mars, which we have indicated in Theorem XII and Theorem XIII by the Sun joined to a straight line towards the sign of Aries.

In this theory another kabbalistic analysis of our Monad offers itself, because the true and ingenious explanation is this: the exaltations of the Moon and of the Sun are made by means of the science of the Elements.

Note. -- There are two things which should be particularly observed: first, that the hieroglyphic figure of Taurus is the same as the diphthong of the Greeks  [i.e. -ou], which was always used in terminating the singular gender; secondly, that by a simple transposition of place we show the letter alpha twice, by a circle and a half-circle, being simply tangents which touch one another as shown.

THEOREM XVI

We must now, in view of our subject, philosophise for a short time upon the Cross. Our Cross may be formed of two straight lines (as we have said) which are equal one to the other -- that is to say, we cannot separate the lines except we do it by parting them so that we get equal lengths. But in the mystic distribution of the components of our Cross, we wish to use parts which are both equal and unequal. These parts show that a virtue is hidden under the power of the division of the Equilateral Cross into two parts, because they are of equal grandeur. In general, the Cross must be composed of equal right angles, since the nature of justice demands the perfect equality of the lines used in the decussation. In accordance with this justice, we propose to examine with care that which follows concerning the Equilateral Cross (which is the twenty-first letter of the Latin alphabet).

If, through the common point where the opposite angles meet in our Rectilineal, Rectangular, and Equilateral Cross, we imagine a straight line dividing it into two parts, then on either side of the line thus traversed we find the parts are perfectly equal and similar. And these parts are similar in shape to that letter of the Romans which is regarded as the fifth of the vowels, and which was frequently used by the most ancient Latin philosophers to represent the number five.

This, I conceive, was not done by them without good reason, because it is in fact the exact half of our Decad. Of these parts of the figure thus duplicated by the hypothetical division of the Cross, we must conclude it to be reasonable that each part represents the quinary, although one is upright and the other reversed in imitation of the multiplication of the square root which comes in here in a marvellous way as the circular number, that is to say, the quinary, from which we find the number twenty-five is produced (because this letter is the twentieth of the alphabet and the fifth of the vowels).

We will now consider another aspect of this same Equilateral Cross -- that which follows is based upon the position shown in our Monadic Cross. Let us suppose a similar division of the Cross into two parts be made as in the drawing.

Now we see the germinating shape of another letter of the Latin alphabet -- the one upright, the other reversed and opposite. This letter is used (after the ancient custom of the Latins) to represent the number fifty. From this, it seems to me, we establish our Decad of the Cross, for this is placed at the summit of all the mysteries, and it follows that this Cross is the hieroglyphic sign of perfection. Therefore, enclosed within the quinary force is the power of the Decad, out of which comes the number fifty as its own product.

Oh, my God, how profound are these mysteries! and the name E L is given to this letter! And for this very reason, we see that it responds to the decadal virtue of the Cross, because, starting from the first letter of the alphabet, L is the tenth letter, and counting backwards from the letter X, we find that it falls into the tenth place, and since we show that there are two parts of the Cross, and considering now their numerical virtue, it is quite clear how the number one hundred is produced. And if by the law of squares these two parts be multiplied together, they give a product of 2500. This square compared with the square of the first circular number, and applied to it, gives a difference of one hundred, which is the Cross itself explained by the square of its Decad, and is recognised as one hundred. Therefore, as this is contained within the figure of the Cross, it also represents unity. By the study of these theories of the Cross, the most dignified of all, we are thereby induced to utilise this progression, viz. one -- ten -- one hundred, and this is the decadal proportion of the Cross as it appears to us.

THEOREM XVII

After a due study of the sixth theorem it is logical to proceed to a consideration of the four right angles in our Cross, to each one of which, as we have shown in the preceding theorem, we attribute the significance of the quinary according to the first position in which they are placed, and in transposing them to a new position, the same theorem shows that they become hieroglyphic signs of the number fifty. It is quite evident that the Cross is vulgarly used to indicate the number ten, and further, it is the twenty-first letter, following the order of the Latin alphabet, and it is for this reason that the sages amongst the Mecubales designated the number twenty-one by this same letter. In fact, we can give a very simple consideration to this sign to find out what other qualitative and quantitative virtues it possesses. From all these facts we see that we may safely conclude, by the best kabbalistic computation, that our Cross, by a marvellous metamorphosis, may signify for the Initiates two hundred and fifty-two. Thus: four times five, four times fifty, ten, twenty-one and one, which added together make two hundred and fifty-two. We can extract this number by two other methods as we have already shown: we recommend to the Kabbalists who have not yet made experiments to produce it, not only to study it in its conciseness, but also to form a judgment worthy of philosophers in regard to the various permutations and ingenious productions which arise from the magistry of this number. And I will not hide from you a further memorable mystagogy: consider that our Cross, containing so many ideas, conceals two further letters if we examine carefully their numerical virtues after a certain manner, so that, by a parallel method following their verbal force with this same Cross, we recognise with supreme admiration that it is from here that LIGHT is derived (LUX), the final word of the magistry, by the union and conjunction of the Ternary within the unity of the Word.

THEOREM XVIII

From our Theorems XII and XIII it may be inferred that celestial astronomy is the source and guide of the inferior astronomy. Before we raise our eyes to heaven, kabbalistically illuminated by the contemplation of these mysteries, we should perceive very exactly the construction of our Monad as it is shown to us not only in the LIGHT but also in life and nature, for it discloses explicitly, by its inner movement, the most secret mysteries of this physical analysis. We have contemplated the heavenly and divine functions of this celestial Messenger, and we now apply this co-ordination to the figure of the egg. It is well known that all astrologers teach that the form of the orbit traversed by a planet is circular, and because the wise should understand by a hint, it is thus that we interpret it in the hieroglyph shown, which conforms in every detail with all that has gone before.

Here you will note that the miserable alchemists must learn to recognise their numerous errors and to understand what is the water of the white of egg, what is the oil of the yoke of egg, and what we mean by calcined egg-shells. These inexpert impostors must learn in their despair to understand what are meant by these and many other similar expressions. Here we have shown almost all the proportions which correspond to Nature herself. This is the same Eagle's Egg which the scarab formerly broke because of the injury which the cruelty and violence of this bird caused to timid and primitive man, for this bird pursued some of them who were running to the cavern where the scarab dwelt, to implore his aid. The scarab wondered in what manner he alone could revenge such insolence, and, being of an ardent character, prepared to accomplish his purpose by constancy and determination, for he was short of neither power nor intelligence. The scarab pursued the eagle resolutely and made use of this very subtle trick: he let fall his ordure in the bosom of Jupiter where the egg was deposited, with the result that the God in getting rid of it threw the egg to the ground, where it was broken. The scarab by this method would have completely exterminated the whole family of eagles from the Earth had not Jupiter, in order to avoid such a calamity, resolved that, during that part of the year when the eagles watch over their eggs, no scarab should come flying near them. Therefore, I counsel those who are ill-treated by the cruelty of this bird, that they learn the very useful art from these solar insects (Heliocantharis) who live concealed and hidden for very long periods of time. By these indications and signs, for which they should be very thankful, they themselves will be able to take vengeance on their enemy. And I affirm (O King!) that it is not Aesop but Oedipus who prompts me, for he presented these things to worthy souls, and ventured for the first time to speak of these supreme mysteries of Nature. I know perfectly well that there have been certain men who, by the art of the scarab, have dissolved the eagle's egg and its shell with pure albumen and have formed thereby a mixture of all; afterwards they have reduced this mixture to a yellow liquid, by a notable process, viz. by a ceaseless circulation just as the scarabs roll their balls of earth.

By this means the great metamorphosis of the egg was accomplished; the albumen was absorbed during a great many revolutions round the heliocentric orbits, and was enveloped in this same yellow liquid. The hieroglyphic figure shown here, of this art, will not displease those who are familiar with Nature.

We read that during the early centuries, this art was much celebrated amongst the most serious and ancient Philosophers, as being certain and useful. Anaxagoras performed the magistry and extracted therefrom an excellent medicine, as you may read in his book.

He who devotes himself sincerely to these mysteries will see clearly that nothing is able to exist without the virtue of our hieroglyphic Monad.

THEOREM XIX

The Sun and the Moon shed their corporeal forces upon the bodies of the inferior Elements, much more so than all the other planets. It is this fact which shows, in effect, that in the pyrognomic analysis all metals lose the aqueous humour of the Moon as well as the igneous liquor of the Sun, by which all corporeal, terrestrial, and mortal things are sustained.

THEOREM XX

We have shown sufficiently that for very good reasons the Elements are represented in our Hieroglyph by the straight lines, therefore we give a very exact speculation concerning the point which we place in the centre of our Cross. This point cannot by any means be abstracted from our Ternary. Should anyone who is ignorant of this divine learning, say that in this position of our Binary the point can be absent, we reply, he may suppose it to be absent, but that which remains without it will certainly not be our Binary; for the Quaternary is immediately manifested, because by removing the point we discontinue the unity of the lines. Now, our adversary may suppose that by this argument we have reconstructed our Binary; that in fact our Binary and our Quaternary are one and the same thing, according to this consideration, which is manifestly impossible. The point must of necessity be present, because with the Binary it constitutes our Ternary, and there is nothing that can be substituted in its place. Meanwhile he cannot divide the hypostatic property of our Binary without nullifying an integral part of it. Thus it is demonstrated that it must not be divided. All the parts of a line are lines. This is a point, and this confirms our hypothesis. Therefore, the point does not form part of our Binary and yet it forms part of the integral form of the Binary. It follows that we must take notice of all that is hidden within this hypostatic form and understand that there is nothing superfluous in the linear dimension of our Binary. But because we see that these dimensions are common to both lines, they are considered to receive a certain secret image from this Binary. By this we demonstrate here that the Quaternary is concealed within the Ternary. O God! pardon me if I have sinned against Thy Majesty in revealing such a great mystery in my writings which all may read, but I believe that only those who are truly worthy will understand.

We therefore continue to expound the Quaternary of our Cross as we have indicated. Seek diligently to discover whether the point may be removed from the position in which we first find it. The mathematicians teach that it may be displaced quite simply. At the moment when it is separated the Quaternary remains, and it becomes much more clear and distinct to the eyes of all.

This is not a part of its substantial proportions, but only the confused and superfluous point which is rejected and removed.

O Omnipotent Divine Majesty, how we Mortals are constrained to confess what great Wisdom and what ineffable mysteries reside in the Law which Thou hast made! Through all these points and these letters the most sublime secrets, and terrestrial arcane mysteries, as well as the multiple revelations of this unique point, now placed in the Light and examined by me, can be faithfully demonstrated and explained. This point is not superfluous within the Divine Trinity, yet when considered, on the other hand, within the Kingdom of the four Elements it is black, therefore corruptible and watery. O thrice and four times happy, the man who attains this (almost copulative) point in the Ternary, and rejects and removes that sombre and superfluous part of the Quaternary, the source of vague shadows. Thus after some effort we obtain the white vestments brilliant as the snow.

Oh, Maximilian! May God, through this mystagogy, make you or some other scion of the House of Austria the most powerful of all when the time comes for me to remain tranquil in Christ, in order that the honour of His redoubtable name may be restored within the abominable and intolerable shadows hovering above the Earth. And now for fear that I myself should say too much I shall immediately return to the burden of my task, and because I have already terminated my discourse for those whose gaze is centred within the heart, it is now necessary to translate my words for those whose heart is centred within their eyes. Here, therefore, we can represent in some measure in the figure of the Cross that which we have already said. Two equal lines are equally and inequally crossed through the point of necessity which you see in A.

The four straight lines, as in B, produce a sort of vacuum where they are withdrawn from the central point, which was their common condition, in which state they were not prejudicial, the one to the other. This is the path by which our Monad, progressing through the Binary and the Ternary into the purified Quaternary, is reconstituted within itself, united in equal proportions, and which now shows that the whole is equal to its combined parts, for during the time that this takes place our Monad will not admit of other units or numbers, because it is self-sufficient, and exactly so, within itself; absolute in all numbers in the amplitude of which it is diffused, not only magically but also by a somewhat vulgar process employed by the artist, which produces great results in dignity and power within this selfsame Monad, which is resolved into its own first matter; whilst that which is foreign to its nature and to its natural hereditary proportions is segregated with the greatest care and diligence and rejected for ever amongst the imputities.

THEOREM XXI

If that which is hidden within the profundities of our Monad be brought to light, or, on the contrary, if those primary parts which are exterior in our Monad are enclosed in the centre, you will see the extent to which the philosophical transformation can be produced. We will now expound to you another local commutation of our mystical Monad, using those parts from the hieroglyphic characters of the superior planets which are immediately offered to us. Each one of the other planets for this purpose is in turn elevated to a position which was frequently assigned to them by Plato, therefore, if they are conveniently taken in this position and at this point in Aries, Saturn and Jupiter are in conjunction. By descending, the Cross represents Venus and Mercury, followed by the Sun himself with the Moon at the bottom. This will be refuted in other circles; meantime, as we have no wish to hide the philosophical treasure of our Monad, we have taken a resolution to give a reason by which the position of the Monad is by this manner displaced. Yet see! listen to these other great secrets which I know and will disclose to assist you as touching this position, which I can explain in few words. We distribute our Monad, now looked at from a different aspect, and analysed in a different manner, as is seen at B, D, C. In this new Ternary the figures C and D are known to all men, but the figure designated B is not easy of comprehension.

It is necessary to give careful consideration to the known forms D and C, which show that the essences are separated and distinct from the figure B: also we see that the Horns of the figure C are turned downwards towards the Earth. That part of D which illumines C is also towards the Earth, that is to say, downwards, in the centre of which the solitary visible point alone is truly the Earth: finally these two figures D and C turned towards the lower end give a hieroglyphic indication of the Earth. Therefore, the Earth is made to represent, hieroglyphically, stability and fixation. I leave you to judge from this what is meant by C and D: from which you may take notice of a great secret. All the qualities which we have in the first place ascribed to the Sun and the Moon can here be given a perfect and very necessary interpretation, these two stars up to now having been placed in the superior position with the horns of the Moon raised on high; but we have already spoken of this.

We will now examine, according to the fundamentals of our hieroglyphic Art, the nature of this third figure B. First, we carry to the Crown the double crescent of the Moon which is our Aries, turned round in a mystical manner. Then follows the hieroglyphic sign of the Elements, which is attached to it. As to why we use the double Moon, it may be explained that it is according to the matter, which requires a double quantity of the Moon. We speak of those grades of which in their experiments the Philosophers could find no more than four, amongst all created substances, that is to say, to be, to live, to feel and to comprehend (esse, vivere, sentire et intelligere). In saying that the first two of these Elements are found here, we say that they are called argent vive (luna existens, viva), all life being subject to movement, there being six principles of movement. The Cross which is attached implies that in this artifice the Elements are requisite. We have told you many times that in our theory the hieroglyph of the Moon is like a semicircle, and on the contrary the complete circle signifies the Sun, whereas here we have two semicircles separated, but touching at a common point; if these are combined, as they can be by a certain art, the product can represent the circular plenitude of the Sun. From all those things which we have considered, the result is that we can summarise, and in hieroglyphic form, offer the following:

Argent vive, which must be developed by the magistrery of the Elements, possesses the power of the solar force through the unification of its two semicircles combined by a secret art.

The circle, of which we have spoken and which we designate in the figure by the letter E, is thus accomplished and formed. You will recollect, we have said that the solar degree is not delivered to us ready to our hand by Nature, but that it is artificial and not produced by Nature, it being available to us in its first aspect in accordance with its proper nature (as in B) in two parts separated and dissolved, and not solidly united in the solar body. In fact, the semi-diameter of these half-circles is not equal to the semi-diameter of D and C, but much smaller. Everyone can see this from the manner in which we have drawn them in the diagram, from which it is clear that this same B has not as great an amplitude as D and C. The proportions in the figure confirm this, being by this means transformed into a circle from B into E. Therefore, there appears before our eyes the sign of Venus alone. We have already demonstrated by these hieroglyphical syllogisms that from B we cannot obtain the true D, and that the true C is not and cannot be completely within the nature of B; therefore, this of itself is not able to become the true "Argent Vive." You may already doubt the subject of this life and of this movement, whether it is possible, in fact, to possess it naturally or not. However, as we have already explained to the wise, all those things which are said about B, in a similar manner will be at least analogical, and all that which we have briefly taught concerning C and D can be very well applied, by analogy, to this same B accompanied by its Elements. Indeed, that which we have attached to the nature of Aries, should exactly fit the case, because it carries this figure B, although reversed, at its summit, and that which is attached to the figure B, is the mystical figure of the Elements. Therefore, we see by this anatomy that from the body of our Monad alone, separated in this manner by our Art, this new Ternary is formed.

This we cannot doubt, for the reason that the members which composed it reassemble and form amongst themselves of their own free will a monadic union and sympathy which is absolute. By this means we discover amongst these members a force which is both magnetic and active.

Finally I think it well to note here, by way of recreation, that this same B shows very clearly the same proportions in the malformed and rustic letter in that it carries visible points towards the top and at the front and that these letters are three in number, otherwise they number six, summarising three times three: they are crude and malformed, unstable and inconstant, made in such a manner as to appear formed of a series of half-circles.

But the method of making these letters more stable and firm is in the hands of the literary experts. I have here placed before your eyes an infinitude of mysteries: I introduce a game but to interrupt a theory. Meanwhile I do not understand the efforts of certain people who rise up against me. Our Monad being reconstituted in its first mystical position and each one of its parts being ordered by Art, I advise and exhort them to search with zeal for that fire of Aries in the first triplicity, which is our equinoctial fire and which is the cause whereby our Sun may be elevated above his vulgar quality. Many other excellent things should also be studied in happy and wise meditations.

We now pass on to another subject; we wish to point the way, not only in a friendly but also in a faithful manner, to those other secrets upon which we must insist, before we lapse into silence and which, as we have said, comprise a most remarkable infinitude of other mysteries.

THEOREM XXII

It will be readily understood that the mysteries of our Monad cannot be extracted unless one is drawn towards the pharmacy of this same Monad, and that these mysteries must not be revealed to any but the Initiates. I offer here for the contemplation of your Serene Highness, the vessels of the Sacred Art which are truly and completely kabbalistic. All those lines which unite the diverse parts of our Monad are most wisely separated; we give to each one of them a special letter, in order to distinguish them one from another as you will see in the diagram.

We inform you that in "oc" [the mark in the upper right hand corner resembling the symbol for Taurus lying on it's side] is found a certain artificial vessel, formed of A and B with the line M. The exterior diameter is common to both A and B, and this is not different, as we see, from this the first letter of the Greek alphabet, except by a single transposition of the parts.

We teach the true mystical sympathy first by the line, the circle, and the semicircle, and, as we have formerly said, this symmetry can only be formed of the circle and the semicircle, which are always joined for the same mystical purpose.

It follows that λ and δ are in themselves the shapes of other vessels. That is to say, λ is made of glass and δ of earth (earthenware or clay). In the second place, λ and δ may remind us of the Pestle and Mortar, which must be made of suitable substance, in which artificial unperforated pearls, lamels of crystal and beryl, chrysolite, precious rubies, carbuncles and other rare artificial stones may be ground to powder.

Lastly, that which is indicated by the letter ω is a small vessel containing the mysteries, which is never far from this last letter of the Greek alphabet now restored to its primitive mystagogy, and which is made by a single transposition of its component parts, consisting of two half-circles of equal size. Concerning the vulgar objects and necessities which are required in addition to the vessels, and the materials out of which they should be fashioned, it would be useless that we should treat of it here. Meanwhile α must be considered as if searching for the occasion to perform its function by a very secret and rapid spiral circulation and an incorruptible salt by which the first principle of all things is preserved, or better, that the substance which floats within the vitriol after its dissolution, shows the apprentice a primordial but very transitory specimen of our work, and if he is attentive, a very subtle and most effective way to prepare the work will be revealed to him.

Within λ , the glass vessel, during the exercise of its particular function, all air must be excluded or it will be extremely prejudicial. The corollary of ω is the agreeable man, ready, active, and well disposed at all times.

Corollary.

Who, then, is not now able to procure the sweet and salutary fruits of this Science, which, I say, spring from the mystery of these two letters?

Some of those who would draw us away from our Garden of the Hesperides, and would make us view this a little closer as in a mirror, say that it is established that it is not formed from anything but our Monad.

But the straight line which appears in Alpha is homologous with that which, in the separation of the final analysis of our Cross, is already designated by the letter M. One may discover by these means from where the others are produced. See the scheme outlined in the table:

	Existens ante Elementa.	Adam Mortalis Masculina & Femina.	Mortifi- cans	Adumbra- tur.	Natus in Scabulo.
	Elementaris oeconomia.	Elementalis Genealogiæ Confirmatio.	Cruz.	Cruz.	Holocau- stum in Cruce
	Existens post Elementa.	ADAM IMMOR- TALIS.	Vivificans.	Manifestifi- cans.	Rex Regum Ubique.
Conceptus Singulatio- nis.	Potentie Semina.	Creatio Hylea.	Matrimo- nium Ter- restre.	Principium.
Pallus & Se- pultus.	 Virtus Denaria.	Depuratio Elementalis.	Crucis Martyrii.	Medium.
Resurgens, propria vir- tute.	Glorie Triumphus.	Transfor- matio.	Matrimo- nium Divinum.	Finis.

In these few words, I know that I give not only the principles but the demonstration to those who can see in them how to fortify the igneous vigour and the celestial origin, so that they may lend a willing ear to the great Democritus, certain that it is not mythical dogma but mystic and secret, according to which it is the medicine of the soul, the liberator from all suffering, and is prepared for those who wish for it and as he has taught; it is to be sought for in the Voice of the Creator of the Universe, so that men, inspired by God, and engendered anew, learn through the perfect disquisition of the mystical languages.

THEOREM XXIII

We now present in diagrammatic form the proportions already observed by us in the hieroglyphic construction of our Monad, which must be observed by those who wish to engrave them upon their seals or their rings, or to utilise them in some other manner. In the name of Jesus Christ crucified upon the Cross, I say the Spirit writes these things rapidly through me; I hope, and I believe, I am merely the quill which traces these characters. The Spirit draws us now towards our Cross of the Elements, with all the following measures which are also to be obtained by a reasoning process according to the subject-matter which it is proposed to discuss. Everything which exists under the heaven of the Moon contains the principle of its own generation within itself and is formed from the coagulation of the four Elements, unless it be the primary substance itself, and this in several ways not known to the vulgar, there being nothing in the created world in which the Elements are in equal proportion or in equal force. But by means of our Art, they can be restored to equality in certain respects, as the wise well know; therefore, in our Cross, we make the parts equal and unequal.

Another reason is that we can proclaim either similitude, or diversity, or unity, or plurality in affirming the secret properties of the equilateral Cross, as we have said before.

If we were to expound all the reasons which we know, for the proportions established in this way, or if we were to demonstrate the causes by another method which we have not done, although we have done so sufficiently for the Sages, we should transcend the limits of obscurity which we have prescribed, not without reason, for our discourse.

Take any point, as A for example, draw a straight line through it in both directions, as CAK. Divide the line CK at A by a line at right angles, which we will call DAE. Now select a point anywhere on the line AK, let it be B, and one obtains the primary measurement of AB, which will be the common measure of our work. Take three times the length of AB and mark off the central line from A to C, which will be AC. Now take twice the distance between AB and mark it off on the line DAE at E and again at D, in such a way that the distance between D and E is four times the distance between A and B. Thus is formed our Cross of four Elements, that is to say, the Quaternary formed by the lines AB, AC, AD, AE. Now on the line BK take a distance equal to AD up the central line to I. With this point I as a centre, and IB as the radius, describe a circle which cuts the line AK at R: from the point R towards K mark a distance equal to AB, let it be RK. From the point K draw a line at right angles to the central line on both sides, forming an angle on either side of AK, which will be PFK. From the point K measure in the direction of F a distance equal to AD, which will be KF: now with K as centre and KF as radius describe a half-circle FLP, so that FKP is the diameter. Finally, at point C draw a line at right angles to AC sufficiently long in both directions to form OCQ. Now on the line CO we measure from C a distance equal to AB, which is CM, and with M as a centre and MC as a radius we describe a semicircle CHO. And in the same manner on CQ, from the point C we measure a distance equal to AB which is CN, and from the centre N, with CN as radius, we trace a semicircle CGQ, of which CNQ is the diameter. We now affirm, from this, that all the requisite measurements are found explained and described in our Monad.

It would be well to notice, you who know the distances of our mechanism, that the whole of the line CK is composed of nine parts, of which one is our fundamental, and which in another fashion is able to contribute towards the perfection of our work: then, again, all the diameters and semi-diameters must be designated here by suppositional lines hidden or obscured, as the geometricians say. It is not necessary to leave any centre visible, the exception being the solar centre, which is here marked by the letter I, to which it is unnecessary to add any letter. Meanwhile those who are adept at our mechanism can add something to the solar periphery, by way of ornament and not by virtue of any mystical necessity: for this reason it has not been formerly considered by us. This something is a boundary ring, necessarily a line parallel to the original periphery. The distance between these parallels may be fixed at a quarter or a fifth part of the distance AB. One may also give to the crescent of the Moon a form which this planet frequently assumes in the sky, after her conjunction with the Sun -- that is to say, in the form of the Horns, which you will obtain if from the point K in the direction of R you measure the distance just mentioned, i.e. the fourth or fifth part of the line AB, and if from the point thereby obtained, as a centre, you trace with the original lunar radius the second part of the lunar crescent, which joins the extremities at both ends of the first semicircle. You may perform a similar operation in respect of the positions M and N when erecting the perpendicular at each one of these centre points; we can use the sixth part of AB or a little less, from which point, as the centre, we describe two other semicircles, using the radius of the two first, MC and NC.

Lastly, the parallels may be traced at each side of the two lines of our Cross, each side at a distance from the centre line of one-eighth to one-tenth part of the distance AB, in such a way that our Cross be in this manner formed into four superficial lines where the width is the fourth or the fifth part of this same line AB.

I have wished in some way to sketch these ornaments in the figure which each one may reproduce according to his own fancy. It is a condition, however, that you do not commit any fault, however small, against the mystical symmetry for fear of introducing by your negligence a new discipline into these hieroglyphic measurements; for it is very necessary that during the succeeding progression in time they must be neither disturbed nor destroyed. This is much more profound than we are able to indicate, even if we wished to do so, in this small book, for we teach Truth, the daughter of Time, God willing.

We will now expound methodically certain things which you may find on your way by practising the proportions of our Monad. Then we will show by many examples the existence of four lines corresponding to the four lines of our Cross, and which in this consideration we are not able simply to announce, because of the proportions and the particular and mystical results which are produced in another fashion, from the Quaternary of these same lines. And thirdly, we will show that there exist within Nature certain useful functions determined by God by means of numbers, which we have happily obtained and which are explained either in this theorem, or in others, contained in this little book.

Finally, we will insert other things in an opportune place which, if they are conveniently understood, will produce fruits most abundantly.

We now abruptly conclude.

24 possible permutations.

Of the Pythagorean quaternary

The Pythagorean sum is 10.

A complete addition of the parts yields 30.

Take the same proportion which is shown in numbers when written in the natural order, after the first Monad, then from the first to the last make a continuous multiplication -- that is to say, the first by the second, the product of these two by the third, and this product by the fourth, and so on until the last; the final product determines all the Metatheses possible, in respect of the proportion in space, and for the same reason in proportion to diverse objects as you wish.

I tell thee, O King, this operation will be useful unto thee in many circumstances, whether in the study of Nature or in the affairs of the government of men; for it is that which I am accustomed to use with the greatest of pleasure in the Tziruph or Themura of the Hebrews.

Of the artificial quaternary

- a continuous multiplication yields 12.
- a simple addition yields 8. (1, 7; 4, 3)
- the sum of a complete addition of the parts is -- 24, a number which is the same in any possible transposition of the quaternary, and which designates the physical purity and highest quality of gold, (namely that) of 24 carat when one has it, by itself, above ground.

I know that many other powerful numbers may be produced out of our Quaternary, by virtue of arithmetic and the power of numbers. Yet he who does not understand that a very great obscurity has by this method been illuminated by those numbers which I have drawn out which have nature and distinction amongst such a multitude, will not be able to estimate their meaning, which is obscure and not to the point. How many will find in our numbers the authority which we have promised for the weight of the Elements; for the statements regarding measurements of time; and for the certainty of proportions which may be assigned to the powers and forces of things? All this you should study in the two preceding diagrams.

Many things may be deduced from the diagrams which, it is preferable, should be studied silently rather than divulged openly in words. Meantime, let us inform you of one thing, amongst many others, disclosed now for the first time by us, in respect of this new Art; to wit, we have here established a rational cause by virtue of which the Quaternary with the Decad, in a certain manner, terminate the numerical series. We affirm that this cause is not exactly that which was described by the Masters who have preceded us, but just as we have stated it here. This Monad has been integrally and physically restored to itself -- that is to say, it is truly the Monad Unitissima, the proved unity of the images; and it is not within the power of Nature, neither can we by any art promote in it any movement or any progression whatsoever, unless it be by four super-celestial cycles or revolutions, and from this Monad is engendered that which we wish to note as the manner and course of its eminence; and for this reason, that there is not in the elemental world, nor in the celestial or super-celestial worlds, any created power or influence which cannot be absolutely favoured and enriched by it.

It was because of the true effect of this that four illustrious men, friends of Philosophy, were upon an occasion together in the great work. One day they were astonished by a great miracle in this thing, and forthwith dedicated themselves from that day forward to sing praises to God and to preach the thrice Mighty because He had given them so much wisdom and power and so great an Empire over all other creatures.

THEOREM XXIV

Just as we commenced the first theorem of this little book with the point, the straight line, and the circle, and have extended it from the Monadic point to the extreme linear efflux of the Elements in a circle, almost analogous to the equinoctial which makes one revolution in 24 hours, so now at last we consummate and terminate the metamorphosis and the metathesis of all possible contents of the Quaternary defined by the number 24 by our present twenty-fourth theorem, to the honour and Glory of Him, as witnesseth John the Archpraesul of the Divine Mysteries, in the fourth and last part of the fourth chapter of the Apocalypse, who is seated on His Throne, around and in front of which the four animals, each with six wings, chant night and day without repose: "Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord God Omnipotent, who was, is and is to come," the same as the 24 ancient ones in the 24 seats placed in the circle, adore Him and prostrate themselves, having cast their Crowns of gold to earth, saying: "Worthy art Thou, O God, to receive Glory, Honour, and Virtue, because Thou hast created all things, and out of Thy Will they have been created."

Amen, says the fourth letter.

Compendium Heptarchiæ Mysticæ

of Dr. John Dee

This digital edition by Joseph H. Peterson, Copyright © 1999. All rights reserved.

Introduction

This book consists of detailed instructions for communicating with angels and employing their aid for practical purposes. Written in the form of a personal Grimoire, or handbook of magic, it consists of excerpts and elaborations from Dee's detailed records of his "mystical exercises" found in Mysteriorum Libri Quinque. For the most part it is a draft version of Dee's slightly better known work, De Heptarchia Mystica, and like it describes details of Dee's and Kelley's magical workings that occurred prior to the well known records published by Meric Casaubon (as A True and Faithful Relation of what passed for many yeers between Dr. John Dee ... and some spirits, 1659.) The latter, of course, was used and elaborated on by the founders of the Golden Dawn, and has come to be known as Enochian magic.

The present manuscript is in Dee's own handwriting, and is now preserved in the British Library under the catalog number Additional MS. 36674. The catalog entry reads as follows:

36674. COLLECTIONS relating to Magic and Witchcraft from the papers of various 16th and 17th century astrologers, finally put together probably in the library of John Somers, Lord Somers (v. catalogue in Harl. MS. 7191, f. 158 b). The table of contents on f. 3 is in the same hand as Somers' catalogue. Artt. 1-4 belonged early in the 17th cent. to Gabriel Harvey, the poet and friend of Spenser, who has annotated them throughout (compare the hand with Add. MS. 32494). Art. 10 and probably some other articles were collected by Elias Ashmole. Later owners are noticed below.

Contents:-

12. " Compendium heptarchiae mysticae," by John Dee. Holograph. Written not earlier than 1583, apparently a rough draft of the treatise contained in Sloane MSS. 3191 (f. 33, also holograph) and 2599 (Ashmole's copy). f. 167.

While very similar to De Heptarchia Mystica, to my knowledge this text has never been published or studied at length. The manuscript is the most difficult to read Dee manuscript I've examined; it contains some of Dee's worst handwriting, and is very faded and damaged in places. Nevertheless, I believe it has been worth the effort of editing, as it contains some valuable material not found elsewhere.

Of special interest are the details it fills in from the lost beginning of Quartus Liber Mysteriorum, which provide insight into the mysterious Covenant Table, the ornate chair, and the globe used thereafter. It also assigns planets to the Filij lucis ("sons of light") and the Filij filiorum ("sons of the sons"). There is also a table of letters with 24 columns and 13 rows, which I have not identified in any other source, and may be unique.

This text also allows us to fix its date, May 30, 1588. It was a time when few spiritual actions were recorded, while Dee was still on the Continent (he returned to England in 1589.) A few days earlier Dee recorded in his diary that Edward Kelley "did open the great secret to me, God be thanked!"

This manuscript also offers some insight into Dee's editorial process. I have consequently included all of Dee's editorial marks, crossed out text (here indicated in ~~strikeout font~~), and intralinear corrections (here indicated in ^{superscript font}).

My editorial notes, and damaged text filled in from Sl. 3188 and Sl. 3191 are indicated by {} since Dee uses [].

Δ - What is the use of the 7 Tables, (like armes) and from what grownd are they framed, or deriued?

Uriel - They are the ensignes of the Creation: wherewithall they were created by God: known onely by theyr acquayntance, and the manner of theyr doings.

Δ - haue I rightly applyed the dayes to the kings -- Uriel - The dayes are rightly applyed to the kings. &c.

Δ - The characters and words annexed to the Kings names in the utter Circumference of the great Circle or Globe: How are they to be used?

Uriel - They are to be paynted uppon swete wood, & so to be held in thy hand as thou shalt haue cause to use them.

Il, Aprilis 28, 1583.

Grace, mercy and peace be unto the liuely branches of his flourishing kingdome and strong art thou in thy glory, which dost unknytt the Secret parts of thy liuely workmanship: and that, before the weak understanding of man. Herein is thy powre & Magnificence opened unto man. And why? bycause thy Diuinitie and secret power, is here shut up in numero Ternario et Quaternario. A q^o principium, et fundamentum omne huius est tui sanctissimi maximi (?) operis. For yf thou (O God) be wunderfull & incomprehensible in thyne owne substance, it must nedes follow, that thy works, are likewise incomprehensible.

But Lo, they shall now beleue, bycause they see: which heretof{ore} could skarsly beleue. Strong is the Influence of thy Supercelestiall powre: and mighty is the force of that arme, which overcommeth all things. Let all powre (therfore) rest in thé. Amen.

Leave oute the Bees of the seven names of the 7 kings, and 7 Princis. and place them in a Table diuided by 12 and 7. the 7 spaces, being uppermost: and therein write in the upper lyne, the let{ters} of the king, with th with the letters of his prince following, next after his name: and so of the Six other, and theyr princis. And read them on the right hand, from the upper part to the lowest. and thou shalt finde, then, the Composition of this Table. Therin they are all comprehended, sauing certayn letters, which are not to be put-in here: By reason that the Kings, and Princis do spring from God: and not God from the Kings and Princis: Which

Excellency is comprehended and is also manifest, in that Third and fourth Number. {in marg: Number}

Rownd about the sides [of this square ^{Table}] is every letter of the 14 names, [170r] of the 7 kings and princis.

Hereafter shall you perceyue that the Glory of this Table {surmownteth} the Glory of the Sonne. All things els that appertayne unto it, {are} already prescribed by your former Instruction.

God is the beginning of all things, but not after one sort: Nor to every One alike. IL.
 But it is Three manner of works with his Name. Aprilis 29.

- The One in respect of Dignification 1
- The Second in respect of Conciliation
- The Third in respect of an ende and determined Operati{on.}

Now, (Syr,) to what ende wold you wear your Character? &c.

Δ At our first dealings to gither it was answered by a Spirituall Creature, (whome we toke to be Uriel,) Sigillum hoc in auro sculpendum, ad defensionem Corporis omni loco, tempore et occasione, et in pectus gestandum.

Il - But how do I teach? The Character is an Instrument appliable Onely to dignification. But there is no Dignification (Syr) but that which doth procede, and hath his perfect composition Centrally, in the Square number of 3 and 4. The Center wherof shall be equall to the greatest. Hereby you may gather, Not onely to what ende, the Blessed Character (wherewith thou shalt be dignified) is prepared: but also the Nature of all other Characters.

To the Second - Δ - Conciliation you meane.

Il - The Table is an Instrument of Conciliation. And so are the other 7 Characters, 2 which you call by the name of Tables: Squared out into the forme of Armes:
 which are proper to every King and Prince according to theyr order.

Now to the last - Δ - As concerning the ende and determined Operation

IL - It ~~consisteth~~ onely consisteth in the mercy of God, and the Characters of these 3 bokes. &c.

Set down the Kings and theyr Princis in a Table as thou knowest them: with theyr letters backward: excepting theyr Bees, frō the right hand to the left. Let Bobogel be first, and Bornogo is his prince. &c.

Michael - I will shew thé ?????, in the mighty hand and strength of God, what his Mysteries are: The true Circle of his æternitie: comprehending all vertue: The whole and Sacred Trinitie:

Michael, 1582, Martÿ 19.

Oh holy be he: Oh holy be he: Oh holy be he.

Uriel answered, Amen.

Mich - Now, what wilt thou? Δ - I wold full fayne procede according to the matter in hand.

Mich - Diuide this owtward Circle into 40 equall partes: whose greatest numbers are 4. See thou do it presently - Δ - I did so diuiding it first into 4, and then every of them, into 10.

[170v]

He called one by name Semiel.

One cam in and kneled down: and great fyre came out of his mowth.

Michael sayd: To him are the Mysteries of these Tables known.

Michael sayd, Semiel, (agayn) and by and by he^{Michael} sayd, O God thou hast sayd, and thou liuest for euer. &c. ~~Do not think here to speak to him.~~ Semiel stode up, and flaming fyre cam out of his mowth, and than he saide, as followeth.

Sem - Mighty lord, what woldst thou with the Tables?

Mich - It is the will of God Thow fatch them hither.

Sem - I am his Tables. Behold these are his tables: Lo where they are.

Δ - There cam-in 40 white Creatures, all in white silk long robes, and they like Children. And all they falling on theyr knees, sayd:

Thow onely art holy among the Highest, O God thy Name be blessed for euer.

Δ Michael stode up out of his Chayre, and by and by all his legs,semed to be like two great pillers of brass: and he as high as half way to heaven: And by & by his sworde was all on fyre: & he stroke or drew his sword over all these 40 ^{^theyr} heds. The erth quaked: And the 40 fell down. And Michael called Semiel with a Thundring voyce & sayd, Declare the Mysteries of the Liuing God, Our God, of One that Liueth for euer.

Sem - I am ready.

Δ - Michael stroke ouer them with his sword: and they all fell down (& Uriel ap allso) on his knees. And commonly at the striking with the sword, flaming fyre, (like lightening) did flash with all.

Michael - Note. here is a Myserie.

Δ - Then stept furth one of the 40 from the rest: & opened his breast, which was covered with sylk and there appeared a great all of gold.

Mich - Note the number. Δ over the T, stode the Number of 4, on this fashion

Δ - The 40, cryed all cryed: Yt liueth and Multipliyeth for euer: blessed be his name.

Δ - That creature did shut up his bosome, and vanished away like a fyre.

Michael - Place that in the first place. It is the Name of the Lord.

Δ - Then there semed a great clap of Thunder to be &c.

Δ - And so furth. the whole second boke is nothing els but the Myseries most Mervaylous of Sigillum Dei, otherwise called Sigillum Æmeth. wherof here I did here but leave some ???y {HM reads: admonishment}, &c.

Note allso, the Third boke was chiefly of the 7 ensignes of Creation. &c. mentioned in this Chapter of in the ^???? of orations (?).

Caput 4.

Some Notice of peculier formes, wherein the Kings, Princis, and Ministers Heptarchicall appeared.

King CARMARA

Appeared as a man, very well proportioned: in a long purple Robe, and with a Triple Crowne of Gold on his hed.

At his first comming in, he had 7 ^{like} men waighting on him: which afterwarde declared them selves to be 7 princis under the 7 Heptarchicall Kings.

Uriel deliuered to him, at his first appearing, (which he kept still in his hand) a rod, or straight little rownd staf of gold diuided into three distinctions: whereof two were dark, or blak, and the Third, bright red.

Note.

At the first, Uriel pluckt a thing from under the [^]Covenant Table: and it grew Rownd, Bigger & bigger, (of fyrie Cullour) bigger then all the world: and [^]he sayd to me ^Δ Vltima est hæc ætas vestra quæ tibi revelata erit. Then cam swarming into the stone, Thowsand yea Innumerable people, Uriel sayd, Est in mundo, et cum incipiet cum illo alter Mundus. and he bad, Note the forme of the thing seen. Note the cullour. The forme of the thing seen was a Globe Transparent fyre within which the people seemed to stand, Towers and Castells. &c. did appere therein, likewise. This Globe did king CARMARA seeme to go uppon, & to measure it: and there appeared a very riche chayre to be set: allmost at the top of the Convexitie of the sayd Globe. wherein he sat down. Uriel

Prince HAGONEL

Note. All the 7 Princis, seemed to [^]be men, and to haue red robes, but this Prince, his Robe, was shorter then the others. They had all Cerclets of  ^{above} on theyr heds, he had a rownd Ring with a prik in the myddle which he affirmed to be his seale. The name therof he sayde to be Barees, and that it is

De Heptarchia Mystica

of Dr. John Dee

This digital edition by Joseph H. Peterson, Copyright © 1997. All rights reserved.

Editor's Introduction

This book consists of detailed instructions for communicating with angels and employing their aid for practical purposes. It consists of excerpts, in Grimoire form, from Dr. Dee's detailed records of his "mystical exercises".

This is a transcription from the original in Dee's own handwriting, now found in the British Library under the catalog number Sloane 3191. There have been two other published editions of this text, one by Robert Turner, 1983 revised 1986, and another by Geoffrey James, 1984 and 1994. While I can recommend both of these editions, if one is able to find them, I believe the present edition reflects Dee's manuscript more accurately, as may be seen for example by comparing them with the photograph shown on pg. 28 of Turner's revised edition.

De HEPTARCHIA MYSTICA, (Diuinis, ipsius Creationis, stabilis legibus) Collectaneorum

Liber primus.

Cap. 1.

Of the Title, and generall Contents of this booke, some nedefull Testimonies

Beware of wavering: Blot owte suspition of us; for we are gods Creatures that haue Raigned, do Raigne, and shall Raigne for eu. All our Mysteries shalbe known unto you. &c

Behold, these things and theyre Mysteries, shalbe known unto you:

Reserving, the Secrets of him, that Raigneth for eu. [the voyce of a multitude, answered, singing] Whose Name, is great for eu.

Open your eyes, and you shall see from the highest to the lowest. The peace of God be uppon you.

Nota D: Lib. Creationis 1. Principes loquebantur magnalia Dei: et secundo, Reges maxime hoc faciunt.

Anno 1582. Nouemb. 16, Bralges, the last of 7 Princes concluding the First booke spoke hereof these words (Sl.3188, pp. 80)

K. Carmara, eodem tempore.

Carmara, Nouemb. 17 (Sl.3188, pp. 81)

Unus est Deus, et unum est opus nrm.

D: Note -- very many cam uppon the convex superficies of the Transparent globe, and sayd,

Prince Hagonel

Parati sumus seruire Deo nostro.

This work shall haue relation to tyme present, and present use. To mysteries far exceeding it: And finally to a purpose & Intent: whereby the Maiestie and Name of God, shall and may, and, of force, must appeare with the Apparition of his wunders, and mervayles yet unhard of. Dixi

K. Camara, Nouemb. 19, (Sl.3188, pp. 92)

D: Note, As Michael and Uriel, at the begynning of these revealed mysteries, were present, and gaue Authority to Carmara, to order the whole Heptarchicall Reuelation; so, at the Conclusion, they appeared agayn and Raphael with them; and Michael concluded the second boke (of this particular Reuelation Heptarchicall,) with these words following:

Mercifull is our God, and Glorious is his Name: which Chuseth his Creatures, according to his owne secret Iudgment: This Art is the first part of a Threefold Art, Joyning Man, (with the knowledg of 1. the world, 2. the Government of his Creatures, and 3. the Sight of his Maiestie) unto him (O I say unto him,) which is Strength, Medicine, and Mercy to those that feare him.

Michael, Nouemb. 19.

Amen.

Thow hast a work of three proportions in Esse: of Seuen in forme, which is (of it self) diuided by a Number Septenarie. Of the Course, estate, and detemination of things 1. Above, things 2. Next, and Things 3. Below. which of it self, is pure, perfect, and withoute blemish. &c.

Carmara, Nouemb. 21. in appendix of the second boke.

O God, how easy is this first understanding? Thow hast byn told perfectly, plainly, and absolutely, Not onely, the Condition, dignitie, and estate of All things that God hath framed: But also, withall, Thow wart deliuered, the most pfect forme & use of them. &c.

Carmara, Nouemb. 21.

Euen as God is iust; his Iudgments true; his Mercies unspeakable; So are we the True messangers of God: and our words are true in his Mercies for eu.

King Carmara, Nouemb. 17. (Sl.3188, pp. 85)

Glory, (Ô Glory) be to thee, O most high God.

Now you towche the world, and the doings uppon Earth. Now we shew unto you the lower world. The Governors that work and Rule under God. By whome you may haue powre, to work such things, as shalbe to Gods Glory, profyt of your Cuntry, and the knowledg of his Creatures &c. We procede to One God, one knowledg, One Operation. Venite filiae.

Behold these Tables. Herein lye theyr Names, that work under God uppon earth. Not of the wycked, but of the Angels of Light. The whole Government doth consist in the hands of 49(in God his powre, strength, Mercy, and Justice) whose Names are here evydent, excellent, and glorious. Mark these Tables: Mark them, Record them to yor Cumfort. This is the first knowledge. here shall you haue wisdom. Halleluyah. Mighty and Omnipotent art thou, Ô God, God, God, Amongst thy Creatures. Thow fillest all things, with thy excellent foresight. Thy Glory be amongst us, for euer. -D. Amen.

Michael, Aprilis 29, 1582. ".49." (Sl.3188, pp 55-56)

The fowntayne of wisdom is opened: Nature shalbe knowne. Erth with her Secrets disclosed. The Elements with their powres iudged &c.

Uriel [Apr 29]

Behold, I teache: There are 4, Angels glorious and excellent: appointed for the Government of all erthly Actions: which 4, do work and dispose the will of the Creator: Limited from the begynning, in strength powre and glory. These shalbe Subject unto you. In the Name and by Invocating uppon the Name of God: who doth lighten, dispose and cumfort you. &c.

Uriel, Aprilis 29, Anno 1582 (Sl.3188, pp 62)

What doth the heaven behold, or the Earth conteyne, that is not, or may be subdued, formed and made by these? What lerning grownded uppon wisdome, with the excellencies in Nature, can not they manifest?

One in heaven they know:
One, and all in Man they know:
One, and all in earth they know.

King Carmara, Novemb. 19, of King
Bobogel, his princis Ministers
(Sl.3188, pp 91-92)

Measure heaven by a part (my meaning is, by these few). Let God be glorified: his name praised, his CREATION well taken: and his Creatures well used.

He that standeth in the myddst of the Globe signifieth NATURE: whereuppon in the first point, is the use and practise of this work: That is to say, as concerning the first part, for it is sayde: The boke conteyneth Three kinds of knowledges.

- The knowledge of God truely
- The Number and doing of his Angells pfectly
- The begynning and ending of Nature Substantially.

Uriel, May 5, Anno 1583. (Sl. 3188, pp 180)

Cap. 2

Of John Dee, his principall, and in manner peculier Interest, to exercise the Doctrine Heptarchicall.

Ultima est haec aetas vram, quae tibi revelata erit.

Anno 1582 [Uri]el, Nouemb. [15.]

The Mysteries of God haue a tyme: And Behold, Thow art provyded for that tyme.

Michael

The Sonnes of light, and their Sonnes, are Subiect unto my commanndement: This is a Myserie: I haue spoken of it: Note it thorowghly: They are my Servants. By them, Thow shalt work Marvayles.

Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.

There are kings fals, and uniust, whose powre, as I haue subuerted and destroyed, So shallt Thow. D.

Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.

The second Assembly were the Governors of the earth whose Glory, (Yf they be good) the weapons we haue towght thee (D), will augment, And, Consequently, (yf they be euyll,) pervert.

..em, eodem, tempore.

I am BORNOGO. This is my Seale. This my true Character. What thow desyrest in me, shalbe fullfilled. Glory to God.

Prince Bornogo, Nouemb. 16.

Behold, Behold, lo Behold my mighty powre consisteth in this. Lerne wisdome by my words. This is wrowght for thy erudition what I entrust thee from God. Loke unto thy Chardg truely: Thow art yet dead. Thow shalt be revyved. But oh blesse God truely. The blessing, that God giueth me: I will bestow uppon thee, by omission. Ô how mighty is our God: which walked on the waters: which sealed me with his name: whose Glory is withoute ende. Thow hast written me, but yet dost not know me. Use me in the Name of God: I shall at the tyme appointed be ready. I will Manifest the works of the Seas: And the Miracles of the depe, shall be known.

Prince Befafes, ...die

Behold, thow desyrest, and art syck with desyre: I am the disposer though not the Composer of Gods medicines. Thow desyrest to be cumforted and strengthened in thy labors: I mynister unto thee the Strength of God. What I say is not of my self: Neither that which is sayde to me, is of them selves: but it is sayde of him wch liueth for euer. These Mysteries hath God lastly, and of his great Mercyes grannted unto thee. I haue answered thy dowting mynde. Thow shalt be glutted, yea filled: yea thow shalt swell and be puffed up with the perfect knowing of Gods mysteries in his Mercies.

Carmara, 17. Nouemb.

Abuse them not. Be faithfull: Use Mercy: God shall enriche the: Banish wrath: yt was the first* and greatest Commanndment. I Rayngne by him, and lyve by him, which rayneth and liueth for euer.

* Annael gaue me that commanndement Anno 1581: in the preface, as it were, of all those Actions.

I haue shewed thee perfectly: Behold I teach thee againe: O how mercifull is god, that revealeth so great Secrets to flesh and blud. Thow hast 42 letters. Thy Tables last, conteyne so many &c.

King Carmara. die 17 Nouemb.

Whan Thow wilt work for any thing apperteyning to the estate of a good King. Thow must first call upon him, which is theyr prince. Secondly the Ministers of his powre, are Six. &c.

King Carm. eodem temp.

In owtward sense, my words are true: I speak now of the use of one of the first, that I spake of, or Manifested yesterday. Sayd I not, And shewed I not, which had the government of princes for as it is a Mysterie to a farder matter, So is it a purpose to a present use. Yf it Rule worldly princis: how much more shall it work, with the princis of Creation? Thow desyrest use. I teach use. And yet the Art is to the farder understanding of all Sciences, that are past, present or yet to come. frute hath farder vertue, then onely in the eating: Gold his farder condition, property and quality, then in melting, or common use. Kings there are in Nature, with Nature, and above Nature. Thow art Dignified. &c.

King Carmara. eodem tempore.

Last of all thy Ryng, which was appointed thee with the Lamyne comprehending the forme of thy owne name: which is to be made in pfect gold: as is affore sayde.

The Ring.
King Carmara: eodem tempore.

Thow shalt be cumforted: But respect the world to come, whereunto thow art provyded: and for what ende: and that in what tyme. Serve God truely. Serve him justly. Great care is to be had with those that meddle with Princis affaires: Much more Consideration with whome, Thow shalt meddle, or use any Practise: But God hath shaddowed thee, from destruction, He preserveth his faithfull, and shaddoweth the Just, with a shield of honor. None shall enter into the knowledg of these Mysteries with thee, but this worker. Thy estate with the Prince, (now raigning) shall shortly be amended. Her favor encreased with the good wills of Diuerse, that are now deceyvers. Thy hand shall shortly be their help: and thow shalt do wunderfull and many benefits (to the Augmenting of Gods glory) for thy Cuntry. finally, God doth enriche thee with knowledg: & of thy self hath given the understanding of these worldly vanities. He is mercifull. And we, his good Creatures, neyther haue, do, nor will forget thee. God doth blesse you both: whose mercy, goodnes and grace, I pronownce and utter uppon you. I haue sayde.

King Carmara. eodem tempore.

Dee, Dee, Dee, At length, but not to late.

[D: Note. King Bobogel said this of my atteyning to such mysteries, as the mysteries under him made shew of.]

King Bobogel, Nouemb. 19.

Lo, thus thow seest the glory of gods Creatures: whome thow mayst use, with the consideration of the day, their king, their Prince, and his Character. The king & prince govern for the whole day: the rest according to the six partes of the day. Use them to the glory, prayse and honor of him, which Created them, to the lawde & prayse of his Maiestie.

Carmara, Nouemb. 20.

Write this reverently. Note it with Submission. What I speak, hath not byn revealed: no not in these last tymes of the second last world &c. Thow shalt work marvaylous marvaylously by my workmanship in the highest.

Bynepor, 20. Nouemb.

Some Remembrances of the furniture and Circumstances necessary in the Exercise Heptarchicall.

First cast thy eye unto the Generall Prince, Governor or Angell that is Principall in this world. Then place my name whome thou hast allready: Than the Name of him, that was shewed the yesterday [with the short coate.] Then his powre, with the rest of his six perfect Ministers. With these thou shalt work to a good ende. All the rest thou mayst use to Gods glory. for euery one of them, shall minister to thy Necessities.

King Carmara in the presence of Michael, Anno 1582, Nouemb.17.

Moreover whan thou workest, thy feete must be placed uppon these Tablets, which thou seest wrytten last, comprehending 42 letters and Names. But with this Consideration: that the first Character (which is the first of the 7, in thy former boke), be placed uppon the top of the Table; which thou wast, and art, and shalt be commannded to haue, and use. Prince Hagonel, Nouemb. 16.

In his Name, with my Name, by my Character, & the rest of my Ministers, are these things browght to passe. These that lye heare are witches, enchanter, deceyvers & blasphemers. And finally all they that use Nature with Abuse: and dishonor him which raigeth for euer.

P. Hagonel, eodem tempore

The Second Assembly, were the Governors of the earth whose Glory yf they be good, the weapons which we haue towght thee will augment: And Consequently, (yf they be evyll,) will pervert.

Note. Prince Butmono sayd this: but the office is under king Bnaspol, whose prince is Blisdon. The Mystery of this I know not yet: For Blisdon will be fownd to be the proper minister of king Bnaspol. Vide Anno 1583 May 5, of the Making of Mensa faeders, and my Golden Lamine.

The Third Assembly are those, which taste of Gods Mysteries, and drink of the Juyce of Nature: whose myndes are diuided: Some with eyes looking toward Heaven: The rest to the Center of the Erth. Vbi non Gloria, nec Bonitas, nec Bonum est. It is wrowght, (I say) it is wrowght (for thy understanding) by the Seven of the Seven, which were the Sonns of Sempiternitie. whose Names thou hast written, and Recorded to Gods glory.

Mark this: All Spirits enhabiting within the Erth: where their Habitation is of force, not of wyll: (Except the Myddst of my self, which I know not) are Subiect to the Powre herof [pointing to his seale] with this, you shall Govern: Wyth this you shall unlok: with this, (in his name who raigeth) you shall discover her entayles.

Carmara, Nouemb. 17.

Whan thou wilt work for any thing appertayning unto the estate of a good king. Thou must call uppon him, which is theyr Prince. Secondly the Ministers of his Powre are Six: whose Names conteyn 7 letters apece. As thy Tables do manifest. By whome in generalty, or by any one of them, in particularitie: Thou shalt work for any Intent or purpose. As concerning the letters, particularly, They do concerne, the Names of 42. which 42, in generally or One of them, do and can work, the destruction, hindrance or annoyance, of the estate, Condition, or degree (as well for body as government) of any wicked, or yll liuing Prince. &c.

King Carmara, die 17. Nouemb.

K. Car[mar also] Baligon. eodem tempore.

Behold, euery one of these Princis must haue his peculier Table.

K. Car. 2, Nouemb.

Thy Character must haue the names of the five Angels (written in the Myddst of Sigillum AEmeth) graven uppon the other side, in a circle. In the mydst wherof, must the Stone be; which was also browght. Wherein, thou shalt at all tymes, Behold, (privately to thy self) the state of gods People, throwgh the whole earthe.

Uriel, May 5, Anno 1583.

The 4 fete of the Table, must haue 4 hollow things, of Sweet wood: whereuppon they must stand. within the hollownes wherof, thy Seales may be kept unperished. One month is all for the use therof.

The sylk must be of diuerse Cullours: the most changeable that can be gotten. for who is hable to behold the glory of the seat of God.

Uriel, 1583, May 5.

The Character or Lamyne for me was noted (Anno 1582 Nouemb. 17) that it shold conteyne some token of my name: And now in this accountnted the True Character of Dignification, I perceyue no peculier Mark or letters of my Name.

eodem tempore quo supra.

Uriel - The forme, in euery corner, considereth thy Name - D - you meane, there, to be a certayne shaddow of Delta - Uriel - Well.

D - What is the use of the 7 Tables, (like Armes) and from what grownd are they framed, or deriued?

Uriel: Creationis insignia.

Uriel - They are the ensignes of the Creation: wherewithall they were Created by God: known onely by theyr acquayntance, & the manner of their doings.

D - haue I rightly applyed the dayes to the kings? - Uriel - The dayes are rightly applyed to the kings.

Ur. eodem tempore

D - The Characters, and words annexed to the kings names, in the utter Circumference of the great Circle or globe, how are they to be used?

Eodem temp.

Ur- They are to be paynted on swete wood: And so to be held in thy hand as thou shalt haue cause to use them.

Sigillum AEmeth, is to be set in the Middle of the Table.

Il, Aprilis 28, 1583.

Grace, mercy and peace be unto the liuely branches of his flourishing kingdome. And strong art thou in thy Glory, which dost unknyt the Secret partes of thy liuely workmanship: and that, before the weak understanding of man. Herein is thy powre and Magnificence Opened unto man. And why? bycause thy diuinitie and Secret powre, is here shut-up in numero Ternario, et Quaternario - Aquo Principium, et fundamentum omne huius est tui sanctissimi Operis

Il: the first of the 7 sonns of sonns of light. Aprilis 28, 1583.

For yf thou (O God) be wunderfull and incomprehensible in thyne owne Substance, yt must nede follow, that thy works, are likewise incomprehensible. But Lo, they shall now beleue, because they see: which heretofore, could skarsly beleue. Strong is the Influence of thy Supercestiall powre: And mighty is the force of that Arme, which overcommeth all things. Let all powre (therfore) rest in thee. Amen.

Leave oute the Bees of the 7 names of the 7 kings, and 7 Princis And place them in a Table diuided by 12 and 7, The 7 spaces being uppermost. And therin write in the upper lyne, the letters of the king, with the letters of his Prince following next after his name. And so of the Six other, and theyr Princis. And read them on the right hand, from the upper part to the lowest. And thou shalt fynde, then, the Composition of this Table.

the liuing and semp adherent Minister to K. Baligon: and his name is exprest in his Character, vide Novemb. 21. Anno 1582.

Therin, they are all comprehendedi saving certayne letters, :which are not to be put-in here: By reason that the Kings & Princis do spring from God: And Not God from the Kings and Princis. Which excellency is comprehended: and is allso manifest, in that Third and fowrth Number.

Rownd abowte the sides [of this square Table] is every letter of the 14 Names, of the 7 kings and princis.

Hereafter, Shall you perceiue, that the Glory of this Table surmownteth the Glory of the Sonne. All things els that appertayne unto it, are all ready prescribed by yor former Instruction.

God is the begynning of all things, but not after One soft: Nor to euery one alike. But it is Three manner of works with his Name.

- The one, in respect of Dignification
- The Second, in respect of Conciliation
- The Third, in respect of an ende, and determined Operation.

¶ or ¶ Aprilis 29. 1583:
dignification.

Now Sir, to what ende wold you weare yor Character? &c. But how do I teach? The Character is an Instrument appliable Onely to dignification. But there is no Dignification (Syr) but that which doth procede, and hath his perfect Composition Centrally, in the Square Number of 3 and 4. The Centre wherof shall be equall to the greatest. Hereby you may gather, Not onely to what ende, the Blessed Character (wherewith thou shalt be dignified) is Prepared: But also the Nature of all other Characters.

To the Second - D - Conciliation, you meane.

Il - The Table is an Instrument of Conciliation. And so are the other 7 Characters, which you call by the Name of Tables:

Conciliation

Squared out into the forme of Armes: which are propre to euery King and Prince, according to theyr order.

Now to the last - D - As concerning the ende & determyned Operation - Il - It onely consisteth in the Mercy of God, & the Characters of these* bokes. &c.

Set downe the Kings, and theyr Princis, in a Table, as thou Knowest them: with theyr letters backward (excepting theyr Bees) from the right hand to the left. Let Bobogel be the first, and Bornogo his Prince. &c.

D Note.

D - Note, here, it may appere that Butmono is Prince to Bynepor, and Blisdon prince to King Bnaspol.

D - So, on my Character or lamyne of dignificati on: are all the names of the 7 kings, and of the 7 Princis, perfectly: as in the great Table, (called often tymes Mensa Faederis) the Bees, onely, (being the first letter common to them all) kept bak, in memory.

De sigillo AEmeth; alr, vocato Sigillo Dei.

Michael - I will shew thee, in the mighty hand and strength of God, what his Mysteries are: The true Circle of his Æternitie: comprehending all Vertue: The whole and Sacred Trinitie: Oh holy be he: Oh Holy be he: Oh holy be he.

Michael, 1582, Marty 19.

D - Uriel answered, Amen.

Mich - Now, what wilt thou? - D - I wold full fayne procede according to the Matter in hand.

Mich - Diuide this owtward Circle into 40 equall partes: whose greatest numbers are 4. See thou do it presently - D: I did so. diuiding it first into 4; and then every of them, into 10.

D - he called one by name Semiel. One came in, and kneled down: and great fyre, came out of his mowth, Michael sayd, To him are the Mysteries of these Tables known. Michael sayd, Semiel, (again) and by & by he annexed, O God thou hast sayde, and thou liuest for euer. &c. Semiel stode up and flaming fyre cam out of his mowth, and than he saide, as followeth.

Semiel - Mighty Lord, what woldst thou with the Tables?

Michael - It is the will of God, thou fatch them hither.

Sem - I am his Tables. Behold, these are his Tables, Lo where they are.

There cam-in 40 white Creatures, all in white Silk long robes; And they like Children. And all they, falling on their knees, sayde:

Thou onely, art Holy among the Highest: O God, thy Name be blessed for euer.

D - Michael stode up out of his Chayre: and by & by, All his leggs to be like two great Pillers of Brasse: & he as high, as half way to heven. And by and by, his Sworde was all on fyre: And he stroke or drew his sword over all these 40 their heds. The Earth quaked. And the 40 fell downe. And Michael called Semiel with a Thundring voyce: and sayde, Declare the Mysteries of the liuing God: our God: of One that liueth for euer.

Michael, 1582, Marty 19.

Sem - I am ready.

D - Michael stroke ouer them with his sword: and they all fell downe (and Uriel allso) on his knees. And commonly at the striking with the sworde, flaming fyre, like lightening, did flash with all.

Michael - Note: Here is a Myserie.

D - Then stept furth, One of the 40, from the rest: & opened his breast, which was covered with Sylk, and there appeared a great  all of Gold.

Michael - Note the number - D - over the T, stode the Number of 4, on this fashion:

D - The 40, all, cryed: Yt liueth, and Multiplyeth for euer: Blessed be his Name.

D - That Creature did shut up his bosome, and vanished away like a fyre.

Michael - Place that, in the first place: It is the Name of God.

D - Then there seamed a great Clap of thunder to be.

And so furth: And note that the whole Second boke is Nothing els but the Mysteries most Mervaylous of Sigillum Dei: otherwise called Sigillum AEmeth. wherof here I did but leave a little admonishment. Note farder, Almost all the Third boke, was of the 7 Ensignes of Creation. wherof mention was here before made.

D - The Chayre was browght-in againe: and I axed what it ment?

Uriel - This is a Seal of perfection: from which, Things shalbe shewed unto thee, which thow hast long desyred.

D - Than was a square Table browght into the Stone. and I demanded, what that Table betokened.

Uriel - A Myserie not yet to be knowne. These two shall remayne in the stone, to the sight of all undefyled Creatures.

You must use a fowre-square Table; Two Cubits square. whereuppon must be set Sigillum Dei: &c. [alr Diuinitatis?]

This Seale must not be loked uppon, without great Reverence and devotion. This Seale is to be made of perfect wax.

This Seale must be , ynches square [D: or diameter.] The rowndness must be 27 ynches, and somewhat More. The thiknes of it must be, an ynch, and a half quarter. And a figure of a Crosse, must be on the backside of it, made thus:

The Table is to be made of swete wood: & of two Cubits high: with 4 fete with 4 of the former seales under the 4 feete. Under the Table did seame to be layde red sylk two yards square. And over the Seale, did seame likewise red Silk to lye fowr-square: broader then the Table, hanging down with 4 knopps or Tassels, at the 4 Corners therof.

Uppon this uppermost red Sylk, did seme the Stone with the frame, to be set: right over and uppon the Principall Seale: Saving that the red Sylk, was betwene the one, & the other.

D - There appeared the first Table covered, with a cloath of Sylk changeable cullour, Red & greene, with a white Cloth under it: all hanging very low.

Caput 4.

Some Notice of peculier formes, and attire, wherein, the Kings, Princis and Ministers Heptarchicall appeared, and of some their Actions, and gestures at their apperance. &c.

King CARMARA

This king, (being called first by Uriel,) appeared, as a Man, very well proportioned: clad in a long purple Robe: and with a Triple Crowne of Gold on his hed.

At his first coming he had 7 (like men) wayting on him: which afterwarde declared them selves to be the 7 Princis Heptarchicall. Uriel deliuered unto this king (at his first appearing) a rod or straight little rownd Staff of Gold: diuided into three equall distinctions, whereof, two were dark or blak: and the third bright red. This red he kept still in his hand.

This king onely, was the ordrer, or disposer, of all the doctrine, which I terme Heptarchicall. as first, by calling the 7 Princis and after that, the 7 kings: and by giving instructions for use and Practise of the whole doctrine Heptarchicall for the first purpose, and frute therof to be enjoyed by me: of the two other there was onely Mention made.

King CARMARA sayd, Ecce signum operis

King CARMARA

There appered these two letters, eversed and aversed on a white flag: and a woman standing by: whose armes did not appere. On the other side appered the armes of england. The flag old.

Prince HAGONEL

Note. All the Princis, seemed to be men, and to haue red Robes, but this Prince, his Robe was shorter then the others. All the Princis, had Cerclets, of Gold on theyr heds: not crowns nor Coronets. This Prince held in the palme of his right hand, as yf it had byn a rownd ring, with a prick in the mydst: hanging also over his myddle fingers. which he affirmed to be his seale: and sayd the name of it, to be Barees: and that it is .

All the Princis held up to gither, Heptagonon stellare, (as I terme it) and it seamed to be of Copper.

The Sonnes of light and theyr Sonnes are Subiect unto his commandment, and are his Servants.

The 7 Filij Lucis, appeared, like 7 yong men, all with bright countenances, white appared: with white silk on theyr heds, pendant behinde with a wreth down to the grownd. all apparayled of one sort. Euery one seamed to haue a metalline Ball in his hand: the first of Gold; the Second of Siluer; The 3 of Coper; The 4th of Tynne; The 5th of Iern; the 6th tossed betwene his two hands, a rownd thing of quick syluer; The last had a ball of lead. The first had on his brest a rownd Tablet of Gold: and on it written a great I. And the second on his golden Tablet had his name also written. And every one orderly comming furth, shewed theyr names uppon their golden Tablets: At theyr departing they made cursy & mownted up to heven ward:

Filij Filiorum - Appeared like 7 little Children, like boyes covered all with purple, with hanging sleues, like preists, or scholers gown sleues: theyr heds attyred all after the former manner with purple Sylk. They had three cornered Tablets on their brests: and the Tablets seemed to be very greene. and on them, the letters of their names written. The first had two letters, made in one thus, of E and L:

They made reverence to Michael (who had called both the first & these) and so mownted up to heven ward. At the Call of King Carmara; (in the Second handling of this Heptarchicall doctrine) whan he sayd, Venite, Repetamus Opera Dei, Appered Prince Hagonel: and after that, uppon the Globe his Convex Superficies, appeared 42: who sayd, Parati sumus servire Deo nro. Eche of these, had somewhat in theyr hands: and they stode in this order, and Hagonel seamed to embrace the Cumpany.

Six of these seamed more glorious then the rest: & theyr coates longer: and had Cerclets of Gold, abowt theyr heds: and held in theyr hands perfect Crownes of Gold. The Second Six had three quarters of Croens in theyr hands: The third six haue robes or clothes in theyr hands: All the rest seamed to haue balls of Gold: which they tosse from one to another. But at the Catching, they seame empty wynde Balls: for they gripe them cloasing theyr hands, as yf they were not solid, but empty like a blown bladder. The first six made cursy to Prince Hagonel. The second six made cursy to the first, & the Third to the Second: And they all, and Prince Hagonel made Cursy, to king CARMARA.

Eche of these uppon the place of theyr Standing, made a Table and every Table had but one letter. The first of the first Six did go away, and in his Table appered an O. & so of the rest: but note that the Third six cowered down, & was loath to shew their Tables: but at length did.

The Third row, went of lamenting: being comannded by the Prince, All parted, in fyre, falling into the Globe.

The fifth Row did Synk into the Globe, euery one in a sundry fyre by him self. The sixth fell with smoke, down into the Globe.

Seven of the Ministers are apparayled like Bobogel the king: sagely and gravely. All the rest are allmost ruffen or roysterlike. Som are like to be men and wemen. for in the forepart they seamed wemen, and in the bakpart men, by theyr apparayle: And they were the last 7. They danned, lept, & kissed. They cam afterward into a Circle: the Sage & the rest: But the Sage stand all together.

Cap. 5:

Oratio, ad Deum, singulis diebus, tribus vicibus, ter dicenda.

O Almighty, Eternall, the True and huing GOD: O King of Glory: O Lord of Hoasts: O thow, the Creator of Heaven, and Erth, and of all things visible and Invisible: Now, (euen now, at length,) Among other thy manifold mercies used, and to be used, toward me, thy simple servant John Dee, I most humbly besече thee, in this my present petition to haue mercy uppon me, to haue pitie uppon me, to haue Compassion uppon me: Who, faithfully and sincerely, of long time, haue sowght among men, in Earth: And allso by prayer, (full oft, and pitifully,) haue made sute unto thy Diuine Maiestie for the obteyning of some convenient portion of True Knowledg and understanding of thy lawes, and Ordonances, established in the Natures and propreties of thy Creatures: By which Knowledg, Thy Diuine Wisdome, Powre and Goodnes, (on thy Creatures bestowed, and to them imparted,) being to me made manifest, might abundantly instruct, furnish, and allure me, (for the same,) incessantly to pronownce thy praises, to render unto the, most harty thanks, to auance thy true honor, and to wyne unto thy Name, some of thy due Maiesticall Glorie, among all people, and foe euer. And, whereas, it hath pleased the, (O God,) of thy infinite Goodnes, by thy faithfull, and holy Spirituall Messagers, to deliuer unto me, long since, (through the eye, and eare of E.K.) An Orderlie forme, and manner of Exercise HEPTARCHICAL: How, (to thy Honor and Glory, and the Cumfort of my owne poore sowle, and of others thy faithfull servants,) I may, at all tymes, use very many of thy good Angels, theyr Cownsailles and helps; according to the propieties of such their Functions, and Offices, as to them, by thy Diuine Powre, wisdome and Goodnes, is assigned, and limited: (Which Orderly forme, and manner of Exercise, Untyll euen now, I never fownd so urgent Opportunitie, and extream Necessitie, to apply my self unto,) Therefore, I thy poore, and Simple Servant, do, most humbly, hartlye, and faithfully beseche thy Diuine Maistie, most lovingly and fatherly to favor: and by thy Diuine Beck to further this my present industrie and endeavour to Exercise my self, according to the foresaid Ordrely forme and manner:

And, Now, (At length, but not to late,) for thy dearly beloued Sonne IESVS CHRIST his sake, (O Heavenly Father,) to grannt allso unto me, this blessing, and portion of thy heavenly Graces: That thou wilt, furthwith, enable me, make me apt, and Acceptable, (in body sowle, and Spirit,) to enioye allwayes the Holy and frendly Conversation, with the Sensible, playne, full, and perfect Help, (in word, and dede,) of thy Mighty, wise, and Good Spirituall Messagers and Ministers Generally: And, Namely, of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael, and Blessed Uriel; And, Allso Especially, of all those, which do appertaine, unto the HEPTARCHICAL Myserie: Isagogically, (as yet,) and very breifly, unto me declared: under the Method of Seuen Mighty Kings, and their Seven faithfull and Princely Ministers, with their Subjects, and Servants, to them belonging. And in this thy great Mercie, and Grace, on me bestowed, and to me Confirmed, (O Almighty God,) thou shalt, (to the great cumfort of thy faithfull servants,) approve, to thy very enemies, and myne, the Truth and certaintie of thy manifold most mercifull promises, heretofore, made unto me: And that Thou, arte the True and Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, (uppon whome, I do Call: and in whome, I put all my trust,) And thy Ministers, to be the True, and faithfull Angels of light: which haue, hitherto, principally, and according to thy Diuine Providence, dealt with us: And, allso, I, thy poore, and simple Servant, shall, than, In, and By thee, be better hable to serve thee, according to thy well pleasing: to thy Honor and Glory: Yea, even in these most miserable, and lamentable Dayes. Graunt, Oh graunt, O our Heavenly father, graunt this, (I pray thee,) for thy onely begotten Sonne IESVS CHRIST, his sake: Amen, Amen, Amen.

THE CHALDAICK ORACLES OF ZOROASTER

and his Followers.

[Introduction]

The most considerable remains of the Chaldaick Philosophy are those Oracles which goe under the name of Zoroaster; Some indeed condemn them as supposititious, [\[a\]](#) forged by some Pseudo-Christian Greek; (perhaps the rather, because [\[b\]](#), The followers of Prodicus the Heretick, boasted that they had the secret Books of Zoroaster.) But this seems lesse probable, in regard they lye dispersed amongst several Authors; nor are they to be neglected, in that they have been held in great veneration by the Platonick Philosophers. Which sufficiently also argues that they are none of the Writings charged by [\[c\]](#) Porphyrius upon the Gnosticks, as forged by them under the name of Zoroaster, since those (as he acknowledgeth) were by the Platonick Philosophers, (of whom he instanceth Plotinus and Amelius) rejected and demonstrated to be spurious and suppositious.

Some argue that they are not Chaldaick, because many times accommodated to the Greek Style; But there are in them many so Harsh and Exotick Expressions, as discover them to be Originally forein; and where they agree in Terms with that which is proper to the Greek Philosophy, we may say of them as [\[d\]](#) Jamblichus upon another Occasion, (on the Writings that go under the Name of Hermes Trismegistus) as they are published under the Name of Zoroaster, so also they contain the Doctrine of Zoroaster, though they frequently speak in the style of the Greeks; for they were Translated out of Chaldee into Greek by persons skilfull in the Greek Philosophy.

To perswade us that they are genuine, and not of Greekish Invention, [\[p. 4\]](#) [\[e\]](#) Mirandula professeth to Ficinus, that he had the Chaldee Original in his possession, I was (saith he) forcibly taken off from other things, and instigated to the Arabick and Chaldaick Learning by certain Books in both those Languages, which came to my Hands, not accidentally, but doubtlesse by the Disposall of God in favour of my Studies. Hear the inscriptions, and you will believe it. The Chaldaick Books, (if they are Books and not rather Treasures) are, The Oracles of Aben Esra, Zoroaster and Melchior, Magi: in which those things which are faulty and defective in the Greek, are Read perfect and entire. There is also, (adds he) an Exposition by the Chaldæan Wise-men upon these Oracles, short and knotty [difficult], but full of Mysteries; There is also a Book of the Doctrines of the Chaldaick Theology, and upon it a Divine and copious Discourse of the Persians, Græcians, and Chaldæans; Thus Mirandula, after whose Death these Books were found by Ficinus, but so worn and illegible that nothing could be made out of them;

Further, To confirm that these Oracles were (as we said) Translated into Greek by persons skilfull in the Greek Philosophy, let us call to mind that Berosus [\[f\]](#) introduced the writings of the Chaldeans concerning Astronomy and Philosophy amongst the Græcians; and that Julian the Son, a Chaldean Philosopher, [\[g\]](#) Wrote Theurgick Oracles in Verse, and other secrets of that Science: and probably, if these were no part of that Chaldaick Learning which Berosus first render'd in Greek, they yet might be some of the Theurgick Oracles (for such the Title speaks them) of Julian; for some of them are cited by Proclus as such. From the accompt which Mirandula gives of those in his possession, to which were added a Comment, and a Discourse of the Doctrines of the Chaldaick Theology, it might be conjectur'd, that what is deliver'd to us by Pletho and Psellus, who besides the Oracles, give us a comment on them, together with a Chaldaick summary, was extracted out of that Author which Mirandula describes to have been of the same Kind and Method, but much more Perfect and Copious.

This Title of Oracles was perhaps not given to them only Metaphorically to express the Divine Excellence of their Doctrine, but as conceived indeed to have been deliver'd by the Oracle it self; for [\[h\]](#) Stephanus testifies that the Chaldæans had an Oracle which they held in no lesse Veneration than the Greeks did theirs at Delphi: This Opinion may be confirmed by the high Testimonies which the Platonick Philosophers give of them, calling them [\[i\]](#) the Assyrian Theology revealed by God, and the Theology deliver'd by God. And Proclus elsewhere having cited as from the Gods, one of these Oracles which speaks of the Ideas, (a Platonic Doctrine) adds, that hereby the Gods declared the subsistence of Ideas, and acquiesceth as satisfied in that the Gods themselves ratifie the contemplations of Plato.

Some of these Oracles which escaped the injuries of time, were first publish'd by Ludovicus Tiletanus, anno 1563. at Paris; together with the commentaries of Gemislus Pletho, under the Title of [\[p. 5\]](#) the Magical Oracles of the Magi descended from Zoroaster, the same were afterwards Translated and put forth by Jacobus Marthanus, and lastly together with the comment of Psellus also, by Johannes Opsopæus at Paris. 1607.

These by Franciscus Patricius were enlarged with a plentiful Addition out of Proclus, Hermias, Simplicius, Damascius, Synesius, Olympiodorus, Nicephorus, and Arnobius: encreasing them [\[k\]](#) by his own accompt, to 324. and reducing them for the better perspicuity to certain general Heads, put them forth and Translated them into Latine anno 1593.

They were afterwards put forth in Latin by [\[l\]](#) Ottho Heurnius, anno 1619. under the Title of The sincere Magical Oracles of Zoroaster King of Bactria, and Prince of the Magi; but Heurnius under the pretence of putting [\[m\]](#) them into good Latin, (as he calls it) and polishing them with a rougher File, hath patch'd up and corrupted what Patricius deliver'd faithfully and sincerely, endeavoring to put these Fragments into a Continued Discourse, which in themselves are nothing Coherent but Dispersed amongst several Authors.

Patricius indeed hath taken much Learned pains in the Collection of them; but with lesse Regard to their Measures and Numbers, and (as from thence may be shown) sometimes of the Words themselves: nor is there any certain means to redresse this Omission, by comparing them with the Authors out of which he took them, since few of those are extant, neither doth he (as he professeth to have done) affix the Names of the Authors to the several Fragments, except to some few at the beginning; However, we shall give them here according to his Edition, that being the most perfect; together with such Additions as we meet withall else where, and some Conjectures to supply the Defect we mention'd.

And whwhereas many of these Oracles are so Broken and Obscure, that they may at first sight seem rather Ridiculous than Weighty, yet he who shall consider, that as many of them as are explain'd by Pletho, Psellus, and others, would without those Explications seem no lesse absurd than the rest, but being explain'd disclose the Learning of the Chaldæans in a profound and extraordinary manner, will easily believe all the rest (even those which appear least intelligible) to be of the same kind, and consequently ought no more to have been omitted than any of the rest.

THE ORACLES OF ZOROASTER

Collected by Franciscus Patricius.

MONAD. DUAD. TRIAD.

Where the Paternal Monad is.

The Monad is enlarged, which generates two.

For the Duad sits by him, and glitters with Intellectual Sections.

And to govern all Things, and to Order every thing not Ordered,

For in the whole World shineth the Triad, over which the Monad Rules.

This Order is the beginning of all Section.

For the Mind of the Father said, that All things be cut into three,

Whose Will assented, and then All things were divided.

For the Mind of the Eternal Father said into three,

Governing all things by the Mind.

And there appeared in it [the Triad] Virtue and wisdom,

And Multiscient Verity.

This Way floweth the shape of the Triad, being præ-existent.

Not the first [Essence] but where they are measured.

For thou must conceive that all things serve these three Principles.

The first Course is sacred, but in the middle,

Another the third, ærial; which cherisheth the Earth in fire.

And fountain of fountains, and of all fountains.

The Matrix containing all things.

Thence abundantly springs forth the Generation of multivarious Matter.

Thence extracted a prester the flower of glowing fire,

Flashing into the Cavities of the Worlds: for all things from thence Begin to extend downwards their admirable Beams.

FATHER. MIND.

The Father hath snatched away himself: neither

Hath he shut up his own fire in his Intellectual Power.

For the Father perfected All things, and deliver'd them over to the second Mind,

Which the whole Race of Men calls the First.

Light begotten of the Father; for he alone

[p. 29]

Having cropt the flower of the Mind from the Fathers Vigour.

For the paternal self-begotten Mind understanding [his] Work,

Sowed in all the firey Bond of Love,

That all things might continue loving for ever.

Neither those things which are intellectually context in the light of the Father in All things.

That being the Elements of the World they might persist in Love.

For it is the Bound of the paternal Depth, and the Fountain of the Intellectuals.

Neither went he forth, but abided in the paternal Depth,

And in the Adytum according to Divinely-nourished silence.

For the fire once above, shutteth not his Power

Into Matter by Actions, but by the Mind.

For the paternal Mind hath sowed Symbols through the World

Which understandeth intelligibles, and beautifieth ineffables.

Wholly Division and Indivisible.

By Mind he contains the Intelligibles, but introduceth Sense into the Worlds.

By Mind he contains the Intelligibles, but introduceth Soul into the Worlds.

MIND. INTELLIGIBLES. INTELLECTUALS.

And of the one Mind, the Intelligible [Mind]

For the Mind is not without the Intelligible; It exists not without it.

These are Intellectuals, and Intelligibles, which being understood, understand.

For the Intelligible is the Ailment of the Intelligent.

Learn the Intelligible, since it exists beyond the Mind.

And of the Mind which moves the Empyræal Heaven.

For the Framers of the fiery World is the Mind of the Mind.

You who know certainly the supermundane paternal Depth.

The Intelligible is predominant over all Section.

There is something Intelligible, which it behooves thee to understand with the flower of the Mind.

For if thou enclinest thy Mind, thou shalt understand this also;

Yet understanding something [of it] thou shalt not understand this wholly; for it is a Power

Of Circumlucid Strength, glittering with Intellectual Sections. [Raies] [rays -JHP].

But it behooves not to consider this Intelligible with Vehemence of Intellection,

But with ample flame of the ample Mind, which measureth all things Except this Intelligible: but it behooves to understand this.

[p. 30]

For if thou enclinest thy Mind, thou shalt understand this also,

Not fixedly, but having a pure turning Eye [thou must]

Extend the empty Mind of thy Soul towards the Intelligible,

That thou mayst learn the Intelligible, for it exists beyond the Mind.

But every Mind undeerstands this God; for the Mind is not Without the Intelligible, neither is the Intelligible without the Mind.

To the intellectual Presters of the Intellectual fire, all things

By yielding are subservient to the persuasive Counsel of the Father.

And to understand, and alwayes to remain in a restlesse Whirling.

Fountains and Principles; to turn, and alwayes remain in a restlesse Whirling.

But insinuating into Worlds the Venerable Name in a sleeplesse whirling,

By reason of the terrible menace of the Father.

Under two Minds the Life-generating fountain of Souls is contained;

And the Maker, who self-operating framed the World.

Who sprang out of the first Mind.

Cloathing fire with fire, binding them together to mingle.

The fountainous Craters preserves the flower of his own fire.

He glittereth with Intellectual Sections, and filled all things with Love.

Like swarms they are carried, being broken,

About the Bodies of the World.

That things unfashioned may be fashioned,

What the Mind speaks, it speaks by understanding.

Power is with them, Mind is from Her.

JYNGES. IDÆAS. PRINCIPLES.

These being many ascend into the lucid Worlds.

Springing into them, and in which there are three Tops.

Beneath them lies the chief of Immaterialls.

Principles which have understood the intelligible Works of the Father.

Disclosed them in sensible Works as in Bodies;

Being (as it were) the Ferry-men betwixt the Father and Matter.

And producing manifest Images of unmanifest things,

And inscribing unmanifest things in the manifest frame of the World.

The Mind of the Father made a jarring Noise, understanding by Vigorous Counsel,

Omniform Idæa's; and flying out of one fountain

They spring forth; for from the Father was the Counsel and End,

By which they are connected to the Father, by alternate Life from several Vehicles.

But they were divided, being by intellectual fire distributed

Into other intellectuals: for the King did set before the multiform World

An intellectual, incorruptable Pattern; this Print through the World he promoting, of whose form

According to which the World appeared

Beautified with all kinds of Idæa's; of which there is one fountain,

[p. 31]

Out of which come rushing forth others undistributed,

Being broken about the Bodies of the World, which through the vast Recesses,

Like swarms are carried round about every Way.

Intellectual Notions from the paternal fountain cropping the flower of fire.

In the Point of sleeplesse time, of this primigenious Idea.

The first self-budding fountain of the Father budded.

Intelligent Jynges do (themselves) also understand from the father:

By unspeakable Counsels being moved so as to understand.

HECATE. SYNOCHES. TELETARCHS.

For out of Him spring all

Implacable Thunders, and the Prester-receiving cavities

Of the Intirely-lucid strength of Father-begotten Hecate.

And He who beguirds (viz.) the flower of fire, and the strong

Spirit of the Poles fiery above.

He gave to his Presters that they should guard the Tops.

Mingling the power of his own strength in the Synoches,

Oh how the World hath Intellectual guides inflexible!

Because she is the Operatrix, because she is the Dispensatrix of Life-giving fire.

Because also it fills the Life producing bosome of Hecate.

And instills in the Synoches the enliving strength

Of potent fire.

But they are Guardians of the Works of the Father.

For he disguises himself, possessing

To be cloathed with the Print of Images.

The Teletarchs are comprehended with the Synoches.

To these Intellectual Presters of Intellectual fire,

All things are subservient.

But as many as serve the Material Synoches

Having put on the compleatly-armed Vigour of resounding Light.

With triple strength fortifying the Soul and the Mind.

To put into the Mind the Symbol of Variety.

And not to walk dispersedly on the Empyræal Channels;

But stiffely

These frame indivisibles, and sensibles,

And Corporiformes, and things destin'd to matter.

SOUL. NATURE.

For the Soule being a bright fire, by the power of the Father

Remaines Immortall, and is Mistris [Mistress -JHP] of Life;

And possesseth many Complexions of the Cavities of the World:

For it is in Imitation of the Mind; but that which is born hath something of the Body.

[p. 32]

The Channels being intermix'd, she performs the Works of incorruptible Fire

Next the paternal Conceptions I (the Soul) dwell;

Warm, heating, all things; for he did put

The Mind in the Soul, the Soul in the dull Body.

Of us the Father of Gods and Men imposed,

Abundantly animating Light, Fire, Æther, Worlds.

For natural Works co-exist with the Intellectual Light of the Father, for the Soul which adorn'd the great Heaven, and adorning with the Father.

But her Horns are fixed above,

But about the shoulders of the Goddess, immense Nature is exalted.

Again, indefatigable Nature commands the Worlds and Works.

That Heaven drawing an Eternal Course may run.

And the swift Sun might come about the Center as he useth.

Look not into the fatal Name of this Nature.

THE WORLD.

The Maker who Operating by himself framed the World.

And there was another Bulk of fire,

By it self operating all things that the Body of the World might be perfected

That the World might be manifest, and not seem Membranous.

The whole World of Fire, Water, and Earth,

And all-nourishing Æther

The unexpressible Watch-words of the World.

One Life by another from the distributed Channels.

Passing from above to the opposite Part,

Through the Center of the Earth; and another fifth Middle:

Fiery Channel, where it descends to the material Channels.

Life-bringing fire.

Stirring himself up with the goad of resounding Light.

Another fountainous, which guides the Empyræal World.

The Center from which all (Lines) which way soever are equal.

For the paternal Mind sowed Symbols through the World.

For the Center of every one is carried betwixt the Fathers.

For it is in Imitation of the Mind, but that which is born hath something of the Body.

HEAVEN.

For the Father congregated seven Firmaments of the World;

Circumscribing Heaven in a round figure.

He fixed a great Company of inerratick Stars.

And he constituted a Septenary of erratick Animals.

Placing Earth in the middle, and the Water in the middle of the Earth,

[p. 33]

The Air above these.

He fixed a great Company of inerratic Stars,

To be carried not by laborious and troublesome Tension,

But a settlement which hath not Error,

He fixed a great Company of inerratic Stars,

Forcing fire to fire.

To be carried by a Settlement which hath not Error.

He constituted them six; casting into the midd'st,

The fire of the Sun,

Suspending their Disorder in well-ordered Lones.

For the Goddess brings forth the great Sun, and the bright Moon.

O Æther, Son, Spirit, Guides of the Moon and of the Air;

And of the solar Circles, and of the Monthly clashings,

And of the Aerial Recesses.

The Melody of the Æther, and of the Passages of the Sun, and Moon, and of the Air

And the wide Air, and the Lunar Course, and the Pole of the Sun.

Collecting it, and receiving the Melody of the Æther,

And of the Sun, and of the Moon, and of all that are contained in the Air.

Fire, the Derivation of fire, and the Dispenser of fire;

His Hair pointed is seen by his native Light;

Hence comes Saturn.

The Sun Assessor beholding the pure Pole;

And the Ætherial Course, and the vast Motion of the Moon

And the Aerial fluxions.

And the great Sun, and the bright Moon.

TIME.

The Mundane God; Æternal, Infinite.

Young, and Old, of a Spiral form.

And another fountainous, who guides the Empyræal Heaven.

SOUL. BODY. MAN.

It behooves thee to hasten to the light, and to the beams of the Father;

From whence was sent to Thee a Soul cloathed with much Mind.

These things the Father conceived, and so the mortal was animated.

For the paternal mind sowed Symbols in souls;

Replenishing the Soul with profound Love.

For the Father of the Gods and Men placed the Mind in the Soul;

And in the Body he established You.

For all Divine things are Incorporeal.

But bodies are bound in them for your sakes.

Incorporeals not being able to contain the bodies.

By reason of the Corporeal Nature in which you are concentrated.

And they are in God, attracting strong flames.

Descending from the Father, from which descending, the Soul

Crops of Empyrean fruits the soul-nourishing flower.

And therefore conceiving the Words of the Father

They avoid the audacious wing of fatal Destiny;

And though you see this Soul manumitted,

Yet the Father sends another to make up the Number.

Certainly, these are superlatively blessed above all

Souls; they are sent forth from Heaven to Earth,

And those rich Souls which have unexpressible fates;

As many of them (O King) as proceed from shining Thee, or from Jove Himself, under the strong power of (his) thread.

Let the Immortal Depth of thy Soul be predominant; but all thy eyes Extend upward.

Stoop not down to the dark World,

Beneath which continually lies a faithlesse Depth, and Hades

Dark all over, squallid, delighting in Images, unintelligible,

Præcipitous, Craggy, a Depth; alwayes Rolling,

Alwayes espousing an Opacous idle breathlesse Body.

And the Light-hating World, and the winding currents,

By which many things are swallowed up.

Seek Paradise;

Seek thou the way of the Soul, whence or by what Order

Having served the Body, to the same place from which thou didst flow.

Thou must rise up again, joyning Action to sacred speech,

Stoop not down, for a precipice lies below the Earth;

Drawing through the Ladder which hath seven steps, beneath which is the Throne of Necessity,

Enlarge not thou thy Destiny.

The soul of Men will in a manner clasp God to her self;

Having nothing mortal, she is wholly inebriated from God:

For she boasts Harmony, in which the mortal Body exists.

If thou extend the fiery Mind

To the work of piety, thou shalt preserve the fluxible body.

There is a room for the Image also in the Circumlucid place.

Every way to the unfashioned Soul stretch the rains of fire.

The fire-glowing Cogitation hath the first rank.

For the Mortal approaching the fire, shall have Light of God.

For to the slow Mortal the Gods are swift.

The Furies are stranglers of Men.

The burgeons, even of ill matter, are profitable and good.

Let hope nourish thee in the fiery Angelical Region.

But the paternal Mind accepts not her will,

Untill she go out of Oblivion, and pronounce a Word,

Inserting the remembrance of the pure paternal Symbol.

[p. 35]

To these he gave the docible Character of Life to be comprehended.

Those that were asleep he made fruitful by his own strength.

Defile not the Spirit, nor deepen a Superficies.

Leave not the Drosse of matter on a Præcipice.

Bring her not forth, lest going forth she have something.

The souls of those who quit the Body violently, are most pure.

The ungirders of the Soul, which give her breathing, are easie to be loosed.

In the side of sinister Hecate, there is a fountain of Virtue;

Which remains entire within, not omitting her Virginitie.

O Man the machine of boldest Nature!

Subject not to thy Mind the vast measures of the Earth;

For the plant of Truth is not upon Earth.

Nor measure the Measures of the Sun, gathering together Canons;

He is moved by the Eternal Will of the Father, not for thy sake.

Let alone the swift course of the Moon; she runs ever by the impulse of Necessity.

The progression of the Stars was not brought forth for thy sake.

The ætherial wide flight of Birds is not veracious.

And the Dissections of Entrails and Victims, all these are toys,

The supports of gainfull cheats; fly thou these,

If thou intend to open the sacred Paradise of Piety

Where Virtue, Wisdome, and Æquity are assembled.

For thy Vessel the Beasts of the Earth shall inhabit.

These the Earth bewails, even to their Children.

DÆMONS. RITES.

Nature persuades there are pure Dæmons;

The burgeons, even of ill matter, are profitable and good,

But these things I revolve in the recluse Temples of my mind,

Extending the like fire sparklingly into the spacious Air

Or fire unfigured, a voice issuing forth.

Or fire abundant, whizzing and winding about the Earth,

But also to see a Horse more glittering than Light.

Or a Boy on [thy] shoulders riding on a Horse,

Fiery or adorned with Gold, or devested,

Or shooting and standing on [thy] shoulders.

If thou speak often to me, thou shalt see absolutely that which is spoken:

For then neither appears the Coelestial concave Bulk,
Nor do the Stars shine; the Light of the Moon is cover'd,
The Earth stands not still, but all things appear Thunder.
Invoke not the self-conspicuous Image of Nature;
For thou must not behold these before thy Body be initiated.
When soothing souls they alwayes seduce them from these Myteries.
Certainly out of the cavities of the Earth spring Terrestrial Dogs,

[p. 36]

Which show no true signe to mortal Man.
Labour about the Hecatick Strophalus
Never change barbarous Names;
For there are Names in every Nation given from God,
Which have an unspeakable power in Rites.
When thou seest a sacred fire without form,
Shining flashingly through the Depths of the World,
Hear the voice of Fire.

PLETHO [Plethon]

HIS

EXPOSITION

Of the more obscure passages in these Oracles.

For a translation of Plethon's Summary of the Doctrines of Zoroaster and Plato see [Darien C. DeBolt, 'George Gemistos Plethon on God: Heterodoxy in Defense of Orthodoxy'.]

"Seek thou the way of the Soul, whence or by what Order
Having served the body, to the same order from which thou didst flow.
Thou mayst rise up againe; joyning action to sacred speech." /

The Magi that are followers of Zoroaster, as also many others, hold that the Human Soul is immortal; and descended from above to serve the mortal Body, that is, to operate therein for a certain time; and to Animate, and Adorn it to her power; and then returns to the place from which she came. And whereas there are many Mansions there for the Soul, one wholly-bright, another wholly dark, others betwixt both, partly-bright, partly-dark: The Soul, being descended from that which is wholly-bright, into the Body, if she perform her Office well, runs back into the same place; but if not well, she retires into worse Mansions, according to the things which she hath done in Life. The Oracle therefore sayeth, seek thou the Souls path, or the way by which the Soul flowed into thee; or by what course (viz of Life) having performed thy charge toward the Body, thou mayst Mount up to the same place from which thou didst flow down, viz. the same Track of the Soul, joyning action to sacred speech. By sacred speech, he understands that which concerns Divine Worship; by action, Divine Rites. The Oracle therefore sayeth, that to this Exaltation of the Soul, both speech concerning Divine Worship (Prayers,) and Religious Rites (Sacrifices) are requisite.

[p. 38]

"Stoop not down, for a præcipice lies below on the Earth, Drawing through the Ladder which hath seven steps; beneath which Is the Throne of Necessity." /

He calls the Descention into wickednesse, and misery, a Precipice; the Terrestrial and Mortall Body, the Earth: for by the Earth he understands mortal Nature, as by the fire frequently the Divine; by the place with seven Wayes, he means Fate dependant on the Planets, beneath which there is seated a certain dire and unalterable Necessity: The Oracle therefore adviseth, that thou stoop not down towards the mortal Body, which being Subject only to the Fate, which proceeds from the Planets, may be reckon'd amongst those things which are at our Arbitrement: for thou wilt be unhappy if thou stoop down wholly to the Body, and unfortunate and continually failing of thy Desires, in regard of the Necessity which is annex'd to the Body.

"For thy Vessel the Beasts of the Earth shall inhabit." /

The Vessel of thy Soul, that is this mortal Body, shall be inhabited by Worms and other vile Creatures.

"Enlarge not Thou thy Destiny." /

Endeavour not to encrease thy Fate, or to do more then is given thee in charge, for thou wilt not be able.

"For nothing proceeds from the paternal principality imperfect." /

For from the paternal Power, which is, that of the supream God, nothing proceedeth imperfect, so as thou thy selfe mightest compleat it; for all things proceeding from thence are perfect; as appears, in that they tend to the perfection of the Universe.

"But the Paternal Mind accepts not her will,
Untill she go out of Oblivion, and pronounce a Word,
Inserting the remembrance of the pure paternal Symbol." /

The Paternal Mind, (viz. the Second God and ready Maker of the Soul) admits not her Will or Desire untill she come out of [p. 39] the Oblivion, which she contracted by Connexion with the Body; and untill she speak a certain Word, or conceive in her thoughts a certain Speech, calling to remembrance the paternal Divine Symbol or Watch-word, this is the pursuit of the good which the Soul calling to remembrance, hereby becomes most acceptable to Her Maker.

"It behooves thee to hasten to the Light, and to the beams of the Father:
from whence there was sent to thee a Soul endued with much mind." /

The Light and splendour of the Father is that Mansion of the Soul which is circumlucid, from whence the Soul array'd with much of mind was sent hither, wherefore We must hasten to return to the same Light.

"These the Earth bewails, even to their Children." /

Those who hasten not to the Light, from which their Soul was sent to them, the Earth or mortal Nature bewails, for that they being sent hither to Adorn her, not only not adorn her, but also blemish themselves by Living wickedly; moreover the Wickednesse of the Parents is transmitted to the Children, corrupted by them through ill Education.

"The ungirders of the Soul, which give her breathing, are easie to be loosed." /

The Reasons which expell the Soul from Wickednesse, and give her breathing, are easie to be untied; and the Oblivion which keeps them in, is easily put off.

"In the side of the sinister bed there is a fountain of Virtue:
Which remains entire within; not emitting her Virginity" /

In the left side of thy Bed, there is the Power or Fountain of Virtue, residing wholly within, and never casting off her Virginity, or Nature void of Passion: for there is alwayes in us the power of Virtue without passion which cannot be put off; although her Energy or Activity may be interrupted: he saith the power of Virtue is placed on the left side, because her Activity is seated on the [p. 40] right: by the Bed is meant the seat of the Soul, subject to her several Habits.

"The soul of Man will, in a manner, clasp God to her self.
Having nothing mortal, she is wholly inebriated from God
Foir she boasts Harmony, in which the mortal Body consists." /

The human Soul will in a manner clasp God, and joyn him strictly to her self, (who is her continual Defence) by resembling him as much as she can possibly; having nothing mortal within her, she is wholly drench'd in Divinity, or replenished with Divine goods, for though she is fetter'd to this mortal Body, yet she glories in the Harmony or Union in which the mortal Body exists; that is, she is not ashamed of it, but thinks well of her self for it; as being a Cause, and affording to the Universe, that, As Mortals are united with immortals in Man, So the Universe is adorned with one Harmony.

"Because the Soul being a bright fire by the power of the Father; Remains immortal, and is Mistresse of Life,
And possesseth many Completions of the cavities of the World." /

The second God, who first before all other things proceeded from the Father and supream God, these Oracles call all along, The power of the Father, and his intellectual Power, and the paternal Mind. He sayeth therefore, that the Soul procreated by this power of the Father, is a bright fire, that is, a Divine and Intellectual Essence, and persisteth immortal through the Divinity of its Essence, and is Mistresse of Life, viz. of her self, possessing Life which cannot be taken away from her; for, how can we be said to be Masters of such things, as may be taken from us, seeing the use of them is only allowed us? but of those things which cannot be taken from us, We are absolute Masters: The Soul according to her own Eternity, possesseth many Rooms in the Receptacles of the World, or divers places in the World, which according as she hath led her Life past is allotted to every One.

[p. 41]

"Seek Paradise." /

The circumlucid Mansion of the Soul.

"Defile not the Spirit nor deepen a Superficies." /

The Followers of Pythagoras and Plato conceive the Soul to be a Substance not wholly separate from all Body, nor wholly inseparate; but partly separate, partly inseparate; separable potentially, but ever inseparate actually. For they assert three kinds of Forms, One wholly separate from matter, the Supercelestial Intelligences; another wholly inseparable from matter, having a Substancw not subsistent by it self but dependant on matter; together with which Matter, which is sometime dissolved by reason of its nature subject to Mutation, this kind of Soul is dissolved also and perisheth: this kind they hold to be wholly irrational. Betwixt these they place a middle kind, the rational Soul, differing from the Supercelestiall Intelligences, for that it alwayes co-exists with Matter; and from the irrational kind, for that it is not dependant on matter; but, on the contrary, matter it is dependant on it, and it hath a proper substance potentially subsistent by it self; it is also indivisible, as well as the supercelestial Intelligences, and performing some works in some manner allyed to theirs, being it self also busied in the knowledge and contemplation of beings even unto the Supreme God, and for this reason is incorruptible. This kind of Soul is alwayes co-existent with an Ætheriai Body as it's Vehiculum, which she by continual approximation maketh also immortal: neither is this her Vehiculum inanimate in it selfe, but is it self animated with the other species of the Soul the irrational, (which the Wise call the Image of the rational Soul) adorned with Fantasie and Sense which seeth and hears it self whole through whole, and is furnished with all the Senses and with all the rest of the irrational faculties of the Soul. Thus by the principal faculty of this Body, Phantasie, the rational Soul, is continually joyned to such a Body and by such a Body sometimes the humane Soul is joyned with a Mortal Body by a certain affinity of Nature, the whole being infolded in the whole enlivening Spirit of the Embryon. This Vehiculum it selfe being of the nature of a Spirit. The Dæmons Souls differ not much from the humane, onely they are more noble and use more noble Vehicles: Moreover, they cannot be mingled with corruptible Nature: Likewise the Souls of the Starres are much better than the Dæmons, and use better Vehicules; are Bodies splendid by reason of the greatnesse of the operative faculty: These Doctrines concerning the Soul the Magi, followers of Zoroastres, seem to have used long before. Defile not this kind of Spirit of the Soul, sayeth the Oracle, nor deepen it being a superficies; He calls it Superficies, not as if it had not a triple Dimension [p. 42] for it is a Body, but to signifie its extraordinary rarity: nor make it become grosse by accession of more matter to its Bulk: for this Spirit of the Soul becomes grosse, if it declines too much towards the mortal Body.

"There is a room for the Image also in the circumlucid place." /

He calls the Image of the Soul that part which being it self voyd of irrational, is joyned to the rational part, and depends upon the Vehicle thereof: now he saith that this kind of Image hath a part in the circumlucid Region; for the Soul never layeth down the Vehicle adherent to her.

"Leave not the drosse of matter on a Precipice." /

He calls the mortal Body the Drosse of matter, and exhorteth that We neglect it not being ill affected, but take care of it whilst it is in this life, to preserve it in Health as much as possible, and that it may be pure, and in all things else correspond with the Soul.

"Carry not forth, lest going forth she have something." /

Carry not forth, meaning the Soul, out of the mortal Body lest by going forth thou incurre some danger, implying as much as to carry her forth beyond the lawes of Nature.

"If thou extend the fiery mind to the work of Piety, thou shalt preserve the flexible Body." /

Extending up thy divine Mind to the Exercise of Piety or to religious Rites, and thou shalt preserve the mortal Body more sound by performing these Rites.

"Certainly out of the cavities of the Earth spring terrestrial Dogs;
Which show no true signe to mortal Man." /

Sometimes to many initiated Persons there appear, whilst they are sacrificing, some Apparitions in the shape of Dogs and several other figures. Now the Oracle saith, that these issue out of the Receptacles of the Earth, that is, out of the terrestrial and mortal Body, and [p. 43] the irrational Passions planted in it which are not yet sufficiently adorned with Reason, these are Apparitions of the passions of the Soul in performing divine Rites; meer appearances having no substance, and therefore not signifying any thing true.

"Nature perswadeth that Dæmons are pure;
The bourgeons even of ill matter, are profitable and good." /

Nature or natural Reason perswadeth that Dæmons are Sacred, and that all things proceeding from God who is in himself good are beneficial; and the very bloomings of ill Matter, or the forms dependant upon Matter are such: also he calls Matter ill, not as to its substance, for how can the substance be bad the bloomings whereof are beneficial and good? but for that it is ranked last among the substance; and is the least participant of good, which littleness of good is here exprest by the Word ill: now the Oracle meanes that if the bloomings of ill matter viz. of the last of substances are good, much more are the Dæmons such, who are in an excellent Rank as partaking of rational Nature and being not mixed with mortal Nature.

"The furies are Stranglers of Men." /

The furies or the Vindictive Dæmons clasp Men close, or restrain and drive them from Vice and excite them to Vertue.

"Let the immortal depth of the soul be prædominan; but all thy Eyes Extend quite upward" /

Let the divine depth of thy Soul governe, and lift thou all thy Eyes or all thy knowing faculties Upward.

"O Man, the machine of boldest Nature" /

He calls Man the Machine of boldest Nature, because he attempts great things.

"If thou speak often to me, thou shalt see absolutely that which is spoken;
For there neither appears the cælestial concave bulk; [p. 44]
Nor do the Stars shine: the light of the Moon is covered,
The Earth stands not still, but all things appear Thunder." /

The Oracle speaks as from God to an initiated Person, If thou often speak to me or call me, thou shalt see that which thou speakest, viz. Me whom thou callest every where: for then thou shalt perceive nothing but Thunder all about fire gliding up and down all over the World.

"Call not on the self-conspicuous image of Nature." /

Seek not to behold the self-seeing Image of Nature, viz. of the Nature of God, which is not visible to our Eyes: but those things which appear to initiated Persons, as Thunder, Lightning, and all else whatsoever, are only Symbols or Signes, not the Nature of God.

"Every way to the unfashioned Soul stretch out the reins of fire." /

Draw unto thy selfe every way the reins of fire which appear to thee when thou art sacrificing with a sincere Soul; viz. a simple and not of various habits.

"When thou seest a sacred fire, without form,
Shining flashingly through the depths of the World
Hear the voice of Fire." /

When thou beholdest the divine fire voyd of figure brightly gliding up and down the world and graciously smiling, listen to this Voice as bringing a most perfect Prascence.

"The Paternal mind hath implanted Symbols in Souls." /

The Paternal Mind viz. the sedulous Maker of the Substance of the Soul, hath ingrafted Symbols or the Images of Intelligibles in Souls, by which every Soul possesseth in her self the reasons of beings.

[p. 45]

"Learn the intelligible, for as much as it exists beyond thy Mind." /

Learn the Intelligible, because it exists beyond thy Mind, viz. actually; for; though the Images of intellectual things are planted in thee by the Maker of All, yet they are but potentially in thy Soul; but it behooves thee to have actually the knowledge of the Intelligible.

"There is a certain Intelligible which it behooves thee to comprehend with the flower of thy Mind." /

The Supream God, who, is perfectly One, is not conceived after the same manner as other things, but by the flower of the Mind, that is, the Supream and singular Part of our understanding.

"For the Father perfected all things and delivered them over to the Second Mind, which the Nations of Men call the First." /

The Father perfected All things, viz. the Intelligible Species, (for they are absolute and perfect) and delivered them over to the second God next him to rule and guide them: whence if anything be brought forth by this god, and formed after the likenesse of Him, and the other intelligible Substance, it proceeds from the Supream Father; This other God Men esteem the First, that is they who think him the Maker of the World, to whom there is none Superiour.

"Intelligent Jynges do themselves also understand from the Father;
By unspeakable counsels being mooved so as to understand." /

He calls Jynges the Intellectual Species which are conceived by the Father; they themselves also being conceptive, and exciting conceptions or Notions, by unspeakable or unutterable Counsells: by Motion here is understood Intellection not transition, but simply the habitude to Notions so as unspeakable Counsels is as much as unmooved, for speaking consists in Motion: the meaning is this, that these Species are immoveable and have a habitude to Notions not transciently as the Soul.

[p. 46]

"Oh how the World hath intellectual Guides inflexible?" /

The most excellent of the Intelligible Species, and of those which are brought down by the Immortals in this Heaven, he calls the Intellectual Guides of the World; the Coryphæus of whom he conceives to be a God, which is the second from the Father. The Oracle saying that the World hath inflexible Guides, meanes that it is incorruptible.

"The Father hath snatched away himself;
Neither hath he shut up his own fire in his Intellectual power." /

The Father made himself exempt from all others, not including himself neither in his own Intellectual Power, not in the second God who is next him; or liiting his own Fire his own Divinity; for it is absolutely ungenerate, and it self existing by it self; so that his Divinity is exempt from all others; neither is it communicable to any other, although it be loved of all: That he communicates not himself, is not out of envy, but only by reason of the impossibility of the thing.

"The Father infuseth not fear but perswasion." /

The Father makes an impression of fear, but infuseth perswasion or love, for He being extreemly good, is not the cause of ill to any, so as to be dreadful; but is the cause of all good to all; whence he is loved of all.

These Oracles of Zoroaster many Eminent Persons have confirmed by following the like opinions; especially the Pythagoreans and Platonists.

His

EXPOSITION

of the Oracles.

"There is a room for the Image also in the Circumlucid place." /

Images, [gif], with the Philosopher, are those things which are connatural to things more Excellent then themselves, and are worse then they; as the Mind is connatural to God, and the rational Soul to the Mind, and Nature to the rational Soul, and the Body to Nature, and Matter to the Body: The Image of God is the Mind; of the Mind, the rational Soul; of the rational Soul, the Irrational; of the Irrational, Nature; of Nature, the Body; of the Body, Matter. Here the Chaldaick Oracle calleth the irrational Soul the Image of the rational, for it is connatural to it in Man, and yet worse then it. It sayeth, moreover, that there is a part assigned to the Image in the circumlucid Region, that is to say, the irrational Soul, which is the Image of the rational Soul, being purified by Vertues in this Life, after the Dissolution of the human Life, ascends to the place above the Moon, and receives its Lot in the Circumlucid place, that is, which shineth on every side, and is splendid throughout; for the Place beneath the Moon is circum-nebulous, that is, dark on every side: but the Lunary, partly Lucid, and partly Dark, that is, one half bright, the other half dark; but the place above the Moon is circumlucid or bright throughout. Now the Oracle saith, that the circumlucid Place, is not design'd only for the rational Soul, but for its Image also, or the irrational Soul is destin'd to the circumlucid place, when as it cometh out of the Body bright and pure, for the Græcian Doctrine asserting the irrational Soul to be immortal, also exalts it up to the Elements under the Moon: but the Chaldaick Oracle, it being pure and unanimous with the rational Soul, seats it in this circumlucid Region above the Moon. These are the Doctrines of the Chaldæans.

"Leave not the Dregs of matter on a precipice." /

By Dregs of Matter, the Oracle understands the Body of Man consisting of the four Elements, it speaks to the Disciple by way of Instruction and Exhortation, thus, Not only raise up thy Soul to God, and procure that it may rise above the Confusion of Life; but, if it be possible, leave not the Body wherewith thou art cloathed, (and which is dregs of Matter, that is, a thing neglected and rejected, the sport of Matter) in the inferiour World: for this Place, the Oracle calls a Præcipice. Our Soul being darted down hither from heaven, as from a sublime place. It exhorteth therefore, that we refine the Body (which he understands by the Dregs of Matter) by Divine fire, or that, being stripped, we raise it up to the Æther; or that we be Exalted by God to a place Immaterial and Incorporeal, or Corporeal but Ætherial or Cælestial, which Elias the Thisbite attained; and, before him, Enoch, being Translated from this Life into a more Divine Condition, not leaving the dregs of Matter, or their Body, in a precipice; the Precipice is, as we said, the Terrestrial Region.

"Bring not forth, lest going forth she have something." /

This Oracle is recited by Plotinus in his Book of the Eduction of the irrational Soul; it is an Excellent and Transcendent Exhortation. It adviseth, that a Man busie not himself about the going forth of the Soul, nor take care how it shall go out of the Body; but remit the Businesse of its dissolution to the Course of Nature; for, Anxiety and Solitude about the Solution of the Body, and the Education of the Soul out of it, draws away the Soul from better Cogitations, and busieth it in such cares that the Soul cannot be perfectly purifyed; for if Death come upon us at such time as we are busied about this Dissolution, the Soul goeth forth not quite free, but retaining something of a passionate Life. Passion the Chaldæan defines, A Mans sollicitous thinking of Death; for we ought not to think of any thing, but of the more Excellent Illuminations; neither concerning these ought we to be sollicitous, but resigning our selves to the Angelical and Diviner powers, which raise us up, and shutting up all the Organs of Sense in the Body and in the Soul also without Distractive cares and sollicitudes, We must follow God, who calls us.

Some interpret this Oracle more simply; Bring it not out lest it go forth, having something: that is, Anticipate not thy natural Death, although thou be wholly given up to Philosophy; for as ~t thou hast not a compleat Expiation; So that if the Soul passe [p. 49] out of the Body by that way of Educting, it will go forth retaining something of mortal Life: for if we Men are in the Body, as in a Prison, (as Plato saith,) certainly no Man can kill himself, but must expect till God shall send a Necessity.

"Subject not to thy Mind the vast measures of the Earth:
For the plant of Truth is not upon the Earth.
Nor measure the measures of the Sun, gathering together Canons:

He is moved by the Eternal will of the Father, not for thy sake.
Let alone the swift course of the Moon: she runs ever by the impulse of Necessity.
The progression of the Stars was not brought forth for thy sake.
The ætherial broad-footed Flight of Birds is not veracious:
And the Dissections of Entrails and Victims, all these are toys,
The supports of gainful Cheats. Fly thou those,
If thou intend to open the sacred Paradise of piety,
Where Virtue, Wisdom, and Equity are assembled." /

The Chaldæan withdraws the Disciple from all Græcian Wisdome, and teacheth him to adhere only to God, subject not (saith he) to thy Mind the vast Measure of the Earth; for the plant of Truth is not upon Earth; that is, Enquire not solicitously the vast measures of the Earth, as Geographers use to do, measuring the Earth; for the seed of Truth is not in the Earth. Nor measure the Measures of the Sun, gathering together Canons; He is moved by the æternal will of the Father, not for thy sake, That is, Busie not thy self about the Motion and Doctrine of the Stars, for they move not for thy sake, but are perpetually moved according to the Will of God; let alone the swift course of the Moon, she runs ever by the impulse of Necessity, That is, enquire not anxiously the rolling motion of the Moon, for she runs not for thy sake, but is impelled by a greater Necessity. The Progression of the Stars was not brought forth for thy sake; that is, the Leaders of the fixed Stars and the Planets received not their Essence for thy sake. The ætherial broad-footed flight of birds is not veracious; that is, the Art concerning Birds flying in the Air, called Augury, observing their Flight, Notes, and Pearching, is not true.

Introduction

The Ars Notoria is a Medieval Grimoire of the 'Solomonic Cycle'. Many Latin manuscripts are extant, the oldest are dated thirteenth century, and possibly earlier. Like Liber Juratus (also thirteenth century), the text centers around an even older collection of orations or prayers which are interspersed with magical words. The orations in Ars Notoria and those in Liber Juratus are closely related, and suggest to me a common oral tradition. The orations in both works are said to have mystical properties which can impart communion with God and instant knowledge of divine and human arts and sciences.

Robert Turner's 1657 edition of the Ars Notoria is evidently his own translation from the Latin.

To the Ingenious READERS.

AMongst the rest of the labours of my long Winter hours, be pleased to accept of this as a flower of the Sun; which I have transplanted from the copious Roman banks into the English soyle; where I hope it will fruitfully spread its branches, and prove not a perishing gourd, but a continual green Laurel, which Authors say is the plant of the good Angel, and defends all persons neer its shade from the Penetrating blasts of Thunder and Lightening; so will this be a flower fit for every man's Garden; its virtues will soon be known, if practised, and the blasts of vice dispersed: its subject is too sublime to be exprest. Let not the carping Momi, nor envious black-jaw'd Zoili rayl; let not the ignorant bark at that which they know not; here they learn no such lesson: and against their Calumnies, the book I thus vindicate: quod potest per fidem intelligi, & non aliter, & per fidem in eo operare potes.

[Introduction from H: It is called the Notory Art because in certain breif notes it teacheth and comprehendeth the knowledge of all arts. This fifth part is a books of orations and prayers that wise Solomon used upon the altar in the temple, called Ars Nova, & was revealed to Solomon by the holy angel of God called Michael and he also received many breif notes written by the finger of god which was delivered to him by the said angel with thunder claps, without which notes King Solomon had never obtained his great knowledge from those notes it is called the notary art.

The NOTORY ART OF SOLOMON.

The Notory Art revealed by the Most High Creator to Solomon.

In the Name of the holy and undivided Trinity, beginneth this most holy Art of Knowledge, Revealed to SOLOMON, which the Most High Creator by his holy Angel ministred to SOLOMON upon the Altar of the Temple; that thereby in a short time he knew all Arts and Sciences, both Liberal and Mechanick, with all the Faculties and Properties thereof: He had suddenly infused into him, and also was filled with all wisdom, to utter the sacred mysteries of most holy words.

Alpha and Omega! Oh Almighty God, the beginning of all things, without beginning, and without end: Graciously this day hear my prayers; neither do thou render unto me according to my sins, nor after mine iniquities, O Lord my God, but according to thy mercy, which is greater then all things visible and invisible.

Have mercy upon me, O Christ, the Wisdom of the Father, the Light of Angels, the Glory of Saints, the Hope, Refuge, and Support of Sinners, the Creator of all things, the Redeemer of all humane Frailties, who holdest the Heaven, Earth, and Sea, and all the whole World, in the palm of thy Hand: I humbly implore and beseech, That thou wilt mercifully with the Father, illustrate my Minde with the beams of thy holy Spirit, that I may be able to come and attain to the perfection of this most holy Art, and that I may be able to gain the knowledge of every Science, Art, and Wisdom; and of every Faculty of Memory, Intelligences, Understanding, and Intellect, by the Vertue and Power of thy most holy Spirit, and in thy Name. And thou, O God my God, who in the beginning hast created the Heaven and the Earth, and all things out of nothing; who reformest, and makest all things by thy own Spirit; compleat, fulfil, restore, and implant a sound Understanding in me, that I may glorifie thee and all thy Works, in all my Thoughts, Words, and Deeds. O God the Father, confirm and grant this my Prayer, and increase my Understanding and Memory, and strengthen the same, to know and receive the Science, Memory, Eloquence, and Perseverance in all manner of Learning, who livest and reignest World without end. Amen.

Here beginneth the first Treatise of this Art, which Master Apollonius calleth, The golden Flowers, being the generall Introduction to all Natural Sciences; and this is Confirmed, Composed, and Approved by the Authority of Solomon, Manichæus, and Euduchæus.

I Apollonius Master of Arts, duly called, to whom the Nature of Liberal Arts hath been granted, am intended to treat of the Knowledge of Liberal Arts, and of the Knowledge of Astronomy; and with what Experiments and Documents, a Compendious and Competent Knowledge of Arts may be attained unto; and how the highest and lowest Mysteries of Nature may be competently divided, and fitted and applied to the Natures of Times; and what proper dayes and hours are to be elected for the Deeds and Actions of men, to be begun and ended; what Qualifications a man ought to have, to attain the Efficacy of this Art; and how he ought to dispose of the actions of his life, and to behold and study the Course of the Moon. In the first place therefore, we shall declare certain precepts of the Spiritual Sciences; that all things which we intend to speak of, may be attained to in order. Wonder not therefore, at what you shall hear and see in this subsequent Treatise, and that you shall finde an Example of such inestimable Learning.

Some things which follow, which we will deliver to thee as Essayes of wonderful Effects, and have extracted them out of the most ancient Books of the Hebrews; which, where thou seest them, (although they are forgotten, and worn out of any humane Language) nevertheless esteem them as Miracles: For I do truly admire the great Power and Efficacy of Words in the Works of Nature.

Of what efficacy words are.

There is so great Vertue, Power and Efficacy in certain Names and Words of God, that when you reade those very Words, it shall immediately increase and help your Eloquence, so that you shall be made eloquent of speech by them, and at length attain to the Effects of the powerful Sacred Names of God: but from whence the power hereof doth proceed, shall be fully demonstrated to you in the following Chapters of Prayers: and those which follow next to our hand, we shall lay open.

An explanation of the Notary Art.

This art is divided into two parts: The first containeth general Rules, the second special Rules. We come first to the special Rules; that is, First, to a threefold, and then to a fourfold Division: And in the third place we come to speak of Theology; which Sciences thou shalt attain to, by the Operation of these Orations, if thou pronounce them as it is written: Therefore there are certain Notes of the Notary Art, which are manifest to us; the Vertue whereof Human Reason cannot comprehend. The first Note hath his signification taken from the Hebrew; which though the expression thereof be comprehended in a very few words; nevertheless, in the expression of the Mystery, they do not lose their Vertue: That may be called their Vertue, which doth happen and proceed from their pronounciation, which ought to be greatly admired at.

The first precept.

HEly Scemath, Amazaz, Hemel; Sathusteon, hheli Tamazam, &c. which Solomon entituled, His first Revelation; and that to be without any Interpretation: It being a Science of so Transcendent a purity, that it hath its Original out of the depth and profundity of the Chaldee, Hebrew, and Grecian Languages; and therefore cannot possible by any means be explicated fully in the poor Thread-bare Scheme of our Language. And of what nature the Efficacy of the aforesaid words are, Solomon himself doth describe in his Eleventh Book, Helisoe, of the Mighty Glory of the Creator: but the Friend and Successor of Solomon, that is, Apollonius, with some few others, to whom that Science hath been manifested, have explained the same, and defined it to be most Holy, Divine, Deep, and Profound Mysteries; and not to be disclosed nor pronounced, without great Faith and Reverence.

A Spiritual Mandate of the precedent Oration.

Before any one begin to reade or pronounce any Orations of this Art, to bring them to effect, let them alwayes first reverently and devoutly rehearse this Prayer in the beginning.

If any one will search the Scriptures, or would understand, or eloquently pronounce any part of Scripture, let him pronounce the words of the following Figure, to wit, Hely scemath, in the morning betimes of that day, wherein thou wilt begin any work. And in the Name of the Lord our God, let him diligently pronounce the Scripture proposed, with this Prayer which follows, which is, Theos Megale; And is mystically distorted, and miraculously and properly framed out of the Hebrew, Greek, and Chaldean Tongues: and it extendeth itself briefly into every Language, in what beginning soever they are declared. The second part of the Oration of the second Chapter, is taken out of the Hebrew, Greek, and Chaldee; and the following Exposition thereof, ought to be pronounced first, which is a Latine Oration: The third Oration of the three Chapters, always in the beginning of every Faculty, is first to be rehearsed.

This sheweth, how the foregoing Prayer is expounded: But although this is a particular and brief Exposition of this Oration; yet do not think, that all words are thus expounded.

The Exposition of this Oration.

OH God, the Light of the World, Father of Immense Eternity, Giver of all Wisdom and Knowledge, and of all Spiritual Grace; most Holy and Inestimable Dispenser, knowing all things before they are made; who makest Light and Darkness: Stretch forth thy Hand, and touch my Mouth, and make my Tongue as a sharp sword; to shew forth these words with Eloquence; Make my Tongue as an Arrow elected to declare thy Wonders, and to pronounce them memorably: Send forth thy holy Spirit, O Lord, into my Heart and Soul, to understand and retain them, and to meditate on them in my Conscience: By the Oath of thy Heart, that is, By the Right-hand of thy holy Knowledge, and mercifully inspire thy Grace into me; Teach and instruct me; Establish the coming in and going out of my Senses, and let thy Precepts teach and correct me until the end; and let the Council of the most High assist me, through thy infinite Wisdom and Mercy. Amen.

The words of these Orations cannot be wholly Expounded.

Neither think, that all words of the preceding Oration can be translated into the Latin Tongue: For some words of that Oration contain in themselves a greater Sense of Mystical Profundity, of the Authority of Solomon; and having reference to his Writings, we acknowledge, That these Orations cannot be expounded nor understood by humane sense: For it is necessary, That all Orations, and distinct particulars of Astronomy, Astrology, and the Notary Art, be spoken and pronounced in their due time and season; and the Operations of them to be made according to the disposition of the Times.

Of the Triumphal Figures, how sparingly they are to be pronounced, and honestly and devoutly spoken.

There are also certain Figures or Orations, which Solomon in Chaldeack, calleth Hely; that is, Triumphal Orations of the Liberal Arts, and sudden excellent Efficacies of Vertues; and they are the Introduction to the Notary Art. Wherefore Solomon made a special beginning of them, that they are to be pronounced at certain determinate times of the Moon; and not to be undertaken, without consideration of the end. Which also Magister Apollonius hath fully and perfectly taught, saying, Whosoever will pronounce these words let him do it in a determinate appointed time, and set aside all other occasions, and he shall profit in all Sciences in one Moneth, and attain to them in an extraordinary wonderful manner.

The Expositions of the Lunations of the Notary Art.

THese are the Expositions of the Luration, and Introduction of the Notary Art, to wit, in the fourth and the eighth day of the Moon; and in the twelfth, sixteenth, four and twentieth, eight and twentieth, and thirtieth they ought to be put in operation. From whence Solomon saith, That to those times, we give the expositive times of the Moon; of the fourth day of the Moon which are written by the four Angels; and in the fourth day of the Moon is manifested to us; and are four times repeated and explained by the Angel, the Messenger of these Orations; and are also revealed and delivered to us that require them from the Angel, four times of the year, to shew the Eloquence and Fulness of the four Languages, Greek, Hebrew, Chaldee and Latine; and God hath determined the Power of the Faculties of Humane Understanding, to the four Parts of the Earth; and also the four Vertues of Humanities, Understanding, Memory, Eloquence, and the Faculty of Ruling those three. And these things are to be used as we have before spoken.

He sheweth how the precedent Oration is the Beginning and Foundation of the whole Art.

That is the first Figure of the Notary Art, which is manifestly sited upon a Quadrangle Note: And this is Angelical Wisdom, understood of few in Astronomy; but in the Glass of Astrology, it is called, The Ring of Philosophy; and in the Notary Art it is written, To be the Foundation of the whole Science. But it is to be rehearsed four times a day, beginning in the morning once, about the third hour once, once in the ninth hour, and once in the evening.

The precedent Oration ought to be spoken secretly; and let him that speaks it be alone, and pronounce it with a low voyce, so that he scarcely hear himself. And this is the condition hereof, that if necessity urge one to do any great works, he shall say it twice in the morning, and about the ninth hour twice; and let him fast the first day wherein he rehearseth it, and let him live chastly and devoutly. And this is the oration which he shall say:

This is the Oration of the four Tongues, Chaldee, Greek, Hebrew and Latine, evidently expounded, which is called, "the Splendor or Speculum of Wisdom." In all holy Lunations, these Orations ought to be read, once in the morning, once about the third hour, once about the ninth hour, and once in the evening.

The Oration.

Assaylemath, Assay, Lemeth, Azzabue.

The second part of the precedent Orations, which is to be said onely once.

Azzaylemath, Lemath, Azacgessenio.

The third part of the precedent Oration, which is to be spoken together with the other.

Lemath, Sebanche, Ellithy, Aygezo.

This Oration hath no Exposition in the Latine.

This is a holy Prayer, without danger of any sin, which Solomon saith, is inexplicable be humane sense. And he addeth, and saith, That the Explication thereof is more prolixious, than can be considered of or apprehended by man; excepting also those secrets, which is not lawful, neither is it given to man to utter: Therefore he leaveth this Oration without any Exposition, because no man could attain to the perfection thereof: and it was left so Spiritual, because the Angel that declared it to Solomon, laid an inexcusable prohibition upon it, saying, See that thou do not presume to give to any other, nor to expound any thing out of this Oration, neither thou thy self, nor any one by thee, nor any one after thee: For it is a holy and Sacramental Mystery, that by expressing the words thereof, God heareth thy Prayer, and increaseth thy Memory, Understanding, Eloquence, and establisheth them all in thee. Let it be read in appointed times of the Luration; as, in the fourth day of the Moon, the eighth and twelfth, as it is written and commanded: say that Oration very diligently four times in those dayes; verily believing, That thereby thy study shall suddenly be increased, and made clear, without any ambiguity, beyond the apprehension of humane Reason.

Of the Efficacy of that Oration which is inexplicable to humane sense.

THis is that onely which Solomon calls The happiness of Wit, and M. Apollonius termeth it, The Light of the Soul, and the Speculum of Wisdom: And, I suppose, the said Oration may be called, The Image of Eternal Life: the Vertue and Efficacy whereof is so great, that it is understood or apprehended of very few or none.

Therefore having essayed some Petitions, Signs and Precepts, we give them as an entrance to those things whereof we intend to speak; of which they are part, that we have spoken of before. Nevertheless, before we come to speak of them, some things are necessary to be declared, whereby we may more clearly and plainly set forth our intended History: For, as we have said before, there are certain Exceptions of the Notary Art; some whereof are dark and obscure, and others plain and manifest.

For the Notary Art hath a Book in Astronomy, whereof it is the Beginning and mistress; and the Vertue thereof is such, that all Arts are taught and derived from her. And we are further to know, That the Notary Art doth in a wonderful manner contain and comprehend within it self, all Arts, and the Knowledge of all Learning, as Solomon witnesseth: Therefore it is called, The Notary Art, because in certain brief Notes, it teacheth and comprehendeth the knowledge of all Arts: for so Solomon also saith in his Treatise Lemegeton, that is, in his Treatise of Spiritual and Secret Experiments.

Here he sheweth, in what manner those Notes differ in Art, and the reason thereof; for a Note is a certain knowledge, by the Oration and Figure before set down.

BUt of the Orations and Figures, mention shall be made in their due place, and how the Notes are called in the Notary Art. Now he maketh mention of that Oration, which is called, The Queen of Tongues: for amongst these Orations, there is one more excellent than the rest, which King Solomon would therefore have be called, The Queen of Tongues, because it takes away, as it were, with a certain Secret covering the Impediments of the Tongue, and giveth it a marvellous Faculty of Eloquence. Wherefore before we proceed further, take a little Essay of that Oration: For this is an Oration which in the Scriptures we are taught to have alwayes in our mouthes; but it is taken out of the Chaldean Language: which, although it be short, is of a wonderful Vertue; that when you reade that Scripture, with the Oration before-mentioned, you cannot keep silent those things, which the Tongue and Understanding suggest, and administer to thee.

The Oration which follows, is a certain Invocation of the Angels of God, and it provoketh Eloquence, and ought to be said in the beginning of the Scripture, and in the beginning of the Moneth.

The Oration

[1] LAmeth, Leynach, Semach, Belmay*, (these Orations have not proper Lunations, as the Commentator saith upon the Gloss, Azzailement, Gesegon, Lothamasim, Ozetogomaglal, Zeziphier, Josanum, Solatar, Bozefama, Defarciamar, Zemait, Lemaio, Pheralon, Anuc, Philosophi, Gregoon, Letos, Anum, Anum, Anum.)

How this Oration is to be said in the beginning of every Moneth, chastly, and with a pure minde.

IN the beginning of the Scriptures, are to be taught, how the precedent Oration ought to be spoken most secretly, and nothing ought to be retained, which thy Minde and Understanding suggests and prompts to thee in the reading thereof: Then also follow certain words, which are Precepts thereof, which ought alwayes to be begun in the beginning of the Moneth, and also in other dayes. I would also note this, That it is to be pronounced wisely, and with the greatest reverence; and that fasting, before you have taken either Meat or Drink.

Here followeth the Prayer we spake of before, to obtain a good Memory.

[2] O Most Mighty God, Invisible God, Theos Patir Heminas; by thy Archangels, Eliphamasay, Gelonucoa, Gebeche Banai, Gerabcai, Elomnit; and by thy glorious Angels, whose Names are so Consecrated, that they cannot be uttered by us; which are these, Do. Hel. X. P. A. Li. O. F. &c. which cannot be Comprehended by Humane Sense.

Here following is the Prologue of the precedent Oration, which provoketh and procureth Memory, and is continued with the precedent Note.

THis Oration ought to be said next to the precedent Oration; to wit, Lameth: and with this, I beseech thee to day, O Theos, to be said always as one continued Oration. If it be for the Memory, let it be said in the morning; if for any other effect, in the evening. And thus let it be said in the hour of the evening, and in the morning: And being thus pronounced, with the precedent Oration, it increaseth the Memory, and helpeth the Imperfections of the Tongue.

Here beginneth the Prologue of this Oration.

I Beseech thee, O my Lord, to illuminate the Light of my Conscience with the Splendor of thy Light: Illustrate and confirm my Understanding, with the sweet odour of thy Spirit. Adorn my Soul, that hearing I may hear and what I hear, I may retain in my Memory. O Lord, reform my heart, restore my senses, and strengthen them; qualifie my Memory with thy Gifts: Mercifully open the dulness of my Soul. O most merciful God, temper the frame of my Tongue, by thy most glorious and unspeakable Name: Thou who are the Fountain of all Goodness; the Original and Spring of Piety, have patience with me, give a good Memory unto me, and bestow upon me what I pray of thee in this holy Oration. O thou who dost not forthwith Judge a sinner, but mercifully waitest, expecting his Repentance; I (though unworthy) beseech thee to take away the guilt of my sins, and wash away my wickedness and offences, and grant me these my Petitions, by the verture of thy holy Angels, thou who art one God in Trinity. Amen.

If thou doubt of any great Vsion, what it may foreshew; or if thou wouldst see any great Vsion, of any danger present or to come; or if thou wouldst be certified of any one that is absent, say this Oration three times in the evening with great reverence and devotion, and thou shalt have and see that which thou desirest.

Here followeth an Oration of great Vertue, to attain the knowledge of the Physical Art, having also many other Vertues and Efficacy.

IF you would have the perfect knowledge of any Disease, whether the same tend to death or life: if the sick party lie languishing, stand before him, & say this Oration three times with great reverence.

The Oration of the Physical Art.

*IHesus fili Dominus Incomprehensibilis: Ancor, Anacor, Anylos, Zohorna, Theodonos, hely otes Phagor, Norizane, Corichito, Anosae, Helse Tonope, Phagora.

Another part of the same Oration.

Elleminator, Candones helosi, Tephagain, Tecendum, Thaones, Behelos, Belhoros, Hocho Phagan, Corphandonos, Humanæ natus & vos Eloytus Phugora: Be present ye holy Angels, advertise and teach me, whether such a one shall recover, or dye of this Infirmary.

This being done, then ask the sick person, Friend, how dost thou feel thy self? And if he answer thee. I feel my self at good ease, I begin to mend, or the like; then judge without doubt, The sick person shall recover: but if he answer, I am very grievously ill, or worse and worse; then doubtless conclude, He will dye on the morrow: But if he answer, I know not how my state and condition is, whether better or worse; then you may know likewise, That he will either dye, or his disease will change and alter for the worse. If it be a Childe , that is not of years capable to make an answer; or that the sick languish so grievously, that he knoweth not how, or will not answer, say this Oration three times; and what you finde first revealed in your minde, that judge to come to pass of him.

Furthermore if any one dissemble and seek to hide or cover his infirmity; say the same Oration, and the Angelical Vertue shall suggest the truth to thee. If the diseased person be farre off; when you hear his Name, say likewise this Oration for him, and your minde shall reveal to you whether he shall live or dye.

If you touch the Pulse of any one that is sick, saying this Oration, the effect of his Infirmary shall be revealed to you.

Or if you touch the Pulse of any Woman with Childe, saying the same Oration, it shall be revealed, whether she shall bring forth a Male or Female.

But know, that this Miracle proceeds not from your own Nature, but from the Nature and Vertue of the holy Angels; it being a part of their Office, wonderfully to reveal these things to you. If you doubt of the Virginitie of any one, say this Oration in your minde, and it shall be revealed to you, whether she be a Virgin, or Corrupt.

Here follows an efficacious Preface of an Oration, shewing what Vertue and Efficacy you may thereby prove every day.

Of this Oration Solomon saith, That by it a new knowledge of Physick is to be received from God: Upon which, he hath laid this command, and calleth it, The Miraculous and Efficacious Foundation of the Physical Science; and that it containeth in it the quantity and quality of the whole Physical Art and Science: wherein there is contained, rather a miraculous and specious, then fearful or terrible Miracle, which as often-soever as thou readest the same, regard not the paucity of words, but praise the Vertue of so great a Mystery: For, Solomon himself speaking of the subtilty of the Notory Art, wonderfully extolls the Divine Help; to wit, Because we have proposed a great thing, that is to say so many and so great Mysteries of Nature, contained under so specious brevity, that I suppose them to be as a general Problem to be proposed in the ordination of so subtile and excellent a work; that the minde of the Reader or Hearer may be the more confirmed and fixed hereupon.

Here he sheweth how every Note of every Art, ought to exercise his own office; and that the Notes of one Art profit not to the knowledge of another Art; and we are to know, That all Figures have their proper Orations.

We come now, according to our strength, to divide the families of the Notory Art; and leaving that part which is natural, we come to the greater parts of the rt: for Solomon, a great Composer, and the greatest Master of the Notory Art, comprehendeth divers Arts under the Notion thereof. Therefore he calleth this a Notory Art, because it should be the Art of Arts, and Science of Sciences; which comprehendeth in it self all Arts and Sciences, Liberal and Mechanick: And those things which in other Arts are full of long and tedious locutions, filling up great prolixious Volumes of Books, wearying out the Student, through the length of time to attain to them: In this Art are comprehended very briefly in a few words or writings, so that it discovereth those things which are hard and difficult, making the ingenious learned in a very short time, by the wonderful and unheard-of Vertue of the words.

Therefore we, to whom such a faculty of the knowledge of the Scripture of Sciences is granted, have wholly received this great gift, and inestimable benefit, from the overflowing grace of the most high Creator. And whereas all Arts have their several Notes properly disposed to them, and signified by their Figures; and the Note of every Art, hath not any office of transcending to another Art, neither do the Notes of one Art profit or assist to the knowledge of another Art: Therefore this may seem a little difficult, as this small Treatise, which may be called a Preludium to the Body of the Art: we will explain the Notes severally; and that which is more necessary, we shall by the Divine Providence diligently search out the several Sciences of the Scripture.

A certain special Precept.

This is necessary for us, and necessarily we suppose will be profitable to posterity, that we know how to comprehend the great prolixious Volumes of writings, in brief and compendious Treatises; which, that it may easily be done, we are diligently to enquire out the way of attaining to it, out of the three most ancient Books which were composed by Solomon; the first and chiefest thing to be understood therein, is, That the Oration before the second Chapter, is to be used long before every speech, the beginning whereof is Assay: and the words of the Oration are to be said in a competent space of time; but the subsequent part of the Oration is then chiefly to be said, when you desire the knowledge of the Volumes of writings, and looking into the Notes thereof. The same Oration is also to be said, when you would clearly and plainly understand and expound any Science or great Mystery, that is on a sudden proposed to you, which you never heard of before: say also the same Oration at such time, when any thing of great consequence is importuned of you, which at present you have not the faculty of expounding. This is a wonderful Oration, whereof we have spoken; the first part whereof is expounded in the Volume of the Magnitude of the quality of Art.

The Oration.

*L*Amed, Rogum, Ragia, Ragium, Ragiomal, Agaled, Eradioch, Anchovionos, Lochen, Saza, Ya, Manichel, Mamacuo, Lephoa, Bozaco, Cogemal, Salayel, Ytsunanu, Azarocho, Beyestar, Amak.

To the operation of the Magnitude of Art, this Oration containeth in the second place, a general Treatise of the first Note of all Scripture, part of the Exposition whereof, we have fully explained in the Magnitude of the quality of the same Art. But the Reader hath hardly heard of the admirable Mystery of the Sacramental Intellect of the same: Let him know this for a certain, and doubt not of the Greek words of the Oration aforesaid, but that the beginning of them is expounded in Latine.

The beginning of the Oration.

*O*H Eternal and Unreprehensible Memory! Oh Uncontradictible Wisdom! Oh Unchangeable Power! Let thy right-hand encompass my heart, and the holy Angels of thy Eternal Counsel; compleat and fill up my Conscience with thy Memory, and the odour of thy Ointments; and let the sweetness of thy Grace strengthen and fortifie my Understanding, through the pure splendor and brightness of thy holy Spirit; by vertue whereof, the holy Angels alwayes behold and admire the brightness of thy face, and all thy holy and heavenly Vertues; Wisdom, wherewith thou hast made all things; Understanding, by which thou hast reformed all things; Perseverance unto blessedness, whereby thou hast restored and confirmed the Angels; Love, whereby thou hast restored lost Mankind, and raised him after his Fall to Heaven; Learning, whereby thou wer't pleased to teach Adam the knowledge of every Science: Inform, repleat, instruct, restore, correct, and refine me, that I may be made new in the understanding [of] thy Precepts, and in receiving the Sciences which are profitable for my Soul and Body, and for all faithful believers in thy Name which is blessed for ever, world without end.

Here is also a particular Exposition of the fore-going Oration, which he hath left unexpounded, to be read by every one that is learned in this Art; and know, that no humane power nor faculty in man is sufficient to finde out the Exposition thereof.

This Oration is also called by Solomon, The Gemme and Crown of the Lord: for he saith, It helpeth against danger of Fire, or of wilde Beasts of the Earth, being said with a believing faith: for it is affirmed to have been reported from one of the four Angels, to whom was given power to hurt the Earth, the Sea, and the Trees. There is an example of this Oration, in the Book called, The Flower of heavenly Learning; for herein Solomon glorifieth God, because by this he inspired into him the knowledge of Theologie, and dignified him with the Divine Mysteries of his Omnipotent Power and Greatness: which Solomon beholding in his night-Sacrifice, bestowed upon him by the Lord his God, he conveniently gathered the greater Mysteries together in this Notory Art, which were holy, and worthy, and reverend Mysteries. These things and Mysteries of Theologie the erring Gentiles have not all lost, which Solomon calleth, The Signe of the holy Mystery of God revealed by his Angel before; and that which is contained in them, is the fulness of our dignity and humane Salvation.

The first of these Orations which we call Spiritual, the vertue whereof teacheth Divinity, and preserveth the memory thereof.

These are Orations also, which are of great virtue and efficacy to our Salvation: The first whereof is Spiritual, and teacheth Divinity; and also Perseverance in the Memory thereof: Therefore Solomon commandeth it to be called, The Signe of the Grace of God: for, as Ecclesiastes saith, This is the Spiritual Grace of God, that hath given me knowledge to treat of all Plants, from the Cedar of Lebanon, to the Hyssop that groweth on the wall.

The election of time, in what Lunation these Orations ought to be said.

THe first Oration ought to be said once in the first Lunation; in the third, three times; in the sixth, six times; in the ninth, nine times; in the twelfth, twelve times; in the seventeenth, seventeen times; and in the eighteenth, as many times; in the twenty sixth, as many; in the twenty ninth, as many; and so many in the thirty ninth: for this Oration is of so great vertue and efficacy, that in the very day thou shalt say the same, as if it were determined by the Father, it shall increase thy knowledge in the Science of Divinity.

But if otherwise that thou art ignorant, and it hath been seen by thy Companions, thy Superiours or Inferiours, though unto others thou shalt seem to have knowledge; enter into the study of Divinity, and hear the Lectures by the space of some moneths, casting off all doubt from thee, of them who shall see thee, to know such things: and in that day wherein thou wouldst say it, live chastly, and say it in the Morning.

Solomon testifieth, That an Angel delivered the following Oration in Thunder, who standeth alwayes in the Presence of the Lord, to whom he is not dreadful. The Mystery hereof is holy, and of great efficacy: neither ought this Oration to be said above once, because it moveth the heavenly Spirits to perform any great work.

Of this Oration he saith, That so great is the Mystery thereof, that it moveth the Celestial Spirits to perform any great work which the Divine Power permitteth. It also giveth the vertue of its Mystery, that it exalteth the tongue and body of him that speaketh it, with so great inspiration, as if some new and great Mystery were suddenly revealed to his understanding.

Here followeth the beginning of this Oration, wherein is so great vertue and efficacy, as we have said, it being said with great devotion.

Achacham, Yhel, Chelychem, Agzyraztor, Yegor, &c.

This is the beginning of the Oration, the parts whereof are four: But there is something to be said of the beginning by itself, and of the four parts severally; and then between the beginning and these Orations, which are four, we shall make this competent division.

For this is that which is to be spoken of the beginning severally: And this Oration is to be divided into four parts; and the first part thereof is to be said, that is, the beginning, before any other part of the Oration is to be compleated. These Greek Names following are to be pronounced. This is the division of these Orations, Hielma, Helma, Hemna, &c. Oh God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit, Confirm this Oration, and my Understanding and Memory, to receive, understand, and retain the knowledge of all good Scriptures; and give me perseverance of minde therein.

This is the beginning of that Oration, which, as we have said before, ought to be said according to the Prolations and Constitutions thereof; and ought to be repeated, because of the forgetfulness of our Memory, and according to the exercise of our wit, and according to the sanctity of our life; there being contained in it so great a Mystery, and such efficacious Vertue.

There followeth another subtile Oration, wherein is contained a Sacramental Mystery, and wherein every perfect Science is wonderfully compleated: For hereby God would have us to know, what things are Celestial, and what are Terrene; and what heavenly things the Celestial effecteth, and what earthly things the Terrene: because the Lord hath said, My eyes have seen the imperfect, and in thy book every day shall be formed and written, and no man in them, &c. So it is in the Precepts of God: for we are not able to write all things, how the Sun hath the same course as at first, that our order may be confirmed: for all writing whatsoever, which is not from God, is not to be read; for God himself would have all things to be divided: & this is how these are to be used, before the second part, which containeth so glorious and excellent Consecrations of Orations, & defineth the Consecrated part to have power in the Heavens, and in no wise can be defined by humane tongues.

This is the beginning of the second part of that Oration spoken of before, which is of so great vertue.

Aglaros, Theomiros, Thomitos, &c.

This is the second part of the precedent Oration, of which some singular thing is to be spoken. Wherefore if thou sayest this Oration, commemorating the first part thereof, say the Oration following, and thou shalt perceive the precepts which are therein.

Oh God of all things, who art my God, who in the beginning hast created all things out of nothing, and hast reformed all things by the Holy Spirit; compleat and restore my conscience, and heal my understanding, that I may glorify thee in all my works, thoughts and words. And after thou hast said this Oration, make a little respite the space of half an hour, and then say the third part of the Oration, which follows: Megal, Legal, Chariotos, &c. having said this third part of the Oration, then meditate with thy self about the Scriptures thou desirest to know; and then say this Oration:

Oh thou that art the Truth, Light, and Way, of all Creatures: Oh just God, vivify me, and confirm my understanding, and restore my knowledge and conscience unto me, as thou didst unto King Solomon, Amen.

Commemorating the parts according to that which is laid down, add the Oration following: the other Orations being said, say the fourth part of the Oration, which is this: Amasiel, Danyi, hayr, &c.

Then the parts being commemorated as is directed, add also the following Oration.

I speak these things in thy presence, Oh Lord my God, before whose face all things are naked and open, that I being washed from the error of infidelity, thy all-quicking Spirit may assist me, and take away all incredulity from me.

How the Latine Orations are not expounded by the words of the Orations.

We are therefore to know, that the whole Oration remaineth unexpounded; because the words thereof are of so great subtilty, adorned with the Hebrew and Chaldean Tongue, with the subtile and wonderful elocution of God: that the office of the free exposition thereof, cannot possibly be transferred upon me. The Latine words which are subjoyned to the parts of the Oration aforesaid, are such words as have been translated out of the Chaldean Tongue: for they are not the whole Oration; but as certain heads of every Oration pertaining thereunto.

Here he speaketh of the efficacy of all these.

For this Oration is such a mystery, as King Solomon himself witnesseth, that a Servant of his House having found this book by chance, and being too much overcome with Wine in the Company of a Woman, he presumptuously read it; but before he had finished a part thereof, he was stricken dumb, blind and lame, and his Memory taken from him; so he continued to the day of his death: and in the hour of his death, he spoke and said, that four Angels which he had offended in presumptuous reading so sacred a mystery, were the daily keepers and afflictors, one of his Memory, another of his speech, a third of his sight, and the fourth of his hearing.

By which Testimony this Oration is so much commended by the same King Solomon, and great is the mystery thereof: we do greatly require and charge every one, that will say or read it, that he do it not presumptuously; for in presumption is sin; wherefore let this Oration be said, according as is directed.

We therefore hold it convenient and necessary, to speak something of the general precepts of art, and of the knowledge of all arts; and of the several precepts of every singular art: but because we have touched something of the course of the Moon, it is necessary that we shew what her course signifies. The Moon passeth through 12 signs in one Moneth; and the Sun through 12 signs in a year; and in the same term and time, the Spirit inspireth, fructifieth and illustrateth them; whence it is said, that the Sun and the Moon run their course: it is understood the course which first they had. But because this is wanting in the Hebrew, we thought good to omit it in the Latine, having spoken sufficiently of the preceding Oration, and the three parts thereof.

In this Chapter he sheweth the efficacy of the subsequent Oration, it being special to obtain Eloquence.

This Holy Oration which followeth, is a certain special Oration, to obtain eloquence; whereas all others have virtue and efficacy in other things, this containeth this certain special mystery in it self: And whereas one of the generals is shewing in it self, certain general precepts, common to all arts for so God instituted the soul in the body, saying, This I give unto you, that ye may keep and observe the Law of the Lord; And these are they that stand in the presence of God alwayes, and see their Saviour face to face night and day. So of this Oration, I say, This is that most glorious, mystical and intelligible Oration, containing such mysteries in it, which the mind, conscience and tongue succeedeth. This is such a mystery, that a man shall keep it according to his will, who foreseeeth all things in his sight that are made; for the mystery of this Oration is glorious and sacramental: let no man presume to say any of this Oration after too much drinking or Luxury; nor fasting, without great reverence and discretion. Whence Solomon saith, Let no man presume to treat any thing of this Oration, but in certain determinate and appointed times, unless he make mention of this Oration before some great President, for some weighty business; for which this Oration is of wonderful excellent virtue.

The goodness of this Oration, and the attaining to the effects thereof, it is read in that Psalm wherein it is said, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men, as he said and did.

We know that it is not of our power, that this Oration is of so great Virtue, and such a mystery, as sometimes also the Lord said to his disciples, This we are not able to know: for this Oration is such a mystery, that it containeth in it the great Name of God; which many have lyed in saying they knew it; for Jesus himself performed many Miracles in the Temple by it: But many have lyed about what he did, and have hid and absconded the truth thereof; so that none have declared the same before it came to passe: but we suppose have spoken something about or concerning it.

In this chapter he setteth down the time and manner how this Oration is to be pronounced.

For this Oration is one of the generals, and the first of particulars, containing both in it self; having a special virtue and faculty, to gain Eloquence in it self: therefore it is necessary to be understood what time, ordination, and what dayes it is to be said and published.

It may alwayes be rehearsed in every 14 Lunary as above said; but the ordination of the time for every day, wherein it is to be said, is especially in the morning betimes, before a man is defiled; and then all Orations are chiefly to be said. And this Oration must be then pronounced totally together, without any division. And although there are divisions therein, the Oration is not divided in it self; but only the Divine and Glorious

Names are written severally, and are divided into parts, according to the terminations of every great and Glorious Name; and it is to be said together as a most excellent Name, but not as one Word, because of the fragility of our nature; Neither is it needful to know the Elements of sillables, posited in this Oration; they are not to be known; neither let any one presumptuously speak them; neither let him do any thing by way of temptation, concerning this Oration, which ought not to be done: Elmot, Sehel, Hemech, Zaba, &c.

No man that is impeded or corrupted with any crime, ought to presume to say this Oration.

This is a thing agreed unto amongst the wise men of this World, that these things, as we have said before, be pronounced with great reverence and industry: it may be said every day, wherein thou art not hindred by some criminal sin; and in that day wherein thou art impeded by some criminal sin, thou maist remember it in thy heart; and if thou dost desire to be made Eloquent, repeat it three times. And if any evil thing trouble thee, or thou art emerged and involved into any great business, repeat this Oration once, and Eloquence shall be added to thee, as much as is needful; and if thou repeat it over twice, great Eloquence shall be given to thee: so great a Sacrament is this Oration.

The third thing to be considered in this Oration, is; This Oration ought so to be pronounced, that confession of the Heart and Mouth ought to precede it: let it be pronounced in the morning early, and after that Oration say the Latine Oration following.

This is a Prologue or Exposition of the precedent Oration, which ought to be said together.

Oh omnipotent and eternal God, and merciful Father, blessed before all Worlds; who art a God eternal, incomprehensible, and unchangeable, and hast granted this blessed gift of Salvation unto us; according to the omnipotency of thy Majesty, hast granted unto us the faculty of speaking and learning, which thou hast denied to all other animals; and hast disposed of all things by thy infallible providence: thou art God, whose nature is eternal and consubstantial, exalted above the Heavens; in whom the whole Deity corporally dwells: I implore thy Majesty, and Glorify thy omnipotency, with an intente imploration, adoring the mighty Virtue, Power and Magnificence of thy eternity. I beseech thee, Oh my God, to grant me the inestimable Wisdome of the Life of thy holy Angels. Oh God the Holy Spirit, incomprehensible, in whose presence stand the Holy quires of Angels; I pray and beseech thee, by thy Holy and Glorious Name, and by the sight of thy Angels, and the Heavenly Principalities, to give thy grace unto me, to be present with mee, and give unto me power to persevere in the Memory of thy Wisdome, who livest and reignest eternally one eternal God, through all worlds of worlds; in whose sight are all celestial virtues, now and alwayes, and everywhere, Amen.

This Oration being thus finished, there must of necessity some Mystery be added; so that you are to be silent a while after the Latine Oration is ended: and after a little taciturnity, that is, a little space of silence, begin to say this Oration following seriously: Semet, Lamen, &c.

This (saith Solomon) is the Oration of Orations, and a special experiments, whereby all things, whether generals or particulars, are known fully, efficaciously and perfectly, and are kept in the Memory. But when thou hast by this Oration attained the Eloquence thou desirest, be sparing thereof, and do not rashly declare those things which thy Tongue suggests and administers to thee; for this is the end of all general precepts, which are given to obtain Memory, Eloquence, and understanding. All those things which are before delivered, of general precepts, are given as signs how the faculty of attaining to the understanding of the general precepts may be had, which also Solomon calleth Spirituals; and those singular arts have singular virtues and powers.

Having now given a sufficient definition of general precepts; and the Orations are laid down, and the Authority of the Orations unto what they are designed; it is now necessary to set down what is to be done, concerning the singular Orations; because we are now to treat of the several and particular arts, that we may follow the example which our builder and Master hath laid before us; for Solomon saith, before we proceed to the singular notes and Orations of arts before noted, there ought to be said a Præudium, which is a beginning or Prologue.

How every several art hath its proper note.

Before we proceed to the singular precepts of several Arts, it is necessary to discover how every several Art hath a several Note.

Of the liberal Sciences and other things, which may be had by that Art.

The liberal Arts are seaven, and seaven exceptives, and seaven Mechanicks. The seaven exceptives are comprehended under the seaven liberal: It is manifest what the seaven liberal Arts are, of which we shall first treat. The Mechanicks are these, which are adulteratedly called Hydromancy, Pyromancy, Nigromancy, Chiromancy, Geomancy, Geonegia, which is comprehended under Astronomy, and Neogia.

Hydromancy, is a science of divining by the Water; whereby the Masters thereof judged by the standing or running of the Water. Pyromancy, is an experiment of divining by the flaming of the fire; which the ancient Philosophers esteemed of great efficacy. Nigromancy, is a Sacrifice of dead Animals, whereby the Ancients supposed to know many great Experiments without sin, and to attain to great knowledge: from whence Solomon commandeth that they might read seaven Books of that Art without sin; and that two he accompted Sacriledge, and that they could nor: read two Books of that Art without sin. But having spoken enough hereof, we proceed to the rest.

Of the liberal Sciences and other things which may be had thereby.

There are seaven liberal Arts, which every one may learn and read without sin. For Philosophy is great, containing profound Mysteries in it self: These Arts are wonderfully known.

He declareth what notes the three first liberal Arts have.

For Grammar hath three notes only, Dialects two, and Rhetorick four, and every one with open and distinct Orations. But wherefore Grammar hath three, Dialects two, and Rhetorick four; that we know King Solomon himself testifieth and affirmeth; for he saith, And as I was admiring and revolving in my heart and mind, which way, from whom and from whence was this science, An Angel brought one book, wherein was written the Figures and Orations, and delivered unto me the Notes and Orations of all Arts, plainly and openly, and told me of them all as much as was necessary: And he explained unto me, as to a Child are taught by certain Elements, some tedious Arts in a great space of time, how that I should have these Arts in a short space of time: Saying unto me, So shalt thou be promoted to every science by the increase of these virtues. And when I asked him, Lord, whence and how cometh this? The Angel answered, This is a great Sacrament of the Lord, and of his will: this writing is by the power of the Holy Ghost, which inspireth, fructifieth and increaseth all knowledge; And again the Angel said, Look upon these Notes and Orations, at the appointed and determinate times, and observe the times as appointed of God, and no otherwise. When he had thus said he shewed to King Solomon a book wherein was written, at what times all these things were to be pronounced and published, and plainly demonstrated it according to the Vision of God: Which things I having heard and seen, did operate in them all, according to the Word of the Lord by the Angel: And so Solomon declareth, it came to passe unto him: But we that come after him, ought to imitate his Authority, and as much as we are able observe those things he hath left unto us.

Here Solomon sheweth, how the Angel told him distinctly, wherefore the Grammar hath three Figures.

Behold wherefore the Grammatical Art hath only three Notes in the Book of Solomon Gemeliath, that is, in The Book of the Art of God, which we read is the Art of all other sciences, and of all other Arts; For Solomon saith, When I did inquire every thing singularly of the Angel of God, with fear, saying, Lord, from whence shall this come to passe to me, that I mayfully and perfectly know this Art? Why do so many Notes appertain to such an Art, and so many to such an Art, and are ascribed to several determinate Orations, to have the efficacy thereof? The Angel is thus said to answer: The Grammatical Art is called a liberal Art, And hath three things necessary thereunto: Ordination of words and times; and in them, of Adjuncts or Figures; Simple, compound and various; and a various declination of the parts to the parts, or a relation from the parts, and a Congruent and ordinate division. This is the reason, why there is three Notes in the Art of Grammar: And so it pleased the Divine Wisdome, that as there should be a full knowledge of declining by one; by another, there should be had a convenient Ordination of all the parts; by the third, there should be had a continual and convenient Division of all the parts, simple and compound.

The Reason why the Dialectical Art hath two Figures onely.

Dialect, which is called the form of Arts, and a Doctrinal speech, hath two things necessary thereunto, to wit, Eloquence of Arguing, and Prudence to answer; Therefore the greatness of the Divine Providence and Piety, hath appointed two Notes to it; that by the first, we may have Eloquence to Argue and Dispute; and by the second, industry to answer without ambiguity: Wherefore there are ascribed to Grammar three Notes, and to Dialect two Notes.

The Reason why Rhetorick hath four Figures.

Let us see wherefore Rhetorick hath four Notes. For there are four things necessary therein; as the Angel of the Lord said unto Solomon; to wit, a continual and flourishing adornment of locution, an ordinate, competent and discreet judgement, a Testimony of Causes or Offices, of Chances & Losses, a composed disposition of buying and selling; An Eloquence of the matters of that Art, with a demonstrative understanding. Therefore the greatness of God hath appointed to the Art of Rhetorick four Notes, with their Holy and Glorious Orations; as they were reverently sent by the Hand of God; that every Note in this Art aforesaid, might have a several faculty, That the first Note in that Art, might give a continual locution, a competent and flourishing adornment thereof: The second, to discern Judgements, just and unjust, ordinate and inordinate, true and false: The third, competently to discover offices and causes: and the fourth giveth understanding and eloquence in all the operations of this Art, without prolixity. See therefore how in Grammar, Logick, and Rhetorick, the several Notes are disposed in the several Arts.

But of the other Arts and their Notes, we shall speak in their due place and time, as we find them disposed in the book of the same Solomon.

At what timesand hours the Notes of these three liberal Arts are to be looked into.

Now we proceed to shew at what time, and how the Notes of these Arts are to be looked into, and the Orations to be said, to attain to these Arts. If thou art altogether ignorant of the Grammatical Art, and wouldst have the knowledge thereof: if it be appointed thee of God to do this work of works, and have a firm understanding in this Art of Arts: Then know that thou maist not presume to do otherwise than this book commandeth thee; for this book of his shall be thy Master, And this Art of his thy Mistress.

How the Grammatical Notes are to be looked into in the first Moon.

For in this manner, the Grammaticall Notes are to be looked into, and the Orations to be said.

In the dayes when the Moon is in her prime, the first Note is to be looked into 12 times, and the Orations thereof repeated 24 times with Holy reverence; making a little space between, let the Orations be twice repeated at the inspection of every Note, and chiefly abstain from sins: do this from the first day of the Moon to the 14, and from the 14 to the 17. The first and second Notes are to be looked into 20 times, and the Orations to be repeated 30 times, on the 15 and 17 dayes, using some interval between them, All the three Notes are then every day to be looked into 12 times, and the Orations to be repeated 20 times: and thus of the Notes of the Art of Grammar. But if thou hast read any books of this Art, and desirest perfection therein, do as is commanded; using the general Orations to increase Memory, Eloquence, understanding and perseverance therein, repeating these above in the due time and hours appointed; lest that going beyond thy precept, thou committest sin: but when thou dost this, see that it be secret to thy self, and that thou have no looker on but God. Now we come to the Notes.

Here followeth the knowledge of the Notes.

In the beginning of the inspection of all Notes, fast the first day till the evening, if you can; if thou canst not, then take another hour. This is the Grammatical precept.

Of the logical notes.

The Dialectical Notes may be used every day, except only in those dayes before told of: The Rhetorical every day, except only three dayes of the Moneth, to wit,  11, 17, and 19. And they are forbidden on these dayes, as Solomon testifies, the Notes of all Arts, except the Notes of this Art are offered. These precepts are generally to be observed.

How the Logical Notes are to be inspected, and the Orations thereof said.

Know, that the Dialectical Notes are four times to be looked into, and the Orations thereof in that day are 20 times to be repeated, making some respite, and having the books of that Art before your Eyes; and so likewise the books of Rhetorick, when the Notes thereof are inspected, as it is appointed. This sufficeth for the knowledge of the 3 Arts.

How we must beware of offences.

Before we proceed to begin the first Note of the Art of Grammar, something is to be tryed before, that we may have the knowledge of the 1, 2, and 3 Notes. And you ought first to know, in what the Notes of the Grammatical, Logical, or Rhetorical Art are to be inspected, it being necessary that your greatest intentions be to keep from all offences.

How the Notes ought to be inspected, at certain elected times.

This is a special and manifest knowledge, wherewith the Notes of the Grammatical Art are known: how they are to be published, at what times, and with what distinction, is duly and competently manifest; it is spoken already of the publishing and inspection of the Notes and Orations: now we shall digresse a little to speak something of the times, it being in part done already.

How divers Months are to be sought out in the inspection of the Notes.

We have spoken already of the tearms of this Art, wherein the Orations are to be read, and the Notes to be looked into: it remaineth to declare, how the Lunations of these Orations are to be inspected and found out. But see that you mistake not: yet I have already noted the Lunations, wherein the Notes ought to be looked into, and the Orations rehearsed: But there are some Months, wherein the Luration is more profitable than others: if thou wouldst operate in Theology or Astronomy, do it in a fiery sign; if Grammar or Logick, in Gemini or Virgo; if Musick or Physick, in Taurus or Libra; if Rhetorick, Philosophy, Arithmetick or Geometry, in Gemini or Cancer; for Mathematicks, in Taurus or Gemini: so they are well placed, and free from evil; for all the Heavenly Potestates and Chorus of Angels, do rejoyce in their Lunations, and determinate dayes.

Here is made mention of the Notes of all Arts.

I Apollonius following the power of Solomon, have disposed my self to keep his works and observations, as it is spoken of the three Notes of Grammar, so will I observe the times as they are to be observed: But the Orations thereof are not written, but are more fully demonstrated in the following work; for what is written of those three Notes, are not Orations, but Definitions of those Notes, written by the Greek, Hebrew, and Chaldean, and other things which are apprehended by us: For those writings which are not understood in Latine, ought not to be pronounced, but on those dayes which are appointed by King Solomon, and in those dayes wherein the Notes are inspected, but on those dayes those Holy writings are always to be repeated: and the Latine, on those dayes wherein the Notes are not inspected. The Notes of the Logical Art are two: and at what times they are to be published is already shewn in part: more shall hereafter be said of them: now we come to the rest. The Latine writings may be published, according to the Antiquity of the Hebrews, except on those dayes we have spoken of: for Solomon saith, See that thou perform all those precepts as they are given: But of the rest which follow, it is to be done otherwise: for when thou seest the first Note of Logick, repeat in thy heart the sign in the first Note, and so in the Notes of all Arts except those whereof a definition shall be given.

Definitions of several Arts, and the Notes thereof.

We will give also Definitions of several Arts, as it is in the Book of Solomon; Geometry hath one Note, Arithmetick a Note and a half; Philosophy, with the Arts and Sciences contained therein, hath 7 Species; Theology and Astronomy, with the Sciences in them contained, hath 7 Notes, but they are great and dangerous; not great in the pronounciation, but have great efficacy: Musick hath one Note, and Physick one Note; but they are all to be published and rehearsed in their appointed dayes: But know, that in every day wherein you beholdest the Notes of Theology, Philosophy, or of any Arts contained in them, that thou neither laugh nor play, nor sport, because King Solomon, when he saw the forms of these Notes, having over-drunk himself, God was angry with him, and spoke unto him by his Angel, saying, Because thou hast despised my Sacrament, and Polluted and derided my Holy things; I will take away part of thy Kingdome, and I will shorten the dayes of thy Children. And the Angel added, The Lord hath forbid thee to enter into the Temple 80 days, that thou maist repent of thy sin. And when Solomon wept and besought mercy of the Lord, the Angel answered, Thy dayes shall be prolonged; nevertheless many evils and iniquities shall come upon thy Children, and they shall be destroyed of the iniquities that shall come upon them.

At the beginning of a Note, having seen the generals; let the specials be looked into. The word of Solomon is to seek unto God for his promises, before the Notes of the three Arts.

The first Oration at the beginning of the Note.

[1] The Light, Truth, Life, Way, Judge, Mercy, Fortitude and Patience, preserve, help me, and have Mercy upon me, Amen.

This Oration, with the preceding, ought to be said in the beginning of the first Note of Grammar. [2] Oh Lord, Holy Father, Almighty, eternal God, in whose sight are all the foundations of all Creatures, and invisible beings, whose Eyes behold my imperfections, of the sweetness of whose love the Earth and Heavens are filled; who sawest all things before they were made, in whose book every day is formed, and all mankind are written therein: behold me thy Servant this day prostrate before thee, with my whole Heart and Soul, by thy Holy Spirit confirm me, blesse me, protect all my Actions in this inspection or repetition, and illuminate me with the constancy of thy visitation.

The 3 Oration. This Oration ought to be said before the second Note of Grammar. [3] Behold, O Lord, merciful Father of all things; eternal dispenser of all virtues, and consider my operations this day; Thou art the Beholder and Discerner of all the Actions of Men and Angels: Let the wonderful grace of thy promises condescend to fulfil this sudden virtue in me, and infuse such efficacy into me, operating in thy Holy and great Name, thou who infusest thy praise into the mouths of them that love thee, Amen.

The 4 Oration. Let this Oration be rehearsed before the third Grammatical Note: [4] O Adonay, Creator of all visible Creatures! Oh most Holy Father, who dwellest incompassed about with eternal light, disposing and by thy power governing all things before all beginnings; I most humbly beseech thy eternity and thy incomprehensible goodness may come to perfection in me, by the operation of thy most Holy Angels; And be confirmed in my Memory, and establish these thy Holy works in me, Amen.

A little space after this Oration, say the following: the first Oration ought to be said before the first Note of Logick. [5] Oh Holy God, great good, and the eternal Maker of all things, thy Attributes not to be exprest, who hast Created the Heaven and the Earth, the Sea and all things in them, and the bottomless pit, according to thy pleasure; in whose sight are the Words and Actions of all men: Grant unto me, by these Sacramental Mysteries of thy Holy Angels, the precious knowledge of this art, which I desire by the Ministry of thy Holy Angels, it being without any Malignant or Malitious intent, Amen.

Pronounce this Oration in the beginning of the first Figure of the Logick art; and after this Oration rehearse incontinently with some interval, the Orations written between the first Figure.

The 6 Oration ought to be said before the first Note of the Dialect. [6] Helay: Most Merciful Creator, Inspirer, Reformer, and Approver of all Divine wills, Ordeyner of all things, Mercifully give ear to my Prayer, gloriously intend unto the desires of my heart, that what I humbly desire, according to thy promises, thou wilt Mercifully grant, Amen.

This Oration following, ought to be pronounced before the first Note of the Rhetorical Art. [7] Omnipotent and merciful Father, Ordeyner and Creator of all Creatures: Oh most Holy Judge, eternal King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; who wonderfully condescendest to give wisdom and understanding to thy Saints, who judgest and discernest all things: I beseech thee to illuminate my heart this day with the Splendor of thy Beauty, that I may understand and know what I desire, and what things are considerable to be known in this Art, Amen.

This Oration with the following Hanazay, &c. ought to be pronounced before the first Figure of Rhetorick: and although the Oration is divided into two parts, yet it is one and the same: And they are divided only for this cause, that there might be some mean interval used in the pronouncing of them; and they ought to be pronounced before the other Orations written in the Figure.

Hanazay, Sazhaon, Hubi, Sene, Hay, Ginbar, Ronail, Selmora, Hyramay, Lohal, Yzazamael, Amathomatois, Yaboageyors, Sozomcrat, Ampho, Delmedos, Geroch, Agalos, Meihatagiel, Secamai, Saheleton, Mechogrisces, Lerirencrhon.

The 8 Oration, let it be pronounced before the second Note of the Rhetorical Art: [8] Oh great eternal and wonderful Lord God, who of thy eternal counsel hast disposed of all virtues, and art Ordeyner of all goodness; Adorn and Beautify my understanding, and give unto me Reason to know and learn the Mysteries of thy Holy Angels: And grant unto me all knowledge and learning thou hast promised to thy Servants by the vertue of thy holy Angels, Amen.

This Oration, with the other two following, ought to be pronounced, (viz. Vision, &c.) Azelechias, &c. in the beginning of the second Figure of Rhetorick, and before the other Orations; and there ought to be some interval between them.

Let this Oration following be said, before the second Note of Rhetorick [9] Vision; beholding with thy eternal conspiracy all Powers, Kingdomes and Judges, Administring all manner of Languages to all, and of whose power there is no end; restore I beseech thee and increase my Memory, my heart and understanding, to know, understand, and judge all things which thy Divine authority commendeth necessary in this art, perfectly fulfill them in me, Amen.

Let this Oration following, with the Precedent, be rehearsed before the second Note of Rhetorick. [10] Azelechias, Velozeos, Inoanzama, Samelo, Hotens, Sagnath, Adonay, Soma, Jezochos, Hicon, Jezomethon, Sadaot. And thou Oh God propitiously confirm thy promises in me, as thou hast confirmed them by the same words to King Solomon; send unto me, Oh Lord, thy virtue from Heaven, that may illuminate my mind and understanding: strengthen, Oh God, my understanding, renew my Soul within me, and wash me with the Waters which are above the Heavens; pour out thy Spirit upon my flesh, and fill my bowels with thy Judgements, with humility and charity: thou who hast created the Heaven and the Earth, and made man according to thy own Image; pour out the light of thy love into my understanding, that being radicated and established in thy love and thy mercy, I may love thy Name, and know, and worship thee, and understand all thy Scriptures, And all the Mysteries which thou hast declared by thy Holy Angels, I may receive and understand in my heart, and use this Art to thy Honor and Glory, through thy mighty Counsel, Amen.

The 11 Oration ought to be said before the pronounciation of the third Note of Rhetorick. [11] I know, that I love thy Glory, and my delight is in thy wonderful works, and that thou wilt give unto me wisdom, according to thy goodness and thy power, which is incomprehensible: Theon, Haltanagon, Haramalon, Zamoyma, Chamasal, Jeconamril, Harionatar, Jechomagol, Gela Magos, Kemolihot, Kamanatar, Hariomolatar, Hanaces, Velonionathar, Azoroy, Jezabali; by these most Holy and Glorious profound Mysteries, precious Offices, virtue and knowledge of God, compleat and perfect my beginnings, and reform my beginnings, Zembar, Henorانات, Grenatayl, Samzatam, Jecornazay: Oh thou great Fountain of all goodness, knowledge and virtue, give unto thy Servant power to eschew all evill, and cleave unto goodness and knowledge, and to follow the same with an Holy intention, that with my whole heart I may understand & learn thy Laws and Decrees; especially these Holy Mysteries; wherein that I may profit, I beseech thee, Amen.

12. This Oration ought to be said before the ninth Rhetorical Note: Oh most reverend Almighty Lord, ruling all Creatures both Angels and Arch-Angels, and all Celestial, terrestrial, and infernal Creatures; of whose greatness comes all plenty, who hast made man after thy own Image; Grant unto me the knowledge of this Art, and strengthen all Sciences in me, Amen.

13. Pronounce this before the first Figure of Arithmetick: Oh God who numbrest, weighest, and measurest all things, given the day his order, and called the Sun by his Name; Grant the knowledge of this Art unto my understanding, that I may love thee, and acknowledge the gift of thy goodness, Amen.

14. Say this before the semi-note of Arithmetick: Oh God, the Operator of all things, from whom proceeds every good and perfect gift; sow the Seeds of thy Word in my Heart, that I may understand the excellent Mysteries of this Art, Amen.

15. Say this before the second Figure of Arithmetick: Oh God the perfect Judge of all good works, who makest known thy saving goodness amongst all Nations; open my Eyes and my Heart, with the beams of thy mercy, that I may understand and persevere in these thy Heavenly Mysteries, Amen.

16. This Oration before the second Note of Geometry: Oh God the giver of all wisdom and knowledge to them that are without sin, Instructor and Master of all Spiritual Learning, by thy Angels and Arch-Angels, by Thrones, Potestates, Principates and Powers, by Cherubim and Seraphim, and by the 24 Elders, by the 4 Animals, and all the host of Heaven, I adore, invoke, worship and glorify thy Name, and exalt thee: most terrible and most merciful, I do humbly beseech thee this day to illuminate and fill my Heart with the grace of thy Holy Spirit, thou who art three in one, Amen.

17. Say this Oration before the second Note of Theology. I adore thee, Oh King of Kings, my light, my substance, my life, my King, and my God, my Memory, and my strength; who in a Moment gavest sundry Tongues, and threwest down a Mighty Tower, And gavest by thy Holy Spirit the knowledge of Tongues to thy Apostles, infusing thy knowledge into them in a Moment, giving them the understanding of all Languages: inspire my Heart, and pour the dew of thy grace and Holy Spirit into me, that I may understand the Exposition of Tongues and Languages, Amen.

Three Chapters to be published, before any of the Notes.

What we have spoken of the three first Chap. are generally and specially to be pronounced, so that you say them, and the Orations on the dayes appointed, and work by the Notes as it is demonstrated to you. These Orations ought to be said alwayes before noon, every day of the Moneth; and before the Notes say the proper Orations: and in all reading, observe the precepts commanded.

How the Proper Notes are to be inspected.

If you would learn anything of any one Art, look into the proper Notes thereof in their due time. Enough is said already of the three liberal Arts.

What dayes are to be observed in the inspection of the Notes of the four Arts.

In the four other Arts, only the four first dayes are to be observed: The Philosophical Notes, with all Sciences contained therein, the 7 and 17 dayes of the Moon are to be inspected, 7 times aday, with their several Orations. The Note is to be looked into, with fear, silence and trembling.

Of the Notes of the liberal Arts, it is spoken already; but only know this, that when you would use them, live chaste and soberly; for the Note hath in it self 24 Angels, is fully and perfectly to be pronounced, as you have heard: but when you look into them, repeat all the Theological Orations, and the rest in their due time.

Of the inspection of general Notes.

Say the general Notes 10 times a day, when you have occasion to use any common Arts, having the books of those Arts before you, using some interval or space of time between them, as you have been taught already.

How the three first Chapters are to be pronounced before Orations.

To have perfection herein, know, that in the general pronounciation of Orations, the Notes of the three heads are to be rehearsed; whether the Orations be pronounced or not.

How the fifth Oration of Theology ought to be rehearsed upon these Orations.

There is also something else to be said of the four other liberal Arts; if you would have the perfect knowledge of them, make the first Oration of Theology before you say the Orations of the other Notes. These are sufficiently declared, that you may understand and know them; And let the capitular Orations be pronounced before the several Notes of every Art, and kept as is determined, &c. These are the Augmentations of the Orations, which belong to all Arts liberal and exceptive, except Mechanick, and are especially ascribed to the Notes of Theology. And they are thus to be pronounced, that whensoever you would look into any one Note of any Art, and would profit therein, say these Orations following.

1. Ezomamos, Hazalat, Ezityne, Hezemechel, Czemomechel, Zamay, Zaton, Ziamy Nayzaton, Hyzemogoy, Jeccomantha, Jaraphy, Phalezeton, Sacramphal, Sagamazaim, Secranale, Sacramathan; Jezennalaton Hacheriatos, Jetelemathon, Zaymazay, Zamaihay, Gigutheio Geurlagon, Garyos, Megalon Hera Cruhic, Crarihuc, Amen.

Let this Oration with the following be pronounced before the first Note of Philosophy: Oh Lord God, holy Father, almighty and incomprehensible; hear my Prayers, thou that art invisible, immortal and intelligible, whose face the Angels and Arch-angels, and all the powers of Heaven, do so much desire to see; whose Majesty I desire eternally to adore, and honour the only one God for ever and ever, Amen.

2. Say this before the second Note of Philosophy: Oh Lord God, Holy and Almighty Father, hear my Prayers this day, and incline thy ears to my Orations; Gezomelion Samach, Semath, Cemon, Gezagam, Gezatrhin, Zheamoth, Zeze Hator Sezeator Samay Sarnanda, Gezyel, Iezel, Gaziety, Hel, Gazayethyel, Amen.

Say this following with the former: Oh God eternal, the way, the truth, and the life; give thy light and the flower of thy Holy Spirit into my mind and understanding, and grant that the gift of thy grace may shine forth in my heart, and into my Soul, now and for ever, Amen.

Pronounce the Oration following before the third Note of Philosophy; Lemogethom, Hegemochom, Hazachay Hazatha, Azamachar, Azacham, Cohathay. Geomothay Logomothay, Zathana, Lachanma, Legomezon, Legornozon, Lembdemachon, Zegomaday, Hathanayos, Hatamam, Helesymom, Vagedaren, Vadeyabar, Lamnanath, Lamadai, Gomongchor, Gemecher, Ellemay, Gecromal, Gecrohahi, Colomanos, Colomaythos, Amen.

Say this following with the precedent Oration: Oh God the life of all visible Creatures, eternal brightness, and virtue of all things; who art the original of all piety, who knewest all things before the were; who judgest all things, and discernest all things by thy unspeakable knowledge: glorify thy Holy and unspeakable Name this day in my heart, and strengthen my intellectual understanding; increase my Memory, and confirm my eloquence; make my Tongue ready, quick, and perfect in thy Sciences and Scriptures, that by thy power given unto me, and thy wisdom taught in my heart, I may praise thee, and know and understand thy Holy Name for ever World without end, Amen.

Say this Oration following before the fourth Note of Philosophy. Oh King of Kings, the Giver and Dispenser of infinite Majesty, and of infinite mercy, the founder of all foundations; lay the foundation of all thy virtues in me, remove all foolishness from my heart, that my senses may be established in the love of thy charity, and my Spirit informed by thee, according to there creation and invocation of they will, who livest and reignest God throughout all Worlds of Worlds, Amen.

How these Orations are to be said every day once before the general Notes, and the Notes of the liberal Arts.

These 4 Orations are necessary for liberal Arts, but chiefly do appertain to Theology, which are to be said everyday before the general Notes, or the Notes of the liberal Arts; but to Theology say every one of these 7 times to every Note; but if you would learn or teach any thing of dictating, versifying, singing or Musick, or any of these Sciences, first teach him these Orations, that thou would'st teach, how he should read them: but if he be a Child of mean understanding, read them before him, and let him say after thee word for word; but if he be of a good understanding, let him read them 7 times a day for 7 days: or if it be a general Note, pronounce these Orations, and the Virtue thereof shall profit you much, and you shall therein find great virtue.

Solomon saith of these Orations, let no man presume to make use of them unless for the proper office they are instituted for. Oh Father, incomprehensible, from whom proceedeth every thing that is good; whose greatness is incomprehensible: Hear this day my Prayers, which I make in thy sight, and grant to me the Joy of thy saving health, that I may teach unto the wicked the Wayes and Paths of thy Sciences, and convert the Rebellious and incredulous unto thee, that whatsoever I commemorate and repeat in my heart and mouth, may take root and foundation in me; that I may be made powerful and efficacious in thy works, Amen.

Say this Oration before the 6 Note of Philosophy: Gezemothon, Oromathian, Hayatha, Aygyay, Lethasihel, Lechizliel, Gegohay, Gerhonay, Samasatel, Samasathel, Gessiamo, Hatel, Segomasay, Azomathon, Helomathon, Gerochor, Hejazay, Samin, Heliel, Sanihelyel, Siloth, Silerech, Garamathal, Gesemathal, Gecoromay, Gecorenay, Samyel, Samihahel, Hesemyhel, Sedolamax, Secothamay, Samya, Rabiathos, Avinosch, Annas, Amen.

Then say this following: Oh eternal King! O God, the Judge and discerner of all things, knower of all good Sciences; instruct me this day for thy Holy Names sake, and by these Holy Sacraments; and purify my understanding, that thy knowledge may enter into my inward parts, as water flowing from Heaven, and as Oil into my bones, by thee, Oh God Saviour of all things, who art the Fountain of goodness, and original of piety; instruct me this day in those Sciences which I desire, thou who art one God for ever, Amen. Oh God Father, incomprehensible, from whom proceedeth all good, the greatness of whose mercy is fathomless, hear my Prayers, which I make this day before thee, and render unto me the joy of thy Salvation, that I may teach the unjust the knowledge of thy wayes, and convert the unbelieving and Rebellious unto thee; and may have power to perform thy works, Amen.

The 7 Oration, which is the end of the Orations, belonging to the ineffable Note, the last of Theology, having 24 Angels.

Oh God of all piety, Author and Foundation of all things, the eternal Health and Redemption of thy people; Inspirer and great Giver of all graces, Sciences and Arts, from whose gift it cometh: Inspire into me thy servant, an increase of those Sciences: who hast granted life to me miserable sinner, defend my Soul, and deliver my Heart from the wicked cogitations of this World; extinguish and quench in me the flames of all lust and fornication, that I may the more attentively delight in thy Sciences and Arts; and give unto me the desire of my Heart, that I being confirmed and exalted in thy glory, may love thee: and increase in me the power of thy Holy Spirit, by thy Salvation and reward of the faithful, to the Salvation of my Soul and Body, Amen.

Then say this following: Oh God most mighty Father, from whom proceedeth all good, the greatness of whose mercy is incomprehensible; hear my Prayers, which I make in thy sight.

Special precepts of the Notes of Theology, chiefly of the 1. 2. and 3.

These 7 Orations are an augmentation of the rest, and ought to be said before all the Notes of Theology, but especially before the ineffable Note; these are the precepts to make thee sufficient, which we command thee to observe by the authority of Solomon: diligently inquire them out, and do as we have proposed, and perfectly pronounce the Orations, and look into the Notes of the other Arts.

How Solomon received that ineffable Note from the Angel.

Because thou desirest the Mystery of the Notes, take this of the ineffable Note, the expression whereof is given in the Angels by the Figures of Swords, birds, trees, Flowers, Candles, and Serpents; For Solomon received this from the Lord in the night of Pacification, ingraven in a book of Gold; and heard this from the Lord: Doubt not, neither be affraid; for this Sacrament is greater than all the rest; And the Lord joyned it unto him, When thou look'st into this Note, and read'st the Orations thereof, observe the precepts before, and diligently look into them; And beware that thou prudently conceal and keep whatsoever thou read'st in this Note of God, and whatsoever shall be revealed to thee in the vision. And when the Angel of the Lord appeareth to thee, keep and conceal the words and writings he revealeth to thee; and observe them to practice and operate in them, observing all things with great reverence, and pronounce them at the appointed dayes and hours, as before is directed: and afterwards say: Sapienter die illo; Age, & caste vivas. But if thou dost anything uncertain, there is danger; as then wilt have experience from the other Notes and the Orations of them; but consider that which is most wonderful in those Orations; for these words are ineffable Names, and are spiritually to be pronounced before the ineffable Note, Hosel, Jesel, Anchiator, Aratol, Hasiatol, Gemor, Gesameor. Those are the Orations which ought to be pronounced after the inspection of all Arts, and after the Note of Theology.

This is the fulfilling of the whole work; but what is necessary for an experiment of the work, we will more plainly declare. In the beginning of the knowledge of all Art, there is given almost the perfect doctrine of operating: I say almost, because some flourishing institutions hereof remain, whereof this is the first beginning.

How the precepts are to be observed in the operation of all Arts.

Observe the 4  in every operation of Theology. Exhibit that operation with efficacy every 4  quartam lunam; and diligently look into the books and writings of those Arts; if thou doubt of any of the Chapters, they are to be pronounced, as is taught of the superiour Chapters; but know this, that these Holy Words of Orations, we appoint to be said before the bed of the sick, for an experiment of life or death. And this thou maist do often, if thou wilt operate nothing else in the whole body of Art: And know this, that if thou hast not the books in thy hands, or the faculty of looking into them is not given to thee; the effect of this work will not be the lesse therefore: but the Orations are twice then to be pronounced, where they were to be but once: And as to the knowledge of a vision, and the other virtues which these holy Orations have; thou maist prove and try them, when and how thou wilt.

These precepts are specially to be observed.

But when thou would'st operate in Theology, observe only those dayes which are appointed; but all times are convenient for those Notes and Operations, for which there is a competent time given; but in the pronounciation of the three liberal Arts, or in the inspection of their Notes, perhaps thou maist pretermitt some day appointed, if thou observe the rest; or if thou transgress two dayes, leave not off the work, for it loseth not its effect for this, for the Moon is more to be observed in the greater numbers than the dayes or hours. For Solomon saith, if thou miss a day or two, fear not, but operate on the general Chapters. This is enough to say of them: but by no means forget any of the words which are to be said in the beginning of the reading to attain to Arts; for there is great virtue in them. And thou maist frequently use the Holy Words of the visions: but if thou wouldst operate in the whole body of the Physical Art, the first Chapters are first to be repeated as before are defined. And in Theology, thou must operate only by thy self: Often repeat the Orations, and look into the Notes of Theology: this produceth great effects. It is necessary that thou have the Note of the 24 Angels alwayes in Memory; and faithfully keep those things, which the Angel reveales to thee in the vision.

These Orations may be said before all Arts generally, and before all Notes specially; And they may be pronounced without any other Chapters, if thou wouldst operate in any of the aforesaid Arts, saying these Orations in due time and order; thou maist have great efficacy in any Art. And in saying these Orations, neither the time, day, nor , are to be observed: but take heed, that on these dayes you abstain from all sin, as drunkenness, gluttony, especially swearing, before you proceed thereunto, that your knowledge therein may be the more cleer and perfect.

Wherefore Solomon saith, When I was to pronounce these Orations, I feared lest I should offend God; and I appointed unto my self a time wherein to begin them; that living chastly, I might appear the more innocent.

These are the Proaemiums of these Orations, that I might lay down in order every thing whereof thou maist doubt, without any other definition. And before thou begin to try any of these subtile works, it is good to fast two or three dayes; that it may be divinely revealed, whether thy desires be good or evil.

These are the precepts appointed before every operation; but if thou doubt of any beginning, either of the three first Chapters, or of the four subsequent Arts, that thou maist have the effect of perfect knowledge; if thou consider and pronounce the Orations, as they are above described, although thou overpass something ignorantly; thou maist be reconciled by the spiritual virtue of the subsequent Orations.

The Angel said of these Orations to Solomon: See the holiness of these Orations; and if thou hast transgressed any therein presumptuously or ignorantly, say reverently and wisely these Orations, of which the great Angel saith: This is a great sacrament of God, which the Lord sendeth to thee by my hand; at the veneration of which sacrament, when King Solomon offered with great patience before the Lord upon the Altar, he saw the book covered with fine linen, and in this book were written 10 Orations, and upon every Oration the sign of golden Seal: and he heard in his Spirit, These are they which the Lord hath figured, and are far excluded from the hearts of the unfaithful.

Therefore Solomon trembled lest he should offend the Lord, and kept them, saying it was wickedness to reveal them to unbelievers: but he that would learn any great or spiritual thing in any Art or necessary Science, if he cannot have a higher work, he may say these Orations at what time soever he will; the three first, for the three first liberal Arts; a several Oration for every several Art, or generally all the three for the three Arts are to be said; and in like manner the four subsequent Orations, for four other liberal Arts. And if thou wouldst have the whole body of Art, without any definition of time, thou maist pronounce these Orations before the several Arts, and before the Orations and Notes of these Arts, as often as thou wilt, fully, manifestly and secretly; but beware that thou live chastly and soberly in the pronounciation thereof.

This is the first Oration of the 10, which may be pronounced by its self, without any precedent work to acquire Memory, Eloquence and understanding, and stableness of these three and singularly to be rehearsed before the first figure of Theology: Omnipotent, Incomprehensible, invisible and indissolvable Lord God; I adore this day thy Holy Name; I an unworthy and miserable sinner, do lift up my Prayer, understanding and reason towards thy Holy and Heavenly Temple, declaring thee, Oh Lord God, to be my Creator and Saviour: and I a rational Creature do this day invoke thy most glorious clemency, that thy Holy Spirit may vivify my infirmity: And thou, Oh my God, who didst confer the Elements of letters, and efficacious Doctrine of thy Tongue to thy Servants Moses and Aaron, confer the same grace of thy sweetness upon me, which thou hast investigated into thy Servants and Prophets: as thou hast given them learning in a moment, confer the same learning upon me, and cleanse my Conscience from dead works; direct my Heart into the right way, and open the same to understand, and drop the truth into my understanding. And thou, Oh Lord God, who didst condescend to create me after thy own image, hear me in thy Justice, and teach me in thy truth, and fill up my soul with thy knowledge according to thy great mercy, that in the multitude of thy mercies, thou maist love me the more, and the greater in thy works, and that I may delight in the administration of thy Commandments; that I being helped and restored by the work of thy grace, and purified in Heart and Conscience to trust in thee, I may feast in thy sight, and exalt thy name, for it is good, before thy Saints, Sanctifie me this day, that I may live in faith, perfect in hope, and constant in charity, and may learn and obtain the knowledge I desire; and being illuminated, strengthened, and exalted by the Science obtained, I may know thee, and love thee, and love the knowledge and wisdom of thy Scriptures; and that I may understand and firmly retain, that which thou hast permitted man to know: Oh Lord Jesus Christ, eternal only begotten Son of God, into whose hands the Father gave all things before all Worlds, give unto me this day, for thy Holy and glorious Name, the unspeakable nutriment of Soul and Body, a fit, fluent, free and perfect Tongue; and that whatsoever I shall ask in thy mercy, will and truth, I may obtain; and confirm all my Prayers and actions, according to thy good pleasure. Oh Lord my God, the Father of Life, open the Fountain of Sciences, which I desire; open to me, Oh Lord, the Fountain which thou openedst to Adam, and to thy Servants Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, to understand, learn and judge; receive Oh Lord my Prayers, through all thy Heavenly virtues, Amen.

The next Oration is the second of ten, and giveth Eloquence, which ought to be said after the other; a little interval between, and before the first Figure of Theology.

I adore thee, thou King of Kings, and Lords, eternal and unchangeable King: Hearken this day to the cry and sighing of my Heart and Spirit, that thou maist change my understanding, and give to me a heart of flesh, for my heart of stone, that I may breath before my Lord and Saviour; and wash Oh Lord with thy new Spirit the inward parts of my heart, and wash away the evil of my flesh: infuse into me a good understanding, that I may become a new man; reform me in thy love, and let thy salvation give me increase of knowledge: hear my Prayers, O Lord, wherewith I cry unto thee, and open the Eyes of my flesh, and understanding, to understand the wonderful things of thy Law; that being vivified by thy Justification, I may prevail against the Devil, the adversary of the faithful; hear me Oh Lord my God, and be merciful unto me, and shew me thy mercy; and reach to me the vessel of Salvation, that I may drink and be satisfied of the Fountain of thy grace, that I may obtain the knowledge and understanding; and let the grace of thy Holy Spirit come, and rest upon me, Amen.

For Eloquence and stability of mind.

This is the third Oration of the ten, and is to be said before the first Figure of Astronomy.

I confesse my self guilty this day before thee Oh God, Father of Heaven and Earth, Maker of all things, visible and invisible, of all Creatures, Dispenser and Giver of all grace and virtue; who hidest wisdom and knowledge from the proud and wicked, and givest it to the faithful and humble; illuminate my Heart, and establish my Conscience and understanding: set the light of thy countenance upon me, that I may love thee, and be established in the knowledge of my understanding, that I being cleansed from evil works, may attain to the knowledge of those Sciences, which thou hast reserved for believers. Oh merciful and omnipotent God, cleanse my Heart and reins, strengthen my Soul and Senses with the grace of thy Holy Spirit, and establish me with the fire of the same grace: illuminate me; gird up my loyns, and give the staffe of thy Consolation into my right hand, direct me in thy Doctrine, root out of me all vices and sin, and comfort me in the love of thy mercies: Breath into me Oh Lord the breath of Life, and increase my reason and understanding; send thy Holy Spirit into me, that I may be perfect in all knowledge: behold Oh Lord, and consider the dolour of my mind, that my will may be comforted in thee; send into me from Heaven thy Holy Spirit, that I may understand those things I desire. Give unto me invention, Oh Lord, thou Fountain of perfect reason and riches of knowledge, that I may obtain wisdom by thy Divine assistance, Amen.

To Comfort the outward and inward Senses.

Oh Holy God, merciful and omnipotent Father, Giver of all things; strengthen me by thy power, and help me by thy presence, as thou wert merciful to Adam, and suddenly gavest him the knowledge of all Arts through thy great mercy; grant unto me power to obtain the same knowledge by the same mercy: be present with me

Oh Lord, and instruct me: Oh most merciful Lord Jesus Christ Son of God, breath thy Holy Spirit into me, proceeding from thee and the Father; strengthen my work this day, and teach me, that I may walk in thy knowledge, and glorify the abundance of thy grace: Let the flames of thy Holy Spirit rejoyce the City of my Heart, by breathing into me thy Divine Scriptures; replenish my Heart with all Eloquence, and vivify me with thy Holy visitation; blot out of me the spots of all vices, I beseech thee, Oh Lord God incomprehensible; let thy grace alwayes rest upon me, and be increased in me; heal my Soul by thy inestimable goodness, and comfort my heart all my life, that what I hear I may understand, and what I understand I may keep, and retain in my Memory; give me a teachable Heart and Tongue; through thy inexhaustible grace and goodness; and the grace of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Amen.

This following is for the Memory.

O Holy Father, merciful Son, and Holy Ghost, inestimable King; I adore, invoke, and beseech thy Holy Name, that of thy overflowing goodness, thou wilt forget all my sins: be merciful to me a sinner, presuming to go about this office of knowledge, and occult learning; and grant, Oh Lord, it may be efficacious in me; open Oh Lord my ears , that I may hear; and take away the scales from my Eyes, that I may see: strengthen my hands, that I may work; open my face, that I may understand thy will; to the glory of thy Name, which is blessed for ever, Amen.

This following strengtheneth the interiour and exterior Sences.

Lift up the senses of my Heart and Soul unto thee, Oh Lord my God, and elevate my heart this day unto thee; that my words and works may please thee in the sight of all people; let thy mercy and omnipotency shine in my bowels; let my understanding be enlarged, and let thy Holy Eloquence be sweet in my mouth, that what I read or hear I may understand and repeat: as Adam understood, and as Abraham kept, so let me keep understanding; and as Jacob was founded and rooted in thy wisdom , so let me be: let the foundation of thy mercy be confirmed in me, that I may delight in the works of thy hands, and persevere in Justice, and peace of Soul and Body; the grace of thy Holy Spirit working in me, that I may rejoyce in the overthrow of all my adversaries, Amen.

This following giveth Eloquence, Memory and Stability.

Disposer of all Kingdomes , and of all visible and invisible gifts: Oh God, the Ordeyner and Ruler of all wills, by the Counsel of thy Spirit dispose and vivify the weakness of my understanding, that I may burn in the accesse of thy Holy will to good: do good to me in thy good pleasure, not looking upon my sins; grant me my desire, though unworthy; confirm my Memory and reason to know, understand, and retain, and give good effect to my senses through thy grace, and justify me with the justification of thy Holy Spirit, that what spots soever of sin are contracted in my flesh, thy Divine power may blot out; thou who hast been pleased in the beginning, to create the Heaven and Earth, of thy Mercy restore the same, who art pleased to restore lost man to thy most Holy Kingdome ; Oh Lord of wisdom , restore Eloquence into all my senses , that I, though an unworthy sinner, may be confirmed in thy knowledge, and in all thy works, by the grace of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who livest and reignest three in one, Amen.

An Oration to recover lost wisdom.

Oh God of living , Lord of all Creatures visible and invisible, Administrator and Dispenser of all things, enlighten my Heart this day by the grace of thy Holy Spirit, strengthen my inward man, and pour into me the dew of thy grace, whereby thou instructest the Angels; inform me with the plenty of thy knowledge, wherewith from the beginning thou hast taught thy faithful; let thy grace work in me, and the floods of thy grace and Spirit, cleanse and correct the filth of my Conscience. Thou who comest from Heaven upon the Waters of thy Majesty, confirm this wonderful Sacrament in me.

To obtain the grace of the Holy Spirit.

Oh Lord my God, Father of all things, who revealest thy celestial and terrestrial secrets to thy Servants, I humbly beseech and implore thy Majesty, as thou art the King and Prince of all knowledge, hear my Prayers; and direct my works, and let my Actions prevail in Heavenly virtues, by thy Holy Spirit: I cry unto thee, Oh God, hear my Clamor, I sigh to thee, hear the sighings of my heart, and alwayes preserve my Spirit, Soul, and Body, under the Safeguard of thy Holy Spirit; O God thou Holy Spirit, perpetual and Heavenly charity, whereof the Heaven and Earth is full, breath upon my operation; and what I require to thy honour and praise, grant unto me; let thy Holy Spirit come upon me, rule and reign in me, Amen.

To recover intellectual wisdom.

Oh Lord, I thy Servant confesse my self unto thee, before the Majesty of thy glory, in whose Spirit is all Magnificence and Sanctimony: I beseech thee according to thy unspeakeable Name, extend thy merciful Ears and Eyes to the office of my operation; and opening thy hand, I may be filled with the grace I desire, and satiated with charity and goodness; whereby thou hast founded Heaven and Earth, who livest, &c.

Say these Orations from the first day of the month, to the fourth day: in the fourth day Alpha and Omega, and that following it, viz. Helischemat azatan; As it is in the beginning: afterwards say,

For the memory.

Oh great invisible God, Theos patyr behominas Cadagamias imas by thy Holy Angels, who are Michael the Medicine of God; Raphael the Fortitude of God, Gabriel ardens holy per Amassan, Cherubin, Gelommeios, Sezaphim gedabanan, tochrosi gade anathon, zatruman zamanary gebrienam: Oh fulness, Holy Cherubins, by all thy Angels, and by all thy glorious Arch-angels, whose Names are consecrated by God, which ought not to be spoken by us, which are these, dichal, dehel depymon exluse exmegon pharconas Nanagon hossyelozogon gathena ramon garbona vramani Mogon hamas; Which humane sence cannot apprehend: I beseech thee, Oh Lord illuminate my Conscience with the Splendor of thy light, and illustrate and confirm my understanding with the sweet odor of thy Spirit; adorne my Soul, reform my heart, that hearing I may understand, and retain what I hear in my Memory. Oh merciful God, appease my bowels, strengthen my Memory, open my mouth mercifully; temperate my Tongue by thy glorious and unspeakable Name: thou who art the Fountain of all goodness, have patience with me, and give a good Memory unto me, &c.

Say these Orations in the fourth , viz. Hely schemath, Alpha and Omega, Theos megale. Oh light of the World Azalemach, great God I beseech thee: These ought to be said in the 8, 12, 10, 20, 24, 28, 30. and in all these Lunations rehearse them four times; in the morning once, the third hour once, the ninth once, and once in the evening; and in the other dayes rehearse none, but them of the first day, which are Alpha and Omega, Helyschemat, Almighty, incomprehensible, I adore thee; I confesse my self guilty: O Theos hazamagiel: Oh merciful Lord God, raise up the senses of my flesh: Oh God of all living, and of all Kingdomes, I confesse Oh Lord this day, that I am thy servant. Rehearse these Orations also in the other dayes four times, once in the morning, once in the evening, once about the third hour, and once on the ninth; And thou shalt acquire Memory, Eloquence and stability fully, Amen.

The Conclusion of the whole work, and Confirmation of the Science obtained.

Oh God, Maker of all things; who hast created all things out of nothing; who hast wonderfully created the Heaven and Earth, and all things by degrees in order, in the beginning, with thy Son, by whom all things are made, and into whom all things shall at last return: Who art Alpha and Omega: I beseech thee though a sinner, & unworthy, that I may attain to my desired end in this Holy Art, speedily, and not lose the same by my sins; but do good unto me, according to thy unspeakable mercy: who doth not to us after our sins, nor rewardeth us after our iniquities, Amen. Say this in the end devoutly: Oh wisdom of God the Father incomprehensible, Oh most merciful Son, give unto me of thy ineffable mercy, great knowledge and wisdom, as thou didst wonderfully bestow all Science to King Solomon, not looking upon his sins or wickedness, but thy own mercies: wherefore I implore thy mercy, although I am a most vile and unworthy sinner, give such an end to my desires in this art, whereby the hands of thy bounty may be enlarged towards me, and that I may the more devoutly walk by thy light in thy wayes, and be a good example to others; by which all that see mee, and hear me, may restrain themselves from their vices, and praise thy holyness through all Worlds, Amen. Blessed be the Name of the Lord, &c. rehearse these two Orations alwayes in the end, to confirm thy knowledge gained.

The Benediction of the place.

Blesse Oh Lord this place, that there may be in it Holy Sanctity, chastity, meekness, victory, holiness, humility, goodness, plenty, obedience of the Law, to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; Hear Oh Lord, holy Father, Almighty eternal God; and send thy Holy Angel Michael, who may protect, keep, preserve and visit me, dwelling in this Tabernacle, by him who liveth, &c.

When you would operate, have respect to the Lunations: they are to be chosen in those moneths, when the Rules in II and ⲓⲁⲓⲛⲓⲛⲓⲛⲓ, in these moneths you may begin.

In the Name of the Lord beginneth this most Holy Art, which the most high God Administered to Solomon by his Angel upon the Altar, that thereby suddenly in a short space of time, he was established in the knowledge of all Sciences; and know, that in these Orations are contained all Sciences, Lawful and unlawful; First, if you pronounce the Orations of Memory, Eloquence, and understanding, and the stability thereof; they will be mightily increased, insomuch that you will hardly keep silence; for by a word all things were Created, and by the virtue of that word all created beings stand, and every Sacrament, and that Word is God. Therefore let the Operator be constant in his faith, and confidently believe, that he shall obtain such knowledge and wisdom, in the pronouncing these Orations, for with God nothing is impossible: therefore let the Operator proceed in his work, with faith, hope, and a constant desire: firmly believing; because we can obtain nothing but by faith; Therefore have no doubt in this Operation, whereof there are three species whereby the Art may be obtained.

The first species is Oration, and reason of a Godly mind, not by attempting a voyce of deprecation, but by reading and repeating the same in the inward parts. The second species is fasting and praying, for the praying man God heareth. The third species is chastity; he that would operate in this Art, let him be clean and chaste by the space of nine dayes at least; and before you begin, it is necessary that you know the time of the ☾. for in the prime of the ☾. it is proper to operate in this Art: and when you begin so sacred an Art, have a care to abstain from all mortal sins, at least while you are proceeding in this work until it be finished and compleated: and when you begin to operate, say this verse kneeling: Lift up the light of thy Countenance upon me, Oh Lord my God, and forsake not me thy servant N. that trusts in thee: Then say three times Pater Noster, &c. And assert that thou wilt never commit wilfull perjury, but alwayes persevere in faith and hope. This being done, with bended knees in the place wherein thou wilt operate, say, Our help is in the Name of the Lord, who hath made Heaven and earth: And I will enter into the Invocation of the most high, unto him who enlightneth and purifieth my Soul and Conscience, which dwelleth under the help of the most high, and continueth under the protection of the God of Heaven: O Lord open and unfold the doubts of my Heart, and change me into a new man by thy love: be thou Oh Lord unto me true faith, the hope of my life, and perfect charity, to declare thy wonders. Let us pray: Then say the Oration following:

Oh God my God, who from the beginning hast Created all things out of nothing, and reformest all things by thy Spirit; restore my Conscience, and heal my understanding, that I may glorify thee in all my thoughts, words and deeds; through him who liveth and reigneth with thee forever, Amen.

Now in the Name of Christ, on the first day of the Month, in which thou wouldst acquire Memory, Eloquence and Understanding, and stability thereof, with a perfect, good and contrite heart, and sorrow for thy sins committed; thou maist begin to pronounce these Orations following, which appertain to the obtaining of Memory and all Sciences, and which were composed and delivered by the Angel to Solomon, from the hand of God.

The first and last Oration of this art, is Alpha and Omega: Oh God omnipotent, &c.

This following is an Oration of four Languages, which is this: Hely, Schemat, Azatan, honiel sichut, tam, imel, Iatatandema, Jetromiam, Theos: Oh Holy and strong God, Hamacha, mal, Gottneman, Alazaman, Actuaar, Secheahal, Salmazan, zay, zojeracim, Lam hay, Masaraman, grensi zamach, heliamat, seman, selmar, yetrosaman muchaer, vesar, hasarian Azaniz, Azamet, Amathemach, hersomini. And thou most Holy and just God, incomprehensible in all thy works, which are Holy just and good; Magol, Achelmetor, samalsace, yana, Eman, and cogige, maimegas, zemmail, Azanietan, illebatha sacraman, reonas, grome, zebaman, zeyhoman, zeonoma, melas, heman, hathoterma, yatarmam, semen, semetary, Amen. This Oration ought to follow the first of the ten above written.

To perform any work.

This is to follow the third Oration above: I confesse, O Theos hazamagielsezuzan, sazaman, Sathamam, getormantas, salathiel, nesomel, megal vuieghama, yazamir, zeyhaman, hamamal amna, nisza, deleth, hazamaloth, moy pamazathoran hanasuelnea, sacromomem, gegonoman, zaramacham Cades bachet girtassoman, gyseton palaphatos halathel Osachynan machay, Amen.

This is a true and approved experiment, to understand all Arts and secrets of the World, to find out and dig up minerals and treasure; this was revealed by the Heavenly Angel in this Notory Art. For this Art doth also declare things to come, and rendereth the sense capable of all arts in a short time, by the Divine use thereof.

We are to speak also of the time and place. First therefore, all these precepts are to be observed and kept; and the Operator ought to be clean, chaste, to repent of his sins, and earnestly desire to cease from sinning as much as may be; and so let him proceed, and every work shall be investigated into him, by the divine ministry.

When thou wilt operate in the new Moon, kneeling say this verse: Lift up the light of thy Countenance upon us, Oh God, and forsake us not, Oh Lord our God. Then say three times the Pater Noster: And afterwards let him vow unto God, that he will never commit wilfull perjury, but alwayes persist in faith. This being done, at night say with bended knees before thy bed, Our help is in the Name of the Lord, &c. and this Psalm; Whoso dwelleth under the shadow of the wings of the most high, to the end; and the Lords Prayer, and the Prayer following.

Theos Pater vehemens; God of Angels, I Pray and invoke thee by thy most Holy Angels Eliphamasay, Gelomiros, Gedo bonay, Saranana, Elomnia, and by all thy Holy Names, by us not to be pronounced, which are these: de. el. x p n k h t li g y y. not to be spoken, or comprehended by humane sense; I beseech thee cleanse my Conscience with the Splendor of thy Name; illustrate and confirm my understanding with the sweet savour of thy Holy Spirit: O Lord Adorne my Soul, that I may understand and perfectly remember what I hear; reform my Heart, and restore my Heart, and restore my sense Oh Lord God, and heal my bowels: open my mouth most merciful God, and frame and temper my Tongue to the praise and glory of thy Name, by thy glorious and unspeakeable Name. O Lord, who art the Fountain of all goodness, and original of all piety, have patience with me, and give unto me a true understanding, to know whatsoever is fitting for me, and retain the same in Memory: thou who dost not presently Judge a sinner, but mercifully expectest repentance; I beseech thee, though unworthy, to wash away the filth of my sins and wickedness, and grant me my petitions, to the praise and glory of thy Holy Name; who livest and reignest one God in perfect Trinity, World without end, Amen.

Some other precepts to be observed in this work.

Fast the day following with bread and water, and give Almes; if it be the Lord's day, then give double Almes; be clean in body and mind; both thy self , and put on clean Cloaths.

The processe follows.

When thou wilt operate concerning any difficult Probleme or Question, with bended knees, before thy bed, make Confession unto God the Father; and having made thy Confession, say this Oration.

Send Oh Lord thy wisdome to assist me, that it may be with me, and labour with me, and that I may alwayes know what is acceptable before thee; and that unto me N. may be manifested the truth of this question or Art.

This being done, Thrice in the day following, when thou risest, give thanks to God Almighty, saying, Glory and honour, and benediction be unto him that sitteth on the Trone, and that liveth for ever and ever, Amen. with bended knees and stretched out hands.

But if thou desirest to understand any book, ask of some that hath knowledge therein, what that book treateth of: This being done, open the book, and read in it; and operate as at first three times, and alwayes when thou goest to sleep, write Alpha and Omega, and afterwards sleep on thy right side, putting the palme of thy hand under thy Ear, and thou shalt see in a dream all things thou desirest; and thou shalt hear the voyce of one informing and instructing thee in that book, or in any other faculty wherein thou wilt operate: And in the morning, open the book, and read therein; and thou shalt presently understand the same, as if thou hadst studied in it a long time: And alwayes remember to give thanks to God, as aforesaid.

Afterwards on the first day say this Oration: Oh Father, Maker of all Creatures; by thy unspeakeable power wherewith thou hast made all things, stir up the same power, and come and save me, and protect me from all adversity of Soul and Body, Amen. Of the Son say, O Christ, Son of the living God, who art the splendor and figure of light, with whom there is no alteration nor shaddow of change; Thou Word of God most high, thou wisdom of the Father; open unto me, thy unworthy servant N. the veins of thy saving Spirit, that I may wisely understand, retain in Memory, and declare all thy wonders: Oh wisdom, who proceedest out of the mouth of the most high, powerfully reaching from end to end, sweetly disposing of all things in the World, come and teach me the way of prudence and wisdom. Oh Lord which didst give thy Holy Spirit to thy Disciples, to teach and illuminate their Hearts, grant unto me thy unworthy servant N. the same Spirit, and that I may alwayes rejoyce in his consolation.

Other precepts.

Having finished these Orations, and given Almes, when thou entrest into thy Chamber, devoutly kneel down before thy bed, saying this Psalm: Have mercy upon me, O God, according to the multitude of thy great mercies, &c. and, In thee Oh Lord have I trusted, &c. Then rise up, and go to the wall, and stretch forth thy hands, having two nayles fixed, upon which thou maist stay up thy hands, and say this Prayer following with great devotion: O God, who for us miserable sinners didst undergo the painful death upon the Crosse; to whom also Abraham offer'd up his son Isaac; I thy unworthy servant, a sinner perplexed with many evils, do this day offer up and Sacrifice unto thee my Soul and Body, that thou maist infuse into me thy Divine wisdom, and inspire me with the Spirit of Prophecy, wherewith thou didst inspire the Holy Prophets.

Afterwards say this Psalm; Oh Lord incline thine ears unto my words, &c.
and add,

The Lord is my shepherd, and nothing shall I want: he shall set me down in green pastures, his servant N. he shall lead me upon the waters of refreshment, he converteth my Soul, and leadeth me N. upon the paths of his righteousness for his Holy Name: Let my evening Prayer ascend upunto thee Oh Lord, and let thy mercy descend upon me thy unworthy servant N. protect, save, blesse, and sanctify me, that I may have a shield against all the wicked darts of my enemies: defend me Oh Lord by the price of the blood of the just One, wherewith thou hast redeemed me; who livest and reignest God, whose wisdom hath laid the foundation of the Heaven, and formed the Earth, and placed the Sea in her bounds: and by the going forth of thy Word hast made all Creatures, and hath formed man out of the dust of the Earth, according to his own image and likeness; who gave to Solomon the son of King David inestimable wisdom: hath given to his Prophets the Spirit of Prophecy, and infused into Philosophers wonderfull Philosophical knowledge, confirmed the Apostles with fortitude, comforted and strengthened the Martyrs, who exalteth his elect from eternity, and provideth for them; Multiply Oh Lord God, thy mercy upon me thy unworthy servant N. by giving me a teachable wit, and an understanding adorned with viture and knowledge, a firm and sound Memory, that I may accomplish and retain whatsoever I endeavour, through the greatness of thy wonderful Name; lift up, Oh Lord my God, the light of thy countenance upon me, that hope in thee: Come and teach me, Oh Lord God of virtues, and shew me thy face, and I shall be safe. Then add this Psalm: Unto thee Oh Lord do I lift up my Soul: Oh my God in thee do I trust; excepting that verse, Confundantur, &c.

Having fulfilled these things upon the wall, descend unto thy Bed, writing in thy right hand Alpha and Omega: then go to bed, and sleep on thy right side, holding thy hand under thy right Ear, and thou shalt see the greatness of God as thou hast desired. And in the morning, on thy knees, before thy bed, give thanks unto God for those things he hath revealed to thee: I give thanks unto thee, Oh great and wonderful God, who hast given Salvation and knowledge of Arts unto me thy unworthy servant N. and confirm this Oh God, which thou hast wrought in me, in preserving me. I give thanks unto thee, O powerful Lord God, who createdst me miserable sinner out of nothing, when I was not, and when I was utterly lost; not redeemed, but by the precious blood of thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ; and when I was ignorant thou hast given unto me learning and knowledge: grant unto me thy servant N. O Lord Jesus Christ, that through this knowledge, I may be always constant in thy Holy service, Amen.

These operations being devoutly compleated, give thanks daily with these last Orations. But when thou wouldst read, study, or dispute, say, Remember thy word unto thy Servant, O Lord, in which thou hast given me hope; this is my comforter in humility. Then add these Orations: Remember me O Lord of Lords, put good words and speech into my mouth, that I may be heard efficaciously and and powerfully, to the praise, glory, and honour of thy glorious Name, which is Alpha and Omega, blessed for ever, World without end, Amen.

Then silently say these Orations.

O Lord God, that daily workest new signs and unchangeable wonders, fill me with the spirit of wisdom, understanding and Eloquence; make my mouth as a sharp Sword, and my Tongue as an arrow elected, & confirm the words of my mouth to all wisdom: mollify the Hearts of the hearers to understand what they desire, Elysenach, Tzacham, &c.

The manner of Consecrating the Figure of Memory.

It ought to be consecrated with great faith, hope and charity; and being consecrated, to be kept and used in operation as followeth.

On the first day of the new Moon, having beheld the new Moon, put the Figure under your right Ear, and so consequently every other night, and seven times a day; the first hour of the morning saying this Psalm, Qui habitat, &c. throughout; and the Lords Prayer once, and this Oration Theos Patyr once in the first hour of the day: then say this Psalm, Confitebor tibi Domine, &c. and the Lords Prayer twice, and the Oration Theos Patyr twice.

In the third hour of the day the Psalm Benedicat anima mea Dominum, &c. the Lords Prayer thrice, and the Oration Theos Patyr.

In the sixth hour say this Psalm: Appropinquet deprecato mea in conspectu tuo Domine, secundum eloquium tuum.

Grant unto me Memory, and hear my voyce according to thy great mercy, and according unto thy word grant Eloquence, and my lips shall shew forth thy majesty, when thou shalt teach me thy Glory: Gloria patria, &c, say the Lords Prayer nine times, and Theos Patyr.

In the ninth hour, say the Psalm Beati immaculati in via; the Lords Prayer 12 times, and Theos Patyr.

In the Evening say this Psalm, Deus misereatur nostri: the Lords Prayer 15 times, and Theos Patyr as often.

The last hour say this Psalm, Deus Deus meus respice in me, &c. & Deus in adjutorium meum intende, and te Deum Laudamus; the Lords Prayer once, and Theos Patyr: then say the Oration following twice.

O God, who hast divided all things in number, weight, and measure, in hours, nights, and dayes; who countest the number of the Stars, give unto me constancy and virtue, that in the true knowledge of this Art N. I may love thee, who knows the gifts of thy goodness, who livest and reignest, &c.

Four dayes the Figure of Memory ought to be consecrated with these Orations.

O Father of all Creatures, of the Sun and Moon.

Then on the last day let him bath himself, and put on clean garments, and clean * Ornaments, and in a clean place, suffumigate himself with Frankincense, and come in a convenient hour in the night with a light Kindled, but so that no man may see thee; and before the bed upon your knees say this Oration with great devotion.

* Lectisternium, a Robe in which the Priests used to sleep in the Temples, to receive the Divine Oracles.

O most great and most Holy Father, seven or nine times: then put the Figure with great reverence about your Head; and sleep in the Bed with clean linnen vestiments, and doubt not but you shall obtain whatsoever you desire for this hath been proved by many, to whom such coelestial secrets of the Heavenly Kingdome are granted, Amen.

The Oration following ought to be said as you stand up.

O great God, Holy Father, most Holy Sanctifier of all Saints, three and one, most high King of Kings, most powerful God Almighty, most glorious and most wise Dispensor, Moderator, and Governour of all Creatures, visible and invisible: O mighty God, whose terrible and most mighty Majesty is to be feared, whose omnipotency the Heaven, the Earth, the Sea, Hell, and all things that are therein, do admire, reverence, tremble at, and obey.

O most powerful , most mighty, and most invincible Lord God of Sabaoth: O God incomprehensible; the wonderful Maker of all things, the Teacher of all learning, Arts and Sciences; who mercifully Instructest the humble and meek: O God of all wisdom and knowledge, In whom are all Treasures of wisdom, Arts and Sciences; who art able instantly to infuse Wisdom, Knowledge, and Learning into any man; whose Eye beholdeth all things past, present, and to come; who art the daily Searcher of all hearts; through whom we are, we live and dye; who sittest upon the Cherubins; who alone seest and rulest the bottomless pit: whose Word gives Law throughout the universal World: I confesse my self this day before thy Holy and glorious Majesty, and before the company of all Heavenly virtues and Potentates, praying thy glorious Majesty, invoking thy great Name, which is a Name wonderful, and above every Name, blessing thee O Lord my God: I also beseech thee, most high, most omnipotent Lord, who alone art to be adored; O thou great and dreadful God Adonay, wonderful Dispensator of all beatitudes, of all Dignities, and of all goodness; Giver of all things, to whomsoever thou wilt, mercifully, abundantly and permanently: send down upon me this day the gift of the grace of thy Holy Spirit. And now O most merciful God, who hast created Adam the first man, according to thy image and likeness; fortify the Temple of my body, and let thy Holy Spirit descend and dwell in my Heart, that I may shine forth the wonderful beams of thy Glory: as thou hast been pleased wonderfully to operate in thy faithful Saints; So O God, most wonderful King, and eternal glory, send forth from the seat of thy glorious Majesty, a seven-fold blessing of thy grace, the Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, the Spirit of fortitude and Counsel , the Spirit of knowledge and Godliness, the Spirit of fear and love of thee, to understand thy wonderful Holy and occult mysteries, which thou art pleased to reveal, and which are fitting for thine to know, that I may comprehend the depth, goodness, and inestimable sweetness of thy most immense Mercy, Piety and Divinity. And now O most merciful Lord, who didst breath into the first Man the breath of life, be pleased this day to infuse into my Heart a true perfect perceiving, powerful and right understanding in all things; a quick, lasting, and indeficient Memory, and efficacious Eloquence; the sweet, quick and piercing Grace of thy Holy Spirit, and of the multitude of thy blessings, which thou bountifully bestowest: grant that I may despise all other things, and glorify, praise, adore, bless and magnify thee the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; and alwayes set forth thy praise, mercy, and omnipotency: that thy praise may alwayes be in my mouth, and my Soul may be inflamed with thy Glory for ever before thee. O thou who art God omnipotents, King of all things, the greatest peace and perfectest wisdom, ineffable and inestimable sweetness and delight, the unexpressible joy of all good, the desire of all the blessed, their life, comfort, and glorious end; who was from eternity, and is and ever shall be virtue invincible, without parts or passions; Splendor and glory unquenchable; benediction, honour, praise, and venerable glory before all Worlds, since and everlastingly time without end, Amen.

The following Oration hath power to expell all lusts.

O Lord, Holy Father, omnipotent eternal God, of inestimable mercy and immense goodness; O most merciful Jesus Christ, repairer and restorer of mankind; O Holy Ghost, comforter and love of the faithful: who holdest all the Earth in thy fingers, and weighest all the Mountains and Hills in the World; who dost wonders past searching out, whose power there is nothing can resist, whose wayes are past finding out: defend my Soul, and deliver my Heart from the wicked cogitations of this World; extinguish and repress in me by thy power all the sparks of lust and fornication, that I may more intently love thy works, and that the virtue of thy Holy Spirit may be increased in me, among the saving gifts of thy faithful, to the comfort and salvation of my Heart, Soul, and Body. O most great and most Holy God, Maker, Redeemer, and Restorer of mankind, I am thy servant, the Son of thy hand-maid, and the work of thy hands: O most merciful God and Redeemer, I cry and sigh before the sight of thy great Majesty, beseeching thee, with my whole Heart, to restore me a miserable sinner, and receive me to thy great mercy; give me Eloquence, Learning, and Knowledge, that those that shall hear my words, they may be mellifluous in their Hearts; that seeing and hearing thy wisdom, the proud may be made humble, and hear and understand my words with great humility, and consider the greatness and goodness of thy blessings, who livest and reignest now and for ever, Amen.

Note, that if you desire to know any thing that you are ignorant of, especially of any Science, read this Oration: I confess my self to thee this day, O God the Father of Heaven and Earth, three times; and in the end express for what you desire to be heard; afterwards, in the Evening when you go to Bed, say the Oration Theos throughout, and the Psalm Qui Habitat, with this versicle, Emitte Spiritum; and go to sleep, and take the Figure for this purpose, and put it under the right Ear: and about the second or third hour of the night, thou shalt see thy desires, and know without doubt that which thou desirest to find out: and write in thy right hand Alpha and Omega, with the sign of the Cross, and put that hand under thy right Ear, and fast the day before; only once eating such meat as is used on fasting dayes.

Picatrix (The Aim of the Sage)

al-Majriti, Maslamati ibn Ahmad

The Ghâyat al-Hakîm fi'l-sihr, or Picatrix, as it is known in the West, is an important Arabic magical text. It is perhaps the largest and most comprehensive of the grimoires, or handbooks of magic. The attribution to the Andalusian mathematician al-Majriti (or al-Madjriti) (d. ca. 1004-7) is considered pseudo-epigraphic. The Latin translation dates to 1256 and the court of Alphonso the Wise, king of Castille, and exerted a considerable influence on Western magic thereafter. It is said that much of Ficino's astrological magic derives from the Picatrix (see I.P.Couliano, Eros and Magic in the Renaissance, University of Chicago Press, 1987, p. 118). The Picatrix is mentioned by Johannes Trithemius in Book 2 of his notorious Steganographia (1500) and in his Antipalus Maleficiorum (c. 1500). One copy (British Library, Sloane manuscript 3679) passed down from Simon Forman (d. 1611) to Richard Napier (d. 1634) to Elias Ashmole (d. 1692) to William Lilly (d. 1681).

E.M. Butler wrongly associates it with Gio. Peccatrix, (no doubt a pseudonym) who edited an Italian version of the Key of Solomon (British Library, Sloane manuscript 1307). Misled by some comments by Mathers and others, Dr. Butler incorrectly concluded that the Picatrix was "an Italian edition of the Clavicle, strongly impregnated with black elements" (Ritual Magic, 1949, p. 135.)

SUMMARY

The following pages are intended as a guide to and an epitome of this often disorderly book. A glance at the table of contents is enough to show that the sequence of chapters is erratic and closer inspection reveals that the scope of individual chapters is far wider than appears at first sight. Philosophic doctrines (which, according to the author, are the basis of the talismanic art), theory of magic, astronomical, astrological and physical lore, extensive directions for the practice of the art, and accounts of the peoples by whom it is employed are jumbled together throughout the book, with no discernible guiding principle. If a systematic arrangement is anywhere perceptible, it is in the astrological and astronomical material, though even this is far from self-contained or methodically ordered. Subjects which belong together are separated (e.g., the geographical sections on pp.171 ff. and 394 ff.), long, discursive definitions, appearing in unexpected places, further break the sequence (e.g., pp.78 and 343)-. and there is a great deal more to make the reader's task more difficult.

This manner of writing may well be intentional, whether to make the magical sections appear less suspect by interlarding them with theoretical passages, or to make certain doctrines seem less strange by administering them in small doses, or to demonstrate the equal validity of the magical and philosophical material, or for a combination of all three reasons. At all events, a similar method of presentation is apparent in one of the principal sources of The Aim of the Sage, the encyclopedia of the Brethren of Purity (Ihwân al-Safâ).

What follows is a survey of the whole, with a sketch of the sources, as far as they can at present be identified. No attempt has been made to impose a logical order on the illogicality of the book.

BOOK I

In the preface, after some autobiographical material, the author gives his reason for writing the work, which is to shed light on the nature of magic, a secret closely guarded by the ancient philosophers. He adds a summary of the contents of his four books (pp.1-3). This is replaced, in some manuscripts, by a detailed list of contents, arranged by chapter, of which a translation will be found on pp. lxxvi-lxxviii of the present volume.

Chapter 1 (pp.4-7) demonstrates the importance of philosophy, on the one hand for the understanding of matters divine, natural and moral, and on the other as the premise for magic, which is its conclusio. In the first section there are verbal echoes of al-Fârâbî's Classification of the Sciences (Ihsâ al-'Ulûm) and the Neo-Platonic doctrines of the pseudo-Empedocles. The chapter ends with an excursus on the definition of some logical concepts, suggested by the word conclusio.

Chapter 2 gives a definition of magic according to the Ihwân al-Safâ', and of talismans according to Jabir ibn Hajjân. The talisman is compared to the elixir of the alchemists (pp.7-9). Magic is to be divided into two parts, theoretical and practical, the first being confined to the knowledge of the heavens (with the parenthesis that speech is a kind of magic) and the second consisting in making use of the natural kingdoms, animal, vegetable and mineral (pp.9-10). This principle of discrimination holds good, by and large, for the arrangement of the whole work. The chapter concludes with certain astronomical and astrological matters.

Chapter 3 deals with the reasons for the heavens' being spherical in form, with the degrees and the images ascending in them, and compares the power of the degrees with that of the planets (pp.12-14). Some passages are related to the Kitâb al-Baht of Jâbir, which is laid under such heavy contribution later in The Aim of the Sage.

Chapter 4. Since the successful use of talismans depends upon their being used in conjunction with the correct constellations, this chapter is devoted to the latter. The author gives a descriptive list of the twenty-eight mansions of the moon, according to the "Indian" system, and assigns to each its correct talisman. Analysis of the passage shows that it is a compound of "Indian" doctrines, the tenets of Dorotheus of Sidon (both attested by Ibn abi 'l-Rijâl) and elements from a list ascribed to Hermes (attested by the Ihwân al-Safâ') (pp.14-21). At the beginning of the chapter, the author advised the magician of the necessity to prepare himself inwardly for his task: this is now, in an excursus, brought into harmony with the disposition inherent in various natural substances to absorb magical influences, and this again is followed by suggestions as to the positions of the moon favorable for certain enterprises (pp.22-24). The author opens the final section with his usual formula to the effect that he is returning to the true subject of his book.

Chapter 5 enlarges the discussion of the lunar mansions, by giving thirty-one examples of constellations of a different kind, favorable to the manufacture of talismans. Some of the talismans are described, but no indication is given of how to make them effective, a subject which later occupies a large part of the book (pp.24-34). Inserted in the middle of the discussion is an account of the different effects of the various aspects (p.29). There follow remarks on the dependence of the talismans on the heavenly bodies and the importance of the magician's concentration of his energy towards his purpose, again with verbal echoes from the Ihwân al-Safâ'. Along with these go aphorisms from "Plato" and Tâbit ibn Qurra, as well as two extracts from a treatise ascribed to Aristotle, which is later quoted entire in Book IV, chapter 4. (pp.34-36). Examples are given of the "incantation" of talismans to make them effective. These formulae are also to be found in the Ihwân al-Safâ', where they are attributed to Hermes. This completes the practical instruction given in Book I. Then comes a postscript and the chapter concludes with an evaluation of magic and alchemy (pp.38-39).

The two final chapters of Book I are entirely devoted to philosophy. Chapter 6 deals with the nature of man. Starting from the premise that man is a microcosm, the author opens with an enumeration of the characteristics which make man superior to all other creatures (pp 40-41). He then gives the familiar correspondences between the parts of the human body and those of the macrocosm. Though at first there are only reminiscences of the Ihwân al-Safâ', we soon find whole pages together which are identical with that work, and, in part, with the work edited by Goldziher as The Book of the Essence of the Soul (Kitâb ma`ânî al-nafs) (pp.42-46). The human being as he is actually found on earth is shown to depend from his idea, the universal man, and this dependence is illustrated by a succession of hypostases (pp.47-50). Numerous single echoes of Neo-Platonic and pseudo-Empedoclean propositions may be identified here, but the passage as a whole has not so far been satisfactorily clarified. The author expressly states that this sixth chapter is not a digression, but deals rather with the essence of magic, by which he clearly means that the chain of hypostases proves a connection between the upper and the lower world, the prime tenet in the art of magic. A mention of the obscurity with which the ancients clothed this scheme is made the occasion for a consideration of both the superficial and the essential nature of knowledge and of the mode of study (pp. 50-51).

Chapter 7 takes up again for its theme the great chain of being, the author's ideas on which cannot yet be given their correct place in the history of Neo-Platonic thought. He then reverts in greater detail to the concept of Hyle, and its place in the chain, the discussion of such theoretical topics being justified by the fact that they "correct the understanding and sharpen the apprehension" (pp. 51-54).

BOOK II

Chapter 1. The correspondences between earthly creatures and their celestial archetypes, which were mentioned at the end of Book I, form the opening topic of this chapter. This is the subject of the ninth aphorism of the pseudo-Ptolemaic Centiloquium. Next comes the story of a magical cure, taken from the Commentary of Ibn al-Dâja on this aphorism, which recounts how, in his youth, the author came to occupy himself with magic while testing Ibn al-Dâja's prescription for the cure (pp.55-57). Then follows an excursus on sensory perception, including a quotation from the Ihwân al-Safâ', and other modes of cognition (pp.57-58). The chapter ends with an account of the contributions made by individual branches of knowledge to the, understanding of the correspondences between the two worlds (pp.58-59).

Chapter 2 treats the subject of the celestial images and their significance, i.e., the forty-eight constellations known to the Greeks and the paranatellonta of the thirty-six decans. The three decans of Aries in the "Indian" system are selected from Abû Ma'shar by way of example and a full explanation of their paranatellonta given (pp. 59-62). Ibn Wahshîja follows the same method of interpretation: he uses the triplicities, while the "Indian sage" Tumtum and others use the degrees (p.62). Examples of the images ascending in the degrees are given and their significance explained, with reference to a book by Jâbir which has not survived (pp.62-68). Finally, the author computes the possible number of planetary conjunctions in a single degree, on the basis of a work by "Herrnes", extending, as he does so, a section of Jâbir's Kitâb al-Baht (pp. 63-65).

Chapter 3 is very long and is mainly concerned with the effects of the moon, beginning with the significance of its phases. The ultimate dependence of the moon's operation on that of the sun is emphasized (pp. 65-67). This is followed by a demonstration of the analogy between the phases of the moon, the ages of man and the seasons of the year etc. Then there is a short interpolation maintaining that composite bodies are subject to perpetual change from the motions of the stars, without changing their specific shapes. After this comes the nature of eclipses (pp. 67-69). Almost all the foregoing is derived from the Nabataean Agriculture of Ibn Wahshîja. The author now reverts to the moon and follows, for many pages, the theory of the Ihwân al-Safâ', which differs from that of Ibn Wahshîja in that it links the periods of the moon's greatest influence to its conjunction with other planets and the houses in which they stand (pp.69-74). The rest of the chapter is devoted to the theory of the elections, in which the moon plays an important part, and is introduced by a discussion of the impedimenta lunae, the unfavorable positions of the moon, which go back to Dorotheus of Sidon. A section is devoted to the art of converting the ascendant into a fortunate one. The whole passage is almost completely pervaded by correspondences and parallels with Ibn Abi 'l-Rijâl, and in certain parts with Sahl b. Bishr (pp.74-81). An interpolated note gives a mathematical definition of the aspects (p.78). The chapter concludes by contrasting Aristotle's exhortation to Alexander to practice astrology and the Islamic prohibition of the art.

Chapter 4, a short one, discusses the doctrine of the trepidation of the sphere of the fixed stars, which must be taken into account in the drawing-up of astronomical tables. This is taken verbatim from Theo Alexandrinus, with the addition of a postscript, which is apparently the work of the compiler (pp. 81-83).

Chapter 5 is a particularly good example of the characteristically curious arrangement of the subject matter in The Aim of the Sage. It begins with the statement that a "master of ancient times" divided the whole art of magic under three heads: talismans, the worship of the planets and incantations. Each of these became the special province of certain peoples: the "Indians", for example, excelled in incantations. From this we pass to an enumeration of the various arts and doctrines of these "Indians", with emphasis on, among other topics, the combination of stars to compose certain magical figures (pp. 83-86). Mention of the "Indian" theory of the nature of dreams is the occasion for an account of the author's own ideas on the subject, which are based on those of al-Fârâbî, and certain quotations from the latter's Ideal State. There follows the theory of divination and prophecy, the second of which has also close affinities with the work of al-Fârâbî, though his name is not mentioned until the conclusion of the section, where there is an irrelevant quotation from his treatise on alchemy (pp.87-90). The author now reverts to his "Indians" and adopts their doctrine of the superiority of talisman over election, since the talisman, as well as being rendered effective by the power of the constellation which dominates it, receives extra power from the specific qualities (virtutes) of the substances of which it is composed (pp. 90-91).

Chapter 6 begins with the importance of the virtutes in reinforcing the effects of the stars even in those natural processes which are independent of human agency. Man makes talismans unawares as soon as he begins to manipulate nature in such processes as dyeing cloth, breeding animals or compounding drugs, as well as in the manufacture of objects of everyday use from the products of nature, as in cooking, spinning and the like. Now in the manufacture of a talisman, as in medicine, the maker is consciously seeking to use a simple or compound substance, which is itself predisposed towards the desired effect (pp. 91-94). Just as the product may be influenced in different ways by the treatment it receives, so also the influence of a star depends upon its position. This analogy is soon abandoned and the author turns to the theory of the stars' effects in a way which is unrelated to what has gone before. The first part of this chapter is taken over entire from Jâbir's Kitâb al-Baht, while the second part apparently consists of quotations from that half of the work which has not come down to us. Some of the theories presented are extremely difficult to understand and interpret, as the author himself admits. The main source of the difficulty lies in the fact that the discussion concerns the aether and the sphere of the fixed stars and their bearing on motions and effects (pp. 94-99). There follows a passage on the relative effects of different planets in conjunction with one another, which, though based on the same theories, is less obscure (pp. 99-100). The chapter concludes with a further summary of the theory, again in conformity with the surviving portion of Jâbir's book (pp.100-101).

Chapter 7. The importance of similarity and dissimilarity for the explanation of certain sidereal effects was repeatedly mentioned in Chapter 6. In Chapter 7, the author takes the opportunity of defining similarity as an aspect of the logical category of relation applied to the talismanic art. He then enters on a detailed discussion of the category of quantity, considering lines, surfaces, time, place, speech and number as far as they are significant for talismans, with a shorter account, at the end, of position and quality (pp. 101-107). The whole is summarized from Jâbir's Kitâb al-Baht.

Chapter 8 is also taken from Jâbir. It contains a table showing the simple qualities heat, cold, moisture and dryness and what results from the various steps in forming combinations of them. The table is preceded by a discussion of details, of antique origin (Antiochus of Athens). After this comes the rationale of the sequence of the combinations of the qualities, likewise from Jâbir (pp. 107-110). The author closes this very difficult section, whose importance for the whole is not easily discernible, with these words:

"I set forth such miraculous and confusing matters from all the sciences for this reason only, that you may be purified for the earnest study of these marvelous arts and may achieve what the ancient sages achieved and attain the heights that they attained".

Chapter 9 takes up again the notion of the combination of the stars in magical figures (see Chapter 5) and gives instructions for making six talismans engraved with such figures (pp. 111-113).

Chapter 10 deals with talismans made by engraving certain figures on the stones and metals which belong to the planets. It falls into three parts, of which the first is an enumeration of the minerals belonging to the various planets. The Arabic manuscripts of The Aim of the Sage, unlike those of the translations, show striking deviations from the usual classification. It is therefore possible that the correspondences of the translations with the norm may be due to a reworking of the text. At all events, it is remarkable that some of the deviations (e.g. iron instead of lead for Saturn, copper instead of iron for Mars) are also found in Book III, chapter 7, the chapter on Sabian prayers to the planets. The first part ends with illustrations of the figures, some of which still survive as signets of the planets (pp. 113-114). The second part describes the images of the planetary gods. The author gives three sources, though there are in fact more, as will be seen from the commentary to the present translation. The three sources specified are a lapidary by `Utârid, a book without a title by Apollonius and a work by a certain Kriton on pneumatic talismans translated by Bu(i)qrâtîs (Picatrix) (pp.114-119). In the third part are instructions for engraving these and other images, some of them with magical signs, on different stones, with information on their various effects. The number of the sources is then increased by the mention of a book dedicated to Alexander by Aristotle (obviously Secretum secretorum) and a work by Hermes (al-Hâdîtûs). There is, however, no indication of the relevant source for most of the instructions, so that it cannot be determined whether the sources of all are the same as those just mentioned. The differing degree of explicitness of the instructions makes it probable that the author collected his material from wherever he could find it (pp.119-130). The chapter concludes with a short list of talismans which are to be manufactured when the planets are in certain decans. The effects are given, but no other details (p.141). This list is clearly connected with the last two chapters of Book II, which discuss the decans in detail.

Chapter 11 opens with an admonition to keep the doctrine concealed from the unlettered, who, from their lack of wisdom, will only disparage the dignity of the astrologer. It continues with the definition of understanding and sagacity, using formulations which are to be found in a collection of aphorisms ascribed to al-Fârâbî, though also attributable, in part, to Miskawaih and even to Aristotle (pp.131-133). Then follows the detailed enumeration of the thirty-six decans (here called wujûh, facies), the images ascending in them, and the names of the planets with which they are connected, beginning from Aries, with Mars, the Sun and Venus and ending in Pisces with Saturn, Jupiter and Mars. There are a few words of introduction to the list, stating that the effects of the decans are founded in their concord with the physeis of their "lords". A postscript discusses the relative power of the various planets and astrological positions and of the physeis (pp.133-140). An identical description is to be found in Ibn Abi 'l-Rijâl, except that the latter omits all the images and, from Virgo on, the planets, which he has no call to give at all. In a short closing passage the author tells us that, to make their operation effective, the images must be engraved on substances which correspond to the respective planets.

Chapter 12 gives a second list of decans, based on the system of the "Indians", in which the decans are called darîjân, the Indian name for them. They are now allotted to the planets in such a way that each first decan contains the lord of the zodiacal sign (Mars, e.g., is in the first decan of Aries), while to the other two decans are allotted the lords of the signs situated trigonally (120°) distant from them, as, in Aries, the Sun (Leo) and Jupiter (Sagittarius). The effects only are given, not the images (pp. 141-43). We continue with information on Brahmin ascetic practices, which are performed at astrologically significant times and, by enabling the practitioners to reach a state of dematerialization, allow them to dominate the celestial powers. They are guided by a "Book of the Buddha", from which extracts are quoted (pp.144-46). Then comes the description, frequently found in other texts, of the severance of a head from a living body so that it may be questioned for prophetic purposes. Our author gives no indication that he is here deserting the "Indians" for the Sabians (pp.146-47). There follows a detailed list of the colors belonging to the decans of the planets (again called wujûh, facies), without any indication of what the significance of this is. If we are to believe this list, each planet has three decans, as though it were a sign of the zodiac, and one color and two talismans are attributed to every decan (pp. 147-151). The conclusion of the chapter and of Book II consists of an extract from a work on talismans by the physician alRazi, describing the constellations favorable to the manufacture of talismans for specific purposes (pp.151-52). The author gives the names of several books, among them the much-quoted Kitâb al-Baht, by Jâbir, whose pupil he professes to be. Finally, he gives the contents of both the magical books of the Laws, ascribed to Plato, and compares their method with that of Jâbir (pp.152-57).

BOOK III

Having expounded, in Book II, the doctrine of the planets and the signs of the zodiac for the most part as elements of constellations for the purpose of making talismans, the author, in Book III, treats them more individually, with their specific qualities. The planets are personified to such a degree that they are virtually conjured and worshipped.

Chapter 1. After a short, not easily intelligible introduction, the object of which is to establish the astrological hour which makes a talisman efficacious, (pp. 156-57), there is a detailed description of the dominions of the seven planets, which embraces all divisions of nature and certain aspects of civilization, such as languages, religions and the sciences. In conclusion, there is a brief note on the effects of both nodes of the lunar orbit (pp.157-64).

Chapter 2. There is a similar, but much shorter detailed list of the dominions of the twelve signs of the zodiac (pp.164-66).

Chapter 3 is an omnium gatherum, beginning with a list of the substances from which the inks of the planets may be made. No source is yet known for anything from the beginning of Book III to this point. We now find a quotation from an otherwise unknown pseudo-Aristotelian work entitled The Book of Lamps and Banners. The author first gives a list, as it appears in this work, of the images of the personified planets, which is in effect a supplement to that in Book II, chapter 10. Then, again from the Book of Lamps and Banners, he gives the colors and stuffs of the robes to be worn when worshipping the planets, as well as the fumigations proper to them (pp. 167-68). He adds to these, from another, unnamed, source, the formulae for the inks of the thirty-six decans and explains, in a postscript, the importance of dealing consistently with only those things which belong to the planets. As a text for this he uses an aphorism by 'Utârid, which is repeated, along with other aphorisms by the same author, in Book IV, chapter 4 (pp.168-71). The effects of the planets on the geographic regions of the earth are now illustrated, certain products and other features peculiar to foreign countries being specified, in a mixture of the true and the fantastic. In the middle of this section is a list of the products of Spain, the author's homeland, and the whole concludes, in spite of the author's leaning towards astrology, with a quotation from the Hippocratic work De Aeribus aquis locis. The chapter ends with a list of the general effects of the sun and moon and of the other five planets on mankind (pp. 171-76).

Chapter 4 is completely isolated, since it is the only one in the entire book which mentions Islam in connection with astrology. It goes so far as to use the Koran as a basis for a method of reckoning the duration of the Arab kingdom by using the numerical values of some single letters and groups of letters at the beginning of a number of the suras. All the verses of the Koran are first allotted, in order, to the seven planets. Then those letters, or groups of letters, are selected which stand at the beginning of those suras of which the first or last verse was allotted to Venus, the planetary patroness of the Arabs.

The author begins with a short description of his source, a book by the so far unknown Ja'far of Basra (pp.176-77). The expression symbol used here prompts him to make a digression on overt and covert meaning and the relation of this distinction to the psychology of cognition. The various ways of knowing God are given as an example. Parts of the argument are to be found in a minor work by al-Gazzâlî. The comparison, frequent in Islamic literature, between the incomprehensibility of God and the intolerable brilliance of light, is used by way of illustration (pp.177-79). This is followed by speculation as to the reason why, of the twenty-eight letters of the Arabic alphabet which together form a whole, compounded of spirit and matter, that half only which represents the spirit appears at the beginning of the suras, why more than five of these letters never occur together, and, finally, why the first letter of this kind to appear in the Koran is alif and the last nûn.

Certain admonitions, from the Gospel and from Hadîth, enjoining that secrets should be imparted only to those worthy to receive them, but to such persons freely, are then quoted (pp. 179-181). Then follows the enumeration of all the suras, including the number of their verses and the statement of the planet to which each first and last verse belongs (pp. 181-84). The author is seeking to prove that the term of the Arab kingdom is six hundred and ninety-three years, the same number at which al-Kindî had arrived by two other methods in a work which the author cites explicitly and which has survived (pp. 184-85). The conclusion is concerned with an explanation of the nature of the spirit, since the spirit is represented, as mentioned above, by the letters at the beginning of some of the suras. The explanation begins with the Stoic definition of the vital spirit, a definition often used in Arabic literature. Other definitions follow, of which only some can be ascribed to definite sources (pp.185-87).

It is worth mentioning that this "Islamic" chapter comes directly before that part of the book in which the author turns to black magic. The introduction to this part is even more remarkable.

Chapter 5 opens with the statement that the author is "returning to the subject". It refers to the division of the creatures of the three natural kingdoms among the planets, which was dealt with at the beginning of Book III. The author soon breaks off and reverts to the superiority of man over living creatures, which he has already noted in Book I, chapter 6. He details the characteristics of a number of different animals and establishes man's superiority by the fact that all the elements have a share in him. The reiteration of this in the digression is intentional, since it gives the author the chance to discuss jinns, devils and angels (pp.187-89).

He then announces once more that he is about to take up his main subject again and gives an account of the peoples who have been famous for the arts of magic and of how they attained the position of being able to control the pneumata (pp.189-90). As an example, he narrates a story from a book known only from the present work. It tells, with detailed descriptions of the magical processes, how a rich and handsome young man was spirited to the place where his lover was and then, later, freed from the enchantment (pp. 190-92). After carefully pointing out the importance of the subject and the extent of the pains he himself has taken, the author speaks for the third time of returning to his theme and gives exhaustive directions for the attraction of the planetary spirit by using a knowledge of the lordships of the planets. The fumes of the incense burnt in the incantation of the planet are to be passed through the middle of a hollow cross, explicit reasons being given for this. The chapter concludes with some general quotations from an unidentified source on the relations between planets and terrestrial souls (pp.192-97).

Chapter 6 is devoted to the manifestation of the spiritual essence of the wise man, which is called his "perfect nature". The incantation for this "perfect nature" is described according to two pseudo-Aristotelian hermetic treatises, al-Istamâtîs and al-Istamâhîs (pp. 198-210), the latter of which survives complete, the former in fragments only. Following this are prophecies, quoted from al-Istamâhîs, of Alexander's victory over the Persians, and Alexander is advised to invoke the pneumata of his "perfect nature". The author, citing a text which he claims to be Persian, tells how the King of the Persians learned from his description that Alexander was invincible (pp. 201-203). Then come "historical" notes on the most ancient philosophers, who were aware of this pneuma, and information concerning the spiritual forces at work in talisman and soul alike. Both these sections are taken from al-Istamâhîs (pp.203-205), and the chapter ends with sayings by Socrates and Hermes on the essence of the perfect nature, from the same source (pp. 205-206).

Chapter 7. The reader is apparently now considered sufficiently prepared in the theory of magic to be initiated into its practice. Our author quotes from a book by al-Tabarî, an astronomer not yet identified, copious instructions, for the adoration of the planets according to the usage of the Sabians. These are not given in the form of a connected narrative, but as directives, and they go so far as to enjoin prostration.

At the beginning of the chapter is a list of the planets, with particulars of which planet is to be invoked for which groups of people and which desired gifts (pp.206-209). Following this there is a second list, giving the characteristics of each planet and explaining their significance, in a way frequently reminiscent of the list in chapter 1 of this book (pp.209-213). Then come the ceremonies and the texts of the prayers for each planet, with details of their correct hours and astrological conditions. For each planet a number, varying from one to four, of prayers and incenses, is given. The prayers to Mars are followed, curiously enough, by a prayer to Ursa Major. For many parts of the prayers parallels can be found in the fragmentary manuscripts of al-Istamâtîs. The metals from which the incense vessels must be made do not in all cases correspond with the traditional planetary metals, as stated above in Book II, chapter 10 (pp.213-37). Next there is an account of other Sabian rites, child sacrifice, the worship of Mars by ritual slaughter, the initiation of young men, offerings to Saturn and a variant of the story, given in Book II, chapter 12, of the severance of a living head from its body (pp. 237-41).

Chapter 8 contains prayers of the Nabataeans to Saturn and the Sun, taken from the Nabataean Agricu1ture. In a postscript the author explains that all this is, according to Islamic notions, idolatry, and that he introduces it simply on grounds of scholarship and as a proof of the pre-eminence of Islam (pp.241-45).

Chapter 9 contains, again according to al-Istamâtîs, the names of the pneumata of the seven planets and their six "directions", i.e. the two channels of movement of each of the three dimensions of space, hence the six directions in which the pneuma can move. There follows a detailed description of the ceremonies for each planet, this time concerned with the proper regulation of sacrificial repasts (pp.245-253).

Chapter 10 continues with excerpts from our two pseudo-Aristotelian works. First, from al-Istamâhîs, there are four amulets, composed by Aristotle for Alexander (pp.253-58). Then comes a talisman for protection against the poisons in magic philtres and a medicine for the evil effects of the pneuma on the magician (pp.258-59). After this follow nirenjs [nirangs], charms for various objects, such as success in love, royal favor etc., invented by Kînâs, the "pneumatician", of whom we know from other sources. Each purpose is allotted various media, such as talismans, foods, fumigations and aromatic substances or perfumes. Many of these media have magical names and magic words are also prescribed for their incantation (pp.259-272). The source of all these prescriptions is so far unidentified, though at some points al-Istamâtîs and related texts are expressly cited.

Chapter 11 is given over to similar formulae, which, it is explicitly stated at the outset, do not come from Kînâs. Modes of procedure are only sometimes specified and frequently the ingredients alone of the charms, in prescription form, are given. Not all the prescriptions are of a purely magical nature: they sometimes extend to exact directions for preparing poisons. Some parallels from al-Istamâtîs manuscripts may be recognized. The section of prescriptions ends with a prophylactic against the poisons employed, the invention of Kanka, the "Indian", who is known from other sources (pp.272-85). Immediately on this passage follow examples of the magic arts of the ancient Egyptians, which come from the widely-diffused legendary pre-history of Egypt, to be found in al-Maqrîzî and other authors. These examples are interrupted by a discussion of the "friendly" numbers 220 and 284. The whole is attributed to "him", so that it appears that Kanka has all along been under contribution, whereas the fact is that the section is a miscellany from different sources.

None of the legendary kings of Egypt is named until a further instalment of Egyptian history is presented. What we are told of Egypt concerns talismans, devices to give warning of the approach of enemies and for the storage of drinking water, as well as talismanic sculptures against disease and for the unmasking of libertines (pp.285-88). The discussion of "Indian" practices now continues, including examples of the artificial generation of living beings (pp.288-90).

We now return to philosophy, which occupies the last chapter of Book III and the first of Book IV. The definite division of the two chapters is not easily accounted for. One has the impression that the author may have wished, at obvious points like the end of one book and the beginning of another, to display something less offensive than the wild heterodoxy of, in particular, the second part of Book III.

Chapter 12 begins with an emphatic statement of the importance of practical application in attaining mastery of the arts. It is illuminating that it adduces an example in which a magical performance is discovered to be a fraud, viz., the story, well known from elsewhere, of Anoshawan and Mazdak. There follow exhortations to the love of God, which is so markedly different from all other kinds of love. Then comes a passage from the Metaphysics of Aristotle, which makes a rather forced transition to a discussion of the various meanings of the word "nature". For this there are many parallels, one of the definitions being derived from Isaac Israeli. Book III ends rather abruptly with an account, attributed to Empedocles, of the first causes of the substances (pp.290-296).

BOOK IV

Chapter 1. It is a little difficult, since the opening of the chapter is a continuation of the statement of Empedoclean doctrine begun in Book III, Chapter 12, to realize that a new book has commenced. We begin with the theory of the five substances, treated as a history of creation and of nature (pp.297-299). This is followed by a detailed analysis of the concepts of Substance (pp.299-300), Intellect (pp.300-304), and Soul (pp.304-308). No source is given for the section on Intellect, though many parallels could be pointed out. In the passage on Soul, on the other hand, there are quotations, some of them genuine, from a number of ancient philosophers. Reasons for having expounded the doctrine of Soul and Intellect conclude the chapter and the statement that a shadow forms a material partition between the intellect of the reader and that of the universe is the starting-point for an interesting excursus on the nature of shadows.

Chapter 2. The author, having once again given philosophy its due, "returns to the subject of the book", and chapter 2 deals with prayers to the moon in each of the twelve signs of the zodiac. These are the work of "a school of learned men of the Kurds and Abyssinians" and often tell what may be accomplished under each sign. Narratives illustrating the possible effects are sometimes given (pp. 309-319). The most remarkable of these is the story of two men who meet while walking on the waters of the Red Sea. Following the prayers to the moon are "Indian" ceremonies for the seven planets. Each ceremony is to be preceded by a seven days' fast and magic signs, called characters, are used in the ceremonies (pp 319-322). Certain parts of this may be found in Hermetic manuscripts.

Chapter 3 takes up again, on a much larger scale, the legendary prehistory of Egypt, which had already been begun in Book III, chapter 11. The story of the Eagle Town, built by the rebellious governor 'Aun in an attempt to escape the vengeance of King al-Walîd on the latter's return from an expedition to the so-called Mountain of the Moon and the source of the Nile, is then told in detail (pp.322-329). (Parallels to the whole, from pseudo-Mas'ûdî's Ahbâr al-zamân, al-Maqrîzî and al-Nuwairî are cited in the footnotes to the translation.) There is now an abrupt transition to directions for making oneself invisible, and the story of a sorcerer's Kurdish apprentice, whose lack of understanding led to his dismissal (pp.329-31). The chapter concludes with some aphorisms, one of them from pseudo-Ptolemy's Centiloquium, which are not entirely comprehensible (pp. 331-32).

Chapter 4 is again a miscellany. It opens with forty-five aphorisms of an astrological and magical nature from a book extant in manuscript, by the Babylonian 'Utârid (Hermes). 'Utarid may perhaps be the person mentioned in Book II, chapter 10 as one of the sources for the engraving of planetary figures on stones (pp.332-36). There follow ten aphorisms from the Centiloquium (pp. 336-38) and sayings attributed to Plato, Hippocrates and Aristotle, also of an astrological nature (pp.338-39), as well as the complete text of the "Aristotelian" treatise on talismans, extracts from which were quoted in Book I, chapter 5. Added to this there is a discussion of the notion of degree, which is to be found in the pseudo-Aristotelian treatise (pp.339-43). Then there are further observations of a general kind on talismans, which the author says he has from Jâbir. It has not been possible to identify precisely what work is meant (pp. 343-46). The conclusion of the chapter is taken up with two quotations from "Plato", of which one is an exhortation to prefer bodily death to spiritual extinction and the other concerns the basis for the effects of music on the soul. The latter quotation, which is largely incomprehensible and clearly very corrupt, includes excerpts from the fragments of Empedocles, which are extant in Greek. The chapter ends with the admonition to discipline the soul, sleeping and waking (pp.346-48).

Chapter. 5 begins by enumerating the ten sciences preliminary to the mastery of alchemy and magic. The list is, in many respects, influenced by the familiar encyclopedic pattern, but takes, in others, quite a singular turn. The pertinent Aristotelian texts are specified for some of the sciences (pp.349-51). We are now told that through philosophy man strives after the divine likeness. Then the author reverts to the theory of love, with which he had begun to deal in Book III, chapter 12 (pp.351-53). He considers that the power of the evil eye ought by rights to be discussed here. The fact that the evil eye may be hereditary gives him the occasion for a detailed account of the doctrines of heredity and procreation, taken verbatim from al-Fârâbî, who is, however, not named (pp.353-57). The chapter concludes with speculations, from an unknown source, on the meaning of bi-sexuality (pp.357-58).

Chapter 6 opens with formulae and ceremonies for incense, allegedly by Buddha, in honor of the seven planets -- a subject that had, to all appearances, been exhausted. It closes with the verses from Exodus, telling of the perfumes prescribed by God to Moses, (pp. 358-362), and an exhaustive description of "Indian" enchantments (pp. 362-66).

Chapter 7 is very long and consists for the most part of avowed and verbatim extracts from the Nabataean Agriculture, e.g., how the bay tree spoke to the gardener in a dream, the debate over precedence between the marshmallow and the mandrake, the self-commendation of the olive tree and how a sleeping king was apprised by a tree that his servant, disregarding the royal command in anticipation of the royal remorse, had spared the life of the queen. The other extracts are, in the main, explanations of the magic properties of certain plants and of the customs of the peoples mentioned in the Nabataean Agriculture (pp. 362-401). Not all can be traced to the manuscripts of the Agriculture and some of the matter seems to be taken from other works by Ibn Wahshîja. A different version of the discussion of poison for arrows used by the Armenians (pp. 383 f.) is to be found in the Book of Poisons. Other subjects seem to have been added by our author, for example, a quotation from a work attributed to al-Hallâj (pp. 389 f.). The section on the specific products of certain countries (pp. 391-96), a subject resumed from Book III, chapter 3, goes far beyond what Ibn Wahshîja can have had to say. Summing up, the author speaks of the three natural kingdoms -- animal, vegetable and mineral -- and of mankind as well as the links by which they may be led back to the Creator (pp.401-402).

The two last chapters, the compiler says, are taken from a temple book, which was found in the time of Cleopatra.

Chapter 8 gives, in a confused order, a large number of the virtutes of natural objects (pp.403-412). Parallels to most of these, very often in the works of Jâbir, are identifiable, and many are attributable to classical authors, such as Pliny.

Chapter 9 deals, in its entirety, with descriptions of talismans, which expressly depend on the virtues. Astrological material is not mentioned. The objects of the talismans are of different kinds: for drugs, for attracting or repelling animals, producing color effects etc. (pp.412-20).

As a conclusion, the author gives a testament of Socrates and seven admonitions by Pythagoras, both identifiable in other sources, some of them classical (pp.421-423).

Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa (1486-1535) is the most influential writer of Renaissance esoterica, and indeed all of Western occultism. His de occulta philosophia appeared in three books. Written from 1509 to 1510 (he would have been 23 at the time), it circulated widely in manuscript form, and was eventually printed in 1533. It is a "systematic exposition of ... Ficinian spiritual magic and Trithemian demonic magic (and) ... treatised in practical magic" (I. P. Couliano in Hidden Truths 1987, p. 114).

Without doubt, this book should be at the top of any required reading list for those interested in Western magic and esoteric traditions. In his Mysteriorum Libri, John Dee makes frequent mention of Agrippa's book, to the extent that he seems almost to have memorized it. Portions of Agrippa's work are also frequently found appended to magical manuscripts or even liberally merged with the text.

In 1801 Agrippa's text, in a slightly abridged form, was shamelessly plagiarized and published as his own work by Frances Barrett (The magus, or Celestial intelligencer, London 1801). This work can still be found in print. The latter was in turn plagiarized and published as his own work by L.W. de Laurence (The Great Book of Magical Art, Hindoo Magic & Indian Occultism, (Chicago, 1915)!

The translator was probably John French, not J. Freake; cf. Ferguson, I, 13 and DNB.

This edition is a transcription of the Gregory Moule edition (Moule: London, 1651.) Text in [] added by JHP, primarily to facilitate searches, but also includes some corrections based on the original Latin (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1992.) Note the Willis F. Whitehead edition (Chicago, Hahn & Whitehead, 1898) was used in the initial stages of this transcription, but it was found to be less accurate, so I went back and redid the transcription to reflect the earlier edition. His editorial efforts, aside from modernizing spelling, mainly consists of substituting euphemisms for sexual references or deleting them entirely (for examples see chapters 15 and 16).

The Hebrew lettering in the English edition is full of errors; therefore I have used the Latin Edition (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1992) to restore these per Agrippa's original intent. Unfortunately, this does not help track errors propagated from the defects in the early English editions.

For the drawings I have relied on the 1533 Köln (Cologne) Latin edition.

The life of Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Knight.

Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Descended from a noble Family of Netteshim in Belgia, Doctor of the LAws and Physick [medicine], Master of the Rols, and Judge of the spirituall Court, from his youth he applyed his minde to learning, and by his happy wit obtained great knowledge in all Arts and Sciences; afterwards also he followed the Army of the Princes, and for his valor was created Knight in the Field; when je was by these means famous for learning and Arms about 1530. He gave his minde to writing, and composed three Books Of Occult Philosophy; afterward an Invective or Cynicall declamation of the uncertainty and vanity of all things, in which he teacheth that there is no certainty in any thing, but in the solid words of God, and that, to lie hid in the eminency of Gods word; he also wrote an History of the double Coronation of the Emperor Charls, and also of the excellency of the feminine sexe, and of the apparitions of spirits; but seeing that he published commentaries on the Ars Brevis of Raymundus Lully [Ramon Llull], and was very much addicted to Occult Philosophy and Astrology, there were those who thought that he enjoyed commerce with devils, whom notwithstanding he confuted in his published Apology, and shewed, that he kept himself within the bounds of Art, 1538, He wrote many learned orations, which manifest to all the excellency of his wit; but especially ten; the first on Platoes Benquet, uttered in the Academy of Tricina containing the praise of Love; the second on Hermes Trismegistus, and of the power and wisdom of God; the third for one who was to receive his degree of Doctor; the fourth for the Lords of Metz, when he was chosen their Advocate, Syndice and Orator; the fifth to the Senate of Luxenburg, for the Lords of Metz; The sixth to salute the Prince and Bishop thereof, written for the Lords of Metz; the seventh to salute as noble man, written likewise for the Lords of Metz; the eighth for a certain kinsman of his, a Carmelite, made Bachelor of Divinity, when he received his regency at Paris; the ninth for the son of Cristiern King of Denmary, Norway, and Sweden, delivered at the coming of the Emperor; the tenth at the Funerall of the Lady Margret, Princess of Austria and Burgundy; he wrote also a Dialogue concerning man, and a Declamation of a disputable opinion concerning originall sin to the Bishop of Cyrene; an Epistle to Michael de Arando Bishop of Saint Paul; a complaint upon a calumny not proved, Printed at Strasburg 1539. and therefore by these monuments published, the name of cornelius for his variety of Learning was famous, not only amongst the Germanes, but also other Nations; for Momus himself carpeth at all amongst the gods; amongst the Heroes, Hercules hunteth after Monsters; amongst divels [devils] Pluto the king of hell is angry with all the ghosts; amongst Philosophers Democritus laugheth at all things, on the contrary Heraclitus weepeth at all things; Pirrhas is ignorant of all things, and Aristotle thinketh he knoweth all things; Diogenes contemneth all things; this Agrippa spareth none, he contemneth, knows, is ignorant, weeps, laught, is angry, pursueth, carps at all things, being himself a Philosopher, a Demon, an Heroes [hero], a god, and all things.

To my most honorable, and no less learned Friend, Robert Childe, Doctor of Physick.

SIR! Great men decline, mighty men may fall, but an honest Philosopher keeps his station for ever. To your self therefore I crave leave to present, what I know you are able to protect; not with sword, but by reason; & not that only, but what by your acceptance you are able to give a lustre to. I see it is not in vain that you have compassed Sea and Land, for thereby you have made a Proselyte no of another but if your self, by being converted from vulgar, and irrational incredulities to the rational embracing of the sublime, Hermeticall, and Theomagicall truths. You are skilled in the one as if Hermes had been your Tutor; have insight in the other, as if Agrippa your Master. Many transmarine Philosophers, which we only read, you have conversed with: many Countries, rarities, and antiquities, which we have only heard of, and admire, you have seen. Nay you have not only heard of, but seen, not in Maps, but in Rome it self the manners of Rome. there you have seen much Ceremony, and little Religion; and in the wilderness of New England, you have seen amongst some, much Religion, and little Ceremony; and amongst others, I mean the Natives thereof, neither Ceremony, nor Religion, but what nature dictates to them. In this there is no small variety, and your observation not little. In your passage thither by Sea, you have seen the wonders of God in the Deep; and by Land, you have seen the astonishing works of God in the unaccessible Mountains. You have left no stone unturned, that the turning thereof might conduce to the discovery of what was Occult, and worthy to be known. It is part of my ambition to let the world know that I honor such as your self, & my learned friend, & your experienced fellow-traveller, Doctor Charlet, who have, like true Philosophers neglected your worldly advantages to become masters of that which hath now rendred you both truly honorable. If I had as many languages as your selves, the rhetoricall and patheticall expressions thereof would fail to signifie my estimation of, and affections towards you both. Now Sir! as in reference to this my translatoin, if your judgement shall finde a deficiency therein, let your candor make a supply thereof. Let this Treatise of Occult Philosophy coming as a stranger amongst the English, be patronized by you, remembring that you your self was once a stranger in the Country of its Nativity. This stranger I have dressed in an English garb; but if it be not according to the fashion, and therefore ungrateful to any, let your approbation make it the mode; you know strangers most commonly induce a fashion, especially if any once begin to approve of their habit. Your approbation is that which will stand in need of, and which will render me,

SIR,
Most obligedly yours,
J. F.

*Pragmatick Schoolmen, men made up of pride,
And rayling Arguments, who truth deride,
And scorn all else but what your selves devise,
And think these high-learned Tracts to be but lies,
Do not presume, unless with hallowed hand
To touch these books who with the world shall stand;
The are indeed mysterious, rare and rich,
And far transcend the ordinary pitch.*

Io. Booker.

[Cornelius Agrippa] To the Reader.

I do not doubt but the Title of our book of Occult Philosophy, or of Magick, may by the rarity of it allure many to read it, amongst which, some of a crasie [crazy, disordered] judgement, and some that are perverse will come to hear what I can say, who, by their rash ignorance may take the name of Magick in the worse sense, and though scarce having seen the title, cry out that I teach forbidden Arts, sow the seed of Heresies, offend pious ears, and scandalize excellent wits; that I am a sorcerer, and superstitious and divellish [devilish], who indeed am a Magician: to whom I answer, that a Magician doth not amongst learned men signifie a sorcerer, or one that is superstitious or divellish [devilish]; but a wise man, a priest, a prophet; and that the Sybils were Magicianesses, & therefore prophecyed most cleerly of Christ; and that Magicians, as wise men, by the wonderful secrets of the world, knew Christ, the author of the world, to be born, and came first of all to worship him; and that the name of Magicke was received by Phylosophers [philosophers], commended by Divines, and not unacceptable to the Gospel. I believe that the supercilious censors will object against the Sybils, holy Magicians and the Gospel it self sooner then receive the name of Magick into favor; so conscientious are they, that neither Apollo, nor all the Muses, nor an Angel from Heaven can redeem me from their curse. Whom therefore I advise, that they read not our Writings, nor understand them, nor remember them. For they are pernicious, and full of poyson [poison]; the gate of Acheron is in this book; it speaks stones, let them take heed that it beat not out their brains. But you that come without prejudice to read it, if you have so much discretion of prudence, as Bees have in gathering honey, read securely, and believe that you shall receive no little profit, and much pleasure; but if you shall find any things that may not please you, let them alone and make no use of them, for I do not approve of them, but declare them to you; but do not refuse other things, for they that look into the books of Physicians, do together with antidotes and medicines, read also poysons [poisons]. I confess that Magick it self teacheth many superfluous things, and curious prodigies for ostentation; leave them as empty things, yet be not ignorant of their causes. But those things which are for the profit of man, for the turning away of evil events, for the destroying of sorceries, for the curing of diseases, for the exterminating of phantasmes, for the preserving of life, honor, or fortune, may be done without offense to God, or injury to Religion, because they are, as profitable, so necessary. But I have admonished you, that I have writ many things, rather narratively then affirmatively; for so it seemed needful that we should pass over fewer things following the judgments of Platonists, and other Gentile Philosophers when they did suggest an argument of writing to our purpose; therefore if any error have been committed, or any thing hath been spoken more freely, pardon my youth; for I wrote this being scarce a yong [young] man, that I may excuse my self, and say, whilst I was a child, I spake as a childe, and I understood as a child, but being become a man, I retracted those things which I did being a boy, and in my book of the vanity and uncertainty of Sciences I did for the most part retract this book. But here haply you may blame me again, saying, Behold thou being a youth didst write, and now being old hast retracted it; what therefore hast thou set forth? I confess whilst I was very yong [young], I set upon the writing of these books, but, hoping that I should set them forth with corrections and enlargements, and for that cause I gave them to Tritemius [Trithemius] a Neapolitanian Abbot, formerly a Spanhemensian, a man very industrious after secret things. But it happened afterwards, that the work being intercepted, before I finished it, it was carryed about imperfect, and impolished, and did fly abroad in Italy, in France, in Germany through many mens hands, and some men, whether more impatiently, or imprudently, I know not, would have put it thus imperfect to the press, with which mischeif [mischief], I being affected, determined to set it forth my self, thinking that there might be less danger if these books came out of my hands with some amendments, thwn to come forth torn, and in fragments out of other mens hands. Moreover, I thought it no crime if I should not suffer the testimony of my youth to perish. Also we have added some Chapters, and we inserted many things, which did seem unfit to pass by, which the curious Reader shall be able to understand by the inequality of the very phrase; for we were unwilling to begin the work anew, and to unravell all that we had done, but to correct it, and put some flourish upon it. Wherefore now I pray thee, Curteous [courteous] Reader, again, weigh not these things according to the present time of setting them forth, but pardon my curious youth, if thou shalt findd any thing in them that may displease thee.

When Agrippa first wrote his Occult Philosophy he sent it to his friend Trithemius, an Abbot of Wurtzburg, with the ensuing letter. Trithemius detained the messenger until he had read the manuscript and then answered Agrippa's letter with such sound advice as mystics would do well to follow for all time to come. Trithemius is known as a mystic author and scholar.

To R. P. D. Iohn Trithemius, an Abbot of Saint James in the Suburbs of Herbipolis, Henry Cornelius Agrippa of Nettesheym sendeth greeting.

When I was of late (most reverend Father) for a while conversant with you in your Monastery of Herbipolis, we conferred together of divers things concerning Chymistry [chemistry], Magick, and Cabalie [Kabbalah], and of other things, which as yet lye [lie] hid in Secret Sciences, and Arts; and then there was one great question amongst the rest, why Magick, whereas it was accounted by all ancient Philosophers the chiefest Science, & by the ancient wise men, & Priests was always held an great veneration, came at last after the beginning of the Catholike [Catholic] Church to be alwaies odious to, and suspected by the holy Fathers, and then exploded by Divines, and condemned by sacred Canons, and moreover by all laws, and ordinances forbidden. Now the cause, as I conceive is no other then this, viz. because by a certain fatall depravation of times, and men, many false Philosophers crept in, and these under the name of Magicians, heaping together through various sorts of errors and factions of false Religions, many cursed superstitions and dangerous Rites, and many wicked Sacrileges, out of Orthodox Religion, even to the perfection of nature, and destruction of men, and injury of God, set forth very many wicked, and unlawfull books, such as we see carryed about in these dayes, to which they have by stealth prefixed the most honest name, and title of Magick. They therefore by this sacred title of Magick, hoped to gain credit to their cursed and detestable fooleries. Hence it is that this name of Magick, formerly honorable, is now in these dayes become most odious to good and honest men, and accounted a Capital crime, if any one dare profess himself to be a Magician, either in Doctrine or works, unless haply some certain old doting woman, dwelling in the Country, would be believed to be skilful, and have a Divine power, that (as saith Apuleius) she can throw down the Heaven, lift up the earth, harden fountains, wash away mountains, raise up Ghosts, cast down the Gods, extinguish the Stars, illuminate hel [hell], or as Virgil sings,

*She'l promise by her charms to cast great cares,
Or ease the minds of men, and make the Stars
For to go back, and rivers to stand still,
And raise the nightly ghosts even at her will,
To make the earth to groan, and trees to fall
From the mountains -----*

Hence those things, which Lucan relates of Thessala the Magicianess, and Homer of the omnipotency of Circe, whereof many I confess are as well of a fallacious opinion, as a superstitious diligence, &d pernicious labor, as when they cannot come under a wicked Art, yet they presume they may be able to cloak themselves under that venerable title of Magick. Since then these things are so, I wondered much, and was not less angry, that as yet there hath been no man, who did challenge this sublime and sacred discipline with the crime of impiety, or had delivered it purely and sincerely to us, since I have seen of our modern writers Roger Bacon, Robert [of York,] an English man, Peter Apponus [i.e. Peter de Abano], Albertus [Magnus] the Teutonic, Arnoldas de villa Nova, Anselme the Parmensian, Picatrix the Spaniard, Cicclus Asculus of Florence, and many others, but writers of an obscure name, when they promised to treat of Magick, do nothing but irrationall toies [toys], and superstitions unworthy of honest men. Hence my spirit was moved, and by reason partly of admiration, and partly of indignation, I was willing to play the Philosopher, supposing that I should do no discommendable work, who have been always from my youth a curious, and undaunted searcher for wonderfull effects, and operations full of mysteries; if I should recover that ancient Magick the discipline of all wise men from the errors of impiety, purifie [purify] and adorn it with its proper lustre, and vindicate it from the injuries of calumniators; which thing, though I long deliberated of it in my mind, yet never durst as yet undertake, but after some conference betwixt us of these things at Herbipolis, your transcending knowledge, and learning, and your ardent adhortation put courage, and boldness into me. There selecting the opinions of Philosophers of known credit, and purging the introduction of the wicked (who dissemblingly, with a counterfeited knowledge did teach, that traditions of Magicians must be learned from very reprobate books of darkness, as from institutions of wonderfull operations) and removing all darkness, have at last composed three compendious books of Magick, and titled them Of Occult Philosophy, being a title less offensive, which books I submit (you excelling in the knowledge of these things) to your correction and censure, that if I have wrote any thing which may tend either to the contumely of nature, offending God, or injury of Religion, you may condemn the error; but if the scandal of impiety be dissolved and purged, you may defend the tradition of truth; and that you would do so with these books, and Magick it self, that nothing may be concealed which may be profitable, and nothing approved of which cannot but do hurt, by which means these three books having passed your examination with approbation, may at length be thought worthy to come forth with good success in publike [public], and may not be afraid to come under the censure of posterity.

Farewell, and pardon these my bold undertakings.

John Trithemius, Abbot of Saint James of Herbipolis, formerly of Spanhemia, to his Henry Cornelius Agrippa of Nettesheim, health and love.

Your work (most renowned Agrippa) Entitled Of Occult Phylosophy, which you have sent by this bearer, to me to be examined, with how much pleasure I received it, no mortall tongue can express, nor the pen of any write; I woundred [wondered] at your more then vulgar learning, That you being so yong should penetrate into such secrets as have been hide from most learned men, and not only cleerly, and truly, but also properly, and elegantly set them forth. Whence first I give you thanks for your good will to me, and if I shall ever be able, I shall return you thanks to the utmost of my power; Your work, which no learned man can sufficiently commend, I approve of. Now that you may proceed toward higher things, an you have begun, and not suffer such excellent parts of wit to be idle, I do with as much earnestness as I can advise, intreat, and beseech you, that you would exercise your self in laboring after better things, and demonstrate the light of true wisdom to the ignorant, according as you your self are divinely enlightened; neither let the consideration of idle vain fellows withdraw you from your purpose; I say of them, of whom it said, The wearyed Ox treads hard, Whereas no man, to the judgement of the wise, can be truly learned, who is sworn to the rudiments of one only faculty; But you hath God gifted with a large, and sublime wit, not that you should imitate Oxen, but birds; neither think it sufficient that you stay about particulars, but bend your minde confidently to universals; for by so much the more learned any one is thought, by how much fewer things he is ignorant of. Moreover your wit is fully apt to all things, and to be rationally employed, not in a few, or low things, but many, and sublimer. Yet this one rule I advise you to observe, that you communicate vulgar secrets to vulgar friends, but higher and secret to higher, and secret friends only. Give Hey [hay] to an Ox, Sugar to a Parret [parrot] only; understand my meaning, least you be trod under the Oxens feet, as oftentimes it fals out. Farewell my happy friend, and if it lye in my power to serve you, command me, and according to your pleasure it shall without delay be done; also, let our friendship increase daily; write often to me, and send me some of your labors I earnestly pray you. Again farewell.

From our Monastery of Peapolis, the 8. day of April, An. M.D.X.

In January, 1581, Agrippa wrote from Mechlin to Kermann of Wied, Archbishop of Cologne, to whom he dedicated his Occult Philosophy. In this letter he says: "Behold! amongst such things as were closely laid up -- the books Of Occult Philosophy, or of Magic" "a new work of most ancient and abstruse learning;" "a doctrine of antiquity, by none, I dare say, hitherto attempted to be restored." "I shall be devotedly yours if these studies of my youth shall by the authority of your greatness come into knowledge," "seeing many things in them seemed to me, being older, as most profitable, so most necessary to be known. You have therefore the work, not only of my youth but of my present age," "having added many things."

To the Reverend Father in Christ, and most Illustrious Prince, Hermannus, Earl of Wyda, by the Grace of God Archbishop of the holy Church of Colonia, Prince Elector of the holy Romane Empire, and Chief Chancellor through Italy, Duke of Westphalia, and Angaria, and descended of the Legate of the holy Church of Rome, one of the Vicar Generals Court, Henry Cornelius Agrippa of Nettes-heim, sendeth greeting.

Such is the greatness of your renowned fame (most reverend, and Illustrious Prince) such is the greatness of your virtues, and splendor of learning, and frequent exercise of the best learning, and grave oration, with solid prudence, and elegant readines of speaking, knowledge of many things, constant Religion, and commendable conditions, with which you are endowed beyond the common custom of others; I say nothing of those ancient monuments of your eminent nobility, the treasures of your riches, both old, and new, the largness of your dominion, the ornaments of the sacred dignities, with the excellency whereof you excel, together with the comely form, and strength of the body. Through all these things be very great, yet I esteem you far greater then all these, for those your Heroick, and super-illustrious virtues, by which you truly have caused that by how much the more any one is learned, & loves vertue, so much the more he may desire to insinuate himself into your favor, whence I also am resolved that your favor shall be obtained by me, but after the manner of the people of Parthia, i.e. not without a present, which custom of saluting Princes, is indeed derived from the Ages of the Ancients, unto these very times, and still we see it observed. And when I see certain other very learned men to furnish you with fair, and great presents of their learning, least I only should be a neglecter of your worship and reverence, I durst not apply my self with empty hands to your greatness. Now being thoughtfull, and looking about in my study to see what present I should bestow upon such an Illustrious Prince, behold! amongst such things are were closely laid up, the books Of Occult Philosophy, or of Magick, presently offered themselves, such as I attempted to write whilst I was very yong, and now many yeers being past, as it were forgetting them, have neglected to perfect them; I presently made hast as it were to pay my vows, to present them to your honor to compleat them. Truly I was perswaded that I could give nothing more acceptable to you, then a new work of most ancient and abstruse learning; I say a work of my curious youth, but a doctrine of antiquity, by none I dare say hitherto attempted to be restored. Yet my works are not wrote to you, because they are worthy of you, but that they might make a way open for me to gain your favor. I beseech you, if it may be, let them be excused by you. I shall be devotedly yours, if these studies of my youth shall by the authority of your greatness come into knowledge, envy being chased away by the power of your worthiness, there remain the memory of them to me, as the fruit of a good conscience, seeing many things in them seemed to me, being older, as most profitable, so most necessary to be known. You have therefore the work, not only of my youth, but of my present Age, for I have corrected many Errataes of the work of my yuth, I have inserted many things in many places, and have added many things to many Chapters, which may easily be perceived by the inequality of the stile [style]; and so shall you know that I shall all my life be devoted to your pleasure. Farewell most happy Prince of happy Colonia.

From Mechlinia, Anno M.D.XXXI. In the moneth of January.

Here is the outside, and the inside of Philosophy; but the former without the latter is but an empty flourish; yet with this alone most are satisfied. To have a bare notion of a Diety, to apprehend some motions of the Celestials, together with the common operations thereof, and to conceive of some Terrestrial productions, is but what is superficial, and vulgar; But this is true, this is sublime, but Occult Philosophy; to understand the mysterious influences of the intellectuall world upon the Celestial, and of both upon the Terrestrial; and to know how to dispose, and fit our selves so, as to be capable of receiving those superiour operations, whereby we may be enabled to operate wonderfull things, which indeed seem impossible, or at least unlawfull, when as indeed they may be effected by a naturall power, and without either offence to God, or violation of Religion. To defend Kingdoms, to discover the secret counsels of men, to overcome enemies, to redeem captives, to increase riches, to procure the favor of men, to expell diseases, to preserve health, to prolong life, to renew youth, to foretell future events, to see and know things done many miles off, and such like as these, by vertue of superior influences, may seem things incredible; Yet read but the ensuing Treatise, and thou shalt see the possibility thereof confirmed both by reason, and example. I speak now to the judicious, for as for others, they neither know, nor believe, nor will know any thing, but what is vulgar, nay they think, that beyond this there is scarce any thing knowable; when as indeed there are profound mysteries in all beings, even from God in the highest heavens, to the divels [devils] in the lowest hell; Yea in very numbers, names, letters, characters, gestures, time. place, and such like, all which are by this learned Author profoundly discussed. I cannot deny but in this his work there is much superstition, and vanity. But remember that the best Gold must have the greatest allowance; consider the time of darkness, and of his youth, when, the place where, and the things which he hath discovered and wrote, and thou wilt rather admire his solidity, then condemn his vanity. Gold hath much blackness adgearing to it assoon as it is taken out of the earth. Mysterious truths do not presently shine like rayes of the Sun assoon as they are recovered from a long darkness, but are clouded with some obscurity. Nay I will say but this Agrippa might obscure these mysteries like an Hermeticall Philosopher, on purpose, that only the sons of Art might understand them. He perhaps might mix chaffe with his wheat, that quick-sighted birds only might find it out, and not swine trample it underfoot.

From saying much as touching the excusing, or commending this Author, I am already prevented; For at the beginning and ending of this book there are several Epistles of his own to others, wherein he excuseth what may be excepted against him; and of others to him sufficiently commending what is praise worthy in him; to which may be added that honorable testimony given to him by the author of that most witty, & sublime The-anthroposophia Theo-magica, [Anthroposophia Theomagica by Thomas Vaughan] lately set forth. All that I shall say to perswade thee to read this book, is but to desire thee to cast thine eye upon the Index of the Chapters contained therein, which is at the end thereof: [Book 1, Book 2, Book 3] and thou shalt therein see such variety of wonderful subjects, that at the sight thereof thou wilt be impatient till thou hast read them. I shall crave leave now to speak one word for my self. If this my translation shall neither answer the worth of the Author, or expectation of the reader; consider that the uncuothness of the Authors stile [style] in many places, the manifold Errata's, as well literall, as those in respect of Grammatical construction, may happily occasion some mistakes in this my translation. Yet notwithstanding, I hope I have, though without much elegancy (which indeed the matter would not bear) put it into as intelligible an English phrase as the original would afford. As for the terms of art, which are many, divers of them would not bear any English expression, therefore I have expressed them in Latinisms or Grecisms, according as I have found them. I hope an Artist will be able to understand them; as for Errata's, as I cursorily read over the book, I observed these as you see mentioned. If thou shalt meet with any more, as it is possible thou mayst, be thou candid, and impute them to the Printers mistake; for which, as also for taking in the best sense, what here I present thee withall, thou shalt for ever oblige thy friend,

Three Books of Occult Philosophy, or of Magick; Written by that Famous Man

Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Knight,

And Doctor of both Laws, Counsellor to Cæsars Sacred Majesty, and Judge of the Prerogative Court.

BOOK I.

Chap. i. How Magicians Collect vertues from the three-fold World, is declared in these three Books.

Seeing there is a three-fold World, Elementary, Celestiall, and Intellectual, and every inferior is governed by its superior, and receiveth the influence of the vertues thereof, so that the very original, and chief Worker of all doth by Angels, the Heavens, Stars, Elements, Animals, Plants, Metals, and Stones convey from himself the vertues of his Omnipotency upon us, for whose service he made, and created all these things: Wise men conceive it no way irrationall that it should be possible for us to ascend by the same degrees through each World, to the same very originall World it self, the Maker of all things, and first Cause, from whence all things are, and proceed; and also to enjoy not only these vertues, which are already in the more excellent kind of things, but also besides these, to draw new vertues from above. Hence it is that they seek after the vertues of the Elementary world, through the help of Physick [=medicine], and Naturall Philosophy in the various mixtions of Naturall things, then of the Celestiall world in the Rayes, and influences thereof, according to the rules of Astrologers, and the doctrines of Mathematicians, joyning the Celestiall vertues to the former: Moreover, they ratifie and confirm all these with the powers of divers Intelligencies, through the sacred Ceremonies of Religions. The order and process of all these I shall endeavor to deliver in these three Books: Whereof the forst contains naturall Magick, the second Celestiall, and the third Ceremoniall. But I know not whether it be an unpardonable presumption in me, that I, a man of so little judgement and learning, should in my very youth so confidently set upon a business so difficult, so hard, and intricate as this is. Wherefore, whatsoever things have here already, and shall afterward be said by me, I would not have any one assent to them, nor shall I my self, any further then they shall be approved of by the Universall Church, and the Congregation of the Faithfull.

Chap. ii. What Magick is, What are the Parts thereof, and how the Professors thereof must be Qualified.

Magick is a faculty of wonderfull vertue, full of most high mysteries, containing the most profound Contemplation of most secret things, together with the nature, power, quality, substance, and vertues thereof, as also the knowledge of whole nature, and it doth instruct us concerning the differing, and agreement of things amongst themselves, whence it produceth its wonderfull effects, by uniting the vertues of things through the application of them one to the other, and to their inferior sutable subjects, joyning and knitting them together thoroughly by the powers, and vertues of the superior Bodies. This is the most perfect and chief Science, that sacred and sublimer kind of Phylosophy [philosophy], and lastly the most absolute perfection of all most excellent Philosophy. For seeing that all regulative Philosophy is divided into Naturall, Mathematicall, and Theologicall: (Naturall Philosophy teacheth the nature of those things which are in the world, searching and enquiring into their Causes, Effects, Times, Places, Fashions, Events, their Whole, and Parts, also

*The Number and the Nature of those things,
Cal'd Elements, what Fire, Earth, Aire forth brings:
From whence the Heavens their beginnings had;
Whence Tide, whence Rainbow, in gay colours clad.
What makes the Clouds that gathered are, and black,
To send forth Lightnings, and a Thundring crack;
What doth the Nightly Flames, and Comets make;
What makes the Earth to swell, and then to quake:*

*What is the seed of Metals, and of Gold
What Vertues, Wealth, doth Nature's Coffers hold.*

All these things doth naturall Philosophy, the viewer of nature contain, teaching us according to Virgil's Muse.

*-----Whence all things flow,
Whence Mankind, Beast; whence Fire, whence Rain, and Snow,
Whence Earth-quakes are; why the whole Ocean beats
Over his Banks, and then again retreats;
Whence strength of Hearbs [herbs], whence Courage, rage of Bruits [brutes],
All kinds of Stone, of Creeping things, and Fruits.*

But Mathematicall Philosophy teacheth us to know the quantity of naturall Bodies, as extended into three dimensions, as also to conceive of the motion, and course of Celestiall Bodies.

*----- As in great hast [haste],
What makes the golden Stars to march so fast;
What makes the Moon sometimes to mask her face,
The Sun also, as if in some disgrace.*

And as Virgil sings,

*How th' Sun doth rule with twelve Zodiack Signs,
The Orb thats measur'd round about with Lines,
It doth the Heavens Starry way make known,
And strange Eclipses of the Sun, and Moon.
Arcturus also, and the Stars of Rain,
The Seaven Stars likewise, and Charles his Wain,
Why Winter Suns make tow'rds the West so fast;
What makes the Nights so long ere they be past?*

All which is understood by Mathematicall Philosophy.

*----- Hence by the Heavens we may foreknow
The seasons all; times for to reap and sow,
And when 'tis fit to launch into the deep,
And when to War, and when in peace to sleep,
And when to dig up Trees, and them again
To set; that so they may bring forth again.*

Now Theologicall Philosophy, or Divinity, teacheth what God is, what the Mind, what an Intelligence, what an Angel, what a Divell [devil], what the Soul, what Religion, what sacred Institutions, Rites, Temples, Observations, and sacred Mysteries are: It instructs us also concerning Faith, Miracles, the vertues of Words and Figures, the secret operations and mysteries of Seals, and as Apuleius saith, it teacheth us rightly to understand, and to be skilled in the Ceremoniall Laws, the equity of Holy things and rule of Religions. But to recollect my self) these three principall faculties Magick comprehends, unites, and actuates; deservedly therefore was it by the Ancients esteemed as the highest, and most sacred Philosophy. It was, as we find, brought to light by most sage Authours [authors], and most famous Writers; amongst which principally Zamolxis and Zoroaster were so famous, that many believed they were the inventors of this Science. Their track [footsteps] Abbaris the Hyperborean, Charmondas, Damigeron, Eudoxus, Hermippus followed: there were also other eminent, choice men, as Mercurius Tresmegistus [Trismegistus], Porphyrius [Porphyry], Iamblicus [Iamblichus], Plotinus, Proclus, Dardanus, Orpheus the Thracian, Gog the Grecian, Germa the Babilonian [Babylonian], Apollonius of Tyana, Osthanes also wrote excellently in this Art; whose Books being as it were lost, Democritus of Abdera recovered, and set forth with his own Commentaries. Besides Pythagoras, Empedocles, Democritus, Plato, and many other renowned Philosophers travelled far by Sea to learn this Art: and being returned, published it with wonderfull devoutness, esteeming of it as a great secret. Also it is well known that Pythagoras, and Plato went to the Prophets of Memphis to learn it, and travelled through almost all Syria, Egypt, Judea, and the Schools of the Caldeans [Chaldaeans], that they might not be ignorant of the most sacred Memorials, and Records of Magick, as also that they might be furnished with Divine things. Whosoever therefore is desirous to study in this Faculty, if he be not skilled in naturall Philosophy, wherein are discovered the qualities of things, and in which are found the occult properties of every Being, and if he be not skilful in the Mathematicks, and in the Aspects, and Figures of the Stars, upon which depends the sublime vertue, and property of every thing; and if he be not learned in Theologie [theology], wherein are manifested those immateriall substances, which dispenche [dispense], and minister all things, he cannot be possibly able to understand the rationality of Magick. For there is no work that is done by meer Magick, nor any work that is meerly Magicall, that doth not comprehend these three Faculties.

Chap. iii. Of the four Elements, their qualities, and mutuall mixtions.

There are four Elements, and originall grounds of all corporeall things, Fire, Earth, Water, Aire, of which all elementated inferiour bodies are compounded; not by way of heaping them up together, but by transmutation, and union; and when they are destroyed, they are resolved into Elements. For there is none of the sensible Elements that is pure, but they are more or less mixed, and apt to be changed one into the other: Even as Earth becoming dirty, and being dissolved, becomes Water, and the same being made thick and hard, becometh Earth again; but being evaporated through heat, passeth into Aire, and that being kindled, passeth into Fire, and this being extinguished, returns back again into Aire, but being cooled again after its burning, becometh Earth, or Stone, or Sulphur, and this is manifested by Lightening [lightning]: Plato also was of that opinion, that Earth was wholly changeable, and that the rest of the Elements are changed, as into this, so into one another successively. But it is the opinion of the subtiller sort of Philosophers, that Earth is not changed, but relented and mixed with other Elements, which do dissolve it, and that it returns back into it self again. Now, every one of the Elements hath two specificall qualities, the former whereof it retains as proper to it self, in the other, as a mean, it agrees with that which comes next after it. For Fire is hot and dry, the Earth dry and cold, the Water cold and moist, the Aire moist and ot. And so after this manner the Elements, according to two contrary qualities, are contrary one to the other, as Fire to Water, and Earth to Aire. Moreover, the Elements are upon another account opposite one to the other: For some are heavy, as Earth and Water, and others are light, as Aire and Fire. Wherefore the Stoicks called the former passives, but the latter actives. And yet once again Plato distinguished them after another manner, and assigns to every one of them three qualities, viz. to the Fire brightness, thinness and motion, but to the Earth darkness, thickness and quietness. And according to these qualities the Elements of Fire and Earth are contrary. But the other Elements borrow their qualities from these, so that the Aire receives two qualities of the Fire, thinness and motion; and one of the Earth, viz. darkness. In like manner Water receives two qualities of the Earth, darkness and thickness, and one of Fire, viz. motion. But Fire is twice more thin then Aire, thrice more movable, and four times more bright: and the Aire is twice more bright, thrice more thin, and four times more moveable then Water. Wherefore Water is twice more bright then Earth, thrice more thin, and four times more movable. As therefore the Fire is to the Aire, so Aire is to the Water, and Water to the Earth; and again, as the Earth is to the Water, so is the Water to the Aire, and the Aire to the Fire. And this is the root and foundation of all bodies, natures, vertues, and wonderfull works; and he which shall know these qualities of the Elements, and their mixtions, shall easily bring to pass such things that are wonderfull, and astonishing, and shall be perfect in Magick.

Chap. iv. Of a three-fold consideration of the Elements.

There are then, as we have said, four Elements, without the perfect knowledge whereof we can effect nothing in Magick. Now each of them is three-fold, that so the number of four may make up the number of twelve; and by passing by the number of seven into the number of ten, there may be a progress to the supream Unity, upon which all vertue and wonderfull operation depends. Of the first Order are the pure Elements, which are neither compounded nor changed, nor admit of mixtion, but are incorruptible, and not of which, but through which the vertues of all naturall things are brought forth into act. No man is able to declare their vertues, because they can do all things upon all things. He which is ignorant of these, shall never be able to bring to pass any wonderfull matter. Of the second Order are Elements that are compounded, changeable, and impure, yet such as may by art be reduced to their pure simplicity, whose vertue, when they are thus reduced to their simplicity, doth above all things perfect all occult, and common operations of nature: and these are the foundation of the whole naturall Magick. Of the third Order are those Elements, which originally and of themselves are not Elements, but are twice compounded, various, and changeable one into the other. They are the infallible Medium, and therefore are called the middle nature, or Soul of the middle nature: Very few there are that understand the deep mysteries thereof. In them is, by means of certain numbers, degrees, and orders, the perfection of every effect in what thing soever, whether Naturall, Celestiall, or Supercelestiall; they are full of wonders, and mysteries, and are operative, as in Magick Naturall, so Divine: For from these, through them, proceed the bindings, loosings, and transmutations of all things, the knowing and foretelling of things to come, also the driving forth of evill, and the gaining of good spirits. Let no man, therefore, without these three sorts of Elements, and the knowledge thereof, be confident that he is able to work any thing in the occult Sciences of Magick, and Nature. But whosoever shall know how to reduce those of one Order, into those of another, impure into pure, compounded into simple, and shall know how to understand distinctly the nature, vertue, and power of them in number, degrees, and order, without dividing the substance, he shall easily attain to the knowledge, and perfect operation of all Naturall things, and Celestiall secrets.

Chap. v. Of the wonderfull Natures of Fire, and Earth.

There are two things (saith Hermes) viz. Fire and Earth, which are sufficient for the operation of all wonderfull things: the former is active, the latter passive. Fire (as saith Dionysius) in all things, and through all things, comes and goes away bright, it is in all things bright, and at the same time occult, and unknown; When it is by it self (no other matter coming to it, in which it should manifest its proper action) it is boundless, and invisible, of it self sufficient for every action that is proper to it, moveable, yielding it self after a maner to all things that come next to it, renewing, guarding nature, enlightening, not comprehended by lights that are vailed [veiled] over, clear, parted, leaping back, bending upwards, quick in motion, high, alwayes raising motions, comprehending another, not Comprehended it self, not standing in need of another, secretly increasing of it self, and manifesting its greatness to things that receive it; Active, Powerfull, Invisibly present in all things at once; it will not be affronted or opposed, but as it were in a way of revenge, it will reduce on a sudden things into obedience to it self; incomprehensible, impalpable, not lessened, most rich in all disensations of it self. Fire (as saith Pliny) is the boundless, and mischievous part of the nature of things, it being a question whether it destroys, or produceth most things. Fire it self is one, and penetrates through all things (as say the Pythagorians) also spread abroad in the Heavens, and shining: but in the infernall place streightened, dark, and tormenting, in the mid way it partakes of both. Fire therefore in it self is one, but in that which receives it, manifold, and in differing subjects it is distributed in a different manner, as Cleanthes witnesseth in Cicero. That fire then, which we use is fetched out of other things. It is in stones, and is fetched out by the stroke of the steele; it is in Earth, and makes that, after digging up, to smoake [smoke]: it is in Water, and heats springs, and wells: it is in the depth of the Sea, and makes that, being tossed with winds, warm: it is in the Aire, and makes it (as we oftentimes see) to burn. And all Animals, and living things whatsoever, as also all Vegetables are preserved by heat: and every thing that lives, lives by reason of the inclosed heat. The properties of the Fire that is above, are heat, making all things Fruitfull, and light, giving life to all things. The properties of the infernall Fire are a parching heat, consuming all things, and darkness, making all things barren. The Celestiall, and bright Fire drives away spirits of darkness; also this our Fire made with Wood drives away the same, in as much as it hath an Analogy with, and is the vehiculum of that Superior light; as also of him, who saith, I am the Light of the World, which is true Fire, the Father of lights, from whom every good thing that is given, Comes; sending forth the light of his Fire, and communicating it first to the Sun, and the rest of the Celestiall bodies, and by these, as by mediating instruments, conveying that light into our Fire. As, therefore the spirits of darkness are stronger in the dark: so good spirits, which are Angels of Light, are augmented, not only by that light, which is Divine, of the Sun, and Celestiall, but also by the light of our common Fire. Hence it was that the first, and most wise institutors of Religions, and Ceremonies ordained, that Prayers, Singings, and all manner of Divine Worshipes whatsoever should not be performed without lighted Candles, or Torches. (Hence also was that significant saying of Pythagoras, Do not speak of God without a Light) and they commanded that for the driving away of wicked spirits, Lights and Fires should be kindled by the Corpses of the dead, and that they should not be removed untill the expiations were after a Holy manner performed, and they buried. And the great Jehovah himself in the old Law Commanded that all his Sacrifices should be offered with Fire, and that Fire should always be burning upon the Altar, which Custome the Priests of the Altar did always observe, and keep amongst the Romanes. Now the Basis, and foundation of all the Elements, is the Earth, for that is the object, subject, and receptacle of all Celestiall rayes, and influencies; in it are contained the seeds, and Seminall vertues of all things; and therefore it is said to be Animall, Vegetable, and Minerall. It being made fruitfull by the other Elements, and the Heavens, brings forth all things of it self; It receives the abundance of all things, and is, as it were the first fountain, from whence all things spring, it is the Center, foundation, and mother of all things. Take as much of it as you please, seperated, washed, depurated, subtilized, if you let it lye [lie] in the open Aire a little while, it will, being full, and abounding with Heavenly vertues, of it self bring forth Plants, Worms, and other living things, also Stones, and bright sparks of Metals. In it are great secrets, if at any time it shall be purified by the help of Fire, and reduced unto its simplicity by a convenient washing. It is the first matter of our Creation, and the truest Medicine that can restore, and preserve us.

Chap. vi. Of the wonderfull Natures of Water, Aire, and Winds.

The other two Elements, viz. Water, and Aire, are not less efficacious then the former; neither is nature wanting to work wonderfull things in them. There is so great a necessity of Water, that without it no living thing can live. No Hearb [herb], nor Plant whatsoever, without the moistening of Water can branch forth. In it is the Seminary vertue of all things, especially of Animals, whose seed is manifestly waterish. The seeds also of Trees, and Plants, although they are earthy, must notwithstanding of necessity be rotted in Water, before they can be fruitfull; whether they be imbibed with the moisture of the Earth, or with Dew, or Rain, or any other Water that is on purpose put to them. For Moses writes, that only Earth, and Water bring forth a living soul. But he ascribes a twofold production of things to Water, viz. of things swimming in the Waters, and of things flying in the Aire above the Earth. And that those productions that are made in, and upon the Earth, are partly attributed to the very Water, the same Scripture testifies, where it saith that the Plants, and the Hearbs [herbs] did not grow, because God had not caused it to rain upon the Earth. Such is the efficacy of this Element of Water, that Spirituall regeneration cannot be done without it, as Christ himself testified to Nicodemus. Very great also is the vertue of it in the Religious Worship of God, in expiations, and purifications; yea, the necessity of it is no less then that of Fire. Infinite are the benefits, and divers are the uses thereof, as being that by vertue of which all things subsist, are generated, nourished and increased. Thence it was that Thales of Miletus, and Hesiod concluded that Water was the beginning of all things, and said it was the first of all the Elements, and the most potent, and that because it hath the mastery over all the rest. For, as Pliny saith, Waters swallow up the Earth, extinguish flames, ascend on high, and by the stretching forth of the clouds, challenge the Heaven for their own: the same falling become the Cause of all things that grow in the Earth. Very many are the wonders that are done by Waters, according to the Writings of Pliny, Solinus, and many other Historians, of the wonderfull vertue whereof, Ovid also makes mention in these Verses.

----- Hornd Hammons Waters at high noon
Are cold; hot at Sun-rise and setting Sun.
Wood, put in bub'ling Athemas is Fir'd,
The Moon then farthest from the Sun retir'd;
Circonian streams congeal his guts to Stone
That thereof drinks, and what therein is thrown.
Crathis and Sybaris (from the Mountains rol'd)
Color the hair like Amber or pure Gold.
Some fountains, of a more prodigious kinde,

*Not only change the body but the minde.
Who hath not heard of obscene Salmacis?
Of th' Æthiopian lake? for, who of this
But only tast [taste], their wits no longer keep,
Or forthwith fall into a deadly sleep.
Who at Clitorius fountain thirst remove,
Loath Wine, and abstinent, meer Water love.
With streams oppos'd to these Lincestus flowes:
They reel, as drunk, who drink too much of those.
A Lake in fair Arcadia stands, of old
Call'd Pheneus; suspected, as twofold:
Fear, and forbear to drink thereof by night:
By night unwholesome, wholesome by day-light.*

Josephus also makes relation of the wonderfull nature of a certain river betwixt Arcea, and Raphanea, Cities of Syria: which runs with a full Channell all the Sabbath [Sabbath] Day, and then on a sudden ceaseth, as if the springs were stopped, and all the six dayes you may pass over it dry-shod: but again, on the seaventh day (no man knowing the reason of it) the Waters return again in abundance, as before. Wherefore the inhabitants thereabout called it the Sabbath-day river, because of the Seaventh day, which was holy to the Jews. The Gospel also testifies to a sheep-pool, into which whosoever stepped first, after the Water was troubled by the Angel, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had. The same vertue, and efficacy we read was in a spring of the Ionian Nymphs, which was in the territories belonging to the Town of Elis, at a Village called Heraclea, neer the river Citheron: which whosoever stepped into, being diseased, came forth whole, and cured of all his diseases. Pausanias also reports, that in Lyceus, a mountain of Arcadia, there was a spring called Agria, to which, as often as the dryness of the Region threatned [threatened] the destruction of fruits, Jupiters Priest of Lyceus went, and after the offering of Sacrifices, devoutly praying to the Waters of the Spring, holding a Bough of an Oke [oak] in his hand, put it down to the bottome of the hallowed Spring; Then the waters being troubled, a Vapour ascending from thence into the Air was blown into Clouds, with which being joyned together, the whole Heaven was overspread: which being a little after dissolved into rain, watered all the Country most wholsomly [wholesomely]. Moreover Ruffus a Physitian [physician] of Ephesus, besides many other Authours, wrote strange things concerning the wonders of Waters, which, for ought I know, are found in no other Authour.

It remains that I speak of the Aire. This is a vitall spirit, passing through all Beings, giving life, and subsistence to all things, binding, moving, and filling all things. Hence it is that the Hebrew Doctors reckon it not amongst the Elements, but count it as a Medium or glew [glue], joyning things together, and as the resounding spirit of the worlds instrument. It immediately receives into it self the influences of all Celestiall bodies, and then communicates them to the other Elements, as also to all mixt [mixed] bodies: Also it receives into it self, as it were a divine Looking-glass, the species of all things, as well naturall, as artificiall, as also of all manner of speeches, and retains them; And carrying them with it, and entering into the bodies of Men, and other Animals, through their pores, makes an Impression upon them, as well when they sleep, as when they be awake, and affords matter for divers strange Dreams and Divinations. Hence they say it is, that a man passing by a place where a man was slain, or the Carkase [carcass] newly hid, is moved with fear and dread; because the Aire in that place being full of the dreadfull species of Manslaughter [manslaughter], doth, being breathed in, move and trouble the spirit of the man with the like species, whence it is that he comes to be afraid. For every thing that makes a sudden impression, astonisheth nature. Whence it is, that many Philosophers were of opinion that Aire is the cause of dreams, and of many other impressions of the mind, through the prolonging of Images, or similitudes, or species (which are fallen from things and speeches, multiplyed in the very Aire) untill they come to the senses, and then to the phantasy, and soul of him that receives them, which being freed from cares, and no way hindered, expecting to meet such kind of species, is informed by them. For the species of things, although of their own proper nature they are carryed to the senses of men, and other animals in generall, may notwithstanding get some impression from the Heaven, whilst they be in the Aire, by reason of which, together with the aptness and disposition of him that receives them, they may be carryed to the sence [sense] of one rather than of another. And hence it is possible naturally, and far from all manner of superstition, no other spirit coming between, that a man should be able in a very time to signifie his mind unto another man, abiding at a very long and unknown distance from him; although he cannot precisely give an estimate of the time when it is, yet of necessity it must be within 24 hours; and I my self know how to do it, and have often done it. The same also in time past did the Abbot Tritemius [Trithemius] both know and do. Also, when certain appearances, not only spirituall, but also naturall do flow forth from things, that is to say, by a certain kind of flowings forth of bodies from bodies, and do gather strength in the Air, they offer, and shew themselves to us as well through light as motion, as well to the sight as to other senses, and sometimes work wonderfull things upon us, as Plotinus proves and teacheth. And we see how by the South wind the Air is condensed into thin clouds, in which, as in a Looking-glass are reflected representations at a great distance of Castles, Mountains, Horses, and Men, and other things, which when the clouds are gone, presently vanish. And Aristotle in his Meteors shews, that a Rainbow is conceived in a cloud of the Aire, as in a Looking-glass. And Albertus saith, that the effigies of bodies may by the strength of nature, in a moist Aire be easily represented, in the same manner as the representations of things are in things. And Aristotle tels of a man, to whom it happened by reason of the weakness of his sight, that the Aire that was near to him, became as it were a Looking-glass to him, and the optick beam did relect back upon himself, and could not penetrate the Aire, so that whithersoever he went, he thought he saw his own image, with his face towards him, go before him. In like manner, by the artificialnes of some certain Looking-glasses, may be produced at a distance in the Aire, beside the Looking-glasses, what images we please; which when ignorant men see, they think they see the appearances of spirits, or souls; when indeed they are nothing else but semblances kin to themselves, and without life. And it is well known, if in a dark place where there is no light but by the coming in of a beam of the sun somewhere through a litle hole, a white paper, or plain Looking-glass be set up against that light, that there may be seen upon them, whatsoever things are done without, being shined upon by the Sun. And there is another sleight, or trick yet more wonderfull. If any one shall take images artificially painted, or written letters, and in a clear night set them against the beams of the full Moon, whose resemblances being multiplyed in the Aire, and caught upward, and reflected back together with the beams of the Moon, any other man that is privy to the thing, at a long distance sees, reads, and knows them in the very compass, and Circle of the Moon, which Art of declaring secrets is indeed very profitable for Towns, and Cities that are besieged, being a thing which Pythagoras long since did often do, and which is not unknown to some in these dayes, I will not except my self. And all these, and many more, and greater then these, are grounded in the very nature of the Aire, and have their reasons, and causes declared in Mathematicks, and Opticks. And as these resemblances are reflected back to the sight, so also sometimes to the hearing, as is manifest in the Echo. But there are more secret arts then these, and such whereby any one may at a very remote distance hear, and understand what another speaks, or whispers softly.

There are also from the airy Element Winds. For they are nothing else, but Air moved and stirred up. Of these there are four that are principall, blowing from the four corners of the Heaven, viz. Notus from the South, Boreas from the North, Zephyrus from the West, Eurus from the East, which Pontanus comprehending in these verses, saith,

*Cold Boreas from the top of 'lympus [Olympus] blows,
And from the bottom cloudy Notus flows.
From setting Phoebus fruitfull Zeph'rus flies,
And barren Eurus from the Suns up-rise.*

Notus is the Southern Wind, cloudy, moist, warm, and sickly, which Hieronimus calls the butler of the rains. Ovid describes it thus,

*Out flies South-wind, with dropping wings, who shrowds
His fearful aspect in the pitchie clouds,
His white Haire stream's, his Beard big-swoln with showres [showers];

But Boreas is contrary to Notus, and is the Northern Wind, fierce, and roaring, and discussing clouds, makes the Aire serene, and binds the Water with Frost. Him doth Ovid thus bring in speaking of himself.

*Force me befits: with this thick cloud I drive;
Toss the blew Billows, knotty Okes [oaks] up-rive;
Congeal soft Snow, and beat the Earth with haile;
When I my brethren in the Aire assaile,
(For thats our Field) we meet with such a shock,
That thundring Skies with our encounters rock
And cloud-struck lightning flashes from on high, When through the Crannies of the Earth I flie,
And force her in her hollow Caves, I make
The Ghosts to tremble, and the ground to quake.*

And Zephyrus, which is the Western Wind, is most soft, blowing from the West with a pleasant gale, it is cold and moist, removing the effects of Winter, bringing forth Branches, and Flowers. To this Eurus is contrary, which is the Eastern wind, and is called Apeliotes; it is waterish, cloudy, and ravenous. Of these two Ovid sings thus:

*To Persis and Sabea, Eurus flies;
Whose gums perfume the blushing Mornes up-rise:
Next to the Evening, and the Coast that glows
With setting Phoebus, flowry Zeph'rus blows:*

*In Scythia horrid Boreas holds his rain,
Beneath Boites, and the frozen Wain:
The land to this oppos'd doth Auster steep
With fruitfull showres, and clouds which ever weep.*

Chap. vii. Of the kinds of Compounds, what relation they stand in to the Elements, and what relation there is betwixt the Elements themselves, and the soul, senses, and dispositions of men.

Next after the four simple Elements follow the four kinds of perfect Bodies compounded of them, and they are Stones, Metals, Plants, and Animals: and although unto the generation of each of these all the Elements meet together in the composition, yet every one of them follows, and resembles one of the Elements, which is most predominant. For all Stones are earthy, for they are naturally heavy, and descend, and so hardened with dryness, that they cannot be melted. But Metals are waterish, and may be melted, which Naturalists confess, and Chymists [chemists] finde to be true, viz. that they are generated of a viscous Water, or waterish argent vive. Plants have such an affinity with the Aire, that unless they be abroad in the open Aire, they do neither bud, nor increase. So also all Animals

*Have in their Natures a most fiery force,
And also spring from a Celestiall source.*

And Fire is so naturall to them, that that being extinguished they presently dye [die]. And again every one of those kinds is distinguished within it self by reason of degrees of the Elements. For amongst the Stones they especially are called earthy that are dark, and more heavy; and those waterish, which are transparent, and are compacted of water, as Crystall, Beryll, and Pearls in the shels [shells] of Fishes: and they are called airy, which swim upon the Water, and are spongius [spongy], as the Stones of a Sponge, the pumice Stone, and the Stone Sophus: and they are called fiery, out of which fire is extracted, or which are resolved into Fire, or which are produced of Fire: as Thunderbolts, Fire-stones, and the Stone Asbestos [asbestos]. Also amongst Metals, Lead, and Silver are earthy; Quicksilver is waterish: Copper, and Tin are airy: and Gold, and Iron are fiery. In Plants also, the roots resemble the Earth, by reason of their thickness: and the leaves, Water, because of their juice: Flowers, the Aire, because of their subtilty, and the Seeds the Fire, by reason of their multiplying spirit. Besides, they are called some hot, wine cold, sonic moist, some dry, borrowing their names from the qualifies of the Elements. Amongst Animals also, some are in comparison of others earthy, and dwell in the bowels of the Earth, as Worms and Moles, and many other small creeping Vermine; others are watery, as Fishes; others airy, which cannot live out of the Aire: others also are fiery, living in the Fire, as Salamanders, and Crickets, such as are of a fiery heat, as Pigeons, Estriches [ostriches], Lions, and such as the wise man cals beasts breathing Fire. Besides, in Animals the Bones resemble the Earth, Flesh the Aire, the vital spirit the Fire, and the humors the Water. And these humors also partake of the Elements, for yellow choller [choler] is instead of Fire, blood instead of Aire, Flegme [phlegm] instead of Water, and black choller [choler], or melancholy instead of Earth. And lastly, in the Soul it self, according to Austin [Augustine], the understanding resembles Fire, reason the Aire, imagination the Water, and the senses the Earth. And these senses also are divided amongst themselves by reason of the Elements, for the sight is fiery, neither can it perceive without Fire, and Light: the hearing is airy, for a sound is made by the striking of the Aire; The smell, and tast [taste] resemble the Water, without the moisture of which there is neither smell, nor tast [taste]; and lastly the feeling is wholly earthy, and taketh gross bodies for its object. The actions also, and the operations of man are governed by the Elements. The Earth signifies a slow, and firm motion; The water signifies fearfulness, & sluggishness, and remisseness in working: Aire signifies chearfulness [cheerfulness], and an amiable disposition: but Fire a fierce, quick and angry disposition. The Elements therefore are the first of all things, and all things are of, and according to them, and they are in all things, and diffuse their vertues through all things.

Chap. viii. How the Elements are in the Heavens, in Stars, in Divels [devils], in Angels, and lastly in God himself.

It is the unanimous consent of all Platonists, that as in the originall, and exemplary World, all things are in all; so also in this corporeal world, all things are in all; so also the Elements are not only in these inferior bodies, but also in the Heavens, in Stars, in Divels [devils], in Angels, and lastly in God, the maker and originall example of all things. Now in these inferiour bodies the Elements are accompanied with much gross matter; but in the Heavens the Elements are with their natures, and vertues, viz. after a Celestiall, and more excellent manner, then in sublunary things. For the firmness of the Celestiall Earth is there without the grossness of Water: and the agility of the Aire without running over its bounds; the heat of Fire without burning, only shining, and giving life to all things by its heat. Amongst the Stars, also, some are fiery, as Mars, and Sol; airy, as Jupiter, and Venus: watery, as Saturn, and Mercury: and earthy, such as inhabit the eighth Orbe, and the Moon (which notwithstanding by many is accounted watery) seeing, as if it were Earth, it attracts to it self the Celestiall waters, with which being imbibed, it doth by reason of its neerness [nearness] to us power [pour] out, and communicate to us. There are also amongst the signes, some fiery, some earthy, some airy, some watery: the Elements rule them also in the Heavens, distributing to them these four threefold considerations Of every Element, viz. the beginning, middle, and end: so Aries possesseth the beginning of Fire, Leo the progress, and increase, and Sagittarius the end. Taurus the beginning of the Earth, Virgo the progress, Capricorn the end. Gemini the beginning of the Aire, Libra the progress, Aquarius the end. Cancer the beginning of Water, Scorpius [Scorpio] the middle, and Pisces the end. Of the mixtions therefore of these Planets and Signes, together with the Elements are all bodies made. Moreover Divels [devils] also are upon this account distinguished the one from the other, so that some are called fiery, some earthy, some airy, and some watery. Hence also those four Infernall Rivers, fiery Phlegethon, airy Cocytus, watery Styx, earthy Acheron. Also in the Gospel we read of Hell Fire, and eternall Fire, into which the Cursed shall be commanded to go: and in the Revelation we read of a Lake of Fire, and Isaiah speaks of the damned, that the Lord will smite them with corrupt Aire. And in Job, They shall skip from the Waters of the Snow to extremity of heat, and in the same we read, That the Earth is dark, and covered with the darkness of death, and miserable darkness. Moreover also these Elements are placed in the Angels in Heaven, and the blessed Intelligencies; there is in them a stability of their essence, which is an earthly vertue, in which is the stedfast seat of God; also their mercy, and piety is a watery cleansing vertue. Hence by the Psalmist they are called Waters, where he speaking of the Heavens, saith,

Who rulest the Waters that are higher then the Heavens [Ps148.4]; also in them their subtile [subtle] breath is Aire, and their love is shining Fire. Hence they are called in Scripture the Wings of the Wind; and in another place the Psalmist speaks of them, Who makest Angels thy Spirits, and thy Ministers a flaming fire. Also according to orders of Angels, some are fiery, as Seraphin [Seraphim], and authorities, and powers; earthy as Cherubin [Cherubim]; watery as Thrones, and Archangels; airy as Dominions, and Principalities. Do we not also read of the original maker of all things, that the earth shall be opened and bring forth a Saviour? Is it not spoken of the same, that he shall be a fountain of living Water, cleansing and regenerating? Is not the same Spirit breathing the breath of life; and the same according to Moses, and Pauls testimony, A consuming Fire? That Elements therefore are to be found every where, and in all things after their manner, no man can deny: First in these inferiour bodies feculent and gross, and in Celestials more pure, and clear; but in supercelestials living, and in all respects blessed. Elements therefore in the exemplary world are Idea's of things to be produced, in Intelligencies are distributed powers, in Heavens are vertues, and in inferiour bodies gross forms.

Of the naturall vertues of things, some are Elementary, as to heat, to cool, to moisten, to dry; and they are called operations, or first qualities, and the second act: for these qualities only do wholly change the whole substance, which none of the other qualities can do. And some are in things compounded of Elements, and these are more then first qualities, and such are those that are maturing, digesting, resolving, mollifying, hardening, restringing, absterging, corroding, burning, opening, evaporating, strengthening, mitigating, conglutinating, obstructing, expelling, retaining, attracting, repercussing, stupifying [stupefying], bestowing, lubrifying, and many more. Elementary qualities do many things in a mixt [mixed] body, which they cannot do in the Elements themselves. And these operations are called secondary qualities, because they follow the nature, and proportion of the mixtion of the first vertues, as largely it is treated of in Physick [Medical] Books. As maturation, which is the operation of naturall heat, according to a certain proportion in the substance of the matter. Induration is the operation of cold; so also is congelation, and so of the rest. And these operations sometimes act upon a certain member, as such which provoke Urine, Milk, the Menstrua, and they are called third qualities, which follow the second, as the second do the first. According therefore to these first, second, and third qualities many diseases are both cured, and caused. Many things also there are artificially made, which men much wonder at; as is Fire, which burns Water, which they call the Greek Fire, of which Aristotle teacheth many compositions in his particular Treatise of this subject. In like manner there is made a Fire that is extinguished with Oyl [oil], and is kindled with cold Water, when it is sprinkled upon it; and a Fire which is kindled either with Rain, Wind, or the Sun; and there is made a Fire, which is called burning Water, the Confection whereof is well known, and it consumes nothing but it self: and also there are made Fires that cannot be quenched, and incombustible Oyles [oils], and perpetuall Lamps, which can be extinguished neither with Wind, nor Water, nor any other way; which seems utterly incredible, but that there had been such a most famous Lamp, which once did shine in the Temple of Venus, in which the stone Asbestos did burn, which being once fired can never be extinguished. Also on the contrary, Wood, or any other combustible matter may be so ordered, that it can receive no harm from the Fire; and there are made certain Confections, with which the hands being anointed, we may carry red hot Iron in them, or put them into melted Metall, or go with our whole bodies, being first anointed therewith, into the Fire without any manner of harm, and such like things as these may be done. There is also a kind of flax, which Pliny calls Asbestum, the Greeks call Ασβεζον, which is not consumed by Fire, of which Anaxilaus saith, that a Tree compassed about with it, may be cut down with insensible blows, that cannot be heard.

Chap. x. Of the Occult Vertues of things.

There are also other vertues in things, which are not from any Element, as to expell poyson [poison], to drive away the noxious vapours of Minerals, to attract Iron, or any thing else; and these vertues are a sequell of the species, and form of this or that thing; whence also they being little in quantity, are of great efficacy; which is not granted to any Elementary quality. For these vertues having much form, and little matter, can do very much; but an Elementary vertue, because it hath more materiality, requires much matter for its acting. And they are called occult qualities, because their Causes lie hid, and mans intellect cannot in any way reach, and find them out. Wherefore Philosophers have attained to the greatest part of them by long experience, rather then by the search of reason: for as in the Stomack [stomach] the meat is digested by heat, which we know; so it is changed by a certain hidden vertue which we know not: for truly it is not changed by heat, because then it should rather be changed by the Fire side, then in the Stomack [stomach]. So there are in things, besides the Elementary qualities which we know, other certain imbred vertues created by nature, which we admire, and are amazed at, being such as we know not, and indeed seldom or never have seen. As we read in Ovid of the Phoenix, one only Bird, which renews her self.

*All Birds from others do derive their birth,
But yet one Fowle there is in all the Earth,
Call'd by th' Assyrians Phoenix, who the wain
Of age, repairs, and sows her self again.*

And in another place,

*Ægyptus came to see this wondrous sight:
And this rare Bird is welcom'd with delight.*

Long since Metreas [Matreas] brought a very great wonderment upon the Greeks, and Romans concerning himself. He said that he nourished, and bred a beast that did devour it self. Hence many to this day are solicitous, what this beast of Matreas should be. Who would not wonder that Fishes should be digged out of the Earth, of which Aristotle, Theophrastus, and Polybius the Historian makes mention? And those things which Pausanius wrote concerning the singing Stones? All these are effects of occult vertues. So the Estrich [ostrich] concocts cold, and most hard Iron, and digests it into nourishment for his body; whose Stomack [stomach] they also report, cannot be hurt with red hot Iron. So that little Fish called Echeneis doth so curb the violence of the Winds, and appease the rage of the Sea, that, let the Tempests be never so imperious, and raging, the Sails also bearing a full Gale, it doth notwithstanding by its meer touch stay the Ships, and makes them stand still, that by no means they can be moved. So Salamanders, and Crickets live in the Fire; although they seem sometimes to burn, yet they are not hurt. The like is said of a kind of Bitumen, with which the weapons of the Amazons were said to be smeared over, by which means they could be spoiled neither with Sword nor Fire; with which also the Gates of Caspia, made of Brass, are reported to be smeared over by Alexander the great. We read also that Noah's Ark was joyned together with this Bitumen, and that it endured some thousands of years upon the Mountains of Armenia. There are many such kind of wonderfull things, scarce credible, which notwithstanding are known by experience. Amongst which Antiquity makes mention of Satyrs, which were Animals, in shape half men, and half bruits [brutes], yet capable of speech, and reason; one whereof S. Hierome reporteth, spake once unto holy Antonius the Hermite, and condemned the error of the Gentiles, in worshipping such poor creatures as they were, and desired him that he would pray unto the true God for him; also he affirms that there was one of them shewed openly alive, and afterwards sent to Constantine the Emperour.

Chap. xi. How Occult Vertues are infused into the severall kinds of things by Idea's, through the help of the Soul of the World, and rayes of the Stars: and what things abound most with this Vertue.

Platonists say that all inferiour bodies are exemplified by the superiour Ideas. Now they define an Idea to be a form, above bodies, souls, minds, and to be one, simple, pure, immutable, indivisible, incorporeal, and eternall: and that the nature of all Idea's is the same. Now they place Idea's in the first place in very goodness it self (i.e.) God, by way of cause; and that they are distinguished amongst themselves by some relative considerations only, least whatsoever is in the world, should be but one thing without any variety, and that they agree in essence, least God should be a compound substance. In the second place, they place them in the very intelligible it self (i.e.) in the Soul of the world, differing the one from the other by absolute forms, so that all the Idea's in God indeed are but one form: but in the Soul of the world they are many. They are placed in the minds of all other things, whether they be joyned to the body, or separated from the body, by a certain participation, and now by degrees are distinguished more, and more. They place them in nature, as certain small seed of forms infused by the Idea's, and lastly they place them in matter, as Shadows. Hereunto may be added, that in the Soul of the world there be as many Seminal Forms of things, as Idea's in the mind of God, by which forms she did in the Heavens above the Stars frame to her self shapes also, and stamped upon all these some properties; on these Stars therefore, shapes, and properties, all vertues of inferiour species, as also their properties do depend; so that every species hath its Celestiall shape, or figure that is sutable [suitable] to it from which also proceeds a wonderfull power of operating, which proper gift it receives from its own Idea, through the Seminal forms of the Soul of the world. For Idea's are not only essential causes of every species, but are also the causes of every vertue, which is in the species: and this is that which many Philosophers say, that the properties which are in the nature of things (which vertues indeed are the operations of the Idea's) are moved by certain vertues, viz. such as have a certain, and sure foundation, not fortuitous, nor casuall, but efficacious, powerfull, and sufficient, doing nothing in vain. Now these Vertues do not err in their actings, but by accident, viz. by reason of the impurity, or inequality of the matter: For upon this account there are found things of the same species, more, or less powerful, according to the purity, or indisposition of the matter; for all Celestial Influences may be hindred by the indisposition, and insufficiency of the matter. Whence it was a Proverb amongst the Platonists, That Celestial Vertues were infused according to the desert of the matter: Which also Virgil makes mention of, when he sings,

*Their natures fiery are, and from above,
And from gross bodies freed, divinely move.*

Wherefore those things in which there is less of the Idea of the matter (i.e.) such things which have a greater resemblance of things separated, have more powerfull vertues in operation, being like to the operation of a separated Idea. We see then that the situation, and figure of Celestials is the cause of all those excellent Vertues, that are in inferiour species.

Chap. xii. How it is that particular Vertues are infused into particular Individuals, even of the same Species.

There are also in many Individuals, or particular things, peculiar gifts, as wonderfull, as in the species, and these also are from the figure, and situation of Celestiall Stars. For every Individuall, when it begins to be under a determined Horoscope, and Celestiall Constellation, Contracts together with its essence a certain wonderfull vertue both of doing, and suffering something that is remarkable, even besides that which it receives from its species, and this it doth partly by the influence of the Heaven, and partly through that obediencialness of the matter of things to be generated, to the Soul of the World, which obediencialness indeed is such as that of our bodies to our souls. For we perceive that there is this in us, that according to our conceptions of things, our bodies are moved, and that cheerfully, as when we are afraid of, or fly from any thing. So many times when the Celestiall souls conceive several things, then the matter is moved obediencially to it: Also in Nature there appear divers prodigies, by reason of the imagination of superiour motions. So also they conceive, & imagine divers vertues, not only things naturall, but also sometimes things artificial, and this especially if the Soul of the operator be inclined towards the same. Whence Avicen saith, that whatsoever things are done here, must have been before in the motions, and conceptions of the Stars, and Orbes. So in things, various effects, inclinations, and dispositions are occasioned not only from the matter variously disposed, as many suppose, but from a various influence, and diverse form; not truly with a specifical difference, but peculiar, and proper. And the degrees of these are variously distributed by the first Cause of all things, God himself, who being unchangeable, distributes to every one as he pleaseth, with whom notwithstanding second Causes, Angelical and Celestial, cooperate, disposing of the Corporeal matter, and other things that are committed to them. All vertues therefore are infused by God, through the Soul of the World, yet by a particular power of resemblances, and intelligences over-ruling them, and concourse of the rayes, and aspects of the Stars in a certain peculiar harmonious consent.

Chap. xiii. Whence the Occult Vertues of things proceed.

It is well known to all, that there is a Certain vertue in the Loadstone, by which it attracts Iron, and that the Diamond doth by its presence take away that vertue of the Loadstone: so also Amber, and jeat [jet] rubbed, and warmed draw a straw to them, and the Stone Asbestus [asbestos] being once fired is never, or scarce extinguished: a Carbuncle shines in the dark, the Stone Aetites put above the young fruit of Women, or Plants, strengthens them, but being put under, causeth abortion; the Jasper stencheth [stauncheth] blood; the little fish Echeneis stops the ships: Rhubarb expels choller [choler]; the liver of the Camelion [Chameleon] burnt, raiseth showers, and thunders. The Stone Heliotrope dazles [dazzles] the sight, and makes him that wears it to be invisible, the Stone Lycurius takes away delusions from before the eyes, the perfume of the Stone Lypparis calls forth all the beasts, the Stone Synochitis brings up infernal Ghosts, the Stone Anachitis makes the images of the Gods appear. The Ennecis put under them that dream, causeth Oracles. There is an Hearb [herb] in Æthiopia [Ethiopia], with which they report ponds, and lakes are dried [dried] up, and all things that are shut, to be opened; and we read of an Hearb [herb] called Latace which the Persian Kings give to their Embassadors, that whithersoever they shall come, they shall abound with plenty of all things. There is also a Scythian Hearb [herb], with which being tasted, or at least held in the mouth, they report the Scythians will endure twelve dayes hunger, and thirst; and Apuleius saith, that he was taught by an Oracle that there were many kinds of Hearbs [herbs], and Stones, with which men might prolong their lives for ever, but that it was not lawfull for men to understand the knowledge of those things, because, whereas they have but a short time to live, they study mischief with all their might, and attempt all manner of wickedness; if they should be sure of a very long time, they would not spare the Gods themselves. But from whence these vertues are, none of all these have shewed, who have set forth huge Volumes of the properties of things, not Hermes, not Bochus, not Aaron, not Orpheus, not Theophrastus, not Thebith, not Zenothemis, not Zoroaster, not Evax, not Dioscorides, not Isaick the Jew, not Zacharias the Babilonian [Babylonian], not Albertus, not Arnoldus; and yet all these have confessed the same, that Zacharias writes to Mithridites, that great power, and humane destinies are couched in the vertues of Stones and Hearbs [herbs]. But to know from whence these come, a higher speculation is required. Alexander the peripateticke not going any further then his senses, and qualities, is of the opinion that these proceed from Elements, and their qualities, which haply might be supposed to be true, if those were of the same species; but many of the operations of the Stones agree neither in genere, nor specie. Therefore Plato, and his Schollers [scholars] attribute these vertues to Idea's, the formers of things. But Avicen reduceth these kinds of operations to Intelligencies, Hermes to the Stars, Albertus to the specificall forms of things. And although these Authors seem to thwart one the other, yet none of them, if they be rightly understood, goes beside the truth: since all their sayings are the same in effect in most things. For God in the first place is the end, and begining of all Vertues, he gives the seal of the Idea's to his servants the Intelligencies; who as faithfull officers sign all things intrusted [entrusted] to them with an Ideall Vertue, the Heavens, and Stars, as instruments, disposing the matter in the mean while for the receiving of those forms which reside in Divine Majesty (as saith Plato in Timeus) and to be conveyed by Stars; and the Giver of forms distributes them by the Ministry of his Intelligencies, which he hath set as Rulers, and Controllers over his Works, to whom such a power is intrusted in things committed to them, that so all Vertues of Stones, Hearbs [herbs], Metals, and all other things may come from the Intelligencies, the Governours. The Form therefore, and Vertue of things comes first from the Idea's, then from the ruling, and governing Intelligencies, then from the aspects of the Heavens disposing, and lastly from the tempers of the Elements disposed, answering the influencies of the Heavens, by which the Elements themselves are ordered, or disposed. These kinds of operations therefore are performed in these inferiour things by express forms, and in the Heavens by disposing vertues, in Intelligencies by mediating rules, in the original Cause by Idea's, and exemplary forms, all which must of necessity agree in the execution of the effect, and vertue of every thing.

There is therefore a wonderfull vertue, and operation in every Hearb [herb] and Stone, but greater in a Star, beyond which, even from the governing Intelligencies every thing receiveth, and obtains many things for it self, especially from the Supream Cause, with whom all things do mutually, and exactly correspond, agreeing in an harmonious consent, as it were in Hymnes, alwaies praising the highest Maker of all things, as by the three Children in the fiery furnace were all things called upon to praise God with singings. Bless ye the Lord all things that grow upon the Earth, and all things which move in the Waters, all fowls of the Heavens, Beasts, and Cattle, together with the sons of men. There is therefore no other cause of the necessity of effects, then the connexion [connection] of all things with the first Cause, and their correspondency with those Divine patterns, and eternall Idea's, whence every thing hath its determinate, and particular place in the exemplary world, from whence it lives, and receives its originall being; And every vertue of Hearbs [herbs], Stones, Metals, Animals, Words, and Speeches, and all things that are of God, is placed there. Now the first Cause, which is God, although he doth by Intelligencies, and the Heavens work upon these inferiour things, doth sometimes (these Mediums being laid aside, or their officiating being suspended) works those things immediatly by himself, which works then are called Miracles: But whereas secondary causes, which Plato, and others call handmaids, do by the Command, and appointment of the first Cause, necessarily act, and are necessitated to produce their effects, if God shall notwithstanding according to his pleasure so discharge, and suspend them, that they shall wholly desist from the necessity of that Command, and appointment; then they are called the greatest Miracles of God. So the fire in the Chaldeans furnace did not burn the Children: So also the Sun at the Command of Joshua went back from its course the space of one whole day; so also at the prayer of Hezekiah it went back ten degrees, or hours. So when Christ was Crucified the Sun was darkened, though at full Moon: And the reasons these operations can by no rationall discourse, no Magick, or occult, or profound Science whatsoever be found out, or understood, but are to be learned, and inquired into by Divine Oracles only.

Chap. xiv. Of the Spirit of the World, what it is, and how by way of medium it unites occult Vertues to their subjects.

Democritus and Orpheus, and many Pythagorians having most diligently searched into the vertues of Celestiall things, and natures of inferior things, said, That all things are full of God, and not without cause: For there is nothing of such transcending vertues, which being destitute of Divine assistance, is content with the nature of it self. Also they called those Divine Powers which are diffused in things, Gods: which Zoroaster called Divine allurements, Synesius Symbolicall inticements, others called them Lives, and some also Souls, saying, that the vertues of things did depend upon these; because it is the property of the Soul to be from one matter extended into divers things, about which it operates: So is a man, who extends his intellect unto intelligible things, and his imagination unto imaginable things; and this is that which they understood, when they said, viz. That the Soul of one thing went out, and went into another thing, altering it, and hindering the operations of it: As the Diamond hinders the operation of the Loadstone, that it cannot attract Iron. Now seeing the Soul is the first thing that is moveable, and as they say, is moved of it self; but the body, or the matter is of it self unable, and unfit for motion, and doth much degenerate from the Soul, therefore they say there is need of a more excellent Medium, viz. Such a one that may be as it were no body, but as it were a Soul, or as it were no Soul, but as it were a body, viz. by which the soul may be joyned to the body. Now they conceive such a medium to be the spirit of the World, viz. that which we call the quintessence: because it is not from the four Elements, but a certain first thing, having its being above, and besides them. There is therefore such a kind of spirit required to be, as it were the medium, whereby Celestiall Souls are joynd to gross bodies, and bestow upon them wonderfull gifts. This spirit is after the same manner in the body of the world, as ours is in the body of man. For as the powers of our soul are communicated to the members of the body by the spirit, so also the Vertue of the Soul of the World is diffused through all things by the quintessence: For there is nothing found in the whole world, that hath not a spark of the Vertue thereof. Yet it is more, nay most of all infused into those things which have received, or taken in most of this spirit: Now this spirit is received or taken in by the rayes of the Stars, so far forth as things render themselves conformable to them. By this spirit therefore every occult property is conveyed into Hearbs [herbs], Stones, Metals, and Animals, through the Sun, Moon, Planets, and through Stars higher then the Planets. Now this spirit may be more advantageous to us, if any one knew how to separate it from the Elements: or at least to use those things chiefly, which do most abound with this spirit. For these things, in which this spirit is less drowned in a body, and less checked by matter, do more powerfully, and perfectly act, and also more readily generate their like: for in it are all generative, & seminary Vertues. For which cause the Alchymists [alchemists] endeavour to separate this spirit from Gold, and Silver; which being rightly separated, and extracted, if thou shalt afterward project upon any matter of the same kind (i.e.) any Metall, presently will turn it into Gold, or Silver. And we know how to do that, and have seen it done: but we could make no more Gold, then the weight of that was, out of which we extracted the spirit. For seeing that is an extense form, and not intense, it cannot beyond its own bounds change and imperfect body into a perfect: which I deny not, but may be done by another way.

Chap. xv. How we must find out, and examine the Vertues of things by way of similitude.

It is now manifest that the occult properties in things are not from the nature of the Elements, but infused from above, hid from our senses, and scarce at last known by our reason, which indeed come from the Life, and the Spirit of the World, through the rayes of the Stars: and can no otherwise but by experience, and conjecture be enquired into by us. Wherefore, he that desires to enter upon this study must consider, that every thing moves, and turns it self to its like, and inclines that to it self with all its might, as well in property, viz. Occult vertue, as in quality, viz. Elementary vertue. Sometimes also in substance it self, as we see in Salt, for whatsoever hath long stood with Salt, becomes Salt: for every agent, when it hath begun to act, doth not attempt to make a thing inferiour to it self, but as much as may be, like, and sutable [suitable] to it self. Which also we manifestly see in sensible Animals, in which the nutritive Vertue doth not change the meat into an Hearb [herb], or a Plant, but turns it into sensible flesh. In what things therefore there is an excess of any quality, or property, as heat, cold, boldness, fear, sadness, anger, love, hatred, or any other passion, or Vertue; whether it be in them by nature, or sometimes also by art, or chance, as boldness in a harlot; these things do very much move, and provoke to such a quality, passion, or Vertue. So Fire moves to Fire, and Water moves to Water, and be that is bold moves to boldness. And it is well known amongst Physitians [physicians], that brain helps the brain, and lungs, the lungs. So also it is said, that the right eye of a Frog helps the soreness of a mans right eye, and the left eye thereof helps the soreness of his left eye, if they be hanged about his neck in a Cloth of its naturall Colour: The like is reported of the eyes of a Crab. So the foot of a Tortoise helps them that have the Gout in their being applyed thus, as foot to foot, hand to hand, right to right, left to left.

After this manner they say, that any Animall that is barren causeth another to be barren; and of the Animall, especially the Testicles, Matrix [womb], or Urin [urine]. So they report that a woman shall not conceive, if she drink every moneth of the Urin [urine] of a Mule, or any thing steeped in it. If therefore we would obtain any property or Vertue, let us seek for such Animals, or such other things whatsoever, in which such a property is in a more eminent manner then in any other thing, and in these let us take that part in which such a property, or Vertue is most vigorous: as if at any time we would promote love, let us seek some Animall which is most loving, of which kind are Pigeons, Turtles, Sparrows, Swallows, Wagtailes: and in these take those members, or parts, in which the Venerall [venereal, i.e. sexual] appetite is most vigorous, such as the heart, testicles, matrix [womb], yard [penis], sperme, and menstrues. And it must be done at that time when these Animals have this affection most intense: for then they do provoke, and draw love. In like manner to increase boldness, let us look for a Lyon [lion], or a Cock, and of these let us take the heart, eyes, or forehead. And so we must understand that which Psellus the Platonist saith, viz. that Dogs, Crows, and Cocks conduce much to watchfulness: also the Nightingale, and Bat, and horn Owle [horned owl], and in these the heart, head, and eyes especially. Therefore it is said, if any shall carry the heart of a Crow, or a Bat about him, he shall not sleep till he cast it away from him. The same doth the head of a Bat dried [dried], and bound to the right arme of him that is awake, for if it be put upon him when he is asleep, it is said, that he shall not be awaked till it be taken off from him. After the same manner doth a Frog, and an Owle make one talkative and of these specially the tongue, and heart; So the tongue also of a Water-frog laid under the head, makes a man speak in his sleep, and the heart of a scrich-Owle [screech-owl] laid upon the left breast of a woman that is asleep is said to make her utter all her secrets. The same also the heart of the horn Owle [horned owl] is said to do, also the sewet [suet] of a Hare laid upon the breast of one that is asleep. Upon the same account do Animals that are long lived, conduce to long life; and whatsoever things have a power in themselves, to renew themselves, conduce to the renovation of our body, and restoring of youth, which Physitians [physicians] have often professed they know to be true; as is manifest of the Viper, and Snake. And it is known that Harts renew their old age by the eating of Snakes. After the same manner the Phoenix is renewed by a fire which she makes for her self; and the like vertue there is in a Pellican [pelican], whose right foot being put under warm dung, after three moneths [months] there is of that generated a Pellican [pelican]. Therefore some Physitians [physicians] by some certain confections made of Vipers, and Hellebor [hellebore], and the flesh of some such kind of Animals do restore youth, and indeed do sometimes restore it so, as Medea restored old Pileas. It is also believed that the blood of a Bear, if it be sucked out of her wound, doth increase strength of body, because that Animall is the strongest creature.

Chap. xvi. How the operations of several Vertues pass from one thing into another, and are communicated one to the other.

Thou must know, that so great is the power of naturall things, that they not only work upon all things that are neer them, by their Vertue, but also besides this, they infuse into them a like power, through which by the same Vertue they also work upon other things, as we see in the Loadstone, which Stone indeed doth not only draw Iron Rings, but also infuseth a Vertue into the Rings themselves, whereby they can do the same, which Austin [Augustine] and Albertus [Magnus] say they saw. After this manner it is, as they say, that a common harlot, grounded in boldness, and impudence doth infect all that are neer her, by this property, whereby they are made like her self. Therefore they say that if any one shall put on the inward garment of an Harlot, or shall have about him that looking glass, which she daily looks into, he shall thereby become bold, confident, impudent, and wanton. In like manner they say, that a cloth that was about a dead Corpse hath received from thence the property of sadness, and melancholy; and that the halter wherewith a man was hanged hath certain wonderfull properties. The like story tels Pliny, if any shall put a green Lizard made blind, together with Iron, or Gold Rings into a glass-vessel, putting under them some earth, and then shutting the vessel, and when it appears that the Lizard hath received his sight, shall put him out of the glass, that those Rings shall help sore eyes. The same may be done with Rings, and a Weesel [weasel], whose eyes after they are with any kind of prick put out, it is certain are restored to sight again. Upon the same account Rings are put for a certain time in the nest of Sparrows, or Swallows, which afterwards are used to procure love, and favor.

Chap. xvii. How by enmity and friendship the vertues of things are to be tryed, and found out.

In the next place it is requisite that we consider that all things have a friendliness, and enmity amongst themselves, and every thing hath something that it fears & dreads, that is an enemy, and destructive to it; and on the contrary something that it rejoyceth, and delighteth in, and is strengthened by. So in the Elements, Fire is an enemy to Water, and Aire to Earth, but yet they agree amongst themselves. And again, in Celestiall bodies, Mercury, Jupiter, the Sun, and Moon are friends to Saturn; Mars, and Venus enemies to him, all the Planets besides Mars are friends to Jupiter, also all besides Venus hate Mars; Jupiter, and Venus love the Sun, Mars, Mercury, and the Moon are enemies to him, all besides Saturne love Venus; Jupiter, Venus, and Saturne are friends to Mercury, the Sun, Moon, and Mars his enemies. Jupiter, Venus, Saturne are friends to the Moon, Mars, and Mercury her enemies. There is another kind of enmity amongst the Stars, viz. when they have opposite houses; as Saturne to the Sun and Moon, Jupiter to Mercury, Mars to Venus. And their enmity is stronger, whose exaltations are opposite: as of Saturne, and the Sun; of Jupiter, and Mars; of Venus, and Mercury. But their friendship is the strongest, who agree in nature, quality, substance, and power; as Mars with the Sun, as Venus with the Moon, as Jupiter with Venus, as also their friendship whose exaltation is in the house of another, as that of Saturne with Venus, of Jupiter with the Moon, of Mars with Saturn, of the Sun with Mars, of Venus with Jupiter, of the Moon with Venus. And of what sort the friendships, and enmities of the superiours be, such are the inclinations of things subjected to them in these inferiour. These dispositions therefore of friendship, and enmity are nothing else but certain inclinations of things of the one to another, desiring such, and such a thing if it be absent, and to move towards it, unless it be hindered, and to acquiesce [acquiesce] in it when it is obtained, shunning the contrary, and dreading the approach of it, and not resting in, or being contented with it. Heraclitus therefore being guided by this opinion, professed that all things were made by enmity & friendship. Now the inclinations of Friendship are such in Vegetables and Minerals, as is that attractive inclination, which the Loadstone hath upon Iron, and the Emrald [emerald] upon riches, and favour; the Jasper upon the birth of any thing, and the Stone Achates upon Eloquence; In like manner there is a kind of Bituminous Clay that draws Fire, and leaps into it, wheresoever it sees it: Even so doth the root of the Hearb [herb] Aproxis draw Fire from afar off. Also the same inclination there is betwixt the male palme, and female: whereof when the bough of one shall touch the bough of the other, they fold themselves into mutual embraces, neither doth the female bring forth fruit without the male. And the Almond tree, when she is alone is less fruitfull. The Vines love the Elme, and the Olive-tree, and myrtle love one the other: also the Olive-tree, and Fig tree. Now in Animals there is amity betwixt the Blackbird, and Thrush, betwixt the Crow, and Heron, betwixt Peacocks, and Pigeons, Turtles, and Parrats [parrots]. Whence Sappho writes to Phaon.

*To Birds unlike oftimes joyned are white Doves;
Also the Bird that's green, black Turtle loves.*

Again, the Whale, and the little Fish his guide are friendly. Neither is this amity in Animals amongst themselves, but also with other things, as with Metals, Stones, and Vegetables, so the Cat delights in the Hearb [herb] Nip [catnip], by rubbing her self upon which she is said to conceive without a male; and there be Mares in Cappadocia, that expose themselves to the blast of the wind, and by the attraction thereof conceive. So Frogs, Toads, Snakes, and all manner of creeping poisonous things delight in the Plant called Pas-flower, of whom, as the Physitians [physicians] say, if any one eat, he shall dye [die] with laughing. The Tortoise also when he is hunted by the Adder, eats Origanum [origano], and is thereby strengthened: and the Stork, when he hath eat Snakes, seeks for a remedy in Origanum [origano]: and the Weesell [weasel], when he goes to fight with the Basilisk, eats Rue, whence we come to know that Origanum [origano], and Rue are effectuell against poison. So in some Animals there is an imbred skil, and medicinall art; for when the Toad is wounded with a bite or poison of another Animall, he is wont to go to Rue, or Sage, and Rub the place wounded, and so escapes the danger of the poison. So men have learned many excellent remedies of diseases, & vertues of things from bruits [brutes]; So Swallows have shewed us that Sallendine is very medicinable for the sight, with which they cure the eyes of their young, and the pye when she is sick, puts a Bay-leafe into her nest, and is recovered. In like maner, Cranes, Dawes [jackdaws], Partriges [partridges], Blackbirds purge their nauseous stomacks [stomachs] with the same, with which also Crows allay the poison of the Chameleon; and the Lyon [lion], if he be feavorish [feverish], is recovered by eating of an Ape. The Lapwing being surfetted [surfeited] with eating of Grapes, cures himself with Southernwood; so the Harts have taught us that the Hearb [herb] Ditany is very good to draw out Darts; for they being wounded with an Arrow, cast it out by eating of this Hearb [herb]: the same do Goats in Candy. So Hinds, a little before they bring forth, purge themselves with a certain Hearb [herb] called Mountain Osier. Also they that are hurt with Spiders, seek a remedy by eating of Crabs: Swine also being hurt by Snakes cure themselves by eating of them; and Crows when they perceive they are poisoned with a kinde of French poison, seek for cure in the Oake; Elephants, when they have swallowed a Chameleon help themselves with the wild olive. Bears being hurt with Mandrakes, escape the danger by eating of Pismires [ants]. Geese, Ducks, and such like watery fowle, cure themselves with the Hearb [herb] called will-sage. Pigeons, Turtles, Hens, with the Hearb [herb] called Pellitory of the wall. Cranes with Bull-rushes [bulrushes]. Leopards cure themselves, being hurt, with the HEarb [herb] called Wolfes-bane, by mans dung: Boars with Ivy, Hinds with the Hearb [herb] called Cinnara.

Giordano Bruno's De Magia, written ca. 1590, deals explicitly with magic. It remained unpublished until Tocco's 1891 edition.

DE MAGIA

Iordani Bruni Nolani

Antequam De magia, sicut antequam de quocunque subiecto disseratur, nomen in sua significata est dividendum; totidem autem sunt significata magiae, quot et magi. Magus primo sumitur pro sapiente, cuiusmodi erant Trimegisti apud Aegyptios, Druidae apud Gallos, Gymnosophistae apud Indos, Cabalistae apud Hebraeos, Magi apud Persas (qui a Zoroastre), Sophi apud Graecos, Sapientes apud Latinos. Secundo sumitur magus pro faciente mirabilia sola applicatione activorum et passivorum, ut est medicina et chymia secundum genus; et haec est naturalis magia communiter dicta. Tertio magia est cum huiusmodi adduntur circumstantiae, quibus apparent opera naturae vel intelligentiae superioris ad concitandam admirationem per apparentia; et est ea species quae praestigatoria appellatur. Quarto cum ex antipathiae et sympathiae rerum virtute, ut per ea quae pellunt, transmutant et attrahunt, ut sunt species magnetis et similium, quorum opera non ad qualitates activas et passivas reducuntur, sed omnia ad spiritum seu animam in rebus existentem referuntur; et haec proprie vocatur magia naturalis. Quinto cum his adduntur verba, cantus, rationes numerorum et temporum, imagines, figurae, sigilla, characteres seu litterae; et haec etiam est magia media inter naturalem et extranaturalem vel supra, quae proprie magia mathematica inscriberetur, et nomine occultae philosophiae magis congrue inscriberetur. Sexto si isti accessat cultus seu invocatio intelligentiarum et efficientum exteriorum seu superiorum, cum orationibus, consecrationibus, fumigiis, sacrificiis, certis habitibus et ceremoniis ad Deos, daemones et heroas, tunc vel fit ad finem contrahendi spiritus in se ipso, cuius ipse fiat vas et instrumentum, ut appareat sapiens rerum, quam tamen sapientiam facile pharmaco unâ cum spiritu possit evacuare; et haec est magia desperatorum, qui fiunt vasa malorum daemonum, quae per Artem notoriam exaucupatur: aut est ad finem imperandi et praecipendi daemonibus inferioribus cum authoritate superiorum daemonum principum, hos quidem colendo et alliciendo, illos vero coniurando et adiurando, constringendo; et haec magia est transnaturalis seu metaphysica, et proprio nomine appellatur θεουργία. Septimo aut est adiuratio seu invocatio, non ad daemones et heroas, sed per istos ad hominum defunctorum animas acciendas, per eorum cadavera vel cadaverum partes ad oraculum aliquod suscipiendum, divinandum, cognoscendum de rebus absentibus et futuris; et haec species a materia et fine appellatur necromantia. Quod si materia non accedat, sed ab *ἐνεργουμέν excantante facta spiritus in eius visceribus incubantis invocatione oraculum perquiratur, tunc est magus, qui proprie Pythonicus appellatur; ita enim ab Apolline Pythio in templo illius solebant 'inspiritari', ut ita dicam. Octavo aut incantationi utcunque acceptae accedant rerum partes, indumenta, excrementa, superfluitates, vestigia et omnia quae tactu communicationem aliquam concepisse creduntur: et tunc aut haec fiunt ad solvendum, ligandum et infirmandum, tunc constituunt magum qui appellatur maleficus, si ad malum tendant, si ad bonum, ad numerum medicorum referantur, iuxta certam speciem atque viam medicinae; aut ad ultimam perniciem et exitium aspirant, tunc magos veneficos appellant. Nono magi dicuntur omnes qui ad divinandum quacunque ratione de rebus absentibus et futuris accinguntur, et isti generaliter divini a fine appellantur, quorum species primae aut sunt quatuor e principiis materialibus: igne, aëre, aqua et terra, unde dicuntur pyromantia, hydromantia, geomantia; aut a tribus obiectis cognitionis: naturali, mathematico et divino, et tunc sunt variae aliae species divinandi. A principiis enim naturalibus seu physicorum inspectione divinant augures, aruspices et caeteri huiusmodi; a mathematicorum inspectione secundum genus sunt geomantae, qui per numeros seu litteras seu lineas et figuras certas, item aspectus, irradiationes et situs planetarum et similium, divinant; a divinorum usu, ut sacrorum nominum, occursibus locorum, brevibus quibusdam rationibus et servatis circumstantiis, et hos ultimos nomine magorum nostrates non inscribunt, apud quos pro indigna usurpatione magus male sonat, sed dicitur non magia, sed prophetia. Ultimo sumitur magus et magia iuxta significationem indignam, ut inter istas non annumeretur neque adnumerata habeatur, ut magus sit maleficus utcunque stultus, qui ex commercio cum cacodaemone et pacto quodam pro facultate ad laedendum vel iuvandum est informatus; et iuxta hanc rationem sonat non apud sapientes vel ipsos quidem grammaticos, sed a quibusdam usurpatur nomen magi bardocucullis, qualis fuit ille qui fecit librum De malleo maleficarum, et ita hodie usurpatur ab omnibus huius generis scriptoribus, ut legere licet apud postillas, catechismos ignorantum et somniantium presbyterorum.

Nomen ergo magi quando usurpatur, aut cum distinctione est capiendum antequam definiatur, aut si absolute sumitur, tunc iuxta praeceptum logicorum et specialiter Aristotelis in V. Topicorum pro potissimo et nobilissimo significato est capiendum. A philosophis ut sumitur inter philosophos, tunc magus significat hominem sapientem cum virtute agendi. Stat tamen quod simpliciter prolatum sumitur pro eo quod communi voce significatur, et tunc alia communis vox est apud unum et aliud presbyterorum genus, qui multum philosophantur de quodam cacodaemone qui appellatur Diabolus, aliter iuxta communes mores diversarum gentium et credulitatis.

Hac praehabita distinctione generaliter magiam triplicem accipimus: divinam, physicam et mathematicam. Primi et secundi generis magia est necessario de genere bonorum et optimorum, tertii vero generis et bona est et mala, prout magi eadem bene et male utuntur. Quamvis in multis operationibus atque praecipuis haec tria genera concurrant, malitia tamen, idololatria, scelus et idolatriae crimen in tertio genere reperitur, ubi contingit errare et decipi, et per quod secundum genus per se bonum ad malum usum convertitur. Hic mathematicum genus non denominatur a speciebus mathematices communiter dictae, ut Geometriae, Arithmetices, Astronomiae, Optices, Musices etc., sed ab horum similitudine et cognatione; habet enim similitudinem cum Geometria propter figuras et characterismum, cum Musica propter incantationem, cum Arithmetica propter numeros, vices, cum Astronomia propter tempora et motus, cum Optica propter fascinia, et universaliter cum universo Mathematices genere, propter hoc quod vel mediat inter operationem divinam vel naturalem, vel participat de utraque, vel deficit ab utraque, sicut quaedam media sunt propter utriusque extremi participationem, quaedam vero propter utriusque exclusionem, secundum quem modum non tantum media dici potest, quantum tertium quoddam genus, non tantum inter utrumque, quantum extra utrumque. Ex dictis autem speciebus manifestum est quomodo divina, quomodo physica, quomodo alia ab his species est.

Ut autem ad particularia modo deveniamus, habent magi pro axiomate, in omni opere ante oculos habendum, influere Deum in Deos, Deos in (corpora caelestia seu) astra, quae sunt corporea numina, astra in daemones, qui sunt cultores et incolae astrorum, quorum unum est tellus, daemones in elementa, elementa in mixta, mixta in sensus, sensus in animum, animum in totum animal, et hic est descensus scalae; mox ascendit animal per animum ad sensus, per sensus in mixta, per mixta in elementa, per haec in daemones, per hos [in elementa, per haec] in astra, per ipsa in Deos incorporeos seu aethereae substantiae seu corporeitatis, per hos in animam mundi seu spiritum universi, per hunc in contemplationem unius simplicissimi optimi maximi incorporei, absoluti, sibi sufficientis. Sic a Deo est descensus per mundum ad animal, animalis vero est ascensus per mundum ad Deum; ille est in cacumine scalae, purus actus et activa potentia, lux purissima, in scalae vero radice est materia, tenebrae, pura potentia passiva, sic potens omnia fieri ex imis, sicut ille potens omnia facere ex supernis. Inter infimum et supremum gradum sunt species mediae, quarum superiores magis participant lucem et actum et virtutem activam, inferiores vero magis tenebras, potentiam et virtutem passivam.

Unde omnis lux, quae est in inferioribus, cum ad ea per superiora perveniat, eminentius est in superioribus; omnes quoque tenebrae, quae sunt in superioribus, fortius sunt in inferioribus. Non aequa tamen ratio est atque efficacia tenebrarum et lucis; lux enim diffunditur et penetrat usque ad ima et profunda tenebrarum, tenebrae vero non ita purissimum lucis orbem attingunt: itaque lux comprehendit tenebras, vincit et superat per infinitum, tenebrae vero nedum non comprehendunt neque exuperant neque exaequant lucem, sed mire deficiunt ab illius proportionem.

Iuxta tres praedictos magiae gradus tres mundi intelliguntur: archetypus, physicus et rationalis. In archetypo est amicitia et lis, in physico ignis et aqua, in mathematico lux et tenebrae. Lux et tenebrae descendunt ab igne et aqua, ignis et aqua a concordia et discordia; itaque primus mundus producit tertium per secundum, et tertius per secundum reflectitur ad primum. Praetermissis istis, quae ad eam, quae superstitiosa habetur, magiam principia spectant, quae, qualiacunque sint, indigna sunt vulgo, ad eorum tantum contemplationem convertemur, quae ad sapientiae supplementum conducunt, et melioribus ingeniis sufficere possunt; tametsi nullum magiae genus noticia et cognitione sit indignum, quandoquidem omnis scientia est de genere bonorum, sicut dicit Aristoteles in prooemio De anima, cui Thomas cum aliis magis contemplativis theologis astipulatur, omnis tamen a profano et scelesto vulgo et multitudine procul fieri oportet, quandoquidem nihil ita bonum est, quod per impium et sacrilegum et per se scelerosum hominum genus in perniciem potius quam in utilitatem consortis generis convertatur.

In genere duplex est efficiens: natura et voluntas. Voluntas mox triplex est: homo, humana, daemonis et divina. Natura in proposito est duplex: intrinseca et extrinseca. Intrinseca adhuc est duplex: materia seu subiectum, et forma cum virtute naturali. Extrinseca quoque duplex: quae potius naturae effigies dicitur, vestigium et umbra seu lux, et illa quae manet in re et in superficie subiecti, sicut lux et calor in sole et in aliis calidis, et illa quae emanat et effluit e subiecto, sicut lux quae funditur a sole et reperitur in rebus illuminatis, et calor qui cum luce in sole et reperitur in rebus calefactis. Ex istarum causarum numeri contemplatione possumus descendere ad diffundendam virtutem seu producendos effectus a prima causa per medias usque ad proximas et infimas, limitando causam universalem, quae non respicit plus hoc subiectum quam illud, ad effectum particularem disponendo plus hoc subiectum quam sit dispositum, quandoquidem stante eadem causa et virtute causae immutabili, pro diversa subiectione et administratione materiae contrarii (non solum diversi) producuntur effectus, unde ex parte principii efficientis sufficit unum et simplex illud, sicut unus sol, unus calor et una lux, conversione et aversione, appropinquatione et elongatione, mediate et immediate facit hiemem, aestatem, diversas et contrarias tempestatum et ordinum dispositiones. Ex eodem etiam materia, si credere volumus his qui vulgariter nominata elementa invicem transmutabilia suspicantur, quorum princeps fuit Plato, qui aliquando una materia et uno efficiente est contentus ad omnium productionem. Sed quicquid sit de operatione respectu primi operatoris et universalis, sive unum sive plura assumat materialia principia, quicumque est in genere secundarum causarum, sive homo sit sive daemon, est quod iuxta multitudinem et varietatem specierum operabilium recognoscat materias plures, habentes actum seu formam, per quem possit subiectum fundere aliquid extra se.

Virtutum seu formarum seu accidentium, quae de subiecto in subiectum deferuntur, aliae sunt manifestae, ut quae sunt in genere activarum et passivarum qualitatuum, et earum quae immediate consequuntur eas, ut sunt calefacere frigefacere, humectare siccare, mollificare indurare, congregare disgregare; aliae sunt occultiores iuxta occultos etiam effectus, ut exhilarare contristari, appetitum vel taedium immittere, timorem et audaciam, ut sunt motiva ab extrinsecis speciebus per opus cogitativae in homine et aestimativae in brutis appellant, quibus puer seu infans viso serpente et ovis viso lupo absque alia experientia concipit imaginem inimicitiae seu timorem mortis seu destructionis suae, quorum ratio refertur ad sensum internum, qui sane ex speciebus externis commovetur, mediate tamen. Natura enim ut dedit esse speciebus, item et appetitum unicuique rei conservandi se in praesenti statu, ita etiam impressit internum quendam spiritum, seu sensum dici mavis, rebus omnibus, quo maxime inimica ex quadam superscriptione cognoscant et fugiant, quod non solum in exemplificatis speciebus esse videmus, sed etiam in omnibus quae, emortua et manca esse videntur, in quibus nihilominus inest spiritus praesentem speciem conservare concupiscens pro viribus omnibus; ipsum in guttis cadentibus, quae, ne decendant, conglobantur, et in his quae ceciderunt, quae, ne diffuant et dispergantur, ad centrum adnituntur et ad globum se suis partibus fulcire nituntur; item in paleis seu festucis in ignem iniectis et pelliculis seu membranis, quae subsultant et quodammodo corruptionem suam refugiunt. Hic sensus quidam est in rebus omnibus quidem insitus et vita, quem pro more vulgi non dicimus animalem, ad animam particularem referendo, siquidem neque animalia istae partes possunt appellari, in ordine tamen universi, quem spiritus unus undique diffusus, atque sensus ubique et undique pro captu rei sentit tales effectus et passiones, in rebus omnibus licet contemplari. Sicut enim anima nostra ex toto corpore totum opus vitae producit primo et universaliter, mox tamen quamvis tota est in toto et tota in qualibet parte, non tamen ideo totum facit ex toto et totum ex qualibet parte, sed facit videre in oculo, audire in aure, gustare in ore (quod si ubique esset oculus, undique videret, si ubique organa essent omnium sensuum, undique omnino sentirent), ita et anima mundi in toto mundo, ubicunque talem est adepta materiam, ibi tale producit subiectum et inde tales edit operationes. Quamvis ergo aequaliter sit ubique, non aequaliter ubique agit, quia non aequaliter disposita ubique illi materia administratur. Sic ergo sicut anima tota est in toto corpore, et in ossibus et in venis et in corde, non magis praesens uni quam alteri parti, nec minus praesens uni quam omnibus et omnibus quam uni, tamen hic facit nervum esse nervum, ibi venam esse venam, ibi sanguinem esse sanguinem, ibi cor esse cor. Et ut istis accidit immutari vel per efficientem extrinsecum vel per intrinsecum principium passivum, ita et actum animae alium atque alium fieri necesse est. Hoc est praecipuum principium et radix omnium principiorum, ad reddendam causam omnium mirabilium quae sunt in natura, nempe quod ex parte principii activi, et spiritus seu animae universalis, nihil est tam inchoatum, mancum et imperfectum, tandemque ad oculos opinionis neglectissimum, quod non possit esse principium magnarum operationum; quin immo ut plurimum resolutionem ad huiusmodi fieri oportet, ut novus quasi mundus generetur ex ipsis. Utut enim auro similis sit aes quam cinis aeris, et illius perfectioni similis quam cinis ex aere, tamen in transmutatione hic cinis aeris propinquior est formae auri quam aes, ut etiam videmus semina omnia, quae proxima sunt producendae speciei, propius accedere ad hoc ut sint species ipsae, quam aliae species quantumlibet adsimiles et proximae et cognatae. Qui aliter credit in aequo est atque aliquis existimans facilius simiam formari posse in hominem, quam semen iniectum in matricem, quod proxime erat nutrimentum seu panis. Nihilominus tamen similitudinem et eiusdem speciei formam in omni productione necessarium est adesse, ut in artificialibus ab exemplari, quod est in mente artificis, fit domus et vestis, in productione naturali ab exemplari, quod est proximius materiae formandae, producuntur et definiuntur rerum species; ut videmus eandem nutrimenti speciem, idem caelum et aquam et domicilium converti in substantiam, canis in cane, hominis in homine, felis in fele, et per idem canis generat canem, homo hominem; ubi apertum est, quod tota discriminis causa est propter ideam, quae praesentatur ubique naturae generaliter et postea limitatur ad hanc et illam speciem, ut haec est proximior vel illa. Ita et magus quicumque vult perficere opera similia naturae, est quod praecipue cognoscat ideale principium, specificum quidem a specie, moxque numerale ad numerum, seu individuale ad individuum. Hinc illa imaginum fabrica, et materiae ita formatae portio, et non sine evidenti causa et virtute magi et philosophia confirmante effectum, multi maleficia et medicinam exercent per destinatas quasdam figuras cum certis partibus, vel his quae aliquam communicationem, participationem habent cum re maleficianda vel medenda, et ita opus contrahitur et limitatur ad certum individuum.

Et ex harum rerum experientia, aliis pratermissis rationibus, manifestum est omnem animam et spiritum habere quandam continuitatem cum spiritu universi, ut non solum ibi intelligatur esse et includi, ubi sentit, ubi vivificat, sed etiam in immensum per suam essentiam et substantiam sit diffusus, ut multi Platoniorum et Pythagoricorum senserunt. Hinc est quod species distantissimas visu apprehendit subito absque motu, absque hoc videlicet quod progrediatur oculus vel aliquid oculi repente ad stellas, vel repente a stellis ad oculum. Porro animus ipse cum sua virtute praesens est quodammodo universo, utpote talis substantia, quae non est inclusa corpori per ipsam viventi, quamvis eidem obligata, adstricta. Itaque certis remotis impedimentis, statim subitoque praesentes habet species remotissimas, quae non per motum illi coniunguntur, ut nemo inficiabitur; ergo et per praesentiam quandam. Ipsum et experientia docet in ipsis, qui abscisso naso novum sibi ex aliena carne succrescere fecerunt membrum; siquidem obeunte diem illo cuius erat caro, iuxta modum quo putrescit corpus illius, etiam mutuatus nasus ille putrescit. Hinc manifestum est animam plus se diffundere extra corpus, per totum horizontem suae naturae. Hinc accidit ut non solum sua membra cognoscat, sed etiam omnia cum quibus aliquem usum et participationem et communionem contraxit. Neque est argumentum quod stupidi adducunt, carentes vero philosophiae principio, quod alio tacto aliud non sentit; quod sane uno modo est verum, distinguendo speciem a specie, individuum ab individuo, falsum autem est distinguendo partem a parte. Sicut enim si quis perstrinxerit digitum vel acu pupugerit unam corporis partem, totum subinde corpus turbabitur secundum omnia membra, non secundum illam solum partem, licet ab illa parte solum; (XIV thes.) ita cum animus cuiusque unius continuationem habeat cum anima universi, non sequitur ea impossibilitas, quae fertur in corporibus, quae non se mutuo penetrent; siquidem in substantiis spiritalibus huiusmodi alia est ratio, veluti si innumerae lampades sint accensae, quae concurrunt in virtutem unius luminis, non accidit ut alia alius lumen impediatur vel retundatur vel excludatur. Simile de multis vocibus simul per eundem aërem diffusis, item de multis radiis visualibus, ut more vulgi loquamur, quia ad idem visibile totum concipiendum explicantur, ubi omnes per idem medium penetrant, et alii oblique et recte, et non propterea alii alios obtundunt: ita innumerabiles spiritus et animae per idem spacium diffusae non se impediunt, ita ut diffusio unius diffusionem infinitarum aliarum impediatur.

Talis virtus cum sit non solum animae, sed et accidentium quorundam, sicut vocis, lucis, visus, ea ratione qua anima est tota in toto et qualibet parte corporis, et tota circa se extra corpus suum totas species longe sepositas atque diversas apprehendit, signum est quod secundum actum primum et substantiam non est inclusa corpori, non est videlicet circumscriptive in corpore, sed definitive tantum ad actus secundos in ipso et secundum ipsum explicandos. Ecce principium quo innumerabilium effectuum, qui admirationem faciunt, causa adducitur, ratio et virtus inquiritur; neque deterioris conditionis debet esse anima et substantia haec divina, quam accidentia quae procedunt ab ipsa tanquam eius effectus, vestigia et umbrae. Si inquam vox operatur extra proprium corpus, in quo enascitur, et est tota in innumerabilibus auribus circumcirca, cur non tota debet esse in diversis locis et partibus ea substantia quae vocem producit, et alligata certis membris?

Ad haec illud est quoque observandum, quod intelligentiae occultae non ad omnia idiomata aures advertunt aut intelligentiam; voces enim, quae sunt ex institutione hominum, non ita attenduntur sicut voces naturales. Propterea cantus, praecipue autem horum tragici (sicut notat Plotinus), in dubiis animae maximam habent efficaciam. Similiter et omnes scripturae non sunt eius momenti, cuius sunt characteres illi, qui certo ductu et figuratione res ipsas indicant, unde quaedam signa in invicem inclinata, se invicem respicientia, amplectentia, constringentia ad amorem; adverse vero declinantes, disiectae ad odium et divortium; concisae, mancae, disruptae ad perniciem; nodi ad vincula, explicati characteres ad dissolutionem. Et haec non sunt in quadam certa et definita forma, sed quilibet, pro dictamine sui furoris seu impetu sui spiritus, in ipsius operis patrationem, ut aliquid desiderat aut execratur, ita utcunque rem quodam impetu nodis ipsis sibi designans et veluti praesenti numini experitur certas vires, quas nullo eloquio et elaborata oratione vel scriptura experiretur. Tales erant litterae commodius definitae apud Aegyptios, quae hieroglyphicae appellantur seu sacri characteres, penes quos pro singulis rebus designandis certae erant imagines desumptae e rebus naturae vel earum partibus; tales scripturae et tales voces usu veniebant, quibus Deorum colloquia ad mirabilium exequutionem captabant Aegyptii; postquam per Teutum vel alium inventae sunt litterae secundum hoc genus quibus nos hodie utimur cum alio industriae genere, maxima tum memoriae tum divinae scientiae et magiae iactura facta est. Itaque ad illorum similitudinem quibusdam hodie fabrefactis imaginibus, descriptis characteribus et ceremoniis, qui consistunt in quodam gestu et quodam cultu, quasi per certos nutus vota sua explicant Magi quae intelligantur, et haec est illa Deorum lingua, quae aliis omnibus et quotidie millies immutatis semper manet eadem, sicut species naturae manet eadem. Eadem ratione numina nos alloquuntur per visiones, per insomnia, quae licet nobis aenigmata appellentur [tamen] propter desuetudinem et ignorantiam et hebetudinem nostrae capacitatis, tamen sunt ipsissimae voces et ipsissimi termini rerum repraesentabilium; sicut autem se habent istae voces ad nostrum captum, ita etiam se habent [se] nostrae voces latinae, graecae, italicae, ut audiantur et intelligantur a numinibus aliquando superioribus et aeviternis, qui differunt a nobis in specie, ita ut non facile nobis possit esse commercium cum illis, magis quam aquilis cum hominibus. Et sicut homines unius generis cum hominibus alius generis sine idiomatum communione non est conversatio neque contractio, nisi per nutus, ita et nobis cum certo numinum genere, non nisi per definita quaedam signa, sigilla, figuras, characteres, gestus et alias ceremonias, nulla potest esse participatio. Qui magiae ergo praesertim ea specie, quae theurgica est, sine huiusmodi vocibus et scripturis vix quippiam poterit magus promovere.

De respectu ad communionem seu consortium rerum.

Inde credere et considerare licet causam, qua non solum actio est ad propinqua, sed etiam ad remota secundum sensum; secundum rem enim, ut supra dictum est, per communionem spiritus universalis, qui est totus in toto et qualibet mundi parte. Unde evenit, ut sicut diversa lumina simul in eodem spacio concurrunt, ita et diversae secundum potentiam vel actum, secundum finitum sive secundum infinitum numerum animae in universo consociantur, corpora non ita, quorum esse circumscriptive a propria superficie seu peripheria definitur, quaeque secundum diversas partes etiam et innumerabiles in diversis et innumerabilibus locis consistunt (ubi locum intelligimus spacium). Sic ergo corpus nullo pacto agere potest in corpus, neque materia in materiam, neque eiusdem materiae partes et corporis in alias corporis partes agere possunt, sed omnis actio est a qualitate, a forma et tandem ab anima. Haec primum immutat dispositiones, ut deinde dispositiones mutant corpora. Sic corpus agit in corpus distans et in propinquum et in propriis partibus per consensum quendam, copulam et unionem, quae est a forma; et quia propterea omne corpus ab anima regitur seu spiritu quodam partes partibus connectente, ut accidit unam animam agere in alteram ubique et undique sibi propinquam, ita etiam necessario evenit, ut agat in corpus, ubicunque sit illud quod illi animae subministrat atque subest. Qui noverit ergo hanc animae continuationem indissolubilem et eam corpori quadam necessitate astrictam, habebit non mediocre principium, tum ad operandum, tum ad contemplandum verius circa rerum naturam. Et hinc prompta erit ratio qua non datur vacuum, nempe spacium sine corpore; neque etenim corpus unum ab uno loco recedit, nisi succedente altero. Anima enim corpus proprium in vita destituit, universum vero corpus ne quidem destituere potest, vel si mavis dicere ab universo corpore destitui; relinquens enim unum simplex seu compositum, in alterum seu compositum seu simplex deferetur, vel ab uno relicta corpore ab alio praevenitur vel subvenitur. Itaque indissolubilem habet nexum ad universalem materiam; quapropter cum ipsius natura sit ubique tota et continua, ubique materiam corpoream consistentem agnoscit. Hinc sequitur conclusio vacuum non esse utpote quod sit spacium sine corpore, sed vacuum esse utpote spacium in quo diversa corpora sibi succedant et moveantur. Hinc etiam continuus motus est partium corporis unius versus partes corporis alterius, nempe per continuum spacium et non interruptum quasi vacuo inter plenum et plenum mediante, nisi vacuum velimus appellare spacium in quo nullum corpus est sensibile.

(XVIII thes.) Corpus vere continuum est corpus insensibile, spiritus nempe aëreus seu aethereus, et illud est activissimum et efficacissimum, utpote animae coniunctissimum propter similitudinem, qua magis recedit a crassitie hebetioris substantiae sensibilis compositorum. Esse corpora insensibilia et spiritualia praedictae efficaciae; et a quibus vere in corporibus sensibilibus ipsis omnis est virtus, indicat aëreus ipse spiritus, qui mare universum concutit et discutit, et invictissimus ventorum impetus, qui serenissimo existente aëre purissimoque concutit terram, frangit arbores, diruit aedificia. Ut optime notat Lucretius, hoc corpus spiritale est quod omnia operatur in ipsis sensibilibus, unde ipsum ab anima differre non arbitrabantur plurimi philosophorum; unde illud poetae 'quantum ignes animaeque valent', hoc est aër. Ignis quoque, qui non in crassa materia consistit, ut carbones, et unde dicuntur ignita corpora, ab aëre non differre intelligitur nisi accidente quodam. Immo verus ignis est verus spiritus, qui in ignito est consistens, torpens; extra ignita est existens, vegetans; in flamma est in media quadam dispositione, veluti motu quodam. Per hunc spiritum diversimode formantur corpora diversa et animalia. Si non omnia corpora composita sunt animalia, omnia tamen animata intelligere oportet, nempe in omnibus unius generis animam, licet non unius et eiusdem actus, propter alias et alias materiae dispositiones et idearum obiectus. Hinc accidit ut, cum diversae sint formae et contrariae, nec non ratione et differentia, quibus alia cum aliis concurrant, ita etiam contraria sint loca appulsus et impetus, et alia fugiant ab aliis et alia persequantur alia, quod totum a compositionis conditione proficiscitur.

Utque omnia in proprio esse conservari desiderant, ita et invita a loco propriae conservationis et consistentiae divelluntur et non sine forti resistentia repugnant, quae adeo fortis est, ut non prius sol vel ignis aquam ad se trahat per aëreum spacium, quam illam aëri assimilaverit, nempe in vaporis consistentiam converterit; quod ubi factum fuerit, tunc illa substantia quae erat aqua non invita trahitur, sed eodem appulsu quo allicitur, per se ipsum etiam veluti consentiendo contendit, itaque paulatim magis atque magis ad ignis similitudinem accedens, fit tandem ipse ignis. E contra corpus, quod in forma ignis subtilissimum a spiritu continetur, ordine contrario concrescens seu crassescens in aquae remigrabit speciem. Sic ergo ab aqua ad vaporem, a vapore in aërem, ab aëre in tenuissimum et penetrativissimum aethereum corpus eiusdem substantiae et materiae fit immutatio, quam Aegyptii, Moises, Diogenes Apolloniates appellant spiritum, sed differunt, quia Moises spiritum ab anima non distinguit (ex editis verbis; de sensu enim illius non iudicamus), illi vero distinxerunt. Alia substantia est arida seu atomi, quae sunt corpora indissolubilia, solidissima, per se nullam continuitatem habentia neque divisibilitatem, et propterea convertibilia non sunt in aliud corpus; substantia enim aquae seu spiritus seu aëris, quae eadem est, nunquam in substantiam atomorum seu aridae commigrabit, neque e converso.

Summa et divina et vera, utpote maxime naturae consona, philosophia est, quae rerum principia posuit aquam, seu abyssum seu stygem, item aridam seu atomos seu terram (non inquam tellurem), item spiritum seu aërem seu animam, et quartum lucem; haec enim ita sunt ab invicem distincta, ut unum non possit unquam in alterius naturam transformari, sed bene concurrunt haec et associantur, ubi magis, ubi minus, ubi omnia, ubi quaedam.

De motu rerum duplici et attractione.

Duplex est rerum motus: naturalis et praeternaturalis; naturalis qui est a principio intrinseco, praeternaturalis qui a principio extrinseco; item naturalis qui est conveniens naturae, consistentiae vel generationi, praeternaturalis qui non. Et hic est duplex: violentus, qui est contra naturam; et ordinatus seu coordinabilis, qui non repugnat naturae. Motus naturalis communiter loquendo secundum omnia genera seu omnes categorias habetur, non discernentibus inter motum et mutationem. In praesentiarum omnibus aliis motibus et eorum speciebus omissis, de motu secundum locum naturali considerantes dicimus ipsum esse duplicem: alterum rerum naturaliter constitutarum et in proprio loco degentium, et hic motus aut est circularis, aut circulare motum imitatur; alius est rerum naturalium non naturaliter constitutarum, et hic motus est rectus. Recta enim aër movetur ad vacuum complendum; rectâ lapis per aërem, et corpora graviora per aquam penetrando deferuntur, ut locum, in quo vel naturaliter quiescant vel moveantur, habeant; rectâ, quantum possibile est, contrarium fugit a contrario, ut fumus, vapor, aqua ab igne (per eam enim lineam citius ad distantiora perducitur); rectâ etiam simile tendit ad simile et conveniens sibi, ut palea ad ambram, ferrum ad magnetem, ut melius et satius conquiescant vel commoveantur. Est tertia species motus, qui est partium omnium et fluxus et influxus ab omnibus corporibus naturalibus, quae circum undique aliquid secundum multiplicem rationem a se ipsis eiaculantur; et hic motus in praesentiarum appelletur sphaericus. Non enim est secundum unam lineam rectam vel ut a medio, vel ut ad medium, vel circa medium, sed secundum infinitas lineas velut ab eodem centro, quandoquidem a toto convexo perimetro seu superficie ab interno aliquid corpora omnia excutiunt et emittunt, rursum etiam in se ipsa recipiunt et immittunt; adolescent autem atque vigorantur, quando convenientiorum influxus superat effluxum, e contra vero senescunt, decrescunt, torpent, quando extraneorum influxus et naturalium effluxus fit maior, tandemque ex ista causa corruptio inest rebus et mutatio, quae mutatio omnis seu alteratio et dissolutio * * *. De duobus primi generis motibus nulla est controversia secundum sensum, ut eorum consideratio et enumeratio est vulgata; penitus vero consideranti tertius non modo verus atque conveniens, sed etiam necessarius invenietur. Ille sensibilis est maxime in illis, quae maxime sensibiles habent qualitates, ut in igne, qui non ad unum latus seu unam partem calefacit, sed circum undique, ubi repente exuscitatur, circum undique inflammat, illuminat; ita et vox, sonus, medio circum undique aequaliter disposito, circum undique aequaliter penetrat. Item secundum sensum olfactus est manifestum a rebus odoriferis continuo partes aliquas effluere; neque enim accidens illud sine certis partibus vel certa substantia diffluente compositum circumprogreditur. Similiter cum specie, simulacro et huiusmodi sensibilibus accidentibus innumerabilia alia accidentia cum certis quibusdam partibus effunduntur, quae sane partes mirum in modum remotae a minimis illis sensibilibus, ut est manifestum etiam in quibusdam quae per multos annos redolent, quantumlibet modicae quantitatis. Ultra huiusmodi sensibiles qualitates seu virtutes, quae circum sphaeraliter a corporibus transmittuntur, sunt et aliae, spiritaliores et hebetiores, quae agunt non solum in corpus et in sensum, sed etiam in penitiorem spiritum, et profundiores animae facultates attingunt incutiendo certos affectus et passiones, ut vulgatum est de virtute multorum lapidum, radicum, mineralium. Patet item in fascinationibus et in his, quae per oculi iactus perficiuntur active atque passive, ut regulus vel a longinquo homine prospecto visus acie perimit.

Quomodo magnes trahat ferrum, corallium sanguinem etc.

(XXII.) Ex istis sequitur ratio, qua magnes secundum genus attrahit. Porro attractio est duplex: quaedam ex consensu, ut quando partes moventur ad suum totum, locata ad suum locum, similia rapiuntur a similibus, et convenientia a convenientibus; alia est sine consensu, ut quando contrarium trahitur a contrario propter victoriam illius, quod non potest effugere, ut quando ab igne raptatur humor, ut patet in pelvi ignita superposita super pelvi aquam continente, quae virtute caloris sorbetur, ut raptim sursum ascendat. Idem est manifestum in vorticibus et turbinibus qui in mari accidunt, ut interdum ipsae naves cum undis in sublime ad multam distantiam rapiantur. Sic vero rapi contingit tripliciter. Uno pacto per rationes sensibiles, ut in istis modo numeratis, et etiam ut ubi cum aëris attractione et absorptione ea quae in aëre sunt etiam attrahuntur; et est manifestum etiam in fistulis, per quas aqua sorbetur, ad omnis loci differentias ascendendo, progrediendo per dictam rationem; quia, aëre in fistula contento attracto, cum alius aër loco illius succedere non possit, succedat aqua vel terra vel aliud quod locum impleat. Quod si nihil succedere possit, aër ipsa spatii vi revocatur et retinetur, ut patet interdum exugentibus vel ebibentibus orificio obstructo, quorum lingua vel labra virtute mediantis aëris atque compressi tenacissime orificio agglutinantur et vice versa exuguntur, ut ex eorum poris eliciatur spiritus ad instaurandum seu refovendum quod fuerat abstractum a loco seu spacio.

Est et alia attractionis species insensibilis, qua magnes trahit ferrum, cuius rationem non possumus referre ad vacuum vel huiusmodi, sed tantum ad effluxionem partium ab universis corporibus seu atomorum. Evenit enim ut ubi atomi unius generis ad atomos similis vel affinis congeni, vel genitabilis speciei, pervenerint mutuoque occurrerint, tunc accendatur appetitus et appulsus unius corporis ad alterum, ut subinde totum quod fuerit devictum ad potentius totum moveatur; ad quod enim omnes partes appulsum habent, et totum appellere necesse est. Hoc sensibiliter elucescit in lampadibus accensis, quarum si proxima inferior extinguatur, per ipsius fumum seu spiritus illos effluentes (qui in proxima sunt dispositione, ut sint flammei vel pabulum ignis) flamma descendet tanquam rapta deorsum ad accendendam inferiorem faciem. Ita etiam videtur in facis flammulis, quae ne perimantur absumpto humore in proprio subiecto, manifeste adnituntur ad materiam proxime dispositam, nempe ad locum maioris flammae, rectâ vel per transversum transcendendo vel progrediendo, proficiscuntur. Ita accidit devictis partibus ferri, quae ad magnetem quaquaversum discurrunt, per aliud genus virtutis seu qualitatis attractae (neque etenim omnis operatio in rebus naturalibus et huiusmodi mixtis ad qualitates duntaxat activas et passivas est referenda), licet interdum concurrant etiam necessario, non tamen principaliter. Quod vero per effluxum partium, qui fit ab huiusmodi subiectis, haec attractio proveniat, illud indicat, quod magnes perfrictus et ambra paleam trahendo et ferrum tanto amplius roborantur; calor enim ille maiorem partium effluxum inducit, in cuius virtute est poros aperire et corpus rarefacere.

Manifestum hinc est quoque simile iudicium quo modo suo rhabarbarum trahit choleram ab extremitatibus seu a partibus circumferentialibus animalis ad intestina, quando sufficientis fuerit virtutis, non inquam tantae ut quamprimum a natura expellatur antequam operetur, nec tam remisse, ut moveat tantum humorem et non attrahat. Quod etiam in magnete et similibus virtus et efficacia attractiva non sit a qualitate passiva vel activa, secundum vulgatum genus actionis vel passionis, veluti reperitur in quatuor elementorum formis, signum est quod et ipsum ferrum, quod fuerit a magnete contactum, imbuat vim eandem trahendi aliud ferrum. Quod si esset a qualitate elementari, non accideret hoc; calor enim et frigus accidentaliter advenientia subiectis cum ipsius calefacientis absentia evanescunt. Oportet igitur ad effluxum partium hoc referre, quae a magnete effluentes in ferrum influxere, spiritalis substantia. Aliam rationem horum effectuum vel verisimilem difficile est effingere, et hac perspecta, quae undique sibi constat, varias chymaeras et somnia, quibus alii huius attractionis causas sunt commenti, facile est examinare.

Ad idem iudicium refertur atque causam, quod adamas dicitur impedire hanc attractionem, similiter et varia varias alias, quae propria effluente virtute quadam nata sunt, hebetare alienam virtutem, sicut et alia quaedam intendere et acuere, ut fertur adamanta magnanimitatem animo deferentis inprimere.

(XXIII.) De attractione vero magnetis a polo, non facile est causam adducere, si non verum est illud quod aiunt, ad illam regionem montes similis speciei reperiri quamplurimos et magnos, quod tamen est difficilis persuasionis. Esto enim illud: quaeritur, quare ad omnem distantiam talis attractio fiat. Neque enim hic loquimur de attractione magnetis non activa sed passiva; num vero magnes magnetem trahat, hoc nondum sum expertus. Tales quoque montes si sunt et ad tantam distantiam virtutem habent, certe si a zona torrida trahunt acum vel tropicis, a nostris regionibus deberent trahere homines armatos; sed hoc omnino ludicrum videtur. Mitte quod magnes trahit ferrum, quando nihil intermediat praeter aërem, atque per lineam rectam, modo a regionibus nostris ad illas partes, ubi sunt montes et scopuli magnetis, ultra mare septentrionale, magnus terrae tumor intercedit. Traheret ergo magnes ferrum vel (si ratione similitudinis traheret) magnetem, si magnete nostra existente in A, montes essent in D; modo in B vel in C necessario reperiuntur, ita ut manifeste intercedat tum magna distantia recta AB vel AC notata, tum etiam tumor terrae ingens per arcum AB et AC notatum. Apparet ergo multis modis absoluta vulgata illa atque famosa ratio. Atque dictis rationibus hanc quoque annectimus quod montes isti magnetis non habent virtutem attrahendae magnetis ratione similitudinis; id enim si esset, multam magnetem videremus attrahere magnetis portiunculam. Huius ergo effectus non rationem damus attractionem aliquam, quia, ut dictum est, rationabilius ferrum inde attraheretur, sed potius fugam ex antipathia; contrarii quippe natura est istius mineralis atque ferri, quae sunt foetus terrae atque terrestres frigidae consistentiae. Unde contra evenit illis atque floribus fere universis, qui convertuntur ad solem et per viam solis ipsum respiciendo insequuntur, ut non modo videre licet in hac ratione dicta de heliotropio, sed in narcissi flore, croco et innumerabilibus aliis. Haec ergo, tanquam inimica soli atque calori, tuto dicemus ad partes adversas illis atque maxime oppositas converti seque proripere.

Epilogus motorum quibus aliqua moventur.

Localiter ergo moveri pluribus invenimus rationibus accidere: primo ad vitae consistentiam et conservationem, quae est per motum (virtute enim animae et spiritus nativi res in suo loco circulariter moventur, ut supra dictum est); secundo per fugam contrarii; tertio per adsectionem convenientis seu boni; quarto per expulsionem seu extrusionem a pellente contrario; quinto per violentam attractionem etiam contrarii indigentis seu appetentis ipsam materiam convertibilem in se ipsum; sexto per animalem electionem concurrentem cum consensu naturalis potentiae; ultimo per violentiam, quae arte vel quoque studio naturae vires impedit et retorquet alio, vel etiam ipsius naturae, quae dum fortis est in una parte ad aliquid movendum, naturam alterius mobilis minoris virtutis impedit et retundit, ut fere ubique accidit; a naturali enim fluxu aquae unius occurrente fluxus alterius impeditur, ut accidit in fluminibus ad Oceanum mare defluentibus, quae a maris fluxu patiuntur ut per multa milliaria versus fontes suos et ipsa refluant.

De vinculis spirituum.

Supra dictum est spiritus alios crassiorem, alios subtiliorem incolere materiam, alios in compositis, alios in simplicioribus corporibus consistere, alios sensibilia, alios insensibilia; unde operationes animae aliis sunt promptiores, aliis difficiliore, aliis hebetatae, aliis aptatae, aliis ablatae. Alii item secundum genus unum, alii secundum aliud genus potentius operantur; unde hominibus datae sunt quaedam operationes et actus et voluptates quibus privantur daemones, et e contra. Illis autem promptior est penetratio circa corpora et immissio cogitationum, quandoquidem usque adeo sensibus internis impressiones quasdam obtrudunt, ut ea quae ipsi suggerunt, per nosmet ipsos excogitare videamur interdum. Proportionaliter enim videtur se habere eorum informatio, atque analogia quaedam est, ad hoc quod quispiam velit sensum aliquem exuscitare et loco distantiore, opus est clamore, ut per auditum ad sensum internum conceptiones alicuius perducantur, propinquo ergo clamore non est opus sed submissiore voce, proximo sufficit auribus insusurrare; daemoni vero ne auribus ipsis quidem opus est, neque voce, neque susurru, sed sensum ipsum internum ita penetrat, ut dictum est. Sic immittunt somnia non solum et faciunt voces exaudiri et quaecunque videri, sed etiam vigilantibus certas cogitationes, quas ab alio vix esse cognoscantur, interdum per aenigmata, interdum expressioribus sensibus veritatem inculcantes, interdum fortasse decipientes; atqui non omnibus omnia licent, quandoquidem certa serie atque ordine peraguntur universa.

Neque spiritibus seu daemonibus omnibus aequae omnia constant atque licent et sunt perspecta; longe enim plures species eorum esse comperimus, quam possint esse rerum sensibilium. Unde et ex ipsis bruta quaedam sunt animalia et sine ratione nocentia, ut multum degant infra humanam sapientiam, hominibus tamen nocere possunt aequae atque perniciose animalia atque venena. Tale genus illud quod appellat Marcus surdum et mutum, hoc est sine ratione, quod nullum cognoscit imperium, nullas minas, nullas preces exaudit et percipit; et ideo impotentes protestabantur se ad eos eiiciendos, sed aiebant illud genus per ieiunium seu abstinentiam, et orationem seu mentis elevationem, et sensus energiam superari posse atque vinci. Et hoc est physicum, quandoquidem crassi illius generis, veluti pabulum et illecebrae, sunt humores crassioris et terrestrioris melancholiae, quae per inediam extenuanda vel per accommodata pharmaca prudenter depellenda medico committuntur.

Est et aliud genus timidum, suspiciosum, credulum, quod voces exaudit et intelligit, inter possibile vero et impossibile, conveniens et inconveniens non distinguit, more hominum somniantum et eorum quorum perturbata est phantasia; et hoc genus minis ipsis mortis, carceris, ignis et similium solet a corporibus fugari.

Sunt et alii prudentiores, quorum magis aërea est substantia illa simplex, qui nullo cultu, nulla religione, nullis orationibus moventur, sed haec omnia pro arbitrio fingunt, et hominibus illudentes timorem, iram, religionem et similia simulant, callent linguas et scientias, sed nihil constanter asseverant, utpote genus invidiosum, quod confusionem et dubia mentibus et sensibus hominum immittant.

Aethereum vero, purum lucidumque genus, omnes conveniunt in eo quod sit omnino bonum et hominibus probis amicum, nullis vero inimicum, sicut ex aëreis alii aliis sunt amici, aliis vero inimici et infensi.

Aquei vero et terrestres aut inimici sunt aut non amici, utpote minus rationales et propterea timidiores, et iuxta illud 'quem metuunt, oderunt' et libenter laedunt.

Ignei vero, qui proprius Dii appellantur et heroes, dicuntur Dei ministri, quos Cabalistae appellant Fissim, Seraphim, Cherubim, de quibus dixit Psaltes propheta 'qui facit angelos eius spiritus, et ministros eius flammam ignis'; unde recte colligunt Basilus et Origenes angelos non esse omnino incorporeos, sed spirituales substantias, hoc est subtilissimi corporis animalia, quos per ignes et flammam ignis significat divina revelatio.

In omni ordine spirituum sunt praesides et principes, pastores, duces, rectores, gradus, penes quos sapientiores et potentiores imbecillioribus et rudioribus dominantur et praecipiant; et haec imperia non sunt aeterna, neque ita brevis consistentiae sicut humana, quandoquidem vitae illorum sunt multis rationibus vitae nostrae incomparabiles, utpote facilius est animam conciliare sibi corpus simplex, quam ex contrariis compositum, quale nostrum; illorum corpora facillime passibilia esse facile defendunt, quemadmodum passibile est aër, aqua magis quam composita quaedam corpora. Porro eadem facilitate reficiuntur, sicut aër discissus facillime reintegratur, et partes aquae coeunt postquam fuerint penetratae; et non est ludicrum et poeticum figmentum quod Virgilius Aeneam stricto gladio permeantem loca umbrarum eas perterrituisse asserit.

Alii spiritus humana, alii aliorum animalium incolunt corpora, alii plantas, alii lapides et mineralia, et omnino nihil est spiritu destitutum et intellectu, et nusquam spiritus aeternam sedem sibi destinatum comparavit, sed fluctuat materia de uno in alium spiritum et naturam seu compositionem, fluctuat spiritus de una in aliam materiam; et hoc est alteratio, mutatio, passio et tandem corruptio, nempe partium certarum et a certis partibus segregatio et cum certis compositio; nam mors aliud non est praeterquam dissolutio. Atqui neque spiritus ullus neque corpus ullum interit, sed complexionum tantum et actuum mutatio est continua.

Iuxta autem varios actus, qui a compositione varia proficiscuntur, varii sunt amores et odia, quandoquidem universa, sicut dictum est, in praesenti esse consistere cupiunt, quandoquidem alius status et novi esse aut nihil intelligunt aut ambigunt; ideo generale quoddam vinculum est amoris reciproce animae ad proprium corpus et (modo suo) proprii corporis ad animam. Hinc pendet ex diversitate naturarum et appulsuum vinculorum, quibus tum spiritus tum corpora obligantur, diversitas, de quibus mox erit disserendum, postquam de analogia spirituum et compositorum definierimus.

De analogia spirituum.

Porphyrius, Plotinus et alii Platonici ita spiritibus corpora distribuunt, ut purissimi et optimi, qui etiam Deorum nomine inscribantur, sint igneae substantiae quoad corpus, eamque simplicissimam esse et purissimam; hi vero, qui aliis constant elementis crassioribus, non sine subtilioris elementi participatione consistunt, ut aërei habeant aërem cum igne commixtum, aquei cum igne aërem, terrestres cum igne aërem et aquam. Invisibiles vero substantiae sunt propter corporis eorum tenuitatem. Porro terrestres et aquei ad libitum concreto et inspissato vapore interdum visibiles redduntur, et in regionibus purioribus aëre sereniore et tranquilliore etiam apparent. Et mihi contigit eos vidisse ad montes Liberi et Lauri, nec mihi soli, sed frequenter apparent incolis loci illius, quibus interdum sunt (mediocriter tamen) infensi, bestias abducentes et occultantes, quas iterum post aliquot dies reducant ad propria stabula. In aurifodinis et aliis subterraneis locis, ut in montibus Gebennae, satis est vulgatum et compertum frequentissime occurrere fossoribus, quibus interdum sint tum molesti, tum adiutores, tum significatores casuum. Ad hoc genus referuntur hi, quos circa Nolam ad templum Porti in loco solitario, et etiam sub quadam rupe ad radices montis Cicadum, quod fuit olim coemeterium pestiferorum, et ipse et multi expertus sum et experiuntur nocturnis illae temporibus praetereundo multis lapidibus impetitus, qui minimo intervallo plurimi a capite et aliis corporis partibus magno cum impetu dissilientes importune insectando ad non mediocre intervallum, nunquam tamen laesionem ullam corporis intulerunt tum mihi tum aliis omnibus qui idem testificantur. De his Psellus in libro De daemonibus meminit, appellans eos lucifugos, iactores lapidum, quorum tamen iactus sint inanes.

Esse daemones subterraneos non solum sensus, experientia et ratio, sed etiam et divina quaedam auctoritas confirmat apud sapientissimum et multae philosophiae ac profundissimae librum Iobi. Ille maledicens diei in qua natus est, his verbis utitur, ubi ait 'pereat dies in qua natus sum' etc., ubi post paucas sententias infert 'quare misero data est lux, et vita his qui in amaritudine animae sunt?' 'cur egressus ex utero non statim perii?', 'aut sicut abortivum absconditur, non substiti?', 'nunc enim dormiens silerem, et in somno irrequiescerem cum regibus et principibus terrae, qui aedificant sibi solitudines et replent domos suas argento'; quibus vero ex ore ipsius Iobi prolatis verbis nihil expressius ad propositum.

Sic etiam, ut supra dictum est, alii spiritus aliis corporibus sunt inclusi, certo quodam ordine et iustitia gradus istos distribuyente, et Origenes, Pythagoras et Platonici homines inter daemones annumerant, hosque non bonos, sed qui boni fieri possint atque peiores, unde ad meliorem vitam disponantur atque deteriolem. Quapropter vitam istam tum theologi christiani tum et meliores philosophorum sectae viam quandam atque transitum, peregrinationem atque militiam appellant. Simile iudicium de aliis generibus consistentiae. Porro in optima harum ad quam cum devenerit anima seu spiritus, in ea intelligitur diutissime perseverare; et hoc est quod a principio dicebamus, omnem substantiam spiritalem reduci ad unum, omnem materialem ad tria, animam esse unum, suum Deum, et primam mentem esse unam supra omnia, animam universi esse unam.

Ad haec valde verisimile est morbos omnes esse malos daemones, unde et cantu et prece et contemplatione et animae extasi depelluntur, et contrariis provocantur. Neque est negandum hominibus certis esse quosdam spiritus dominatores, quorum virtute certae morborum species dissipentur, ut aiunt de Cyro et aliis Persarum regibus, qui tactu pollicis lienosos curabant. Vulgatum atque satis compertum est idem in Galliarum regibus, qui pollicis tactu scrophulas curant; idem saliva dicitur efficere posse septimus ex eodem parente natus absque femina mediante.

Daemones proinde esse corporeos et iuxta varia atque diversa corporum genera varios atque diversos, illud argumento est, quod affectus habent, libidines, iras, zelum, similia affectibus humanis et compositorum animalium crassioris sensibilisque materiae; ab his enim inventa sunt sacrificia et caedes animalium, quorum apparatu et fumo summopere delectari protestati sunt; et istos oportet esse complexionis valde affinis nostrae, e quibus [sunt] alii ad alias gentes et nationes sunt affecti, caeteras omnes detestantes et abominantes. Horum alii sunt nominati, famosi et potentiores, alii vero magis plebei, quos Romani patellares Deos appellabant, nempe quibus non essent definita sacrificia et oblationes. Talia vero fercula non est credibile illis tam necessaria esse quam iocunda (possunt enim sibi ipsi per se quae sunt necessaria comparare), tamen haec ad eorum luxum sunt superinventa, quae sine hominum administratione sibi minime adcompararent; etsi enim multa melius quam nos novere, non tamen aequae ac nos multa movere et alterare possunt per se spiritualioris et nobilioris et mitioris complexionis. Sunt qui magis fumigiis delectantur, quibus thure, croco, musco, ambra et odoriferis floribus olim adsistere sufficebant.

Nobilioris et eminentioris conditionis illi perhibentur, quibus hymni, cantus atque musicalia instrumenta arrident.

Super horum conditionem est Deorum conditio, quorum natura 'non est indiga nostri, nec bene pro meritis capitur neque tangitur ira'; male enim affici a nobis atque bene eorum est, quae aliquo pacto a nobis requirere et accipere possunt ut melius et iucundius habeant; id vero in felicissimo statu constitutis minime convenire videtur.

In fine illud est firmiter asserendum et mente tenendum, quod spiritu, anima, numine, Deo seu divinitate omnia sunt plena, et intellectus et anima ubique totus et tota est, sed non ubique facit omnia. Hoc insinuavit poeta ex dogmate Pythagorico:

Principio caelum et terras camposque liquentes
Lucentemque globum Lunae Titaniaque astra
Spiritus intus alit, totamque infusa per artus
Mens agitat molem, et totus se corpore miscet.
Hinc hominum pecudumque genus vitaeque volantum
Et quae marmoreo fert monstra sub aequore pontus.

Idem dicit sensus sacrorum arcanorum ab omni vulgo receptus, ut in Psalmo et in libro Sapientiae 'spiritus domini replevit orbem terrarum et hoc quod continet omnia', et alibi 'caelum et terram ego impleo'.

Differt autem corporea substantia ab huiusmodi substantia mentis, animae atque sublimis spiritus, quod universum corpus est totum in toto et universo, ipsa vero est tota in qualibet parte, ubique videlicet totum quoddam constituens et totius imaginem referens, ubi clarius, ubi obscurius, ubi singularius, ubi multipliciter, ut eiusdem ideae species atque lucis ab omnibus materiae particulis tota refertur, sicut etiam tota a tota materia, quod sane in magno speculo licet contemplari, quod unam unius rei refert imaginem, idemque rursum in mille frustra contritum ex omnibus partibus integrum nihilominus refert imaginem. Sic etiam diversae aquae partes et hypostases, avulsae a toto Amphitrite seu universali Oceano, diversa recipiunt nomina et proprietates, quae omnes, in unum subinde confluentes Oceanum, unum habent nomen et proprietatem; ita si omnes spiritus et aëris partes in unum Oceanum confluerent, unam animam efficerent, quae alioqui multae sunt et innumerae. Hinc secundum primaevam consistentiam unam philosophi dicunt materiam, unum spiritum, unam lucem, unam animam, unum intellectum.

Iam ad multiplex spirituum vinculum referendum convertamur, ubi omnis magiae doctrina continebitur.

(iuxta III §) Primum vinculum, quo spiritus alligantur, est generale, quo metaphorice Triviae triceps Cerberus, ostiarius inferni, alligatus fingitur; est triplex facultas, quae requiritur in vinciente seu mago: physica, mathematica et metaphysica. In prima est fundamentum, in secunda gradus, in tertia cacumen scalae: prima habet rationem principiorum activorum et passivorum secundum genus; secunda temporum, locorum et numerorum; tertia universalium principiorum et causarum. Hic est funiculus triplex, qui difficile rumpitur.

(§ V) Secundum vinculum triplex est, quod requiritur tum in operante, tum in operato, tum in eo circa quem est operatio, et est fide seu credulitate constans, item invocatione, item amore et ardenti affectu cum activorum ad passiva applicatione; animae enim est effective immutare corpora seu compositum, corporis vero materialiter est immutare animam. Haec nisi accesserint seu adsint praesertim, curando, movendo et agitando nihil fiet; unde fortunatissimus magus est cui multi credunt, multae est persuasionis.

- (§ XI) III. vinculum, quod habetur efficiens, est numerus principum, qui iuxta cardines universi quatuor distribuuntur ad ea opera, quae a caelo perquiruntur et a natura. Praeter hos pro effectibus voluntariis et extranaturalibus sunt principes determinatum locum non habentes.
- (§ XII) IV. vinculum est anima mundi seu spiritus universi, qui omnia copulat unitque omnibus; unde ab omnibus datur aditus ad omnia, sicut dictum est in superioribus.
- (§ XIII) V. vinculum sunt animae astrorum et principes locorum, ventorum, elementorum.
- (§ XIII) VI. Animae seu daemones praesidentes temporibus, diebus, tempestatibus et ipsis elementis.
- (§ XIV et XXV) VII. Animae hominum tyrannorum, principum et eorum qui aliqua celebritate insignes extiterunt, unde in numina evasere.
- (§ XV) VII. Divina nomina et divinorum ordinum nomina.
- (§ XVI) IX. Characteres et sigilla.
- (§ XVII) X. Obtestationes, coniurationes, quae fiunt virtute superiorum in inferiora, ut qui per bonos daemones malos eiiciunt, alii per superiores, malos inferiores. Item alliciuntur per sacrificia, holocausta, terrentur per minas, provocantur per virtutes radiorum et influxuum.
- (§ XVIII) XI. Per triplicis mundi virtutem: elementaris, caelestis et intellectualis.
- (§ XIX) XII. Dispositio petentis bona a bonis, castitas, honestas, purgatio, abstinencia.
- (§ XX) XIII. Item adiectio cultuum et rerum naturalium, in quibus latent spiritus hi qui analogiam habent ad eos quorum opera perquiruntur.
- (iuxta XXI §) XIV. Rationes cultuum secundum eorum differentias.
- (§ XXII) XV. Consecrationum vis ex parte conservantis, ex parte orationis et ex parte ritus.
- (§ XXIII) XVI. Feriarum, infastorum et fastorum dierum et horarum cognitio.
- (§ XXIV et XXVII) XVII. Religiosarum observationum, quae consistant in puritate locorum, lotionibus, contactibus, suspensionibus, indumentis, fumigiis, sacrificiis, iuxta rerum et mediorum differentias.
- (§ XXVII) XVIII. Applicatio activorum et passivorum, ut elementorum primorum vel proximorum, subinde lapidum, metallorum, plantarum et animalium iuxta condiciones quatuordecim.

(§ XXVIII) XIX. Annuli.

(§ XXIX) XX. Artificia fascinationum.

Praeter haec generalia vincula sunt quae in septemdecim articulis ex Alberti doctrina colliguntur, quorum quaedam sunt relata, quaedam referenda supersunt.

De vinculis spirituum, et primum de eo quod est ex triplici ratione agentis, materiae et applicationis.

(§ XXIV) Ad hoc, ut actiones in rebus perficiantur, tria requiruntur: potentia activa in agente, potentia passiva in subiecto seu patiente seu dispositio, quae est aptitudo quaedam vel non repugnantia seu impotentia resistendi (quae omnia ad unum terminum reducuntur, nempe potentiam materiae), et debita applicatio, quae est per circumstantias temporis, loci et reliquorum concurrentium; omnia ut uno verbo dicam, ad agentem, materiam et applicationem. Ex defectu horum trium perpetuo impeditur omnis actio, simpliciter loquendo, quandoquidem etiamsi perfectus sit tibicen, per tibiae imperfectionem impeditur, et applicatio unius ad alterum est inanis. Itaque impotentia materiae ponit impotentiam in efficiente et inconvenientiam in applicatione. Hoc est quod dicimus ex defectu trium perpetuo impedi actionem, absolute loquendo; proprie vero inspiciendo, potest defectus provenire rursum a duobus tantum vel ab uno duntaxat, non autem ab uno definite, sed sigillatim intelligendo de omnibus, ut cum tibicen est perfectus et applicatio, tibia vero deficit, aut cum tibicen et tibia, applicatio vero impeditur. Ubi vero tota ratio efficientiae consistit in applicatione, tunc prima ratio concurrit cum tertia; efficiens enim nihil aliud est interdum quam applicator, et efficere nihil aliud est quam applicare.

(XXV. XXVI) Non omne natum est pati ab omni, neque agere in omne, sed, sicut dictum est in Physicis, passio omnis est a contrario et actio omnis in contrario, neque semper, sed dispositum, unde vulgatum illud 'actiones activorum in patiente bene disposito'. Hinc patet ratio qua aqua aquae admiscetur et aqua per aquam contemperatur propter similitudinem seu cognitionem seu symbolum, unde postquam facta fuerit unio, nullo artificio altera ab altera separatur, vinum vero purum seu merum facile recipitur ab aqua et recipit aquam, ut fiat commixtio, sed quia partes vini habent in se aliquid caloris et aëris et spiritus, non omnimodum habent symbolum, et ideo secundum minima non admiscuntur, sed secundum adeo notabilem molem distincte servantur in heterogeneo composito, ut certa arte iterum possint segregari, sicut etiam accidit in aqua maritima, quae certo modo sublimata dulcem aquam exprimit, item per vasa cerea colata, quod, si mixtio esset perfecta, non accideret. Oleum vero cum aqua nunquam admiscetur, quia partes olei quasi amatae invicem cohaerent et agglutinantur, unde neque penetrant neque penetrantur a partibus aquae. Multum est ergo attendendum in conditione partium attentanti admixtionem corporum cum corporibus; neque etenim omnia omnibus sunt miscibilia.

toti per unum latus penetrabile est, per alterum vero non; ita enim est in omnibus, sicut patet in lapidibus et lignis et in ipsa carne, quae sunt penetrabilia vel penetrabiliora per unam partem seu latus quam per alteram, ut patet in effluxu humorum pulsorum per longum fibrarum, quia facilius ligna scinduntur per longum; ab humore vero penetrantur facilius per latum quam per longum, quandoquidem pori inter fibras iniecti eo ordine fistulas seu meatus admittunt.

(XXVIII) Non ergo tantum inspicienda est partium qualitas atque situs, sed etiam conditio formae totius; sunt enim quaedam passiones aptae natae recipi ab uno subiecto quae non recipiantur ab alio, sicut stupor a torpedine causatur in manu piscatoris, non in reticulis, et, ut ludere solebat comicus quidam, ignes amoris torrent praecordia, urunt cor, pectore existente crudo atque frigido.

(XXIX) Item accidit in tonitruis, quae interdum liquefaciunt ensem seu chalybem vagina nihilo alterata; ita etiam accidit mirum Neapoli in quadam nobili puella et pulcherrimae speciei, cuius tantummodo pilos circa vulvam combussit; ita referunt, combusto ligno dolii, vinum relinquere consistens seu congelatum forinsecus. Et pleraque huiusmodi eveniunt propter occultam rationem ultimam quae est in atomis illiusmodi ignis, qui ita est activus in uno ne sit activus in alio. Referunt etiam laurum ideo imperatorum et poetarum insignia esse et aquilam, quia haec fulgure nunquam attinguntur, tanquam ita Apollini et Iovi amica atque principes atque poetae.

Quod attinet vero ad homines, quibus omnibus non item accidit quod illi puellae, stat ratio in eo quod non omnes sunt eiusdem complexionis et temperamenti, et eandem spiritus qualitatem admittunt; ut etiam in quibusdam talis animus etiam existit, ut et pluvias impedian, imperent ventis et aliis tempestatibus. Ita etiam ad complexionem quandam referenda sunt mira quae accidunt in corporibus, ubi quaedam sunt ex privilegio totius speciei, quaedam vero ex certa particularium praerogativa, propter differentias innumerabiles quae sunt in illis.

In talibus ergo tum speciebus tum individuís contemplantur magi ut virtutum effectus emendicent, et providi imperatores non nobiles, amicos, commendatos praeponunt exercitibus et militiae ministros asciscunt, sed fortunatiores, eosque qui talia pericula consueverunt fortunatius evadere. Pariter a quibusdam plantis et mineralibus per suspensionem et gestationem et aliusmodi applicationem existimant certas praerogativas virtutum sibi conciliare quasi quodam mediante contactu, ut imperatores laurea corona muniti a fulgure non formidant.

(XXX) Huc spectat quod quaedam certis animalibus sunt venena, sicut generaliter homini cicuta, quae generaliter capere est iocundissimum alimentum, ut facile omnia ex ea pinguefiant. Similiter in differentiis nutrimentorum, venenorum et antidotorum pro variis speciebus est speculandum. Unde non modicum principium est magiae et medicinae ad distinguendum de differentiis complexionum et rationibus morborum et sanitatis et principiis mutandorum habituum seu dispositionum, vel eorundem servandorum, per applicationem extrinsecorum. Novit etiam chymicus ut aqua fortis agat in res duras, ut in ferrum, argentum, aes; in aurum vero et plumbum minime; rursum quomodo vivum argentum ocissime sorbeat oleum, quod ab auro omnino repudiatur et abiicitur. Proinde verbenae semini vel succo praesentanea potentia est ad frangendum lapidem in vesica, quae tamen carni et ossi et membranae et aliis corporis partibus minime videtur esse violenta.

(XXXII) Sunt qui horum rationes referant ad laxitatem vel angustiam foraminum, quod quidem in quibusdam facile concesserim, sed in praecipuis et pluribus minime verum est, sicut in enumeratis omnibus. Neque enim ratio est, qua aqua fortis potius penetret unum quam alterum propter maiorem laxitudinem foraminum; similiter et verbenae spiritus ille, qui adversatur calculo, non autem ossibus et carni, quamvis magis laxatorum sint pororum. Et quid dicet de adamante, quod quidem a subtilissimo corporum et penetrativissimo ignis spiritu non discinditur, quod tamen ab hircino sanguine penetratur?

Manendum igitur est in ea generali ratione, quod non omnia patiuntur ab omnibus, neque omnes affectus secundum easdem differentias omnibus conveniunt; et horum ratio ab ipsis effectibus et casibus est desumenda, cum propria requiritur. Differentiis vero istis occultis seu formis nomina non sunt imposita, neque sensibiles sunt ut ad oculum vel tactum veniant, neque ratiocinabiles quae ab oculorum et tactuum differentiis atque origine definite eliciantur, ut de istis possimus dicere aliud quam quod sint; propter quid vero ne ipsis quidem daemonibus facile esse disserere iudicamus, si nobiscum nostris verbis et sensibus quae per nostra verba significantur velint definire.

Secundum vinculum ex voce et cantu.

De cantu vero non tantum harmonico, sed sub generaliore quadam significatione intelligimus, siquidem potentissimae, quod quidam experti sunt, cantiones seu carmina plus videntur habere dissonantiae quam consonantiae, et fere talis erat anima illius semiferi hominis, qualem numeri hinnitus equini facilius flectere potuissent; sicut etiam ad oculorum sensibilem harmoniam quod spectat, aliis numeris vincitur ad amorem equinus, aliis humanus, aliis caninus animus, ut pro singularum specierum conditione variae sunt pulchritudinis differentiae. Sicut ergo in proverbio est de asino ad lyram, non omnes cantus omnibus sunt accommodi, et ut varias animas harmonici varii, ita etiam varii magici varios spiritus devinciunt.

(XXXIV) Haec autem vincula non solum hoc ipso sunt tenacia, quod per auditum percipiuntur seu aditum nanciscuntur in anima, sicut Marsi et Psylli vox potentissima vox est in serpente; verum etiam et occulto susurro etiam ad rem vinciendam non perveniente, per analogiam spiritus ad spiritum, vincientis ad vinciendum, effectus vinculorum perficitur; neque etenim semper incantati incantantium voces excipiunt, vel exceptis sensibilibus afficiuntur et statim.

(XXXV) Huc spectat quod numeri unius vocis vel aspectus alterius vocis numeros confundunt et obtundunt; unde lupo, quem cervarium vulgo appellant, quidam viso vocem amittunt devincti eo spiritu, neque facile verba formare possunt. Et referunt instrumentum ex agnina pelle cum typano ex pelle lupina prorsus amittere sonum, quamlibet alioqui sonorum et fortius ictibus impetum, quandoquidem spiritus, qui aliqualis est in emortui pelle, potens est vincere et compescere spiritum per eam participationem antipathiae et praedominii, quae erat in viventibus. Hoc quod referunt an ita sit non sum expertus, tamen verisimilitudinem habet et rationem, quae tamen non omnino est a ratione vitae ad vitam et speciei ad speciem, quandoquidem et asinus lupum timet nihilo fortasse minus quam ovis, pariter et illius insidiis obnoxius, tympanum tamen ex eius pelle confectum, aequis fortassis pulsibus tympanum lupi nisi compescat, pro maiori tamen spissitudine superabit.

(XXXVI) Huc etiam spectat de fidibus ex nervis ovium et nervis lupinis nunquam consonantibus. Vulgatum quoque est apud multos, quemadmodum duae citharae vel lyrae aequaliter temperatae si fuerint, quarum altera propior alteri pulsetur, harmonia unius in alterius chordas non solum consonantes, sed et aequaliter motas commigrabit; et hoc valde rationabile est. Unde etiam accidit et voce quadam et gestu vel simili quadam specie animum unius affici praesentia alterius, ut indissolubiles oriantur amicitiae. Sunt quos visos temere odimus, sicut etiam sine causa amamus; et hoc odium et amor interdum sunt reciproca, interdum vero non, quod accidit a praedominio quodam unius in alterum secundum unam affectus speciem, quae impeditur ab alia affectus specie quae est in altero, sicut et specie unius catelli et aviculae amoris quodam affectu pertrahimur in illas, quae tamen timore percussae nos fugiunt et oderunt.

(XL) Ad hoc genus pertinent preces et orationes, quibus pares aut principes quidam sollicitant, (ubi) nullum habeant effectum neque rationes vel honestatis et iustitiae praetextus allegati; quibus interdum plus possunt unius morionis et scurrae proposita, ut interdum prudentiores per eiusmodi voces tanquam magis accommoda vincula principum animos soleant irretire, ut in Iulio III. Pontifice compertum, qui orantes, deprecantes, lacrimantes abolebat, abiiciebat; si quis vero uno scommate vel alio lepide post pedum oscula accessisset, is quaecunque exoptabat impetrare ab illo poterat.

Ad incantationis ergo artem spectat et eam vinculi spiritus speciem, quae est per cantus seu carmina, quicquid tractant oratores faciens ad persuadendum et dissuadendum seu ad movendos affectus; cuius quidem artis alteram partem praetermiserunt et in sinu magorum seu philosophorum seu versutiorum politicorum latentem esse sinunt, quam tamen Aristoteles in Rhetorica ad Alexandrum magna ex parte complexus est, quaeque ad duo capita considerationis reducitur, alterum quod consideret incantator quid deceat se et quid sibi conveniat, alterum quid incantando seu vinciendo placeat, arrideat, eius scilicet moribus consideratis, statu, complexione, usu, quae omnia in praesentiarum retexere et adducere non est locus.

Tertium vinculorum genus ex visu.

(XLI) Per visum etiam vincitur spiritus, ut passim quoque superius est attactum, dum formae aliter atque aliter ante oculos obversantur. Hinc fascinationes activae et passivae ab oculis proficiscuntur et per oculos ingrediuntur; unde illud 'Nescio quis oculis teneros mihi fascinat agnos'.

Pulchri quoque species affectum amoris excutit; contrarii abominationis et odii. Et per affectiones animae ac spiritus aliquid insuper in corpus ipsum, quod sub animae gubernaculo et spiritus contemperamento consistit, transfunditur. Sunt quoque aliae affectuum species, quae etiam per oculos accipiuntur atque statim corpus ipsum aliqua ratione afficiunt; tristibus enim quibusdam vultibus ad tristitiam et compassionem vel moerorem concitamus, tanquam ex causis manifestis.

Sunt alii qui etiam peiores animo atque corpori ingerunt impressiones per oculos, sed non evidenter per ea quae nos possumus iudicare, efficacissime tamen movent per aliqua quae sunt in nobis, nempe per multiplicem spiritum et animam; quandoquidem tametsi una anima in toto corpore vigeat, et uni praecipue omnia membra subministrent, tamen quia spiritu quodam toto totum et anima tota et universi partes vivificantur, ratio multarum affectionum spiritualium referenda est ad aliquid aliud quod cognoscit in nobis et vivit, quod iis rebus afficitur et perturbatur, quibus minime nos perturbamur et afficimur. Et interdum nocentius tangimur et laedimur ab his quorum ictus non sentimus, quam quorum sentimus; ita et multa visa et per oculum ingestae species perturbationis sensum non faciunt in apertis et extrinsecis potentiis sensitivis, quae tamen profundius immersae letaliter etiam afficiunt, quorum sensus immediatus ad internum spiritum, quasi alium sensum et animal, referuntur. Unde non tam leviter refragabimur quibusdam Platonice et omnibus Pythagoricis, qui unum hominem multa statuunt animalia veluti per se viventia, quorum interdum uno perempto, seu primario, diu alia supervivunt.

(XLII) Iudicare ergo eorum tantum nos laedi vel affici speciebus visibilibus, quae solum manifestam sensus et animi perturbationem inducunt, manifesta est stupiditas, non aliter ac si quispiam iis tantum ictibus vel magis laedi existimat qui sentiuntur vel magis sentiuntur, cum tamen experti simus plures molestiae et tormenti inferre puncturam acus vel spinae circa pellem vellicantis, quam ensis adacti ex uno latere in aliud, cuius gravior effectus tandem sentitur, sine sensu tamen laesionis eo quo corporis partes penetrat momento. Ita nimirum multa furtim per oculum ad animae exitium usque spiritus captivant et inculcant, licet eam perturbationem non inducant quam leviora objecta; sicut videntes certos gestus vel affectus vel motus compellimur ad lacrimas, alienum quoque sanguinem perfundi aspicientes quidam vel cadaveris incisionem usque ad animae deliquium compelluntur; cuius rei nulla alia causa est praeterquam affectio per oculos devinciens.

Quantum vinculum est ex phantasia.

(XLVII, XLVIII) Cuius quidem munus est recipere species a sensibus delatas et continere, et componere eas et dividere, quod quidem accidit dupliciter: uno pacto ex arbitrio vel electione imaginantis, quale est poëtarum et pictorum munus, et eorum qui apologos componunt, et universaliter omnis cum ratione species componentis; alio pacto extra arbitrium et electionem. Et ita dupliciter: vel per causam etiam eligentem et voluntariam, vel ab extrinsecus moventem. Et hac duplici: vel mediata, ut homine qui per voces vel per spectra, per visum vel per auditum perturbationes inducit; vel immediata, ut spirituali, rationali, seu daemone qui agit in phantasiam per somnia vel etiam per vigiliis, ita internas species commovens, ut aliquid sensus externi apprehendi videatur. Unde energumeni quidam videre sibi videntur quaedam spectacula et audire quasdam voces et sententias, quas putant vere ab externis subiectis insinuari, unde importunissime et constantissime asseverant se vera vidisse et vera audisse, ubi nimirum non sensus eorum decipitur, sed ratio; quae enim audiunt, audiunt, quae vident, vident, tamen quod interno sensu per speciem phantasiabilem illis obiicitur, idem per sonum externum, per aures et formam externam per visum ingestam se videre arbitrantur, et intentiones sensuum interiorum res ipsas esse autumant. Ita accidit ut ne quidem a circumstantibus nolint ad saniores sensum revocari, quos potius ad propriam imaginationem malint promovere, quos vere existiment surdos et mutos; et medici haec ipsa referunt ad maniam et melancholiam, quae ab iisdem somnia vigilantum appellantur.

(XLIX) Porro in hoc vinculo neque purum est materiale illud principium, quod crassissima et importunissima pertinacia quorundam vulgarium medicorum opinatur, neque purum illud efficiens daemoniaci seu diabolici generis, quod pro sua parte tuentur quidam Theologi; sed utrumque concurrat, materialiter quidem humor melancholicus, quem saturnialium daemoniorum popinam seu balneum appellamus, sed etiam pro causa movente et efficiente spiritus ipse daemoniacus, qui cum non sit omnino substantia incorporea, quandoquidem multis affectibus animalibus iisque gravissimis praediti videntur daemones, quamvis substantia spiritualis, cui subtilius et minus sensibus pervium corpus est a natura tributum, in quo genere animalium dictum est non pauciores reperiri species, quam sint viventium, compositorum et sensibilibus. Sicut ergo ad definitum semen in definito loco congrue expositum definita veluti accurrit anima, aut ex ipso velut emergens certam animalis formam vel viventis producit et emergere facit, ut ex hoc semine nascatur oliva, ex illo canis, ex illo homo, item in hoc corpore ita vel ita complexionato commodius nascuntur haec, commodius vero illa, unde poeta 'Hic segetes, illic veniunt felicius uvae'; ita ex certa cordis vel cerebri vel spiritus animalis temperie et complexione, intemperie vel perturbatione, quasi in proprio campo et ex proprio semine, boni vel mali spiritus et principia intentionum enascuntur. Unde mutua quaedam consequentia est, ut talia corpora tales animas, tales animae talia corpora in consistentiam producant, iuxta substantialem, quam appellant, et specificam differentiam atque subsistentiam; ita et advenientes et accedentes alii spiritus propter accidentales quasdam complexiones vel subiecta corpori adiecta sequitur praedominium illud furiosi spiritus, quod sane e medio tolli potest, tum incantatione, nempe rhetorica illa, et amica et medica quadam persuasione spiritum obsessum reficiendo, tum evacuatione seu expulsionem noxiae materiae per purgativa pharmaca, tum per commoda Iovialia, Solaria et alia vitae humanae congruentia nutrimenta, quae materiam meliorem spiritui subiiciant, vel deteriore illam, quae in complexionem interdum transit, mitigent et contemperent. Sic neque spiritus opera haec vitalia et animalia persequitur, neque sine spiritu corpus assumit; ad haec igitur sive bene sive male sive pro ratione speciei sive extra speciei rationem constituenda principium materiale requiritur, et secundum genus formale seu efficiens. Interim satis rationabile est, ut ad curationem perturbatae phantasiae et ad solutionem interni sensus hoc pacto devincti simplex humorum purgatio simplexque victus ratio sufficiat; non propterea tamen concluditur, ut concludit quidam pinguissimae Minervae medicus, qui sub titulo De occultis naturae miraculis plures protulit ineptias quam potuit litteras et syllabas exarare, qui ex eo quod per secessum et humorum vacationem tales spiritus cum eiusmodi miris intentionibus liberis et ordinatis expelluntur et extruduntur, concludit eos nihil aliud esse quam humores; unde aequè possemus dicere suam excellentiam, quae plurimum animas per secessum e corpore abire coëgerit, ut et animam ipsam etiam humorem seu excrementum existimet, aut si penuria cibi atque potus cogatur ipse suam domum et patriam deserere propter medicinae ignorantiam et apertorum naturae colorum atque vorum, existimemus eum nihil aliud esse quam de genere eorum quae illum expellunt.

Omnibus hisce modis cum contingat vinciri et obligari sensum, medico seu mago maxime insistendum est circa opus phantasiae; hoc enim est porta et praecipuus aditus ad actiones et passiones affectusque universos, qui sunt in animali; et ex hac alligatione sequitur alligatio profundioris potentiae, quae est cogitativa.

De vinculo quinto, quod est ex cogitativa.

(L, LI) Vinculum phantasiae leve per se est, si vinculum cogitativae vires non con duplicet. Ea enim spectra, quae idiotae, stulti, creduli et superstiosuli ingenii animum devinciunt et obligant, deridentur, contemnuntur et veluti inanes umbrae a sobrio et bene nato et disciplinato ingenio. Unde omnes operadores sive magi sive medici sive prophetae sine fide praevia nihil efficiunt, et iuxta fidei praeviae numeros operantur. -- Hic nos accipimus fidem iuxta magis universalem rationem, quam a singulis istorum capiatur et ab omnibus. --

(LII) Haec in quibusdam commovetur tanquam praeviis potentiis bene dispositis et ordinatis, a quibusdam vero tanquam perturbatis; multum vero faciunt ligamenta quae sunt ex ore diserti, ex specie unde certa dispositio oriatur et foveatur in imaginatione, quae est sola porta omnium affectuum internorum et est vinculum vinculorum. Hinc Hippocratis vulgata est sententia, 'efficacissimum medicorum esse illum cui plurimi credunt', et hoc est quia plurimos vincit aut eloquio aut praesentia aut fama; et non solum de medico, sed quocunque magiae genere vel alius sub alio titulo potestatis, si in operante vinciendi iniciendae imaginationis vix quippiam aliis mediis poterit promoveri.

(LIII) Et credunt theologi et concedunt et concionantur de eo qui per se potest omnia facere, quod non poterat curare eos qui illi non credebant, cuius impotentiae tota ratio refertur ad imaginationem, quam non potuit vincere; compatrueles enim, qui noverant humile illius genus et educationem, spernebant et irridebant medicum et divinum; unde illud vulgatum 'nemo propheta acceptus in patria'. Facilius ergo quibusdam vincere est eos, apud quos minus est notus, ut ex opinione et apparatu fidei, cuius quidem potentia animae quodammodo se disponit, aperit, explicat, ac si fenestras aperiat ad solem concipiendum, quas alioqui occlusas teneret, datur aditus ad eas impressiones quas ligatoris ars exquirat, incutiendo subsequencia vincula, quae sunt spes, compassio, timor, amor, odium, indignatio, ira, gaudium, patientia, contemptus vitae, mortis, fortunae, et omnia quorum vires ex animo in corpus alterandum transmigrant.

Quomodo vero reliquae istae enumeratae vinculorum species, quae fidem et opinionem subsequuntur, alterent considerare non est valde profundae speculationis. Iam quod attinet ad magis spirituales potentias animae quae sequuntur, nempe ad memoriam, rationem, experientiam, intellectum et mentem, non est operae praesentis speculationis persequi, siquidem actus illarum potentiarum non redundant in corpus neque alterant, sed tota immutatio originaliter est in potentiis ante cogitativam, effective autem et principaliter a cogitativa. Inde omnis vis magica activa et passiva, et vinculis magicis species eousque subiiciuntur, et, ut etiam asserit Plotinus, tum sapientes tum insipientes per principia naturalia consistentia in ea possunt vinciri, nisi extet aliquod principium in subiecto quod valeat repercutere seu excutere magicas eiaculationes; quandoquidem, ut dictum est supra, non omnia penetrant in omnia neque admiscuntur omnia cum omnibus, sicut oleum cum aqua non admiscetur. Sic testatur Plotinus de se ipso et confirmat Porphyrius in Vita Plotini, quod maleficia cuiusdam Aegyptii, quibus nitebatur vincere et maleficiare Plotinum, in ipsum authorem sunt conversa. Et haec De vinculis in genere dicta sint.

Writings of Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa (1486-1535)

Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa (1486-1535) is the most influential writer of renaissance esoterica. His de occulta philosophia appeared in three books. Written from 1509 to 1510 (he would have been 23 at the time), it circulated widely in manuscript form, and was eventually printed in 1533. It is a "systematic exposition of ... Ficinian spiritual magic and Trithemian demonic magic (and) ... treatised in practical magic" (I. P. Coulano in Hidden Truths 1987, p. 114).

Without doubt, this book should be at the top of any required reading list for those interested in Western magic and esoteric traditions.

Selected writings:

- Of Occult Philosophy or Magic ('de occulta philosophia')

Writings of Giordano Bruno (1548-1600)

Italian Philosopher Giordano Bruno ("the Nolan") was one of the most original and colorful thinkers of the Renaissance. The Inquisition considered him a dangerous heretic, and had him burned at the stake in 1600.

Selected writings:

- De Umbris Idearum ('The Shadow of Ideas') (1582) (Latin)

Bruno became a noted expert in the art of memory while still a Dominican monk. He repeatedly demonstrated his memory techniques, including to Pope Pius V. Bruno carried the traditional mnemonic training well beyond the Dominican traditions.

This is Bruno's first book on memory, and presents a rich system which integrates mnemonics, psychology (ala Ficino), and hermetic magic. This work is dealt with at some length by Frances A. Yates in her Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (1964).

- Ars Memoriae ('The Art of Memory') (1582) (Latin)
- Cantus Circaeus ("Incantations of Circe") (1582) (Latin)

An early work by Bruno on the art of memory with strong magical elements. It is written in the form of a dialogue between the great sorceress Circe and her assistant or apprentice Moeris.

- Ars Reminiscendi -- Triginta Sigilli (1583) (Latin)
- Explicatio triginti sigillorum (1583) (Latin)
- The Heroic Frenzies... ('De Gli Eroici Furori') (English)

Another major work of Bruno's, almost impossible to find, dealing with the philosophy of love and love as a means of mystical ascent.

- De Magia (Latin)

One of the very few of Bruno's books to deal explicitly with magic. It remained unpublished until Tocco's edition of 1891. I consider this text of equal importance with Agrippa's Occult Philosophy. For a translation, see Cause, Principle and Unity, ed. Blackwell et al.

- Theses De Magia (Latin)

- Magia Mathematica (Latin)

By "mathematical magic" Bruno means magical practices that use characters, seals, and figures.

- De vinculis in genere (Latin)

This is Bruno's other great book on magic, dealing with "bonding in general." Couliano characterizes it as "one of those little-known works whose importance in the history of ideas far outstrips that of more famous ones." (E&M p. 89) It explains how the masses can be manipulated with psychological and magical bonds, and how one can escape these snares.

THE GNOSTIC SOCIETY LIBRARY

The Corpus Hermeticum

Archive Notes

The Hermetic tradition represents a non-Christian lineage of Hellenistic Gnosticism. The central texts of the tradition, the Corpus Hermeticum were lost to the West in classical times. Their rediscovery and translation during the late-fifteenth century by the Renaissance court of Cosimo de Medici, provided a seminal force in the development of Renaissance thought and culture. The complete Corpus Hermeticum is comprised of 18 tracts. Only the first and primary thirteen of these are presently contained in our library. The texts presented here are taken from the very fine translation of G.R.S. Mead, Thrice Great Hermes: Studies in Hellenistic Theosophy and Gnosis, Volume II (London: Theosophical Publishing Society, 1906).

For an excellent introduction to this material, the Archive offers a lecture by Dr. Stephan Hoeller, on Hermes: The Thrice Great Hierophant of Gnosis. (This lecture is in RealAudio format and runs about 80 minutes).

PLOTINUS

SpiritWeb: Neoplatonic Mysticism Classic: The Six Enneads

translated by Stephen MacKenna and B. S. Page

In Ennead IV: Eighth tractate: The soul's descent into body Plotinus speaks as follows:

Many times it has happened: Lifted out of the body into myself; becoming external to all other things and self-encentered; beholding a marvellous beauty; then, more than ever, assured of community with the loftiest order; enacting the noblest life, acquiring identity with the divine; stationing within It by having attained that activity; poised above whatsoever within the Intellectual is less than the Supreme: yet, there comes the moment of descent from intellection to reasoning, and after that sojourn in the divine, I ask myself how it happens that I can now be descending, and how did the soul ever enter into my body, the soul which, even within the body, is the high thing it has shown itself to be.

Heraclitus, who urges the examination of this matter, tells of compulsory alternation from contrary to contrary, speaks of ascent and descent, says that "change reposes," and that "it is weariness to keep toiling at the same things and always beginning again"; but he seems to teach by metaphor, not concerning himself about making his doctrine clear to us, probably with the idea that it is for us to seek within ourselves as he sought for himself and found.

Empedocles- where he says that it is law for faulty souls to descend to this sphere, and that he himself was here because he turned a deserter, wandered from God, in slavery to a raving discord- reveals neither more nor less than Pythagoras and his school seem to me to convey on this as on many other matters; but in his case, versification

We have to fall back on the illustrious Plato, who uttered many noble sayings about the soul, and has in many places dwelt upon its entry into body so that we may well hope to get some light from him. ...

Excerpt from C. H. Josten, A Translation of John Dee's "Monas Hieroglyphica"

Ambix, Vol. XII, 1964, p. 100-101:

From Josten's introduction:

The Platonist Dee, to whom the power of a cosmic symbol invented by himself could seem to make the astronomers' work superfluous, also reveals himself in a passage of his dedicatory letter to King Maximilian, where he declares his restitution of the planetary and zodiacal symbols to their proper shapes to be such as either in times past these symbols had actually been or as our forebears would have wished them to be; he is not sure, therefore, whether he is the restorer of an old discipline or the founder of a new one. In other words he asserts that, by means of anamnesis, he had found the past within himself such as it was, or had reached a level of introspection from which it was possible for him to develop the thoughts of his spiritual ancestors, the ancient sages, precisely as they would have wished. There does not appear to exist for him any material difference between those alternatives. Indeed the object of the true Platonist is to get nearer to the one ideal truth, which is secretly, and more or less perfectly, mirrored in the depths of the human mind just as it may, with more or less clarity, he recognized in the vestiges of a venerable past that had been nearer to the golden age of knowledge than the debased present.

This reconstruction of Dee's impassive attitude towards the world of external appearances and of action, and of his sceptical view of the chances of spiritual attainment remaining in his own age is confirmed by his opinions on alchemy. The alchemists, i.e. those labouring in the transmutation of metals are denounced as wretched and inexperienced impostors [Ibid., f 17v; below, p. 177.]. In the context a hint is given to the effect that man, not metal, is the subject of alchemical transmutation, if rightly conceived [Ibid., f. 18; below, p. 179 and n. 78.]. Yet Dee does by no means regard the alchemical quest as lying entirely in the spiritual field. Man may be the primary subject of transmutation, but he who has been transmuted will be able to produce the philosophers' stone in the external world. This, at least, seems to be the only interpretation of Dee's views on alchemy compatible with his assertion that, besides certain mystical vessels (darkly described in Theorem XXII), certain common vessels will also be required in the process, vessels whose shapes and materials, he says, it is unnecessary for him to discuss [Ibid., f. 22v; below, p. 197.]. In another dark passage, which alludes to the philosophers' mercury and its replacement by the Sun, i.e., gold, Dee asserts that this operation (which is the final stage in the transmutation of metals) can no longer be performed in the present age, as it was in the past performed by some great experts, unless indeed one let the work be governed by a certain soul which has been severed from its body by the art of controlling the fire (ars pyronomica), a work very difficult and fraught with dangers because of the fiery and sulphurous fumes which it occasions [Ibid., f. 14v; below, p. 165.]. This passage defies complete and certain interpretation, but indicates beyond doubt that, in Dee's view, the chances of alchemical success in the external world are diminishing as that world, by progressing in time, descends into spiritually darker ages, and that any palpable success in the transmutation of metals may, if at all, be hoped for only after the successful completion of a most unusual and dangerous work. If one assumes that the soul, which in this dangerous adventure is to be separated from its body, is the human soul (or part thereof), then the ars pyronomica by which the work is to be performed must be primarily spiritual alchemy, the very astronomia inferior of which the monad is Dee's chosen symbol. The fiery and sulphurous fumes attendant on the work would thus seem to denote spiritual, or psychological, dangers rather than poisonous vapours. Yet another passage suggests that the subject which is to be transmuted in the process symbolized by the monad is the artist, or magus, himself, and that it is his soul which, in a mystical sense, has to be separated from its body: When the terrestrial centre of the monad (which centre may here well mean the human body) has been united in a perpetual marriage to a certain supernal influence of solar and lunar quality, the monad can no longer "be fed or watered on its native soil", and he who fed it will himself undergo a metamorphosis as a result of which he will henceforth only rarely be beheld by mortal eye; he will then enjoy that invisibility of the magi which the doctrine of the monad has the power to confer [Ibid., ff. 7-7v; below, pp. 135, 137.]. It would seem, therefore, that the aim of the secret discipline which Dee wished to express as well as to conceal in his treatise was the elevation of certain chosen and most rare mortals to an existence transfigured by direct participation in astral and supracelestial influences, an existence in which they would be masters of Nature and free from the humbling limitations of ordinary life in the body. Those alchemists of his own time who were merely trying to produce gold, therefore, appeared to him as impostors and as the unworthy heirs of a doctrine whose essential parts were not only unknown to them, but also beyond their reach. In this light it becomes less surprising that Dee should never have given the name of alchemy to the process of spiritual transmutation with which his treatise is chiefly concerned [Cf. above, pp. 84-85.], though in doing so he would not have contravened ancient alchemical tradition or the usage current among the more spiritual alchemists of his time.

From the text (pg. 164-5):

Theorem XIII.

Is not, then, the mystical sign of Mars produced from the hieroglyphs of the Sun and of Aries? With the doctrine of the elements included to some extent? And is not, I ask, the sign of Venus produced by a fuller unfolding of the Sun and the elements? These [two] planets, therefore, have regard to the solar revolution and to the work of rehabilitating [metals] by fire, in whose progress there becomes at length apparent that other Mercury [see figure in original text] -- who indeed is the uterine brother of the first -- when the lunar and solar magic of the elements is completed, as the hieroglyphic messenger [sc. Mercury manifested in the hieroglyphic monad] himself tells us most expressly if only we will fix our eyes on him and lend him a more attentive ear. He is (by the will of God) that most famous Mercury of the philosophers, the microcosm, and Adam. Yet some great experts used to put the Sun itself in his place and degree. In our present age we cannot perform this, unless we let this golden work be governed by a certain soul that has been separated from [its] body by the art of controlling the fire [ars pyronomica]. This work is difficult, and also very dangerous because of the fiery and sulphurous fumes which it occasions; but surely that soul will be able to work wonders, tying, no doubt, with bonds that cannot be loosed, Venus and indeed Mars to the disk of the Moon (or at least to that of Mercury), and producing -- in the third place (as they will have it) (to complete our septenary number -- the Sun of the philosophers. You [will] see how exactly, how openly, the anatomy of our hieroglyphic monad [as here illustrated] [see diagram on f. 14v] answers the arcana, [here] to be intimated, of these two theorems.

A LETTER,

Containing a most briefe Discourse Apologeticall, with a plaine Demonstration, and feruent Protestation ,for the lawfull, sincere, very faithfull and Christian course, of the Philosophicall studies and exercises, of a certain studious Gentleman: An ancient Seruant to her most excellent Maiesty Royall.

Pro eo, vt me diligenter, detrahebant mihi: [drawing] Ego autem Orabam. Psalm. 108.

To the most Reuerend father in God, the Lord Archbishop of Canturbury, Primate and Metropolitane of all England, one of her Maiesties most honorable priuy Counsaile: my singular good Lord.

ost humbly and hartily I craue your Graces pardon, if I offende any thing, to send, or present vnto your Graces hand, so simple a discourse as this is: Although, by some sage and discreet my friends their opiniõ, it is thought not to be impertinent, to my most needfull suites, presently in hand, (before her most excellent Maiesty Royall, your Lordships good Grace, and other the Right honorable Lordes of her Maiesties priuy Counsaile) to make some part of my former studies, and studious exercises (within and for these 46, yeeres last past, vsed and continued) to be first knowne and discovered vnto your Grace, and other the Right honorable my good Lordes, of her Maiesties priuy Counsaile: And, Secondly , afterwarde, the same to be permitted to come to publike view: Not so much, to stop the mouthes, and, at length to stay the impudent attemptes, of the rash, and malicious deuisers, and contriuers of most vntrue, foolish, and wicked reports, and fables, of, and concerning my foresaid studious exercises, passed ouer, with great, (yea incredible) paines, trauels, cares, and costs, in the search, and learning of true Philosophie; As, therein, Só, to certifie, and satisfie the godly and vnpartiall Christian hearer, or reader hereof: That, by his own iudgement, (vpon his due consideration, and examination of this, no little parcell, of the particulars of my foresaid studies, and exercised philosophicall annexed) He will, or may, be sufficiently informed, and perswaded; That I haue wonderfully labored, to finde, follow, vse, & haunt the true, straight, and most narrow path, leading all true, deuote, zealous, faithfull, and constant Christian students, ex valle hac miseriae, & miseria istius vallis: & tenebrarum Regno; & tenebris istius Regni, ad montem sanctum Syon, & ad caelestia tabernacula. All thanks, are most due, therefore, vnto the Almighty: Seeing, it so pleased him, (euen from my youth, by his diuine fauor, grace, and helpe) to insinuate into my hart, an insatiable zeale, & desire, to knowe his truth: And in him, and by him, incessantly to seeke, and listen after the same; by the true philosophicall method and harmony: proceeding and ascending, (as it were) gradatim, from things visible, to consider of thinges inuisible: from thinges bodily, to conceiue of thinges spirituall: from things transitorie, & momentarie, to meditate of things permanent: by thinges mortall (visible and inuisible) to haue some perceiuerance of immortality. And to conclude, most briefly; by the most meruailous frame of the whole World, philosophically viewed, and circumspectly wayed, numbred, and measured (according to the talent, & gift of God, from aboue allotted, for his diuine purposes effecting) most faithfully to loue, honor, and glorifie alwaies, the Framer, and Creator thereof. In whose workmanship, his infinite goodness, vnsearchable wisdom, and Almighty power, yea, his euerlasting* [In marg: Paule to the Rom. Cap. 1. verse 19. 20.] power, and diuinity, may (by innumerable meanes) be manifested, and demonstrated. The truth of which my zealous, carefull, and constant intent, and endeouour specified; may (I hope) easilie appeare by the whole, full and due suruey, and consideration of all the Bookes, Treatises, and discourses, whose Titles onely, are, at this time, here annexed, and expressed: As they are set down in the first Chapter, of an other little Rhapsodicall Treatise, intituled, The Cõpendious Rehearsall, &c. written aboue two yeares since: for those her Maiesties two honorable Commissioners; which her most excellent Maiesty had most graciouslie sent to my poore Cottage, in Mortlake: to vnderstand the matters, and causes at full; through which, I was so extreame vrged to procure at her Maiesties handes such honorable Surueiours & witnesses to be assigned, for the due prooffe of the contents, of my most humble and pitifull supplication, exhibited vnto her most excellent Maiesty, at Hampton Court, An. 1592. Nouemb. 9. Thus therefore (as followeth) is y^e said 6. With many other bookes, pamphlets, discourses, inuentions, and conclusions, in diuers Artes and matters: whose names, need not in this Abstract to be notified: The most part of all which, here specified, lie heere before your Honours vpon the table, on your left hand. But by other bookes and writings, of an other sort, (if it so please God, and that he wil grant me life, health, and due maintenance thereto, for some ten or twelue yeares next ensuing) I may, hereafter make plaine, and without doubt, this sentence to be true, Plura latent, quàm patent.

Thus far (my good Lord) haue I set downe this Catalogus, out of the foresaid sixt Chapter, of the booke, whose title is this:

1. The Compendious rehearsall of Iohn Dee, his dutifull declaration and prooffe of the course and race of his studious life, for the space of halfe an hundred yeeres, now (by Gods fauor and helpe) fully spent, &c.

To which compendious rehearsall, doth now belong an Appendix, of thefe two last yeeres: In which I haue had many iust occasions, to confesse, that Homo Homini Deus, and Homo Homini Lupus, was and is an Argument, worthy of the decyphering, & large discussing: as may, one day, hereafter (by Gods helpe) be published, in some maner very strange. And besides all the rehearsed books, & treatises of my writing, or handling hitherto, I haue iust cause, lately giuen me to write & publish a Treatise, with Title, De Horizonte Aeternitatis: to make eident, that one Andreas Libauius, in a booke of his, printed the last yeere, hath vnduly considered a phrase of my Monas Hieroglyphica: to his misliking: by his own vnskilfulnes in such matter: and not vnderstanding my apt application thereof, in one of the very principal places, of the whole book. And this booke of mine, (by Gods help and fauour) shall be dedicated vnto her moft excellent maiesty Roiall: And this Treatise doth containe three bookes,

1. The first intituled, De Horizonte: liber Mathematicus & Physicus,
2. The Secõd, De Aeternitate: liber Theologicus, Metaphysicus & Mathematicus.
3. The Third, De Horizonte Aeternitatis: liber Theologicus, Mathematicus, & Hierotechnicus.

It may now be here also remembred, that almost three yeeres after the writing of this letter, I did somewhat satisfie the request of an honorable friend in Court, by speedilie penning some matter concerning her maiesties Sea-soueraigntie: vnder this title:

1. Thalattocratia Brytannica,

Siue,

De Brytanico Maris Imperio, Collectanea Extemporanea: 4. dierum Spacio, celeri conscripta calamo. Anno. 1597. -- Septemb. 20. Mancestriæ.

¶ Truly I haue great cause to praise and thanke God, for your graces verie charitable vsing of me: both in sundry points else, & also in your fauorable yelding to, yea & notifying the due meanes for the performance of her Sacred Maiesties most gracious and bountifull disposition, resolution, and very royall beginning, to restore and giue vnto me (her Ancient faithfull seruant) some due maintenance: to leade the rest of my old daies, in some quiet and comfort: with habilitie, to retaine some speedy, faire, and Orthographicall writers, about me; and the same skilfull in Latine and Greeke (at the least:) aswell for mine owne bookes, and workes, faire and correctly to be written (such I meane, as either her most excellent Maiestie, out of the premisses will make choise of, or command to be finished or published; or such of them, as your grace shall thinke meete or worthy for my farther labor to be bestowed on:) as else for the speedy, faire, and true writing out of other ancient Authors their good and rare workes, in greeke or Latine which by Gods prouidence, haue been preserued frõ the spoile made of my Librarie, & of all my moueable goods here: &c. Anno. 1583. + In which Librarie, were about 4000 bookes: whereof, 700. were anciently written by hande: Some in Greeke, some in Latine, some in Hebrue: And some in other languages (as may by the whole Catalogus thereof appeare.) But the great losses and dammages which in sundry sorts I haue sustained, do not so much grieue my hart, as the rash, lewde, fond, and most vntrue fables and reports of me, and my studies philosophicall, haue done, & yet do: which cõmonly, after their first hatching, and diuelish deuising, immediatly with great speede, are generally all the Realme ouerspread; and to some, seeme true; to other, they are doubtfull: and to only the wise, modest, discreet, godly, and charitable (and chiefe lie to such as haue some acquaintance with me) they appeare, and are knowne to be fables, vntruths, and vtterly false reports, and sclaunders. Well, this shall be my last charitable giuing of warning, and feruent protestation to my Countrimen and all other in this case:

+ Although that my last voyage beyond y^e Seas, was duly vndertaken (by her Maiesties good fauour and licence) as by the same words may appeare in the Letter, written by the right honourable Lord Threasorer, vnto your grace in my behalfe, and her most excellent maiestie willing his honor so to do.

Anno. 1590. the 20. of Ianuarie.

Before the Almighty our God, and your Lordships good grace, this day, on the perill of my soules damnation (if I lie, or take his name in vaine herein) I take the same God, to be my witnese; That, with all my hart, with all my soule, with all my strength, power, and vnderstanding (according to the measure thereof, which the Almighty hath giuen me) for the most part of the time, from my youth hitherto, I haue vsed, and still vse, good, lawfull, honest, christian, and diuinely prescribed meanes, to attaine to the knowledge of those truthe, which are meet, and necessary for me to know; and wherewith to do his diuine Maiesty such seruice, as hee hath, doth, and will call me vnto, during this my life: for his honor and glory aduancing, and for the benefit, and commoditie publique of this kingdome; so much, as by the will, and purpose of God, shall lie in my skill, and hability to performe: as a true, faithfull, and most sincerely dutifull seruant, to our most gracious and incomparable Queene Elizabeth, and as a very comfortable fellow-member of the body politique, gouerned vnder the scepter Royal of our earthly Supream head (Queene Elizabeth) and as a liuely sympathicall, and true symmetricall fellow-member, of that holy and mysticall body, Catholicklie extended and placed (wheresoeuer) on the earth: in the view, knowledge, direction, protection, illumination, and consolation of the Almighty, most blessed, most holy, most glorious, comaiesticall, coëternall, and coëssentiall Trinity: The head of that body, being only our Redeemer, Christ Iesus, perfect God and perfect man: whose returne in glory, we faithfully awaite, and daily, do very earnestly cry vnto him to hasten his second comming, for his electes sake: iniquity doth so on this earth, abound, and preuaile, and true faith with charity, and Euangelicall simplicity, haue but colde, slender, and vncertaine intertainment, among the worldly-wise men of this worlde.

Therefore (herein concluding) I beseech the Almighty God, most abundantly to increase and cofirme your graces heauenly wisdome, and endue you with all the rest of his heauenly gifts, for the relieuing, refreshing, and comforting, both bodily and spiritually, his little flocke of the faithfull, yet militant here on earth. Amen.

An Epilogue.

Good my Lord, I beseech your grace, to allowe of my plaine and comfortable Epilogus, for this matter at this time. Seeing, my studious exercises, and conuersation ciuile, may be abundantly testified, to my good credit, in the most partes of all Christendome: and that, by all degrees of Nobility, by al degrees of the learned, and by very many other, of godly and Christian disposition, for the space of 46. yeeres triall: (as appeareth by the Records lately viewed by two honourable witnesses, by Commission from her Maiesty,) And seeing, for these 36. yeeres, last past, I haue beene her most excellent Maiesties very true, faithfull, and dutifull seruaunt; At whose royall mouth, I neuer receiued any one word of reproch; but all of fauor, and grace: In whose princely countenance, I neuer perceiued frowne toward me, or discontented regard, or view on me: but at all times fauorable, and gracious: to the great ioy and comfort of my true, faithfull, and loyall hart. And (thirdly) Seeing, the workes of my handes, and wordes of my mouth (heere before notified, in the Schedule of my bookes, and writings) may beare liuely witnesse of the thoughts of my hart, and inclination of my minde, generally, (as all wise men do know, and Christ himselfe doth auouch) It might, in manner, seeme needlesse, thus carefully (though most briefly and speedily) to haue warned or confounded the scornfull, the malicious, the proud, and the rash in their vntrue reports, opinions, and fables of my studies, or exercises Philosophicall: but that, it is of more importance, that the godly, the honest, the modest, the discreet, graue, and charitable Christians (English or other,) louers of Iustice, truth, and good learning, may, hereby, receiue certaine comfort in themselues (to perceiue, that Veritas tandem praeualebit) and sufficiently be weaponed and armed with sound truth, to defende me against such kinde of my aduersaries: if hereafter they will begin afresh, or hould on, obstinately, in their former errors, vaine imaginations, false reportes, and most vngodly sclanders of me and my studies. ¶ Therefore, (to make all this cause, foreuer, before God and man, out of all doubt:) Seeing, your Lordships good grace, are, as it were, our high Priest, and chiefe Ecclesiasticall minister, (vnder our most dread and Soueraigne Ladie, Queene Elizabeth) to whose censure and iudgement, I submit all my studies and exercises; yea all my bookes, past, present and hereafter to be written, by me (of my own skill, iudgement, or opinion,) I do, at this present time, most humbly, sincerelie, and vnfainedly, and in the name of Almighty God, (yea for his honor and glory) request, and beseech your Grace, (when, and as conueniently you may) to be well and throughlie certified of me, what I am, Intus & in cute: Reuerendissime in Christo Pater, & Dignissime Archipræsul, cognosce & agnosce vultum tam internum, qaàm externum pecoris tui: And wherein I haue vsed, doe or shall vse, pen, speech, or conuersation, otherwise then as it appertaineth to a faithfull, carefull, sincere, and humble seruant of Christ Iesu, That your grace woulde vouchsafe to aduertise me. So, I trust, Vltima respondebunt primis: in such sort, as this Authentick Recorde in latine annexed (ad perpetuam rei memoriam,) doth testifie: hauing neuer, hitherto, had occasion to shewe that, in any place of Christendome: to testifie better of me, then they had prooffe of me, themselues, by my conuersation among them. (The Almighty, therefore, be highly thanked, praised, honored, and glorified, for euer and euer, Amen.)

But nowe, in respect of the generall intent of this briefe discourse, I most humbly, and reuerently, exhibit to your graces view, and perusing, the originall monument, and Authenticke Record, before mentioned, faire written in parchment, with the seale whole, and perfect, duly appendant: as I haue 46. yeeres, and somewhat longer, preserued it. The true copy wherof, your grace doth see, to be verbatim, as followeth.

Giordano Bruno: De Umbris Idearum ('The Shadow of Ideas')

This digital edition Copyright © 1997 by Joseph H. Peterson. All rights reserved.

Bruno became a noted expert in the art of memory while still a Dominican monk. He repeatedly demonstrated his memory techniques, including to Pope Pius V. Bruno carried the traditional mnemonic training well beyond the Dominican traditions.

This is Bruno's first book on memory, and presents a rich system which integrates mnemonics, psychology (ala Ficino), and hermetic magic. This work is dealt with at some length by Frances A. Yates in her Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (1964).

INTERLOQVTORES:

HERMES. PHILOTHIMVS. LOGIFER.

HERMES. - Perge liber. Neque. n. ignoras eundem solem; eamdemque artem. Idem sol huius gesta propalat in honorem, illius in contumeliam facta producit. Tristantur illo presente nocturnae striges, bufo, basiliscus, bubo: solitaria, nocturna, & Plutoni Sacra. Gestunt autem Gallus, Phoenix, Cignus, Olor, Aquila, Linx, Aries atque Leo. Ipso oriente operatores tenebrarum congregantur in cubilia, homo vera & animalia lucis exeunt ad opus suum. Haec inuitat ad laborem; trudit illa in ocium. In ipsum lupinus & Elitropia conuertuntur, ab ipso vero herbae atque flores noctis auertuntur. In nebulae speciem rarefactos humores attollit, deturbat autem in terram condensatos in aquam. Aliis perennem atque continuam; aliis vicissitudinalem lucem impertitur. Hunc intellectus non errans stare docet: Sensus autem fallax suadet moueri. Hic terrae girantis parti huic expositae oritur: occidit simul aliter dispositae. Idem orizontes quos dicunt arcticos per differentias dextri atque sinistri apparenter circuit: aliis vero multis supernum atque infernum perlustrare videtur arcum. Hic terrae sui circuitus altum habenti maior apparet: imum vero tenenti (vt potè ab eodem magis elongatae) minor. In aliis emicircuitum portionibus tardè; in aliis vero velociter absentatur. Hic terrae incumbenti in Austrum Boreolior: in Boream vero properanti Australior efficitur. Rectum habentibus Orizonta, in lances aequales hinc inde latitudinem recipit; obliquum vero tenentibus in iniquas. Idem intra duos molis istius medios parallelas spacium incolentibus perpetuo commensuratas luci tenebras tribuit: coeteris autem tempore definito. Ipsi diua tellus suo nos dorso enutrens, nostrum frontem obiciat, obliquos eius radios nobis impetrabit: iis autem rectos quorum capitis verticem supposuerit. Ad ipsum quoque quaedam admota mundi corpora, (quae multi intelligunt esse animalia deòsque sub vno principe secundos) ipsius ab auge vel apogio (quod appellant) lumen conceptant; caeteris habentibus ipsum in opposito, vel mediis (vt vocant) latitudinibus & interuallis. Eiusdem totius luna (quam aliam intelligunt philosophorum plurimi esse terram) in suo ad illum conuerso hemisphaerio liberum concipiente lumen: haec illius globi interpositione tristis vmbratam ad eundem conuersam, auerso hemisphaerio lunae commonstrat faciem. Vnus ergo idèmq̃ perpetuo Sol perseuerans atque manens, aliis atque aliis; aliter atque aliter dispositis; alius efficitur atque alius. Haud secus solarem artem istam aliis, aliisque, aliam atque aliam futuram crediderimus.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Quid est Hermes quod tecum ipse loqueris? qui nam libellus est, quem prae manibus habes?

HERMES. - De vmbris Idearum ad internam scripturam contractis liber est, de quo sum anceps; an prodire debeat, an perpetuo sub eisdem, in quibus olim latuit, tenebris perseuerare.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Cur hoc?

HERMES. - In signum siquidem (ut aiunt) sese effert ipsius author in quod non unius generis armati collimant Sagittarij.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Id quidem si omnibus esset formidandum atque precauendum, nemo unquam digna pertentasset opera: nihil vnquam bonum atque egregium prodiisset in conspectum. Non cessat prouidentia deorum, (dixerunt Aegyptij Sacerdotes) statutis quibusquam temporibus mittere hominibus Mercurios quosdam; etiam si eosdem minime vel male receptum iri precognoscant. Nec cessat intellectus, atque sol iste sensibilis semper illuminare, ob eam causam quia nec semper, nec omnes animaduertimus.

LOGIFER. - Facile ipsis concenserim qui res eiusmodi minimè vulgandas esse censerent: Philotimum audio hac de re dubium, qui si ea auribus percepisset, quae nos percepimus, certè potius haec cremanda in ignem proiiceret, quam publicanda curaret. Haec n. doctori suo hactenus haud iucundam attulere messem: nunc ignoro quid nam sit quod in posterum sperare possit, praeter n. perpauco, qui haec per se ipsos intelligere possunt, rectum de ipsis iudicium inferre minimè poterunt.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Audis quae dicit iste?

HERMES. - Audio, sed vt plus audiam, inter vos ipsos discutite.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Diseptabo igitur tecum Logifere & illud primum dixerim: dictum tuum nullius esse persuasionis quin potius tuae rationis neruus oppositam valeat firmare sententiam. li. n. pauci, qui huius inuentionis intelligentiam fuerint assequeuti, de quorum numero ego Hermèsque sumus: non modicis efferrent laudibus: qui verò ipsum minime intellexerint, nec laudare poterunt, nec vituperare.

LOGIFER. - Dicis quod esse debet: non quod erit, est, atque fuit. Multi cum non intelligant, ob id ipsum quod non intelligunt, insuper & ex iniquo, quo aguntur animo, multas aduersus authorem ipsum & artem adglomerant calumnias. Nonne auribus tuis doctorem Bobum audisti, qui nullam dixit esse memoriae artem: sed eam consuetudine tantum & crebra excursuum repetitione, quae fit visa multoties reuidendo, auribusque percepta multoties recipiendo, comparari?

PHILOTHIMVS. - Huic si cauda foret, cercopitecus erat.

LOGIFER. - Quid respondebis Magistro Anthoc, qui eos, qui praeter vulgares edunt memoriae operationes, putat magnos vel energumenos vel eiusce generis alicuius speciei viros? Vides quantum in litteris insenuerit ille.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Hunc non dubitauerim esse nepotem illius asini qui ad conseruandam speciem fuit in Archa Noe reseruatus.

LOGIFER. - Et magister Roccus artium et medicinae archymagister, qui Empyricam mauult quam doctrinalem memoratiuam, nugae putaret ista potius, quàm artificiosas praeceptiones.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Non ultra matulam.

LOGIFER. - Dixit unus ex antiquis doctoribus hanc artem omnibus esse non posse peruiam preterquam iis qui memoria pollent naturali.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Depontana sententia.

LOGIFER. - Pharfacon iuris utriusque doctor & philosophus grammeus sentit hanc artem grauare potius quam releuare, nam ubi sine arte recolendae sunt res: iam cum arte obligamur recolere res, locos, & imagines plurimas, quibus nulli dubium est magis memoriam naturalem confundi & implicari.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Crysippi acumen, & sententia ferreo ingentique pectine carminanda.

LOGIFER. - Dixit doctor Berling ex istius oratione etiam doctissimos, demetere nihil posse, credo quia nil ipse demetit.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Sub illis echinis ulla ne castanea?

LOGIFER. - Magister Maines & si omnibus placeat inquit, mihi nunquam placebit.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Sepiae atramentum additum lucernae facit homines Aethiopa videri; vitiana quoque liuore mens turpia iudicat etiam aperte pulchra.

LOGIFER. - Execelsum quoque Magistrum Scoppet inter huius nostrae tempestatis, medicos facilè principem, ferunt dixisse auctori: ut suam illi memoriam ostenderet priusquam artem, quod dubium est an dedignans, an impotens ille praestare noluerit.

LOGIFER. - Quid dicemus de Magistro Clyster doctore medico quem non fas est proxime dicto cedere, nihil n. differt ab eodem qui ex Aknaldo & Tiberide vult magis super obliuiosum linguam vpupae impositam, tenacissimam ferenti memoriam conferre. PHILOTHIMVS. - Dixit Aristoteles. cytharizando fit cytharaedus. Si quis huic miserrimo (ipso quod habet extracto) aliud superimposuerit celebrum, forsitan medicando fiet medicus.

LOGIFER. - Dixit quoque doctor Carpophorus ex Proculo & Sabino itacense Mentis & memoriae sedem tripliciter distinctam. Inter pup[p]im enim atque proram pinea media est: quae cum memoria quippiam repetere instamus patefacta; à prora ad puppim spiritui animali aditum praestat. Porro nunquam animalis spiritus nisi serenus, lucidus, & clarus pertransit. Hinc immodica frigid[it]ate obtusus memoriam nostram hebetem reddit atque languidam. Quae quidem frigiditas si fuerit cum siccitate coniuncta: immodicas vigilias afferet et insomnia: si cum humiditate lethargum. Ad quae propulsanda, sunt per artem haec excogitata. Exercitium sensus reuocans & excitans, & spiritus turpi vecordia, & ocio consopitos quasi expergefaciens. Moderatus coitius. Propulsata tristitia & voluptate laetitia revocata. Meatuum corporis omnium purgatio. Eburneo pectine asperóque panno capitis confricatio. Leuiorum, vel lymphatorum vinorum vsus, ne venae hiantes vini vehementia sanguinem exurant. Stomachi rebus natiuraliter vel artificialiter stipticis oclusio, ne fumositas è stomacho cibi ebullitione euaporans, mentem ingeniumque obscurans somnum excitet. A frigidis humidisque cibariis vt à piscibus in genere, cerebro, atque medullis abstinentia, non minus quam ab acutis atque fumosis porris raphanis, alleis, caep[is] quae igne non fuerint digesta. Rerum aromaticarum usus. Capitis atque pedum cum atque decotione, in qua Melissa, Laurifolia, Foeniculi, Camomillae, Cannae similiaque ferbuerint, abstersio. Pythagorica exercitatio quae nocturno fiat crepusculo, vtpotè memoriae menti ingenióque maxime conferens. Haec sunt quae memoriam possunt releuare, aequae quae Democritus Archigene[s] Alexander & Andronicus Peripateticus literarum monumentis tradidere, non artes istae nugatoriae, quae nescio quibus imaginibus & figuris solidam seiactant conflare memoriam.

LOGIFER. - Dixit Magister Arnophagus iuris legumque peritus, & apprime probatus, plurimos esse doctos qui eam non habent peritiam, haberentque si qua esset.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Puella ratio non adhuc dentiens: propterea denti frangibulum non adducimus.

LOGIFER. - Artem Tullij, Thomae, Alberti, Alulidis, aliorumque obscurorum auctorum se vidisse, & ex eisdem nullum se elicere potuisse succum protestatur Doctissimus Theologus & subtilissimus literarum patriarcha magister Psicoleus.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Iudicium primae tonsurae.

LOGIFER. - Et vt vno verbo tandem omnia complectar: varij variè sentiunt, diuersi diuersa dicunt, quot capita tot sententiae.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Et tot voces. Hinc corui crocitant, cuculi cuculant, lupi vlulant, sues grundiunt, oues balant, mugiunt boues, hinnunt equi, rudunt asini. Turpe est dixit Aristoteles sollicitum esse ad quemlibet interrogantem respondere, boues bobus admugiant; equi equis adhinniant, asinis adrudant asini; nostrum est colloquio aliquid circa istius hominis inuentionem pertentare.

HERMES. - Libentissime faciam. En operis prophaemium lego.

Neminem (inquit) latere existimo multas memoratiuas artes ab aliis editas, quarum omnes atque singulae iisdem prorsus canonibus vtentes, in eadem ferme difficultate versantur: qua de re consultum fuit nobiscum, vt potius inuentionis istius fruges proponeremus, quibus grauius, facilius, atque expeditius negocium adeò illustre, pro arte tam desiderabili consequenda tractaretur. Diuturnam exercitationem antiquiores institutiones perquirendo: ab earum prosecutione atque studio ingenia foelicia importunius abigebant: minus. n. durantia & (vt rem apertius insinuem) magis impatientia, quo magis subtilia promptioraque sunt ingenia, quorum quibusdam magis omnia tangere, quam vnum apprehendere consulitur.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Illud quod mihi arridet de authore isto est quod non se facit de eorum grege qui aliorum sententias hinc inde in vnum colligentes, se pro immortalitate consequenda aliorum impensa in numerum authorum pro posteritate laborantium referunt; & vt plurimum eorum se constituunt doctores, quorum nullam prorsus habent intelligentiam atque rationem: iique multoties facere non possunt: quominus (postquam pellem leonis ex aliorum inuentis vtcumque sibi adaptauerint) in propriam crebrius, & tandem irrumpant vocem, quando aliquid ex eorum delumbi Marte (quia facile est inuentis addere) eiaculantur, vel de penuria stupidi sensus egurgitant. Illa illa sunt arietes infantiarum, tormenta errorum, bombardae ineptiarum, & tonitrua coruscationes, fulgura, & tempestates magnae ruditatum.

LOGIFER. - Non sentis idem de carminilegis & versificatoribus nostris qui alienis inuentionibus, hemiuersibus & versibus, pro suis se nobis venditant poetis?

PHILOTHIMVS. - Mitte poetas. sicut. n. pro locis scimus longas regibus esse manus, ita & attae longaeque pro locis atque temporibus poetis solent esse voces.

LOGIFER. - De versificatoribus dixi, non poetis.

PHILOTHIMVS. - Benè, pauci igitur, aut nullus pro se dictum putabit. Sed haec quid ad rem nostram? Sufficit quod in proposito authorum artis istius fuerit intellectum.

LOGIFER. - Non de poetis.

HERMES

Hinc (ait) cum animum meum ad obsequendum quibusdam amicis meis appulerim post diuersi generis alias memoriae artes, quas priuatim ad diuersos direximus, & iuxta vias varias aliis pro eorum dignitate atque captu communicauimus: hanc ex principiorum virtute, quae continentur in ea aliis omnibus praeferendam, & ex deductis nulli posthabendam compilauimus. In qua nimirum artificium facilé & scientiam pro praxi minimé laboriosam polliceor, librum veró, cum suis sententiis minimé omnibus peruium, contra eorum consuetudinem qui libros de hac arte faciles, atque breues: ipsam veró difficilem, atque prolixam tradidere: istam eruditorum pauci intelligant, intelligentibus autem omnibus vsu veniat: sitque quam omnes siue rudes, siue eruditi, facilé scire, & exercere possint: quàmque sine doctore, tantum in metaphysicis & doctrinis Platoniorum bene versati possint intelligere: habet enim illud ars ista, quia cum hoc quod complectitur terminis arduis & speculatiuarum facultatum prae suppositiuis, poterit tamen quibuscumque (dummodo prorsus hebetis non sint ingenii) declarari, continet enim propriissimos terminos, & rebus significandis maximè accommodatos.

Ars ista non simplicem ad memoriae artem confert: sed & ad multarum facultatum inuentionem viam aperit & introducit. Propterea meminerint quibus dabitur eius interiora percipere: vt eam pro maiestate non cuicumque sine delectu communem faciant: eiusdemque canones singulis eorum quibus est communicanda pro meritorum capacitatisque facultate, intensius, atque remissius elargiantur expliciti.

Super haec nouerint in quorum manus ars ista inciderit: nos eius non esse ingenij, vt determinato alienae philosophiae generi simus adstricti: neque vt per vniuersum quamcumque philosophandi viam contemnamus. Neminem quippe eorum qui ad rerum contemplationem proprio innixi ingenio, aliquid artificiose methodicéque sunt moliti, non magnificamus. Non abolemus Pythagoricorum mysteria: non paruifacimus Platoniorum fides: & quatenus reale sunt nacta fundamentum Peripateticorum ratiocinia non despiciamus. Ipsum ea de causa dicimus: vt eorum curam attenuemus qui proprio ingenio aliena volunt ingenia metiri: Cuiusmodi est infortunatum genus illud, quod cum diutius in optimis philosophis elaborauerit: non eó vsque proprium promouit animum, ne vsque in finem cum proprio careat ingenio: semper vtatur alieno; cui tamen magis quàm iis qui propriam ignorantes paupertatem audent non audenda; compatiendum est & quadam ex parte (nisi ex incuria remaneat) est laudandus. Isti similes cum fuerint Aristotelico repleti spiritu (vt iam vocales & progressiuos libros liceat videre. vbi audierint vel legerint. De vmbris Idearum: iam verbo haerebunt dicentes, idaeas esse somnia, vel monstra. quas esto concesserimus, quaeritur an quod rerum naturae conformatur, conuenienter dicatur currere sub vmbris idaearum? Rursum vbi incurrerint locum ratiocinantis animae. Iordane (inquiunt) iam animam texere dicis vel filare. Similiter & in aliis quibusdam buccas inflantes, per internum quendam hostem á fructus istius disciplinae participatione diuertentur. Quibus hoc manifestari volumus. Nos quoque in iisdem cum minus saperamus versasse animum, tunc. n. (vt par erat) fide ad scientias captandas vtebamur. Nunc vero vbi superum beneficio, acquisitis & inuentis ad vltiores proprios actus vti possumus citra contradictionis iustam notam: Si commodus est Platonius terminus & intentio commoda: acceptatur. Si quoque Peripateticae intentiones ad maiorem rei in hac arte faciunt expressionem; fideliter admittuntur. De aliis similiter iudicetur. Non enim reperimus vnum artificem qui omnia vni necessaria proferat. Non idem, inquam, Galeam, scuthum, ense, hastilia, vexilla, tympanum, tubam, caeteraque omnia militis armamenta conflabit, atque perficiet. Ita maiora, aliarum inuentionum tentantibus opera non solius Aristotelis Platonisque solius officina sufficiet: Quandoque etiam (ipsum queraro si consuetis vti videbimur terminis:) illud ideo est non quia non consuetas per eos explicare cupimus intentiones. Per vniuersum autem diuersis variorum philosophorum studiis vtimur, quatenus melius propositum inuentionis nostrae insinuemus. Vnde nihil est quod faciat quominus periti in istis philosophandi generibus per se ipsos facilé (dummodo animum aduertant) hanc, & alias artes nostras intelligere valeant.

Artem istam sub duplici forma tractamus, atque via: quarum altera est altior & generalis tum ad omnes animi operationes ordinandas, tum etiam est caput multarum methodorum, quibus tanquam diuersis organis artificiosa potest pertentari & inueniri memoria: Et consistit ipsa primo in triginta intentionibus umbrarum. Secundo in triginta conceptibus idearum. Tertio in pluribus complexionibus, quae fieri possunt ex intentionibus & conceptibus per industriosam adaptationem elementorum primae rotae ad elementa secundae. Altera quae sequitur, est contractior ad certum memoriae per artificium comparandae genus.

TRIGINTA INTENTIONES VMBRARVM

INTENTIO PRIMA. A.

Vnico igitur annuente deo, propiciisque diis sub ipso altissimo principe magnis, ita incipimus.

Hominis perfectionem, & melioris quod in hoc mundo haberi possit adeptionem insinuans Hebraeorum sapientissimus; amicam suam ita loquentem introducit. SVB VMBRA ILLIUS QVEM DESIDERAVERAM SEDI. Non enim est tanta haec nostra natura ut pro sua capacitate ipsum veritatis campum incolat, dictum est enim. Vanitas homo viuens. Vniuersa vanitas. & id quod verum est atque bonum, vnicum est atque primum. Quí autem fieri potest vt ipsum cuius esse non est proprié verum, & cuius essentia non est proprié veritas; efficaciam & actum habeat veritatis? Sufficiens ergo est illi atque multum: vt sub umbra boni, verique sedeat. Non inquam sub umbra verí boníque naturalis atque rationalis (hinc enim falsum diceretur atque malum) sed Methaphysici. Idealis, & supersubstantialis: vnde boni & veri pro sua facultate particeps efficitur animus, qui & si tantum non habeat vt eius imago sit; ad eius tamen est imaginem: dum ipsius animae diaphanum, corporis ipsius opacitate terminatum, experitur in hominis mente imaginis aliquid quatenus ad eam appulsum habet: in sensibus autem internis & ratione, in quibus animaliter viuendo versamur: vmbram ipsam.

INTENTIO SECVNDA. B.

Hoc ipsum cum consideraueris: illud quoque tibi occurrat velim: vt a tenebrarum ratione seiungas vmbram. Non est umbra tenebrae: sed vel tenebrarum vestigium in lumine. Vel luminis vestigium in tenebris. Vel particeps lucis & tenebrae. Vel compositum ex luce & tenebris. Vel mixtum ex luce & tenebris. Vel neutrum a luce & tenebris, & ab vtrisque seiunctum. Et haec vel indè quia non sit plena lucis veritas, vel quia sit falsa lux. Vel quia nec vera nec falsa, sed eius quod vere est aut falsé, vestigium, &c. Habeatur autem in proposito. vt lucis vestigium, lucis particeps, lux non plena.

INTENTIO TERTIA. C.

Porró cum bifariam accidat intelligere lucem; & in regione substantiae, & in regione eorum quae circa substantiam, vel in substantia consistunt (vnde secundum duplicem sumitur umbra oppositionem) illud te meminisse oportet; lucem quae circa substantiam est tanquam vltimum eius vestigium á luce quae primus actus dicitur proficisci. Umbram quoque quae est circa substantiam ab umbra quae ex substantia dicitur emanare. Ipsa est primum subiectum quod & materiam appellant phisici nostri: Eius omnia participia cum puram non recipiant lucem: sub umbra lucis esse & operari dicuntur.

INTENTIO QVARTA. D.

Consequenter te non praetereat quod cum umbra habeat quid de luce, & quid de tenebris. Duplici aliquem accidit esse sub umbra. Umbra videlicet tenebrarum & (vt aiunt) mortis: quod est cum potentice superiores emarcescunt, & ociantur, aut subseruiunt inferioribus. Quatenus animus circa vitam tantum corporalem versatur, atque sensum. Et umbra lucis, quod est cum potentiae inferiores superioribus adspirantibus in aeterna eminentioraque obiecta subiiciuntur, vt accidit in coelis versanti qui spiritu irritamenta carnis inculcat. Illud est vmbram incumbere in tenebras: hoc est vmbram incumbere in lucem. In Orizzonte quidem lucis & tenebrarum, nil aliud intelligere possumus quam vmbram. Haec in orizzonte boni & mali: veri & falsi. Hic est ipsum quod potest bonificari, & maleficari, falsari, & veritate formari: quodque istorsum tendens sub istius, illorsum veró sub illius umbra esse dicitur.

INTENTIO QVINTA. E.

Vmbras eas in proposito maximé consideramus quae sunt appetituum, & cognoscitiuae facultatis obiecta, sub specie veri bonique concepta, quae sensim ab vnitate illa supersubstantiali decedentia, per crescentem multitudinem, in infinitam multitudinem (vt Pythagoreorum more loquar) progrediuntur: quae quantum ab vnitate recedunt, tantum ab ipsa quoque veritate elongantur. Fit enim ab ipso superessentialem ad essentias ab essentiis ad ipsa quae sunt, ab iis ad eorum vestigia, imagines, simulachra, & vmbras excursus: tum versus materiam vt in eius sinu producantur; tum versus sensum, atque rationem vt per eorum facultatem dinoscantur.

INTENTIO SEXTA. F.

Vmbra in materia seu natura, in naturalibus ipsis in sensu interno atque externo, vt in motu & alteratione consistit. In intellectu veró, intellectumque consequente memoria est vt in statu. Ideo sapiens ille viraginem supra naturalem & suprasensualem quasi notitiam consequatam: sub illius primi veri bonique desiderabilis vmbra sedentem inducit. Quae sessio seu status quia in naturaliter degentibus non multum perseuerat (mox n. atque statim sensusisti nos insiliunt atque deturbant, ipsique nostri duces phantasmata nos circumueniendo seducunt) sessio illa potius praeterito absoluto vel inchoato, quam praesenti tempore designatur. Dicit. n. sub vmbra sedi, vel sedebam.

INTENTIO SEPTIMA. G.

Cum vero in rebus omnibus ordo sit atque connexio, vt inferiora mediis & media superioribus succedant corporibus; Composita simplicibus, simplicia simplicioribus vniantur. Materialia spiritualibus spiritualia prorsus in materialibus adhaereant. Vt vnum sit universi entis corpus, vnus ordo vna gubernatio, vnum principium, vnus finis, vnum primum, vnum extraemum. Cumque (vt non ignorauerunt Platonicorum principes) demigratio detur continua á luce ad tenebras (cum mentium quaedam per conuersionem ad materiam, & auersionem ab actu; subeunt naturam, atque fatum) nihil impedit quominus ad sonum cythrae vniuersalis Apollinis ad superna gradatim reuocentur inferna: & inferiora per media, superiorum subeant naturam: quemadmodum & sensu constat terram in aquam, aquam in aerem, aerem in ignem rarefieri: sicut ignis in aerem, aer in aquam, aqua in terram densabatur. Ita generaliter videmus in iis quae mutantur, motum statu, & statum motu semper terminari. Quod & in ipso coelo semper esse atque fieri optimé Peripateticorum quidam considerauere: cum quippé ipsum habere actum admixtum cum potentia dicunt (quamuis & aliae sint mixtionis istius rationes) intelligunt eius motum esse in fine ad praeteritum, & in principio ad futurum. Quidquid ergo sit de alia descensus specie de qua Theologorum prudentia decernat: illud obnixé nobis est intentandum, vt pro egregiis animi operationibus naturae schalam ante oculos habentes, semper á motu, & multitudine, ad statum & vnitatem per intrinsecas operationes tendere contendamus: quod cum pro facultate praestiterimus, pro facultate quoque diuinis multitudini mirabilibus operibus conformabimur. Ad ipsum rerum praesignata connexio, & connexorum consequentia nos confortet & adhortetur. Nouit quidem & docuit antiquitas quomodo proficiat discursus hominis á multis indiuiduis ad speciem, á multis speciebus ad vnum genus ascendens. Insuper quomodo infima intelligentiarum per omnes formas intelligat species distincté, inferioris distincté per plures atque multas formas ipsas omnes species concipiunt; superiores per pauciores, suprema per vnam, & ipsum quod est supra omne non per formam aliquam. Porro si antiquitas nouit quomodo proficiat memoria, á multis speciebus memorabilibus, ad vnam multorum memorabilium speciem se promouendo: ipsum certé non docuit.

INTENTIO OCTAVA. H.

Ad proximius quidem superius proximum inferius per aliquos gradus contracta similitudine promouetur, quos certé gradus cum nactum fuerit omnes: iam non simile: sed idem cum illo dicendum erit. Quod sané quomodo fiat per ipsum edoremur ignem: qui aquam non attrahit nisi in calore & raritate adsimilitam. Per communem igitur similitudinem ab vmbris datur accessus ad vestigia, á vestigiis ad speculares imagines, ab istis ad alia.

INTENTIO NONA. I.

Quoniam veró quod est simile simili; est etiam simile eidem similibus sive per ascensum, siue per descensum, siue per latitudinem: Hinc accidit vt (infra suos limites) natura facere possit omnia ex omnibus, & intellectus, seu ratio cognoscere omnia ex omnibus. Sicut inquam materia formis omnibus informatur ex omnibus, & passiuus (quem vocant) intellectus formis omnibus informari potest ex omnibus: & memoria memorabilibus omnibus ex omnibus. quia omne simile simili fit, omne simile simili cognoscitur, omne simile simili continetur. Porro simile remotum ad suum distans, per simile medium sibi proximum tendit.

Hinc herbae forma spoliata materia, non immediate formam induitur animalis istius, sed formis Chili, sanguinis, & seminis mediantibus. Hinc qui nouerit apta extraeorum media: & naturaliter & rationaliter omnia poterit ex omnibus elicere.

INTENTIO DECIMA. E.

Coeterum. Similitudinem illam quae cum aequalitate currit; & vniformitati (quam aequiparantiam appellant) consonat: in proposito sensu alium operationum, siue ad internos, siue ad externos referantur sensus, inutilem & malè officiosam habeto. Fit enim vt simili caliditate affectum nec similem, nec infra illius similitudinis gradus consistentem sentiat: sed eam quae existentem in sensitiuo subiecto excellit. Hinc qualem redigere in praxim debeas similitudinem praeuideto, ne quae sita ab adeptis quominus ingredi possint repellantur.

INTENTIO INDECIMA. L.

Considera, mundum istum corporeum partibus eius omnino similibus existentibus, formosum esse non potuisse. In variorum ergo connexionem, partium pulchritudo manifestatur: & in ipsa varietate totius pulchritudo consistit. Hinc rei vmbratilis visio est visionum imperfectissima: quia quod imago cum varietate demonstrat: vmbra quod est infra extrinsecae figurae terminos vt plurimum etiam euentos, quasi sine varietate profert. De vmbra dixerim quatenus vmbra est: non autem quá talis quam in proposito recipimus.

INTENTIO XII. M.

Verum Anaxagoricum Chaos est sine ordine varietas. Sicut igitur in ipsa rerum varietate admirabilem concernimus ordinem. Qui supraeorum cum infimis, & infimorum cum supremis connexionem faciens: in pulcherrimam vnus magni animalis (quale est mundus) faciem, vniuersas facit conspirare partes. Cum tantum ordinem tanta diuersitas: & tantam diuersitatem tantus ordo requirat. Nullus enim ordo vbi nulla diuersitas extat reperitur. Vnde primum principium nec ordinatum, nec in ordine licet intelligere.

INTENTIO XIII. N.

Certé si quemadmodum indissolubilis concordia fines primorum connectit principiis secundorum; & calcem eorum quae antecedunt capitibus eorum quae proximé sequuntur: catenam illam auream quae é caelo fingitur ad terram usque tensa contrectare valebis: sicut è coelo per te potest factus esse descensus, facilité ad coelum per ordinatum ascensum remeare valebis. Per hanc artificiosam connexionem magnum experiri possumus memoriae releuamen: quae valet etiam nullam ad inuicem per se retinentia consequentiam memoriae ordinata presentare. Ipsum manifestatur in subsequenti carmine, vbi cum intelligatur Aries agere in Taurum, huncque motum diuerso actionis genere, agere in Geminos. Et inde moti varia, consequentique actione deferantur in Cancrum. similiterque deinceps in aliis: eueniet vt ex intuitu vnus, alterius mox immediatèque consequentis occursum collucremur.

INTENTIO XIII. O.

Ascensus quidem qui fit per connexa atque concaethenata, in proposito vmbrarum idealium: non est per cathenam similibus constantem annulis, ratione quae concipitur ex proximè dictis, atque deinceps enunciandis. Nec huius cathenae annulus esse debet vmbra sub qua intelligitur Leuiathan dormire: non inquam vmbra abducens á luce; sed conducens ad lucem, quae etiam si non sit veritas: est tamen á veritate, & ad veritatem, ideoque in ipsa non credas esse errorem sed veri latentiam.

INTENTIO XV. P.

Non igitur confundens vmbrarum significatum per occultam omonimiam, omnino hoc stultitias genus incurras, vt sine delectu de vmbris sentias, intelligas, & decernas, opponitur enim ea quam protegunt aliae vmbrae (pro qua dicitur. Protegunt vmbrae vmbram eius) ei quae eleuatur super corporum altitudinem in confinio intelligentiarum. Pro qua dicitur operuit montes vmbra eius. A qua ea quae producant in nobis intelligentiam & memoriam, deducuntur & emanant: Et in quam tandem scandentia versus lucem terminantur. Hanc, vel huic similem figura tam habent, qui Cabalistae dicuntur, quia velamen quod erat Typicé seu figuratiuè in facie Mosis: figuratè verò in facie legis: non erat ad deceptionem; sed ad ordinate promouendos hominum oculos, in quibus accidit laesio si repentè de tenebris in lucem promoueantur.

Neque enim natura patitur immediatum progressum ab vno extraemorum ad alterum: sed vmbris mediantibus, adumbratogue lumine sensim. Naturalem videndi potentiam perdidere nonnulli de tenebris in repentinam lucem prodeuntes tantum abest vt perquisito potirentur obiecto. Vmbra igitur visum preparat ad lucem. Vmbra lucem temperat. Per vmbram diuinitas oculo esurientis, sitientisque animae caliganti, nuncias rerum species temperat, atque propinat. Eas igitur vmbras quae non extinguunt: sed seruant, atque custodiunt lucem in nobis; & per quas ad intellectum, atque memoriam promouemur, atque perducimur, recognosce.

INTENTIO XVI. Q.

In suo genere dixit Theologus nisi credideritis, non intelligetis: & in suo genere confirmant philosophi ex concessis positisque iis quorum fides esse dicitur (quae fides apud Pythagoricos erat de non demonstratis, apud Peripateticos de non demonstrabilibus, apud Platonicos de vtrisque) aucupandas esse scientias: & ex iis quae in virtute, & radice, & implicatione quadam continent, ad formarum explicationem, & per naturalem. & rationalem cursum nobis est progrediendum. Natura dat inuolutas species, antequam tradat easdem explicatas. Similiter Deus, similiter & artes quae diuinum, & naturalem ordinem pro dignitate persequuntur. Si quibus veró arduum videtur in vmbris exerceri, & vanitatis suspectum si per eas ad lucem non pateat accessus: norint talem defectum non esse ab vmbris. Norint etiam sat expedire vel inuolutum tenere, quod nudum non capias.

INTENTIO XVII. R.

De vmbris physicis, sunt ex arboribus & herbis quae fugant serpentes, & mitiora foveant animantia: sunt & contrariae iis. De vmbris autem idealibus (si veré sint ideales) cum omnes referantur ad intellectum & ad purgatum sensum interiorem non sunt quae maximé non conducant si per eas fiat ascensus, & non dormiatur sub eisdem.

INTENTIO XVIII. S.

Non dormies si ab vmbris physicis inspectis ad proportionalem vmbrarum idealium considerationem promoueris. Si ab oculis nostris elongatum corpus ad distantem lucem accedat: minoratur illius ad oculos nostros vmbra: sed ipso corpore magis á luce recedente, minor ab illo transfunditur vmbra, visuque maius affertur impedimentum.

INTENTIO XVIII. T.

Maiora intensione lucis & densitate corporis, vmbra perspicacior efficitur: expressior inquam redditur, atque formatior, quod inde est, quia in densitate, & raritate; continuitate & discontinuitate corpus imitatur. At vero talis imitatio per corpus detegitur.

INTENTIO XX. V.

Vmbra motum corporis simul persequitur atque lucis. Mouetur corpus? Vmbra mouetur. Mouetur lux? Vmbra mouetur. Mouetur vtrumque? Vmbra mouetur. Contra physicas obseruantias idem subiectum (subiectum inquam motus) simul diuersis, contrariisque subest motionibus. Quid. n? nonne necessario motum corporis ad lucem sequitur vmbra? & motum lucis ad corpus sequitur vmbra? numquid soluitur haec necessitas amborum concursu cum oppositis mouebuntur lationibus? Porro aduerte quemadmodum ad lucis motum mouetur vmbra quasi fugiens; ad corporis autem motum quasi sequens: vnde non videtur implicari contrarietas, sed concordantia in fuga vnius, & prosecutione alterius oppositi, atque contrarij. Caeterum quomodo sit in istis, & proportionaliter in aliis: tu ipse perquire & considera: per nos enim res plusquam sat est aperitur iis, qui in haec & alia animum aduertent.

INTENTIO XXI. X.

Non te praetereat tandem vmbrarum cum ideis similitudo tum enim vmbrae, tum & ideae non sunt contrariae contrariorum. Per vnam speciem cognoscitur in hoc genere pulchrum & turpe; conueniens & inconueniens; perfectum, & imperfectum, bonum & malum. Malum enim imperfectum, & turpe proprias quibus cognoscantur non habent ideas: quia tamen cognosci dicuntur & non ignorari, & quidquid cognoscitur intelligibiliter per ideas cognoscitur: in aliena specie cognoscuntur, non in propria quae nulla est. Illud enim quod est eis proprium, est non ens in ente, vel (vt apertius dicam) defectus in effecto.

INTENTIO XXII. Y.

Vmbram si appellaueris accidens corporis á quo proiicitur: habes accidens vnius subiecti á quo recedat, & ad quod redeat vel secundum eandem speciem: vel secundum eundem numerum: Si volueris eam esse accidens eius in quod proiicitur; iam facies accidens ita ab vno subiecto separabile: vt idem numero diuersa pererret subiecta: vt cum per motum lucis, aut equi, umbra equina quae proiciebatur in lapidem; nunc proiicitur in lignum. Hoc est contra physicam accidentis rationem: nisi in Scyllam te transportes negando vmbram esse accidens. Porró quid dicimus de idealibus vmbris? ipsas nec substantias esse intelligas, sed accidentia: sed quasdam substantiarum, & accidentium notiones. Si cui placeat eas animi, rationisque accidentia dicere, imperité dicet: non enim sunt habitus, nec dispositiones, nec facultates innatae vel accedentes: sed quibus, & per quas dispositiones quaedam, habitus, facultatesque producuntur atque consistunt. Recte enim speculantibus substantia & accidens non diuidunt quidquid esse per vniuersum dicitur, vt modo supponimus. Consideratio ista non modicum valet ad vmbrarum rationem habendam.

INTENTIO XXIII. Z.

Vmbra non subest tempori, sed istius tempori, non loco sed istius loco, non motui sed istius motui. Similiter de oppositis est intelligendum. Abstrahitur ergo ab omni veritate, sed non est sine illa. Et non reddit ineptos ad illam (si idealis sit umbra) concipere enim facit contraria & diuersa, cum sit vnum. Vmbrae enim nihil est contrarium, preciséque nec tenebra, nec lux. Ad vmbram ergo arboris scientiae confugit homo pro cognitione tenebrae, & lucis, veri, & falsi, boni, & mali, cum quaereret ab illo Deus ADAM VBI ES?

INTENTIO XXIIII. ¥.

Illud etiam non est praetermittendum quo minus consideretur, quod vnum corpus opacum duobus vel pluribus oppositum luminaribus: duas vel plures proiicit vmbras. Intellige igitur quomodo, & penes quid umbra sequatur corpus: & quomodo penésque quid lucem consequatur: & considera quemadmodum vmbram producit á corpore vno multiplicem lux multiplex: innumerae lucis innumeras vmbras, licet sensibiliter non appareant. Consequitur ergo alio modo lucem umbra, licet eam alios ratione confugere videatur.

INTENTIO XXV. A.

Nec te praetereat quod vt umbra lucem fugiat corporis quantitatem mentitur: & non nisi in certa vnicaque distantia, situ, & dispositione: secundum longitudinem, & latitudinem corpori aequalem, ab opposita luce producitur umbra, adeo vt ipsam lucem nihil magis fugere videatur, quám corporis quantitatem per vmbram insinuare. Sol quippé quibusdam in locis numquam vmbram corpori reddit aequalem, in aliis vero rarius & ad modicum temporis.

INTENTIO XXVI. E.

Si magnitudo corporis opaci lucidi corporis magnitudinem excaedat; producit vmbrae conum in corpore, basim vero proiicit in infinitam seu interminatam distantiam. Si vero magnitudo lucis, corporis opaci magnitudinem excaedat; producit vmbrae basim in corpore, conum veró determinabit in sua extra corpus ipsum proiectione ad talem, tantamque distantiam: quantam magnitudo corporis lucidi supra opaci corporis magnitudinem proportionalem obtinuit rationem. Hinc vmbra quam lunae corpus lucidum produceret de terra in partern oppositam (posito quod sol absit ab hemisphaerio inferiori) haberet pro cono certam terrae marginem: basis vero eius extra terram quasi in infinitum crescens non esset determinabilis. Vmbra vero quam solis corpus producit de terra: habet certos terrae terminos pro basi: conus autem ipsius Mercurij sphaeram non attingit. Iam simile de ideis vmbrisque ipsarum iudicium facito.

INTENTIO XXVII.

Vnde nota quemadmodum de luce & tenebra (tenebram enim densitatem corporis appello) nascitur vmbra, cuius lux pater est, tenebra mater: & non adest nisi hac & illo praesente: atque ita sequitur lucem, vt eandem fugiat: quasi pudeat ipsam matris speciem presentare patri: vt pudore saltem regiam progeniem protestetur. Veluti genere nobiles qui nobilitatem ipso habitu monstrare non valentes, ipso satis proprij habitus pudore demonstrant. Hinc crescente luce attenuatur, quae illa se contrahente dilatatur: eademque totum circumplectente corpus fugit.

INTENTIO XXVIII.

Sicut ex interposito perpendiculariter super planum inter Arcton & oculum gnomone, ex vmbra imaginabili lineam lucramur meridianam: & infallibiliter alias multas temporum differentias quae in nocturno polarium stellarum circuitu ad differentias partium circelli quas linea in illius tensa circumferentiam per numeros manifestat. Non minus & ideales vmbrae per physica corpora ad ideas innumeras poterunt tibi rerum significare proprietates & differentias.

INTENTIO XXVIII.

Et veluti sol sex vmbrarum cardinales immittit differentias. Aliam oriens: cum proiicit vmbram corporis in occasum; Aliam occidens, cum extendit illam in orientem. Aliam meridianus & in Australi latitudine versus Boream. Aliam in latitudine Septentrionali versus Austrum. Aliam si nullam admittit latitudinem. Ex cingulo (quod aiunt) caeli perpendiculares intendens radios, versus nadir suum, terrae producit vmbram. Ab ipso autem emisphaerij alterius opposito versus augem effundet ipso progressu attenuandam vmbram. Ita nobis in horizonte naturae, & in aequilibrata rectaque eiusdem sphaera constitutis sub aequinoctiali sensus, vel intellectus aequidiali; sex sub aeternis ideis formantur vmbrarum differentiae, ex quibus omnimodam ad lucem conuersionem possimus accipere.

INTENTIO XXX. A.

Vt vero intelligis omnes vmbrarum differentias ad sex cardinales tandem referri: non minus scire debes quod omnes tandem ad vnam foecundissimam, aliarumque fontem generalissimum reduci debeant. In proposito (inquam) nostro vna potest esse omnium idearum vmbra, Additione, subtractione, & alteratione generaliter dictis omnes alias conflans, iudicans, atque praesentans. Sicut in arte materialiter per substantium subiectum, formaliter autem per adiectium, quae recipiunt in se ipsis alterantia, transponentia & vniuersaliter diuersificantia: Analogiam enim quandam admittunt methaphysica, & logica, physica: seu ante naturalia, naturalia, & rationalia. Sicut verum imago, & vmbra. Caeterum idea in mente diuina, est in actu toto simul te, vnico. In intelligentiis sunt ideae discretis actibus. In coelo, in potentia actiua multiplici & successiué. In natura per vestigii modum quasi per impressionem. In intentione, & ratione per vmbrae modum.

Adest paradigma vnus, ideae actu infinitas rerum differentias habentis, & vnus vmbrae in facultate in finitarum differentiarum. Linea AB iacens lineam CD perpendiculariter cadentem & duos rectos angulos constituentem excipit.

Iam si linea cadens inclinetur versus B: reddet angulum acutum ex vna parte, ex altera vero obtusum. Magis atque magis inclinata in F, G, H, I, K, & ita deinceps; obtusos, acutósque magis hinc inde dabit angulos.

Ita patet quomodo in facultate duarum illarum rectarum linearum; sint infinitae acutorum, obtusorumque angulorum differentiae. In prima causa haec facultas non differt ab actu, quae, & in qua quidquid esse potest, est. Quandoquidem esse & posse idemificantur in ea. Ideoque in ipso D infinitae simul; & vnum sunt angulorum differentiae. In motore caelesti est in potentia actiua: sicut in manu quae potest mouere in punctum E, F, G, & alios innumeros: non tamen mouit. In coelo sicut in mixto ex actiuo & passiuo, sicut in linea CD quae potest moueri ad efficiendum angulum hunc & illum: secundum quippè multas rationes coelum intelligitur a Peripateticis habere actum potentiae ad mixtum. In mobilibus consequentibus atque materia, est in potentia passiuua, significata per D, quod innumerabiles differentias acuti, & obtusi per modum essendi in materia, & efficiente, & modum participantem de actu, deque potentia vt patet. Hoc quod diximus de differentiis angulorum: referas ad specierum differentias, quae dicuntur esse sicut numeri. Vnde in omnibus & per omnia quaelibet posse figurari manifestum est.

TYPVS VMBRARVM

DE TRIGINTA IDEA-

RVM CONCEPTIBVS.

Iam ad triginta Idearum conceptus, primo simpliciter; secundo cum intentionibus vmbrarum complexé concipiendis, consequenter progrediamur.

CONCEPTVS PRIMVS. A

Lvciferos (inquit Plotinus) in facie Deus oculos fabricauit: caeterisque sensibus adhibuit instrumenta: vt inde tum naturaliter seruarentur, tum etiam cognata luce aliquid contraherent. Quibus sane verbis manifestat aliquid esse praecipuum, quod de mundo intelligibili ad ipsos pertineat.

CONCEPTVS II. B

Non fas est cogitare mundum istum plures habere principes, & per consequens plures habere ordines praeter vnum. Et consequenter si vnum est ordinatum, membra ipsius alia membris aliis sunt adnexa & subordinata. Ita vt superiora secundum verius esse subsistant, in extensam molem, & multiplicem numerum versus materiam se exporrigentia. Vnde ab eo quod est per se maximé ens; ad id quod minimuln habet entitatis, & prope nihil haud temeré nuncupatur fiat accessus. Quem ordinem cum suis gradibus, qui mente conceperit: similitudinem magni mundi contrahet aliam ab ea quam secundum naturam habet in se ipso. Vnde quasi per naturam agens: sine difficultate peraget vniuersa.

CONCEPTVS III. C

Quia in iis quae semper fiunt non est consultatio, & argumentatio. Si aliquid demonstratum fuerit semper idem facere: actus argumentationis tollitur ab eo, tollitur & consilium. Sed vt quadam forma se ipsam foras quasi naturaliter exprimente vel aliquid é sua natura explicante, & effundente, opera sua perficit. Ad cuius operantis similitudinem propius accedit quod idem vt plurimum & frequentissime operatur. Fiet enim vt minus, miniméque cogitans & decernens, in perfectum, exquisitumque actum prodeat. Qui ergo in loco consistens atque tempore, á loco rationes idearum absoluet atque tempore: diuinis entibus in suis operibus conformabitur, siue ad intellectum pertineant, siue ad voluntates. Id fortasse faciebat is qui dixit. IN CARNE CONSISTENTES NON SECVNDVM CARNEM VIVIMVS.

CONCEPTVS IIII. D

Qvod si possibile est atque verum: intellectualem animan non veré insitam atque infixam, inexistentemque corpori licet apprehendere: sed veré vt adsistentem & gubernantem: ita vt perfectam à corpore seorsum pre se ferre possit speciem. Cui sententiae (sine controuersia) Theologus ille adstipulatur maximé: qui perfectiori eam intitulans nomine, interiorem hominem appellauit. Quod si pro huius confirmatione, operationes sine corpore eidem possibles exquiras: Ecce certo loco temporique non adstrictis copulatur ideis, quotiescumque mente animo-ue solutus homo materiam destituit atque tempus.

CONCEPTVS V. E

Habet anima substantiam ita ad supernos intellectus se habentem, sicut diaphani corpus ad lumina (vt & principes Platonorum intellexere) quod pro diaphanitate transparentiaque sua, nonnihil velut innatae luminositatis admittit, quae semper est in actu cum exuta est á corpore, tanquam regionem lucis inhabitans. In corpore veró degens tanquam cristallus cuius diaphanitas opacitate terminatur: habet species sensibiles vagas: quae per conuersionem, & auersionem iuxta temporum, locorumque differentias, accedunt atque recedunt.

CONCEPTVS VI. F

Rerum formae sunt in ideis, sunt quodammodo in se ipsis; sunt in coelo; sunt in periodo caeli, sunt in causis proximis seminalibus; sunt in causis proximis efficientibus, sunt indiuidualiter in effectum, sunt in lumine, sunt in extrinseco sensu, sunt in intrinseco: modo suo.

CONCEPTUS VII. G

Receptione formarum ideó materia non impletur (vt per aeternam nouarum affeetationem protestatur) quia nec veras accipit; nec veré recipit quod recipere videtur. Non enim quae verè sunt, sensibilia ipsa sunt, atque indiuidua: vt autumat qui haec primo, principaliter, & maximé substantias appellat. Quae. n. veré sunt semper manent: quae autem generationi subiacent, atque corruptioni non vere dicuntur esse. Quod non solum rectius philosophantibus placet. Sed & Theologorum alios audimus exteriorem hominem sub hac conditione naturali vanitatem appellantes. Alij vero cuncta quae fiunt sub sole, id est quae regionem incolunt materiae vniuersalem vanitatis notam subire volunt. Ab ideis igitur, ab ideis, conceptionum fixationem perquirat anima, si intelligis.

CONCEPTVS VIII. H

Ideam primum hominem. Animam secundum. Tertium veró quasi iam non hominem dixit Plotinus vbi de ratione multitudinis idearum edisserit. Dependet secundus á primo, tertius á secundo, dum per ordinationem, contractionem, & compositionem, ordinatur ad physicam subsistentiam. Pro methaphysico igitur conceptu tertius ascendat in secundum: secundus in primum.

CONCEPTVS IX. I

Idem, manens, & aeternum coincidunt. Idem enim quia idem, manet, & est aeternum. Aeternum quia aeternum, manet, & est idem. Manens, quia manens est idem, & aeternum. Nitaris igitur in ipsum idem oportet, vel id in quod identitatis habet rationem; vt permanenter, & perseueranter habeas. Id si capies: caput habebis quo specierum fixationem facias in anima.

CONCEPTVS X. K

Sententia haec satis digna est vt in ea mentis acies figatur. Intellectus primus lucis amphitrites: ita lucem suam effundit ab intimis ad externa, & ab extraemis attrahit: vt quidlibet ab ipso pro capacitate possit omnia contrahere, & quae libet ad ipsum pro facultate per ipsius luminis viam tendere. Hoc forte est quod quidam intellexit dicens. ATTINGIT A FINE VSQVE AD FINEM. & alius dicens. NON EST QVI SE ABSC. A' CAL. EIVS. Lucem hic intelligo intelligibilitatem rerum quae sunt ab illo, & ad illum tendunt, & id quod concomitatur intelligibilitatem. Hae res cum profluunt aliae ab aliis, diuersae á diuersis; in innumerum multiplicantur vt eas nisi qui numerat multitudinem stellarum, non determinet: Cum veró refluunt vniuntur vsque ad ipsam unitatem quae unitatum omnium fons est.

CONCEPTVS XI. L

Primus intellectus foecunditate sua, modo suo propagat ideas non nouas, nec nouiter. Natura nouas res producit in numero, non nouiter tamen (modo suo) si semper eodem modo operatur. Ratio nouas atque nouiter in infinitum species format: componens, diuidens, abstrahens, contrahens, addens, subtrahens, or dinans, deordinans.

CONCEPTVS XII. M

Deformium animalium formae, formosae sunt in caelo. Metallorum in se non lucentium formae, lucent in planetis suis. Non enim homo, nec animalia, nec metalla vt hic sunt, illic existunt. Quod. n. hic discurrit illic actu viget, discursione superiori. Virtutes enim quae versus materiam explicantur: versus actum primum vniuntur: & complicantur. Vnde patet quod dicunt Platonici, ideam quamlibet rerum etiam non viuentium, vitam esse & intelligentiam quandam. Item & in prima mente vnam esse rerum omnium ideam, Illuminando igitur, viuificando, & vniendo, est quod te superioribus agentibus conformans, in conceptionem & retentionem specierum efferaris.

CONCEPTVS XIII. N

Continet lumen, vita intelligentia, vnitasque prima: omnes species, perfectiones veritates, numeros, rerumque gradus. Dum quae in natura sunt differentia, contraria, atque diuersa: in ea sunt eadem, conuenientia, & vnum. Tenta igitur an possis viribus tuis identificare, concordare, & vnire receptas species, & non fatigabis ingenium: mentem non turbabis, & memoriam non confundes.

CONCEPTVS XIII. O

Cvm deueneris ad rationem qua conformabere coelo corpori, quod animalium inferiorum etiam vilius ratione non vili formas continet pedem ne figito, sed nitaris ad intellectualis caeli conformitatem: quod totius mundi formas, praestantiori modo possidet, quam coelesti.

CONCEPTVS XV. P

Talem quidem progressum tunc te veré facere comperies, & experieris cum á confusa pluralitate, ad distinctam vnitatem per te fiat accessio: id enim non est vniuersalia logica conflare, quae ex distinctis infimis speciebus, confusas medias, exque iis confusiores supraemas captant: Sed quasi ex informibus partibus & pluribus, formatum totum & vnum aptare sibi. Sicut manus brachio iuncta: pèsque cruri, & oculus fronti, cum sunt composita: maiorem subeunt cognoscibilitatem, quam posita seorsum. Ita cum de partibus & vniuersi speciebus, nil sit seorsum positum & exemptum ab ordine (qui simplicissimus, perfectissimus, & citra numerum est in prima mente) si alias aliis connectendo, & pro ratione vniendo concipimus: quid est quod non possimus intelligere memorari & agere?

CONCEPTVS XVI. Q

Vnum est quod omnia definit. Vnus est pulchritudinis splendor in omnibus. Vnus é multitudine specierum fulgor emicat. Quod si conicias: tale inter oculos tuos, & vniuersaliter visibilia interpones oculare, ut nil sit quod te fugere possit omnino.

CONCEPTVS XVII. R

Error nobis & obliuio accidit; quia apud nos ex forma, & infirmi viget compositio. Formatio quippe corporei mundi, forma inferior est, ex ipsius enim vestigio, & deformitate componitur. Illuc igitur ascende vbi species sunt purae, nihil informe, & omne formatum ipsa forma est.

CONCEPTVS XVIII. S

Notauit Platoniorum princeps Plotinus. Quamdiu circa figuram oculis duntaxat manifestam quis intuendo versatur, non dum amore corripitur: Sed vbi primum animus se ab illa reuocans, figuram in se ipso concipit non diuiduam, vltraque visibilem: protinus amor oritur. Simile iudicium de obiectis intelligibilibus; ei quod est de appetibilibus. Hinc igitur inuestiga & contemplare quomodo species citius, viuacius, atque tenacius concipiantur.

CONCEPTVS XIX. T

Septem gradibus (quibus duos addimus) constare intellexit Plotinus Schalam qua ascenditur ad principium. Quorum. Primus est animi purgatio. Secundus attentio. Tertius intentio. Quartus ordinis contemplatio. Quintus proportionalis ex ordine collatio. Sextus negatio, seu separatio. Septimus, votum. Octauus transformatio sui in rem. Nonus transformatio rei in seipsum. Ita ab vmbris ad ideas patebit aditus, & accessus, & introitus.

CONCEPTVS XX. V

Omne quod est, post vnum; necessario multiplex est & numerosum. Praeter vnum igitur atque primum omnia sunt numerus. Vnde sub infimo gradu schalae naturae est infinitus numerus, seu materia: in supraemo vero infinita vnitas, actusque purus. Descensus ergo, dispersio, & euagatio fit versus materiam. Ascensus, aggregatio, & determinatio fit versus actum.

CONCEPTVS XXI. X

Per numeros (inquiunt nonnulli) entia, se habere ad id quod veré est, seu verum ens, sicut materia per inchoationem formarum se habet ad formas.

CONCEPTVS XXII. Y

Triplicem considera formam. Quarum prima est á qua rem ipsam formari contingit, vt poté quae producit actum: & istam non proprié ideam, vel rerum producendarum formam appellamus. Secunda qua res ipsa formatur tanquam parte: & huic non conuenit similitudinem dici eius, cuius est pars. Tertia quae aliquid terminat, & figurat tanquam inhaerens qualitas: & eiusmodi non potest recipere ideae rationem, cum ab eo cuius est forma non separetur. Quarta ad quam aliquid formatur, & quam aliquid imitatur: & haec vsu loquentium consuevit nomen ideae retinere. Et haec quatrifariam dicitur. In artificialibus ipsis, ante artificiata. In intentionibus primis, ante secundas. In principiis naturae, ante naturalia. In diuina mente, ante naturam & vniuersa. In primis dicitur technica, in secundis logica, in tertiis physica, in quartis methaphysica.

CONCEPTVS XXIII. Z

Quaedam formae imitantur vt ex natura: veluti imago in speculo obiectae rei formam. Quaedam ex institutione: veluti figura impressa sigillum. Rursum quaedam imitantur vt per se: quemadmodum pictura quae ex intentione pictoris aliquem presentat. Quaedam medio modo inter per accidens & per se: vt si fiat pictura ad presentandum quem potest presentare. Quaedam veró vt forté obtigit: quemadmodum cum effigiem depictam accidit praeter intentionem quempiam imitari. Quaedam nec per se neque per accidens quae ad nullum prorsus referuntur nec referri possunt imitandum, si possibile est tales esse formas. In primis est ratio maior idealis. In secundis minor. In tertiis minima, in quartis nulla.

CONCEPTVS XXIII. 1

Agens ex natura vel á casu, non ex praescripto voluntatis, non supponit ideas. Tale si esset primus efficiens: nullae essent ideae, & agens nullum ex arbitrio operaretur. Caeterum valeat Democritus, Empedocles & Epicurus. Si habes impossibile vt agentis ratio á quocunque separetur: & importunius ipsum id omnibus rimabere ni omnia tibi reddantur possibilia, reddentur plurima.

CONCEPTVS XXV. E

Dixit vnus de nostratibus. Exemplaris forma habet rationem finis, & ab ea accipit agens formam qua agit quod sit extra ipsum. Non est autem conueniens putare deum agere propter finem alium á se, & accipere aliundé quo sit sufficiens ad agendum: idcirco ideas non habet extra se. Nos autem oportet eas extra, & supra nos inquirere: cum vmbras earum tantum in nobis habeamus.

CONCEPTVS XXVI. I

Per speciem quae est in intellectu: melius aliquid apprehenditur, quam per speciem quae est in physico subiecto, quia est in-materialior. Similiter melius cognoscitur aliquid per speciem rei quae est in mente diuina, quam per ipsam eius essentiam cognosci possit. Duo requiruntur ad speciem quae est medium cognoscendi: representatio rei cognitae, quae conuenit ecundum propinquitatem ad cognoscibile, & esse spirituale, & in materiale secundum quod habet esse in cognoscente.

CONCEPTVS XXVII. O

Sicut ideas sunt formae rerum principales, secundum quas formatur omne quod oritur & interit: & non solum habent respectum ad id quod generatur & corrumpitur; sed etiam ad id quod generari & interire potest. Ita tunc verum est nos in nobis idearum vmbras efformasse, quando talem admittunt facultatem & contrectabilitatem: vt sint ad omnes formationes possibiles, adaptabiles. Nos similitudine quadam formauimus eas, quae consistunt in reuolutione rotarum. Tu si aliam potes tentare viam tenta.

CONCEPTVS XXVIII. V

Accidentium ideas non posuit Plato. Cum quippe intelligeret eas esse proximas rerum causas: vnde si quid praeter ideam esset proxima causa rei, illud non volebat habere ideam, ideóque in iis quae dicuntur per prius & posterius non esse voluit communem ideam: sed primum esse ideam secundi. Vnde Clemens philosophus in entibus superiora volebat esse inferiorum ideas.

Accidentium ideas esse volunt Theologi qui intelligunt Deum esse immediatam causam vnus cuiusque rei, licet secundos deos causasque non excludant. Et nos in proposito ideó omnium volumus esse ideas: quia ab omni conceptabili ad easdem conscendimus. De omnibus enim formamus vmbras ideales. Nec propterea destruimus Platoniam doctrinam vt intelligenti patet.

CONCEPTVS XXIX. A

Singularium ideas non posuit Plato, sed specierum tantum. Tum quia ideae pertinent ad formarum productionem tantum, non materiae. Tum etiam quia formae principaliter sunt intentae per naturam, non autem genera & indiuidua.

Singularium ideas ponunt Theologi, quia & quantum ad materiam & quantum ad formam attinet, totalem causam asserunt esse Deum. Et nos in proposito singularium ideas volumus, quia sumimus ideati rationem secundum vniuersalem figurati, & apprehensi similitudinem: siue illa sit ante rem, siue in re, siue res, siue post rem: atque ita siue in sensu, siue in intellectu, & hoc siue pratico, siue speculatiuo.

CONCEPTVS XXX.

Ideas minus communes in ideis communioribus generatas quidam collocant, ac tandem omnium idearum genera in ipso ente primo, quod summum intelligibile vocant, vniunt. Tu umbras idearum minus communes in communioribus: & subiecta earum extrinseca minus communia, in comunioribus collocare memento.

TYPVS IDEALIVM INTENTIONVM.

DE COMPLEXIONE QVAE FIT CONCVRSV PRIMAE

rotae cum secunda.

Oportebit ergo volentem per se ipsum artem generalem ad habitum intellectus, voluntatis, & memoriae captare (licet eam in presentiarum ad memoriae perceptiones contrahamus): Primo callere elementarium primum cum suis significationibus. Secundo secundum. Tertio secundum deducere per primum. Prima duo nos prestitimus, quae optimé peruia sunt versatis in peripateticis doctrinis & Platoniciis. Tertium ipsius industriae committimus.

Iam applicationem, & intentionis vniuersalis contractionem, ad artem memoriae aggrediamur.

ARS MEMORIAE

IORDANI BRVNI

I.

Tvnc artem sub vmbra Idearum degere arbitramur, cum aut torpentem naturam antecedendo sollicitat; aut deuiam & exorbitantem dirigit & perducit; aut deficientem lassámque; roborat atque fulcit, aut errantem corrigit, aut perfectam sequitur, & industriam emulatur.

II.

Est quidem huiuscemodi ars rerum prosequendarum in genere discursiua architectura; & habitus quidam ratiocinantis animæ, ab eo quod est mundi vitæ principio, ad omnium atque singulorum se exporrigenz vitæ principium. Nulli de potentiis ipsius tanquam ramo innixus, neque de peculiari quadam emergens facultate: sed ipsum totius stipitem vtpoté ipsam animæ totius incolens essentiam. Quod non ab re dictum existimarim: si quippé in memoratiua potentia consisteret: quomodo effunderet ab intellectu? si in intellectiua: quomodo é memoria, sensu, & appetitu transmitteret? Porró per ipsam regulamur & dirigimur, ad intelligendum, discurrendum, memorandum, phantasiandum, appetendum, & quandoque vt volumus sentiendum.

III.

At vero hoc quo, generaliter ad omnes atque singulas functiones anima fertur, quale sit, & quomodo: non satis est apertum, quæritur. n. quid est quo artem induit anima? qua arte anima artem induit? nunquid non artem conuenit appellare quo technica mater natura ex frequentatis actibus, expertem se reddere nititur?

IIII.

Nónne licebit dicere anté plurimas artes extare artem quam organicam dixerim: cum plurimi artificum vtantur organo; quorum tamen ars non est organum; sed per organum prosequuta? Nonne artem dicere licet, quæ artium fabricat instrumentum? quid. n. erit si non est ars? Adhæc si organum non precessit quo oportuit aliud fabrefieri: expone mihi artis rationem, quæ artem debuit precessisse? In quo nam vt in subiecto agentis ars organica prætitit? Omni proculdubio in physico illo quod præ erat. Illud positione quadam formatum est in primi organi intimæ susceptium deminationis. Quod si vulgariter phylosophanti placeat ab extrinseca forma rei essentiam primó denominare: dimittimus; Quia consuetum est artificialium rationem in forma extrinseca ponere: cum ars non profundet in intima materiæ. Sed hic distat á nostra intentione: ita vt non intolligat.

V.

Quod si ita est vt melius philosophantibus apparet: id quod primó est ars nil aliud est dicendum; quám naturæ lacultas connata rationi, cum seminibus primorum principiorum, quibus inest potentia, qua ab extrinsecus obiectis tamquam diversis illectentur illecebris; & ab agente intellectu tanquam irradiante sole illustrentur: & ab æternis Ideis quasi siderum mediante concursu influxum recipiant: dum ab optimo maximo foecundante cuncta in actum, atque finem proprium pro viribus consequendum ordinentur. Ex quibus manifestatur non temeré nos dedalam naturam artium omnium fontem, atque substantiam velle nuncupari.

VI.

Considerato igitur qua intentione possimus expressisse, artem in quibusdam excellere naturam: eandemque in allis ab illa superari. Id. n. esse minimé potest quam vbi naturam in actibus remotioribus; quasdam rationes maiores, quam in mage propinquis ostendere conspexerimus. Ipsam perpetuare fertur in eadem specie formam substantialem, quam non valet secundum numerum eandem perpetuasse: in quibus artis facultas non extenditur. Forma vero extrinseca, atque figura inuentoris clauis magnæ; per artem duro committitur lapidi, vel adamanti. Item conditiones, actus, & nomen memoriæ, & cogitatiuæ obiectis perpetuanda committuntur; quæ tamen natura retinere non potuisset: quandoquidem fluctuantis materiæ stomachus maturé omnia digerit.

VII.

Sed vnde inquam hæc arti facultas? inde nimirum vbi viget ingenium. Ingenium cuius est proximé? hominis. Homo vero cum suis facultatibus omnibus vnde emanauit primo? á natura sané parturiente. Ergo si rem ab exordio intueberis, & ab ipsa radice hanc arborem transplantandam velis euellere: ad naturæ cultum, atque recognitionem inclinatur. Id sané præstabis cum vociferanti, clamantíque principio, in timiús que nos illustranti animum intenderis. Natura est quæ animis corpora confingit; Natura animis instrumenta congrua suppeditat. (vnde Pythagorei, & ingenia Magorum, vitam, atque animæ speciem á corporis forma deprehendisse perhibentur). Natura ipsa tibi (nisi auertaris) aderit in omnibus: vniuersalis. n. natura non contrahitur quo minus nobis extet officiosa, super omnia enim pluit Iuppiter germina, & super omnes plantas oritur benignus Apollo. Sed non omnia parem á superis imbuunt vitam: cum non pariter omnia ad illos conuertantur, vt manifesté patet in nobis qui per nos ipsos ab illorum communicatione diuellimur.

VIII.

Cum igitur omne possibile natura præstet, siuo anté naturalia, siue in naturalibus, siue per naturalia: ita intelligas á naturalibus omnibus actionem proficisci: vt naturam per eadem agere non ignores. Distinguat quantumlibet, agens positium á naturali vulgaris philosophia; non. n. inficiam. Illud mihi iuro admitti volo: vt ita distinguatur, sicut organum operantis ab ipso distinguitur operante; sicut medium ab ordinanto, brachium ab exagitante.

IX.

Propterea intelligas nos minimé alligatos esse communi philosophiæ cum naturæ nomen materiæ, formæque adstrinxerit: sed & cum efficiens intrinsecum principium recognouerit; siue sit omnibus commune, siue ad hoc suppositum, vel ad illud fuerit contractum. Vnde libentius idiotas loquentes audimus: dum naturam istius hominis, cum illius hominis natura comparant: non. n. vt vniuersale logicum, vel ad eius similitudinem licet apprehendere naturam: sed vt physicum, quod est tum in omnibus, tum ad singula contractum.

X.

Hæc est quæ mediaté sensibilia preterita & absentia: præsentia reddit, atque conspicua: hinc quidem visu sensibilia per sculpturam, atque picturam: inde vero fluentia verba, & quasi in nihilum prodeuntia; stabilia, fixáque reddit per scripturam. Insuper & conceptus, & silentes intentiones cominus comunicabile, è minus ad omnia loca transmittit, atque tempora.

XI.

Quod liberé siue fatum, sine necessitatem, siue bonum, sine demourgon, sine mundi animam, sine naturam appellare consueuere: ab imperfectis ad perfecta, inferioribus istis communicanda: motu atque tempore procedit, quod in omnibus, & singulis est idem principium. Hinc & eadem serie progressum facere dicitur ars, quam manu ducit. Ideo (vt ad propositum intentionis nostræ spectat) cultris in arborum corticibus prior scripsisse perhibetur vetustas. Cui successit ætas in lapidibus celte excauatis inscribens: Quam sequuta est papyrus sepiarum succis exarata. Inde pergamenæ membranæ atramento artificioso magis intinctæ. Proinde charta & inhaustum, præloque promendæ in vsum longé omnium aptissimum literæ. A cultris inquam ad stilos, á stilis ad spongas; á spongiis ad calamos; á calamis ad pennas; á pennis ad fusilia tandem elementa peruentum. Haud secus in iis quæ ad scripturam pertinere videntur, internam contigisse arbitramur: dum ab antiquo humanum studium sine á Melico Simonide, siue ab alio sumpserit exordium: quæ locorum, & imaginum proportionalium chartæ atque scripturæ, actúque phantasiæ & cogitatuæ, locum scriptoris & calami subeuntibus: species rerum memorandarum in interno libro inscribere studuerunt. Quorum industriæ quid, & quantum addiderimus: ipsorum qui hæc nostra cum illorum monumentis conferre poterunt, esto iudicium. Iam quæ ad nostram faciunt praxim aggrediamur.

XII.

Habes in libro clauis magnæ duodecim indumentorum subiecta. Species, Formas, Simulachra, Imagines, Spectra, Exemplaria, Vestigia, Indicia, Signa, Notas, Characteres, & Sigillos. Quorum quædam referuntur ad sensibile ob oculum (siue natura sine arte figurante dicta) cuiusmodi sunt extrinseca forma, Imago. Exemplar quæ per picturam, & alias figuratiuas artes emultricos matris maguæ describunt, atque describuntur.

Quædam ad internum sensum referuntur in quo magnificantur, protelantur, & multiplicantur, in mensura, duratione, & numero: vt sunt quæ contrectanda phantasticæ se offerunt facultati. Quædam sunt quæ in eodem versantur similitudinis puncto: vtpoté quæ á forma eiusdein generis, & substantia eiusdem speciei extrahunt exemplar. Quædam á propria propositi substantia deficiunt, vt patet in omnibus in quibus sophista mendicat á reali; & vniuersaliter ars emulatrix á natura. Quædam veró adeó arti videntur appropriata: vt in eisdem videatur naturalibus omninó suffragari: hæc sunt Signa, Notæ, Characteres, & Sygilli: in quibus tantum potest: vt videatur agere præter naturam, supra naturam, & si negotiun requirat, contra naturam.

XIII.

Hiscæ succurrit vbi figuras & imagines reddere non potest: cum in imaginabilium, vel figurabilium genere non versentur. Carent. n. illa accidentibus illis quibus sensuum pulsari consueuere ianuæ: carent partium differentia, & dispositione, sine quibus antecedentibus, effigiantis actus non succedit. Horum genus ex vna parte ingrediuntur quædam medio se habentia modo: nempé quæ quodammodo referunt, & referuntur: cuiusmodi sunt indicia. Indicamus enim non solum efficiabilia, imaginabilia, & exemplificabilia; item exempla, imagines, & effigies: verum quoque, quæ sigillis, notis, & characteribus exprimunt, & exprimuntur. Vnde non temere in illa enumeratione indicia mediam sortita sunt sedem;

XIII.

Mercurium ergo præsentat species: forma simulachrum, exemplar, & spectrum. Mercurij veró substantiam, essentiam, bonitatem, iustitiam, & sapientiam, præsentant notæ, characteres, & sigilli. Quæ veró promiscuè tum Mercurium, tum & omnia quæ de Mercurio dicuntur præsentia reddunt: indicia sunt proprius appellata. Iis tanquam communi imaginis, notæque stipite: indicamus, & præsentamus, vtrumque. Sicut in demonstratiuis pronomibus est manifestum: cum Mercurij, & virtutis dicimus hoc simulachrum, hoc signum, hanc notam, hanc similitudinem.

XV.

Istis consideratis: memento huic arti media alia vsu veniro non posse ad suum finem consequendum, quam sensibilia, formata, figurata, tempori, locoque contracta: quemadmodum & in omnibus aliis technicis animæ operibus accidere in primo volumine Clauis magnæ fuit expressum. Nihilo tamen minus non vti intelligitur omibus tanquam imaginibus: siquidem multa quorum debet esse memoria, imaginabilia non sunt neque effigiabilia, neque simili quodam insinuabilia; cuiusinodi sunt termini, vsia, ypostasis, mens, cæteraque id genus: sed vt signis significabilium; imaginibus imaginabilium. Et cum hoc illud non est mente prætereundam quód non minus sunt alligatæ signis imagines, quám signa imaginibus sunt adnexa.

XVI.

Ex adnexionis defectu accidit infirmitas illa, qua vtentibus arte multoties collocata species non occurrunt, non tamen ex hoc capite rem ipsam perpendisse videntur prædecessores nostri. Hic est qui interim visus sensum refringit magis quam lumen excellentius, densior obscuritas, magna celebritas, distantia dispergens, & id genus alia, quæ locis quibus vti consueuerunt solentem accidere. Hinc veluti percussi canes lapidem mordentes vel baculum, verum discriminis huius authorem minimé percipientes, alium incusant. Nobis autem cum datum est illam inuenisse, & perfecisse, nec locis materialibus (verificatis. s. per sensus exteriores) vltra non indiguimus, nec ordini locorum memorandorum ordinem adstrinximus: sed puro phantasiæ architecto innixi, ordini rerum memorandarum, locorum ordinem adligauimus. Vnde nobis ita successisse presumimus, vt quidquid ab antiquoribus hac de re fuit consideratum, præceptum & ordinatum (quatenus per eorum scripta quæ ad nostras deuenere manus extat explicatum) non sit conueniens pars inuentionis nostræ, quæ est inuentio supra modum prægnans cui appropriatus est liber Clauis magnæ. Sed interim ad dignitatem considerationis istius conuertamur.

XVII.

Fama est naturalis considerationem proportionari considerationi de simo, quæ non formam seorsum, nec materiam seorsum respicit, quæ naturæ nomine insigniuntur: sed materiam formatam, formamque materialem materiæ adplicitam, quibus efficitur quod naturale proprié nuncupatur. Hic est nexus ille, quo abacto, nullum prorsus opus est, quod natura valeat effingere: multó minus valet ars quæ eiusdem pedissequa: si infra nihilum minus aliquid esse licet somniare, Ars. n. non solum vt primum subiectum naturam ipsam supponit: sed & vt subiectum proximum ipsum naturale. Sicut igitur omnis ars pro suæ considerationis elementis requirit rationem materiæ conuenientis suorum operabilium, atque formæ concinnioris (cum generalis omnium finis sit in aliquæ subiecto aliquam nouare formam:) ita & ars ista, cuius eadem ratio est cum ratione graphicæ facultati in genere, & excellenti proportionis modo; duabus manifestis eiusdem speciebus proportionatur. Est. n. pictura intrinseca, cum rerum, & operum memorandorum producit imagines. Est etiam scriptura intrinseca, cum rationum, & verborum ordinat, atque tribuit signa, notas & characteres: quæ quia etiam in imaginabilibus subiectuantur: non inficior quód communiter loquentes, tum ad memoriam rerum, tum ad verborum retentionem ordinatas foruias, appellant imagines.

XVIII.

Habet pictura (vt decentibus vtar in hac arte terminis) subiectum primum in quo, parietem, lapidem, & similia. Habet subiectum proximum ex quo, ipsum colorem; & habet pro forma ipsos colorum tractus. Scriptura etiam habet subiectum primum chartam tanquam locum: Habet subiectum proximum minium, & habet pro forma ipsos characterum tractus. Ita & hæc ars obiectiué duplex admittit subiectum: primum videlicet quod est locus; & proximum quod est appositum, sine adiectum. Potentialiter etiam duplex admittit subiectum, memoriam videlicet, atque phantasiam in genere, loco vnus: & speciem phantasiabilem seu cogitabilem in genere, loco alterius: Et admittit pro forma intentionem, & collationem specierum existentium in vno subiecto; ad species existentes in alio subiecto. Sicut etiam pictura, atque scriptura, quibus suam forment materiam, adaptant organa: ita & huic, non desunt arti suarum figurationum instrumenta.

SECVNDA PARS.

Triplex igitur consideratio artis istius praxim anteire oportet. Prima quæ speculatur quæ, & qualia debeant esse subiecta. Secunda quæ docet quæ, & cuiusmodi sint apparandæ formæ. Tertia quæ adaptare docet organum, mediúmque illud, quo solertior operatur anima: de quibus omnibus perfectissimé in primo Clavis magnæ peractum est: pro ratione tamen huius libri ne sit truncus, & imperfectus in se ipso (non. n. semper est commodum inquirentem artis principia ad subalternantem transmittere disciplinam: quatenus. n. principia differentus quibusdam ad speciem aliquam contrahuntur; migrant in primam partem scientiæ subalternatæ) tres pro tribus istis canonum ordines adducemus. Primos de materia siue de subiecto. Secundos de forma siue de adiecto. Tertios de instrumento quod virtutem præ se fert efficientis: vnde in idem vergunt caussæ, genus efficiens & instrumentum.

DE SVBIECTIS.

Primum ergo subiectum est technica extensio, siue sinus in phantastica facultate, ordinatus. Ex speciebus receptaculorum consitus, quæ ex animæ fenestris influxere. Diuersis distinctum partibus, visa omnia atque audita suo recipiens ordine & ad animæ libitum retinens. Quæ definitio respicit subiectum commune, formarum communium, ex arte communi quæ ex antiquitate ad nos vsque deducta est. Primum autem subiectum ex principis Clavis magnæ est: phantasticum chaos ita tractabile; vt cogitativa potentia ad trutinam redigente visa, atque audita in talem prodire possit ordinem, & effigiem; quale suis membris primis vltimisque partibus felicissime valeat ipsa per aures vel oculos percepta constanter presentare, tanquam nouæ arboris vel animalis, vel mundi prospectum incurrens. Haud. n. secus tale chaos se habere videtur quam nubes ab externis impulsu ventis; quæ pro impulsuum differentiis atque rationibus, infinitas omnesque subire valet specierum figuras. Hoc sané subiectum quam foelix extet atque nobile; melius ipsa experientia quam vlla vi potest iudicari. Verumtamen qui ex Clavi magna potent elicere eliciat: non enim omnibus dabitur hanc adire Corynthus. Iam ergo ad subiectum primo definitum modo redeamus.

II.

Constat quidem subiectum primum partibus materialibus; atque ita materialibus: vt visiuam non subterfugiant facultatem, quatenus eadem suo ordine phantastica facultas valeat contempleri, vel ipsis vtens tanquam partibus atque principiis, in monstra, novasque innumeras metamorphoses digerere, & digestas velut orbi adfixas intueri. Ideoque in horum consortium non admittuntur in materialiora subiecta, de quibus in arte vera artium, & facultate facultatum.

III.

In horum constitutione seruanda est ratio inter magnitudinem, & parvitatem relata ad hominis molem atque prospectum. Inter intensionem & remissionem; relata ad sensus limites. Inter præteritum & futurum, relata ad præsentem actum. Inter excessum partium & delectum relata ad rei totius præsentandæ integritatem: Inter distantiam, & propinquitatem, relata ad motus competentiam. Inter terminum á quo & terminum ad quem, relata ad eius quod mouetur appulsum naturalem.

III.

Horum aliud est communissimum, quia tantum valet extendi, quantum phantasiæ potest comprehendere sinus, qui positæ orbis quantitati quantumlibet addere potest, licet non quantumlibet substrahere. Aliud est commune quod Cosmicarum perspectarum partium cumulo constat. Aliud est minus commune, vtpoto si libet politicum. Aliud est proprium, nempé si placeat oeconomicum. Aliud est magis proprium tetrathomum, videlicet vel, pentethonium Aliud est propriissimum, quod est athomum, athomum inquam non simpliciter, sed in isto genere. Quorum omnium modorum: primus excluditur per se ipsum ab vsu præsentis artis. Nouimus enim quomodo infinita in vnum atrium reducantur, & multiplicentur in eodem.

V.

Hæc quoque dupliciter contingit vsuuenire animata. s. & inanimata. Animata quidem cum subiecta substantiua adiectiuis apparebunt illustria, & insignita, quæ quidem aduentantium formarum, decursti moueantur: in animata vero cum vacua proferuntur & inania. Caueto igitur ne vulgatum illud experiaris. Vacua vacuis. frustra. n. sperabis in artis huius praxi, quod aiunt. Parietes clamabunt: lapides dabunt vocem suam.

VI.

Committe communia communibus; minus communia minus communibus, propria propriis; prioribus atque propriissimis priora, atque propriissima. Hic habes considerandi locum quo non modo ab omni obliuionis formidine exemptus fias; verum quoque ad perfectiores effigiandi & inscribendi vsus, item in ordinando & methodum methodorum inueniendo, promptior atque securior efficiaris. Et habes istud modo suo in radicibus primi Clauis magnæ.

VII.

Sint naturalia omnia & vel phisicam vel technicam admittant formam. Sint formis effigiandis quantitate proportionata, vbi illud memineris quod natura clamat so prescriptum in speciebus ad maximum & ad minimum habere terminum, eique tanquam subditæ præstanti legi non licere quantæcunque materie quamcumque committere formam. Quod ad mensuram superius consideratum est referendum cum antiquis, quæ quidem respicit formas seu adiecta illa, quæ frequentissime subiectis committi assolent. Sint non vitra metam præcipuè visibilium vnde intensioe sua lædere possint, nec infra suos etiam remissa fines, quatenus ad internum oculum commouendum minus, vol minimè reddantur habilia. Caueto in engraphia vt cauetur in extrinseca scriptura: ne inquani ita subiecta subiectis sint apposita: vt proprios nec distinguas terminos & interualla: propriamque figurationem admisceas alienæ; tum sui denegent coniecturam, tum & alienam impediunt. Sicut enim litteræ super litteras appositæ, & sigilli super sigillos, se inuicem aut delent, aut certé confundunt: non minus subiectis nedum inquam adnexis & connexis: sed & continuis, vol contiguis, nulla intercapedinis conuenienti latitudine distinctis: importunam te noueris incurrere confusionem.

VIII.

Ita quoque capienda sunt subiecta vt determinatis mediis, longitudinibus, altitudinibus & latitudinibus & extremitatum differentiis, habitudinem aliquam habeant ad inuicem. Omnis enim virtus naturaliter præsentantium, & oculus tum primo externum, tum deinde internum commouentium, non tantum in coloribus & eorum fonte lumine sita est, quantum in extremitatum differentiis, ex quo principio perspectiuo opticus & catoptricus ad ea quæ cæteris mirabilia videntur peragenda sunt promati: quod si ratio subiecti faciat vt ipsum non ferat á semetipso: tentet succurrens (vt innuimus) cogitatio vel per additionem externi, vel per additionem proprij, cum per congruentes formationes vtrumque possit accidere materiæ. Subtractione, ex lapide fit Mercurius. Additione ex ligno consuitur nauis. Compressione & distractione de cæra fit effigies. Tractu ex lineis fit figura. Alteratione ex vino fit acetum. Item alia commixtione, segregatione alia. Nexu alia. Solutione alia, alia Consequentia, & Continuitate tentantur ad commutandam formam, & vniuersaliter mutabilis rei naturam.

IX.

Illud quoque non est prætereundum subiecta proportionalitor ad oculorum intuitum in obtutu cogitationis internæ spectanda esse. Sicut. n. ibi sensibile inhaerens sensui non sentitur, & sensibile eminentius remotum á sensu, caret actu sensibilitatis siquidem nec oculis nimis proximos (nec admodum ab oculis sepositus liber legitur) ita in proposito, obtutus internæ cogitationis, quam ita regulare convenit, vt in genere suæ facultatis mediocri sitam elongatione ab intendente potentia, sibi figuret obiectum atque fingat. Illud quoque non minus omnibus est cauendum, ne quasi credentes & memorantes subiectum naturali potius memoriæ, quàm speculari afferamus visui: accidit. n. ex huius considerationis penuria, aliquem opinari se subiectum figurare, vel tanquam figuratum contueri: cum tamen illud non sit. Aliud enim est subiectuare, aliud, quasi in tenebris scribere, vel sub pallio.

X.

Ad amouenda vero quæ subiectorum continuitatem faciunt eorumque distributionem, distinctionémque propediunt, consultum erit vt inter positum subiectum & subiectum interposita tanquam abolita deletaque censeantur. E contrario vbi continuum & vniforme spacium nimis produci contigerit vt vltra quam satis est natura sua valida seiunxerit subiecta: tua positione alia post alia subordinare valebis, nec non adiectivis insignita concipere subiectis. Quid. n. obstat quominus phantasia antiqua hinc recedere; iisque noua accidere secum ipsa fingero valeat? Porró hæc phantastica, quæ veris addi placuerit: non levitor habeantur sicuti levitor efformantur: eo úsque. n. in illis cogitando est incumbendum, quoad ita tibi consuescant, vt á verioribus nihil differre videantur; Id quidem modica præstabis sollicitudine si voles.

XI.

Subiectorum sane repetita excursio, tantum adfert emolumenti; quantum præsens artificium valere potest. An ignoras illum qui diutius legere consuevit: citius quam possit opinari, eum singulas considerasse literas, ex literis composita scripta referre? ipsum sane consuetudo ad perfectius sine cogitationo agendum impulit: quam in assuetum valeat vnquam pura & intentior super singulas partes & elementa regere atque ducere cogitatio. Peritus consuetudine cytharedus perfectissimé sola actus consuetudine, non cogitando cytharizat: alius autem etiam tactuum rationom eandem habens, quam et ille: cum consuetudine careat, tanto se habebit rudius: quanto magis super agendis cogitando incumbet. Satis vulgatum est quanta sit vis consuetudinis. Satis perspicuum est quem levis aqua durum excavare valeat marmor atque ferrum. Sed quid plura de re nimium manifesta? Dicta non prætermisimus, haud quidem quia satis non sunt manifesta: sed quia maximé operæ precium est, vt ad istud propositum referantur. Nouerunt iuxta artis antiquæ canones laborantes, simul longé seposita ab inuicem subiecta, eadémque plurima: vno cogitationis actu contueri ad expressionem non minus quam si in charta legerent expeditam & exquisitam. Id cum imperitis omnibus, tum & iis qui primo se accingunt operi minus credibile solet apparere: ipsa tamen res conuincit oppositum. Quod si per antiquas artes est præstitum præstarique videmus quotidie: quid fiet in ista inquam breuissimam admodum moram exigit consuetudo? plus, melius, tersiúsque tibi præstabunt, hic tres quatuórue lunæ reuolutiones: quám sex illi solis proprij potuerint afferre recursus. Inuenimus namque viam committendi singulis quibuscunque subiectis integros quosque terminos retinendos, & maiora longéque plura vt ex archanis magnæ Clauis est manifestabile. Quod, quantum & quomodo attrectauerit, alij ipsi viderint qui de ambobus recté poterunt iudicare.

XII.

Aspicias proinde quam sit ab eminente natura prelata varietas. Varia sunt mundi membra. Variæ sunt in membris mundi species. Variæ sunt in speciebus indiuiduorum figuræ: non. n. altera olea alteri oleæ prorsus est configurata; non alter homo prorsus alteri similis. Itaque differentus omnia sunt pro capacitate distincta, singula á singulis, omniáque ab omnibus proprii secernuntur tanquam finibus differentiis. Tenta igitur naturæ conformaturus in omnibus diuersitatem, in modo subsistendi, in magnitudine, in forma, in figura in habita, in habitudine, in termino, in situ, & quot poteris discriminibus induere, in agendo, patiando, elargiendo, capiando, subtrahendo, addendo, aliisque modis vt diximus alterando. Vicissim quidem dicuntur ens et vnum: quidquid vnum non est, ens non est, vniquodque autem hoc ipso vnum esse sentimus: quia modo suo propria terminatur differentia. Sensibus omnibus vniformitas nauseam parit, omnes. n. non modo vna qualitatis specie frequentiori, atque continua non delectantur: sed neque ad modicum temporis vnam eandemque prorsus: vtpote vno, eodemque modo prorsus affectam patiuntur. Quod minimé præteriuit eos qui velocissimum in naturalibus omnibus fluxum considerantes: impossibile rati sunt eundem fluuium bis (imo vel semel) posse pedibus attingi.

XIII.

Hinc affectiuitas dependet subiectorum, affectiuitatem appello afficiendi actiuam facultatem, cum aliqua alliciente vel vrgente varietate, vel ab intrinseca natura dotantur, vel ab ipsa insigniuntur positione. Inde quibusdam consultum est principalibus subiectis apposititia quædam addere subiecta; vt affectiuitatem quam á se ipsis non habent: possint propter aliorum quasi sibi insitorum additamentum admittere. Quid enim? quanto magis in affectiuitate intenduntur atque remittuntur, tanto virtuosius ant lentius affectibilem ipsam commouere possunt phantasiam, memoriæque subire aulam atque repetere. Hinc calcaria, hinc sales, hinc aculei; hinc condimenta, hinc obliiti dum tentant reminisse, repetunt, recapitulant, resumunt quasi per ipsam diuersitatem, per ipsas vices, vel vt melius exprimam; per ipsam in vicibus diuersitatem sperent accire spiritum memoriæ. Quod bene facillimé cedit iis qui minimé animo turbati id faciunt: alioqui tanto in maiorem tenduntur confusionem; quanto turbatio illa magis atque magis incalescit. Quanta vero sit affectuum in genere virtus, & quomodo sint prouocandi, seruandi, & variandi, non parum aperte in libro Clauis magnæ insinuatur.

DE ADIECTIS.

I.

Adiectum vero seu forma in genere isto definitur subiecto sine physico, siue technico, siue phantastico appositum, ad aliquid per solertem cogitationis apparatus, presentando, effigiendo, notando, vel indicando ad picturæ scripturæque similitudinem; exprimendum vel significandum. Quæ ratio rospicit formas communes, ab antiquitate ad nostra vsque tempora dilapsas. Forma vero vt ex radicibus Clauis magnæ elicitur: est depromptus & explicatus ordo cogitabilium specierum, in statuas, vel microcosmon, vel in aliam generaliter architecturam dispositum; ad quolibet dicibile interius notandum, vel figurandum ex ductu phantastici chaos, methamorphoses omnes admittentis. Cuius Typum non tanquam hic declarandum: sed ut & hic iuspiciendum apponimus.

FIGVRA PRIMA.

II.

Est ibi chaos in tua primordiali natura elementorum & numerorum ordinem, atque seriem non excludens, cum non solum ipsum informe formabile oportet intelligere, verum quoque vt ordinate formabile concipere necesse est. Est vt vides diuersis distinctum interuallis in se suisque portionibus omni formalibus figura: dum formator designatus per elementum. A. per informes numerorum elementorúmque discurrit circuitus, & semidiametros. Aliam ipse figuram per Arietem imprimit: aliam per Taurum; alias quoque per reliqua omnia. Aliam per arietem denuo cum Saturno reuertentem, aliam cum Marte remigrantem, aliam cum hoc & illo: aliam sine hoc & illo. Vnde in infinitum possunt formari & reformari, siue numeri ipsi, ipsáque elementa, siue ipsi diuersimode ducti motores atque efficientes. Hoc est informe chaos formare, siue formantes eosdem ad formata; diuersa siue formantes varios atque diuorsos ad eadem formata referas, nihil interest in proposito. Veruntamen illud quod immobile manet, atque subest: hac ratione qua subest, atque formatur, habeatur vt foemina ad marem, & prorsus informe vt vndecunque formabile esse possit. Esset communi iudicio magis perfecté chaos, si ex inordinatis constaret etherogeneis, sed tale nulli posset esse vsui. Necessum quidem est ad obsequium memoriæ numeros & elementa ordine quodam esse disposita quo aduentantibus motoribus atque formatoribus; cæteras etiam memorabiles valeant suscipere formas. Sunt autem (vt vides) ita ordinate disposita, vt idem nec in eadem semidiametro, neque in eodem circuitu, aliquando possit occurrere, siuo sit elementum, sine numerus. Excellentissima pleraque alia per hanc figuram pertractari possunt; sed minimé hic locus est. An tamen cum hoc consulto sit apposita; non decerno, sed affirmo tantum. Hoc vnum dixerim quod si attentius eam contemplabere cum rationibus hic explicitis: artem figuratiuam talem poteris adipisci, qualis non solum memoriae, sed & cæteris omnibus animæ potentiis mirum in modum subueniendo conferet.

III.

Primum igitur & in adiectis notandum est, eorum rationem esse inter excessum & diminutionem, intensionem & remissionem, præteritum & futurum, distantiam & propinquitatem, relata ad hominis molem, vel semissem, ad intuitum, & præsens tempus in quo debet esse memoria.

III.

Horum alia sunt animata, & ista possunt concurrere vt organa, & efficientia, adiacentia, & opera, alia sunt inanimata, & huiuscemodi concurrunt vt organa adiacentia, & opera duntaxat. Animatorum vero alia sunt rationis participia, & ista aptasunt ad omnem actionem & passionem, & neutrum se habendi modum. Alia ratione carent, & istis (vt satis est manifestum) dicta per vniuersum non satis conueniunt.

V.

Ipsorum quoque quædam sunt naturalia, quaodam artificialia, quaodam sunt á sensibus externis illapsa ad sensus internos. Quædam in sensibus ipsis in ternis efformata quorum omnium species sunt Forma, Similitudo, Imago, Figura, Exemplar, Character, atque Signum, secundum formalia significata distinctæ vt stat indictum in Clauis magnæ considerationibus.

VI.

Quod ad eorum magnitudinem attinent: Adiecta eo pacto conuenit subiectis esse commensurata: ut reuera ipsa sunt in rerum natura, alioqui facile deperderentur & visum phantasie aut obtunderent aut disgregarent. Diuturniorem certe perquisitionem in ampla pagina microgramma: requirit & ægré requisitum reperitur. Mole quoque sua arbor spatium replens aut exuperans non reddit suam perspicuam figuram. Pro iis valde nobis probatur artificum quorundam industria, vbi modica quædam & phantasie visum subterfugientia subiectis sese offerunt adiicienda: alteri adiectiuo formam illam adiiciunt, cui adherere assolet atque concomitari. Adferet illi Sagittarius sagittam, scriptor calamum, Sutor acum. Tanta virtus est in connexionem, adnexionem, antecedentiam, concomitantiam & consequentiam: vt inuisibilia faciant visibilia, intelligibilia per vniuersum sensibilia, difficilis quoque sensus facile persentita.

VII.

Quod ad qualitatem attinet: sint illustria, sint quæ imaginationem, cogitationemque pulsare valeant, vtpotè quæ aliquid admirandum, timendum, iucundum, triste, amicum, inimicum, abominabile, probabile, admirandum, prodigiosum, de quo sit spes, vel suspicio, & omnino quod in intimos affectus potenter irrumpat: secum afferant. Hinc caueto ne aberres minus sobrie intelligens modum præceptionis nostræ, cum inter species adiectorum signa, insignia, characteres, & sigillos enumerauimus: est. n. quod ea omnia modifices per ea quæ proximè dicta sunt ad quantitatem attinentia, & figendus est oculus considerationis in eo quod in Clavis magnæ considerationibus habetur: vtpotè á sensibus, & phantasia, nihilo nisi per cogitatuam facultatem ad memoratiuam patere posse ingressum.

VIII.

Quod ad relationem attinet. Opus est non ita adiecta subiectis applicari, quasi ea casu & vt accidit proiciantur: atqui referenda sunt tanquam comprehensa ad comprehendentia; indumenta propria ad indutum; tutelata ad tutantia; ita adeoque inuicem connexa, vt nullo ab inuicem discuti possint turbine. Sint relata secundum omnes partes, ad omnes partes; vt pertinentia, vel in pertinentia, vt ordinata, vel deordinata; resistentia, vel conuenientia; & vniuersaliter ita fiat, vt conceptus vnus connectatur alterius conceptui. Quis. n. adiectum hoc Dignitas regia, abscisum ab omni subiecto conceperit? Simul igitur intelligantur adiecta cum subiectis: & quasi elementa lapidibus insculpta prodibunt; nec tanquam á vento exagitata volitabunt, vel confundentur, sicut accidit figuris arenarum tractibus effinctis.

IX.

Agere quoque intelligantur adiecta in subiecta, & in subiectis: vel pati á subiectis, vel in subiectis. Aliqua inquam actione, vel passione viuificata habeantur; quatenus aliquo motu, internum visum quasi sopitum, exagitatione quadam expergefiant. Errando, Transeundo, Subeundo, Adeundo, Abeundo, Coeundo, Ascendendo, Descendendo, Obuiando, Deuiando, Vitando, Destituendo. Quo aliquid Admoueant, Pellant, Trudant, Excludant, Abalienent, Circumagant, Auersentur, Refrenent, Vexent, Abiiciant, Retorqueant, Deiiciant, Demoliantur, Diruant, Erigant, Eleueut, Extirpent, Distendant, Eradant, Abstergant, Eximant, Euacuent, Hauriant. Quibus omnibus non efficitur quo minus subiectis adiecta sint adnexa atque fixa: sed potius vt magis figantur; ipso enim in motu est fixionis, & perseuorantiæ sita facultas. Ne igitur hæc inde stabiliri desperes: neque. n. continuus motus sua stabilitate caret qua sit continuus: sic vt & fortunam poeta sua in inconstantia constantem appellat. Cæterum in varietate, multitudine, velocitate, & tarditate seruetur modus: nec careant conditionibus ad qualitatem adiectorum pertinentibus.

X.

Quemadmodum in subiectis ita & in adiectis euitanda est vniformitas. Quantum quippe valeat, naturæque consona sit varietas ex supradictis desumi potest. Vnde & illud.

Per tanto variar natura è bella.

licet quidem eadom adiecta diuersis apponere subiectis: sed id in sepositis. atque post plurium interpositionem distantibus, actibus implicita differentibus, & secundum diuersas habitudinum species se habentia.

XI.

Illud etiam adiecta retinent cum subiectis commune, (cum conueniat, necessariumque sit ea subiectorum distinctionem consequi vt ipsa quæ ad vnum pertinent subiectum, non complectantur ilia quæ pertinent ad alterum; sod omnem continuitatem, connexionem, constipationem, & ad mixtionem fugiant. Dtim quippe diuersorum subiectorum adiecta vltro citroque actiones admitterent, atque motus: quasi inter se manus conserentia, aliisque occupata negociis frustra ad tuum auocabis obsequium.

DE ORGANO

I.

Reliquum est ut de organo, quo in proposito vtitur anima non-nihil determinemus. Non n. agenti, sufficit ad completam cognitionem: formæ inducendæ, & subiecti formandi rationem habere: verum quoque vbi negocij vrget opportunitas, id quod est ab agente in subiectum formæ vehiculum operæ præcium est non omittere quid sit in sua essentia; item, quale esse debeat, & quomodo sit contrectandum.

II.

Nouem concurrunt ad rememorationem faciendam & memoriam. Intentio antecedens qua primum aliquis sensus extrinsecus, vel intrinsecus sit in actu ex hoc quod mouetur ab obiecto. Prouocatio imaginationis, vbi sensus commotus iam mediate vel immediate expergefagit imaginationem. Imaginationis motus passiuus quo pellitur ad inuestigandum. Imaginationis actiuus motus quo iam inuestigat. Scrutinium quo intendens imaginatio inuestigat. Imago, ut pote species memorabilis. Intentio imaginis, nempé ratio qua memorabilis efficitur in præsentiarum aliis exclusis. Præsentatio illius intentionis, quod. s. intentio illa præsens officiatur. Et iudicatio qua apprehenditur eam esse intentionem illius imaginis.

III.

Inter hæc omnia quod scrutinium appellamus siue discerniculum (vtpoté quo cogitatio inquirat atque discernit) instrumenti rationem sortiri facile constat quod ita communi nomine insignimus: quippe cum ad nostra vsque tempora eius nulla facta fuerit consideratio: proprio celebrique nomine caret. Cuius nominis rationis, considerationisque carentia isti occlusit iter inuentioni: quandoquidem radix formandæ reminiscentiæ atque memoriæ, in cæco densarum tenebrarum latuit profundo. Est ergo instrumentum istud in facultate cogitationis, proportionatum baculo in nostra manu (vnde nominis instituti vel melius instituendi rationem habere possis) quo stantes iacentem acerrimum, dimouemus, diruimus, atque dispergimus. Vt nobis castanea é medio glandium, vel é communitate aliarum castanearum determinata prodeat.

IV.

Et cognoscitur instrumentum istud ab actu. Cum. n. sit duplex virtus conseruationis videlicet & rememorationis: quæ cum (vt aiunt) sint re vnum, secundum rationem distinguuntur; sicut & vtrumque ab imaginatione, magis tamen meo iudicio. Virtus. n. conseruationis est in confinio virtutis memoratiuæ & imaginariæ: & quasi conterminat eas. Distinguitur igitur rememoratiua ab imaginaria: cum quandoque sine forma imaginabili, imaginabilis formæ intentio comprehendatur: quandoque vero eius intentione forma non exiuit. Hinc fit vt cum multa simul retineamus, multa simul imaginari non possimus. In iis ergo hoc est quod agit instrumentum, Discernit, Disternit & Ordinât vel (si libeat magis iustificate loqui) est quo fit Discretio, Disternitiatio, Ordinatio. Vnde á cogitatiua seponitur sibi in prospectum præsens de multis vnum, vnum inquam imaginatum vel vnius imaginem de multis retentis educit in propositum: Et sicut imaginatiua comprehendere dicitur, quid eius quod á pictore est in pariete descriptum; rememoratiuaque illius picturæ retinet intentionem: ita organum istud habet vicem deferentis & applicantis, vel magis eius quo fit delatio, & applicatio istius ad illud: ac si inuicem sint colligata: vt accidit in amplexu qui est in annulis catenarum & similium. Ideoque quasi natura ipsa duce ad nostra vsque tempora hanc connexionem, locorum ordine emulabatur ars: vt vbi rem rei non valebat connectere, illud quod erat vnius post id ei quod erat alterius ordinabat: vnius inquam & alterius non proprium & pro ratione: sed appropriatum á præsentí positione: & hoc pacto quasi ex extraneis applicationem imaginis ad rememoratiuam aucupabatur. Ecce igitur scrutiniij munus est vt vnitates (ita. n. dixerim multa vna vt verborum censoribus aliquid concædam) sigillatim capiendas per ipsum in ordinem disponantur. Quod ita accidit, vt cum centum ouium singulas singulis, atque diuersis numerorum notis vt 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9, & aliis deinceps inusserimus: ipsis mox cateruatim, & confusé occurrentibus adeó vt alia aliam impediat: vt gregarius baculo has oues diuertit, illas conuertit; has attrectat, illas allicit, quó suo singulas deducat ordine: ita cogitatio promptissimé aliis abactis: determinatum seligit aliud post aliud ipsa scrutiniij virtute. Hic est locus considerandi á similitudine, quatenus veluti gregarius ex memoria ordinis numerorum, ordinem recipit ouium, quem per ipsas habere non potuisset: Sic nos facile genus artis inuenimus quo audita, vel visa numeris suo generi congruentibus formantes, ipso numerorum ordine, ordinem sentitæ rei deinde concipiamus, in tantum, vt scientes numerare perquam facile doceamus memorari. De formatione numerorum per omnia extat nostrum aliquid apud paucos. Et eius theoria est in libris Clauis magnæ vbi de numeris semimathematicis. Ingeniosis credo sufficere monstrasse nos in ista parte locum: vbi si non quod satis est insinuamus, forté pro congruentia loci vitra quam satis est expressimus. Nobis. n. ad paucos (vt gratias habeant) non autem ad omnes respicere consulitur.

V.

Est igitur scrutinium numerus quidam, quo cogitatio tangit modo suo species conseruatas, eas pro sua facultate Disternendo, Disgregando, Colligendo, Applicando, Immutando, Formando, Ordinando, inque seligendam vnitatem Referendo. Dicitur quidem numerus quia in nullo genere conuenientius potest collocari. Porro talis numerus est: vt nil sit quod per aliud quam per ipsum memorabilitatem possit induere, vel habere: non obstante quod aliis notum non viderim; nec per eosdem quoquo pacto definitum: ipsum in memoratone est necessarió concurrens principium (loca. n. habent vim non quia loca, neque quia imaginata: sed quia talem numerum in eorum ordine latentem habent) cuius rationem duarum differentiarum (quarum altera contrahit ipsum genus proximius, altera contrahit alteram vt melius possumus hoc pacto, explicamus. Numerus videlicet á quotuitate denominatus, dictus ad differentiam numeri denominati per quotitatem, quo responderemus quærenti quot sunt oues? Et numeri denominati per quotuitatem quo responderemus quærenti quoties venerunt oues in occursum? per ipsum. n. satis faceremus quærenti. Quota est ista ouis? quota est illa ouis? & ideo differenter per quotuitatem dicitur.

Quæ eum duobus adhuc sumatur modis tum videlicet vt respondet per primum secundum & tertium: tum vt primo, vel secundo vel tertio suo occurrit vel occurrere facit. ordine: iam in proposita iuxta secundam specificatur proximam differentiam; non autem primam. Est. n. quotuitas practica non theorica, quæ. s. non in ratione sed magis propriéque in vsu consistit. Qui quidem vsus dupliciter accidit; & videlicet primo cum quodam respectu habitudinéque determinata quadam, vt contingit iis qui per ingenium, rationem, & intelligentiam, recordantur: cum sciant de hoc esse dicendum, hoc esse proferendum, & post hoc sequi illud, & post illud rationabiliter aliud: in quibus proprie fieri dicitur reminiscentia, vt patet per famosam distinctionem ipsius á memoria. Et secundo sine apparente respectu: sed potius cum quadam magis absoluta (licet non vero absoluta) ratione, vt nobis accidit cum vocum minimé intellectarum meminisse possumus, cuiusmodi extant illa Charontis apud Merlinum.

Est percor partes agrios labefacta ruinam.

& allis eiusmodi in quibus nullus potest esse cogitatiuæ actus, nec distinctiuæ virtutis, ideóque eorum memoria esse potest; reminiscentia autem minime vt satis manifestum est us quibus manifesta est alterius ab altero differentia. Cum igitur hæc applicatio non referatur ad memoriam cuius est recipere & retinere (vt diximus & probauimus demonstratiuæ in Clauis magnæ doctrina:) nec phantasiæ generaliter dictæ (utpoté quæ includit etiam in sua significatione sensum communem communiter appellatum) ipsa. n. non est nisi eorum quæ vel secundum integrum, vel secundum partes in sensibus particularibus & externis præxtitere modo suo. Nec certé cogitatiuæ, cum ipsa sit de apprehensiuis cognitiuisque facultatibus, eiusmodi vero quorum allatum est exemplum non sint, in apprehensibilium cognoscibiliúmque genere. Quæ nam igitur est illa potentia interior quæ ab aure perceptas illas voces ad sensum communem delatas vt voces tantum nudas, potuit intrudere in memoriam? certe si est cogitativa (cum non libeat aliam internam fingere potentiam ex æquo cum cogitativa memoriæ proximam pro intrudendis his) haud est nuda cogitativa, sed scrutinio armata, quo non solum quæ quasi manu tangere potest, sed & ea ad quas quasi manum extendere non valet, immittit in memoriæ promptuarium. Ex quibus patet hoc instrumentum esse necessarió ponendum, cuius latentia multarum occlisit iter inuentionum.

VI.

Genus actuum scrutinio prosequutorum in quinque distribuitur species. Applicationem, Formationem, Immutationem, Adunationem, & Ordinationem, quæ sane perpaucis notæ sunt: Sicut. n. non omnes qui vident, & audiunt: quomodo vident & quomodo audiunt, & quid est quo vident, & quid est quo audiant bene norunt: ita & non omnes, qui applicant, formant immutant, adunant, & ordinant: sciunt quomodo hæc præstent, & quid sit quo præstent. Notum satis est in vniuersalitate & confusione quadam hæc á ratiocinante anima produci: Sed non admodum quibus proximé potentiis, facultatibúsue, & organis: nec vt desideramus ante nos apparuit qui hæc fuerit rimatus intimius quam quidam ex Arabibus qui versati sunt circa Peripateticam disciplinam à quibus nonnulla præacta sunt. Sed si nos hæc omnia per singula velimus in notitiam deducere: maximum aggredieremur negocium, & difficile ad communicandum; præsertim cum videam temporibus istis perpaucos veré philosophos vt in præludij significatum est sentiis: mitto quam aliquorum nominum, nouitas quam nouæ exigunt inuentiones, atque considerationes, plurimos lederet: hac de causa SILVI A BONIS, atque etiam quia ad negocium istud quod ad praxim præcipué dirigitur non spectant necessarió: illud ergo maximé animaduertendum est quod de scrutinio cum quandoquo enumeratis nunc ordinate subinferemus.

VII.

Pro applicatione notandum quod dicitur facultates istas analogiam & ordinem inter se retinere vt sensus exterior sit circa corpora; Phantasia circa corporum simulachra. Imaginatio circa singulas simulachrorum intentiones: Intellectus veró circa singularum intentionum naturas communes & rationes poenitus incorporeas. Ex qua analogia sequitur (vt alibi monstrauius) quod sicut extat ars quæ sensum externum allicit, trahit, atque ligat: ita est quæ allecat, atque tenacissimé vincit. Cur ad vuas per Zeusim depictas accursabant volucres? cur Venus á Praxitele sculpta vix ab amatoribus pudica seruabatur? quia artificum forma quædam ita suum subiectum rebus applicabat vt eas intensius exquisitiusque discerneret; nec non sedes vnde præcipuè & [vt ita dicam] capitaliter species irrepunt in sensus inueniret. Licet autem [vt supra dictum est] principium istud omnibus sit communo: non tamen vniforme esse in omnibus satis est planum: quibus enim aptius atque temporatius est instrumentum (puta corpus) clariores sunt animæ.

VIII.

Anima clarior diuinis Ideis magis exposita intentius obiectorum formas suscipit: quemadmodum qui acutioris visus est, facilius aptiusque discernit Formæ. n. in corporibus nil aliud quàm diuinarum idearum imagines esse censentur: quæ eadem in sensibus hominum internis, quo melius nomine intitulari possunt quam diuinarum idearum vmbre; Cum ita á realitate distent naturalium; sicut. naturales á veritate distant methaphisicalium? Harum quidem specierum aditumm in intellectum potius crediderim immediate fieri per conuersionem ad lumen illud quod agit in nobis intelligentiam: quam mediantibus rerum physicarum formis intus per sensus exteriores ingestis. Ex vna tamen parte vno experimur modo, ex alia vero alio. Propterea expedit vtramque opinandi viam sine contradictione complecti: quod quomodo fiat alibi monstrauius; & tu ex temetipso si in communissima versatus es philosophia, per hæc poteris determinare. Huiusce sané oculi nisi in te vigeat emissio per applicationem: qui fieri potest vt per ipsum in cæteras interiores animæ potentias scibilium speres consequi immissiones? quid. n. aliud est non appellere, quàm clausos habere oculos? quid aliud est claudere oculos quam in vmbra (vt aiunt) mortis versari? non ne á rerum veritate vsque ad ora vulgi transmissum est; vt equiualeat quempiam clausisse oculos & esse mortuum?

IX.

Pro formatione vero quæ sequitur applicationem: illud primo animaduertendum, eius totam vim in modo & specie applicationis esse sitam. Potentia. n. generaliter apprehensiuia habet illud cum matoria commune: vt in se ipsa, & ex seipsa nil sit præter sinum & conceptaculum: nullum elementorum in se odorem habet aliquem, vel saporem, vel calorem: concurrentibus tamen illis fama est, in diuersos ordines atque gradus, omnem prodire colorem, saporem, & odorem. Ignis alteri corpori admotus lucet; insuper & iuxta corporum varietatem diuersimodé in melius, atque deterius splendet. Id sané non habet ignis in se, nec corpus alterum in se, sed ambo habent virtute applicationis. Iam habes per similitudinem, formationem tum intellectus, tum memoriæ consequi applicationem, tanto meliorem; quanto, & antecedens melior extitit applicatio: & huius efficacia maxima ex parte in scrutinij manuactione consistit.

X.

Sunt qui velint formas facili reductionis esse illas quæ sunt apud virtutem imaginatiuam atque communem sensum, multæ corporalitatis & modicæ (inquiunt ipsi) spiritualitatis. Formas vero difficilis reductionis, esse multæ spiritualitatis & modicæ corporalitatis. Id quidem ita sibi suadent quia formæ multæ corporalitatis morantur dum sensus communis spiritualitatem ab earum corporalitate distinguit; vnde formam illam fixari in ea contingit; idque præsertim cum eam pauci corticis recipit. Hinc reciproce inferunt hominem tardi motus in cuius anima figuntur sensibilia quæ transierunt: melioris esse rememorationis. Quæ omnia habent quandam leuem persuasionem quæ quidem cum verbis explicantibus ipsa similia sunt opinationibus & sermonibus somniantium. Constituunt. n. memoratiuas species alias veloces, alias tardas, alias tempestiué, alias maturé; alias figurari per equum Martini, alias per equum Georgi, quod dicere & sentire non convenit grauitati illorum. Quidquid enim sentiant: nunquam corporalitas quæ corporalitas, seu proprius dicas corpus qua corpus est, quippiam agere intelligi debet imò vniuersaliter asserendum à corporalitate non esse actionem; á maiori minus esse, a maxima minimè, quia corpus quatenus corpus non agit, omnis. n. actio est à qualitate, & ab eo quod spiritualius est ipsa qualitate; magis, & ab incorporeo maximè. Vtlibet ergo intelligantur verba illorum famosorum virorum euitare nequeunt semper inconueniens, & si velis eos excusare quod non corporalia agunt magis quia corporalia, sed quia multum morantur & sunt vehicula accidentium, á quibus informationes efficiuntur quæ morantibus corporibus morantur; & morantia figuntur magis. Hæc excusatio non potest capi nec retineri quominus obiter euomatur á verbis illorum, leuissimique stomachi sententia. Mitto quod magis rudes sunt magis morosi, & magis morosi magis rudes: nec obstat quod experimur nos morantes in consideratione vnus rei magis memores reddi quàm leui consideratione præter labentes, experimur enim etiam atque non minus, nos quædam sine mora audita atque visa vel etiam considerata in sempiternum recordari; alia vero diutius attentiusque visa & considerata, minimè retinere. Haud igitur in mora & corporalitate est virtus, imo in ipso contrario maximè quod ad corpus attinet. Quod vero ad alterum non est mora quæ facit fixationem: sed formæ actiuitas, videtur autem mora conferre aliquando: quia forma aliqua non apta vel nata est citò agere, vel subiectum citò recipere, ideóque morando perficitur actio. Vbi vero forma est spiritualior, est & actiuior. Hinc ignis actiuissimus est omnium elementorum, quia spiritualissimum est inter ea, & potentissimum ad conuertendum in se, & data materia solus per se in infinitum crescens. Qui etiam si multum agit: non quia multus est. & magnus, agit, vtpote propter multam corporalitatem: sed propter intensiorem qualitatem, quæ consuevit seruari in illa magnitudine: quæ quidem qualitas (vt notant quidam Platoniorum) si posset reduci in medietatem illius magnitudinis: intenderetur adeo magis, vt duplo potentius ageret, si in minimam quantitatem, maximè potentior: si in indiuiduum infinite potentior. Ex his ergo considerari potest quam inconsiderate dicti philosophi loquuti sint.

XI.

Hinc etiam patet quam imperité (etenim hoc notare non est sine emolumento eorum quæ ad præsens institutum spectant) equini quidam medici proferant illud vulgatum. Non qualitas, sed quantitas. Cum ad eorum propositum oppositum totum proferri debeat. Esto. n. quod qualitas tantæ virtutis non sit infra tantam quantitatem, & in multa quantitate multa qualitas conseruetur: nunquam tamen actiuitas refferri debet ad molem, totúmque illud quod est pertinens ad rationem materiæ, extensio. n. ipsa ordinata est [ipsis etiam indicibus] ad continentiam: qualitatis, atque formæ. Ferri id tamen potest si ab Apotecariis eorum dictum fuerit: quia recipiunt precium iuxta quantitatem quæ est in ponderibus, numeris, & mensuris, quidquid sit de qualitate simplicium, pharmacorum & aliorum confectorum; & idcirco, vt existimo, quidam ex eis in suo insigni notatum habebat in nostra patria. NON QVALITAS SED QVANTITAS. quamuis. n. constaret eum hæc retulisse ad porcum depictum de quo non quæritur sicut de equo, an concinnos habeat oculos, parvas auriculas, contractam ceruicem, latum pectus, minacem frontem, os arrectum, crura soluta, & id genus alia, sed duntaxat an sit latus longus atque pinguis, id tamen non minus conuenienter subinde poterat á porco ad id quod erat intus in apotheca referri. NON QVALITAS SED QVANTITAS, vtpoté pia mater, quæ dotaui filias & doctorauit filium.

XII.

Adunatio uero & immutatio, licet sint duo actus: simul tamen fiunt. Immutando enim fit adunatio; adunando fit imrnutatio. Horum rationem ita aperimus. Dixit Heraclitus, Si omnia entia fumus fierent: nares omnia discernerent. Dicamus crassius. Si omnia præter Vulpeni in gallinaceos conuerterentur frustra non esuriret vulpes, omnia per vulpem essent vorabilia. De potentibus omnia suo modo conuertere, vnum est hominis phantasia: de potentibus omnia suo modo vorare, & degustare vnum est hominis cogitativa. Tale conuersionis genus potent attingere (non sine cogitationis actu) phantasia; vt omnia memorabilia potenter reddat non absque phantasiæ actu cogitativa. At inquires oportebit phantasiam conuertere omnia aut in vnam speciem, aut in plures: si conuertat & reformet in vnam; iam non erit multorum memoria, sed vnus: si quippé omnia conuertantur in ouem: iam lupus non multiplicabit comestibilium speciem vt dici possit præter vnum quippiam illi esse comestibile. Si conuertat reformétque in plures species: aut finitas, aut infinitas si finitas: aut determinatas & istas cognoscere & aut determinare oportet; aut indeterminatas, & ita erimus in eodem in quo sumus. Infinita vero tentare stultum est. Scire igitur oportet conuersionem non ita fiendam vt substantialis diuersitas destruat; nec vt accidentia vnus cuiusque rei propria tollantur: Sed vt diuersa atque omnia ita vna illis applicita adueniente forma, afficiantur modo suo: vt vnam ab vno, & per vnum memorabilis subeant rationem: Sic omnia lupus iste ingurgitabit vt vnum: si omnes substantiæ & quæ immediate consequuntur eas vnus generis accidentium indumenta subibunt.

Sicut ad eandem vocalem in centro circuli innumera si esse, & imaginari possint elementa relata; (non ablato quod eorum singula suam diuersitatem retineant) omnia vnus sonantiæ modum subeunt: imo tantum abest vt per vocalis applicationem subcludant suam essetia ab aliis diuersitatem: vt per illam magis eadem insinuare valeant. Sic & vni spiritui pluribus apposis organis diuersæ pro eorum propria ratione producuntur voces. Quid ergo est quod disperans non disponaris, & quasi accingaris ad aliquam de innumeris possibilibus tibi speciem comparandam; in phantasie & cogitatuæ conterminio situandam: qua vniuersa sicut in libro spectabilitatem, ita & in anima memorabilitatem induant? Hoc est quod tuæ relinquimus industriæ ô quicumque es ingeniose. Intueare quid præstiterit modus inventionis Pan Archadiæ Dei cum primus calamos coniunxit agrestes: hæc quæ diuersis iam acta ingeniis non facile olim consonare solebant: iam vnico eiusdem spiritu, in vnum quasi imparibus compactum cicutis in missorum, ablatam dispersionem, adunionemque factam, quam commode præstat vnus.

XIII.

Pro hoc quod ad ordinationem attinet, vulgatæ sunt (licet ad rem minus & modicum relatæ) propositiones ab ista pendentes, quæ consideratis iis quæ per nos extant enucleata melius vsuuenire possunt. Principaliter ergo contingere dicitur reminiscencia, cum motus iste huic motui de necessitate succedit, vel motum istum hic motus concomitatur: siue id sit locali, siue temporali, siue rationali, siue naturali, siue artificiali, siue quomodocunque aliter positiua concomitantia, atque vnus post alterum successione. Ad quem sané modum, progredimur á memoria niuis ad memoriam hiemis; Hinc ad eam quæ frigoris. Hinc ad eam quæ antiperistasis: Hinc ad eam quæ intendentia caloris in stomacho: Inde ad eam quæ potentis digestionis; Ab hac in appetitum, & viuacius nutrimentum; robur, & exercitium; & ita deinceps in hoc. In aliis omnibus similiter. Si quid vero habet naturam carentem ordine: ad aliud ordinatum referatur: atque innitatur: quod quidem semper esse debet aliquod sensibile: quamobrem non temeré á ratiocinativo philosopho dicitur ordinem propria natura sensibilibus esse: & non cognoscit ipsum extra margines naturæ. Vnde si quæras ab illo quid est ordo? est inquiet progressus rei secundum viam naturæ. Quid est ordinis carentia exitus inquiet á via naturæ. Hæc sunt quæ de organo, & ad organum scrutinium pertinentia volumus esse dicta: quæ si attentius contemplaberis; nihil est quod ne ad vltiora progrediaris impediat: ex iis. n. remoueris ab eo, quod ad consequentes actus oclusum faciebat iter. Et certé facere non potuimus; ne sub titulo theorices sufficienter apponeremus ea, quæ per se ipsa praxim complere valeant.

TERTIA PARS

I.

Age iam ad operandi formam transeamus insinuandam. Tanquam præludiis agentes, ab elementorum simpliciorumque notitia, ad compositi integri, atque perfecti considerationem deueniamus.

Primum igitur ad eorum similitudinem qui prius manum paginæ docent admouere quam oculi ad inscriptos characteres coniiciantur: proponimus ante apparanda subiecta quorum præcesserit memoria: vt ipsorum virtus & efficacia discooperiatur hunc in modum. Sumatur subiectum commune idque primo in partes eius maiores distribuatur, quæ ex instituto saltem operantis sibi succedere debeant: quæ partes maiores, subiecta magis propria superius sunt appellata. Hinc ad subdiuisionem procedatur; vt partes istæ ad inuicem finiri, & ordinatæ sibi inuicem succedere perceptæ, in loco contiguitatis veræ, vel positiuæ describant sibi alias partes, quæ subiecta propriissima indiuiduæque sunt: quæ multiplicari debent iuxta rationem latitudinis subiectorum magis priorum, & commodum occurrentium sedium adiiciendorum.

II.

Quibus ita dispositis & prompté memoriter habitis adsit cathalogus diuersarum rerum sensibilibum, quæ primo numero sint viginti & quinque, deinde quinquaginta, mox centum: vt gradatim exercitationis beneficio exoptata comparetur disciplina; cum hoc quod optimé videbitur quomadmodum ea quorum ordo naturlem memoriam suggeret: merito subiectorum quibus distributa sunt & applicata; ordinate tibi non minus quam si in pagina essent exarata occurrent: vt ab vltimo ad primum eadem facilitate possis incedere; qua á primo ad vltimum accedebas. Item & quomodo libet ordinem referendorum inuertere; ad hoc ipsa locorum sensibilitate conferente.

III.

Proinde visa subiectorum efficacia ad adiectorum rationem transeamus quibus non tanquam leui fragilique fundamento naturalis innittitur memoria. Adest ergo duplicis generis memoria, terminorum videlicet atque rerum: quarum hæc simpliciter admittit necessitatem: illa veró in aliquo quodam genere, vel in eo quod per ipsam acui creditur memoratiua facultas ad propriæ functionis expeditionem: grauiora. n. passi minorem difficultatem & arduitatem non sentire consueuimus: vel quia alicuius facultatis fert consuetudo, cum occurrentia propositi atque sententiæ in initialium verborum expressionem requirere, vel quia rebus accidit vnicum propriumque nancisci nomen idque non satis in promptu, vt sunt herbaram, arborum, mineralium, seminum & id genus aliorum, quorum conceptum habere minimé sufficit: vel tandem quia sæpe sese offert occasio proferendi verba, quorum minimé rationem habemus.

III.

De generibus quibus res ipsæ adiiciuntur, explicantur, séque inuicem insinuant: alibi declarabimus. Pro genere autem istius facultatis satis tibi apertum iter ex antedictis: necnon habes optimam magistram atque ducem tum intrinsecam, tum extrinsecam naturam, quæ te per rationem insitam & obiecta præsentia semper illuminat.

V.

Modorum quoque quibus termini adiiciuntur plurimi, & innumeri occurrere tibi poterunt dummodo fueris in agitatione Clauis ragnæ peritus (illa quippe fons est omnium inuentionum) eos qui nobis commodiores visi sunt in diuersis locis diuersos explicarnus. Modum vnicum quo ad nostra vsque tempora vsi sunt antiqui prorsus contemnimus, quia laboriosus est multámque requirit exercitationem, nec certæ est ab omnibus assequutionis.

VI.

Perstrinximus igitur intrinsecæ lectionis latitudinem illam & longitudinem compressimus: iis. n. oculum phantasiæ disgregantibus atque distrahentibus, maius causabatur negocium, quod artis difficultate exercitationisque prolixitate, dignioribus intenta negociis ingenia repellebat. Quid. n? indiuiduo subiecto per vnicum adiectum vnicum tantum (vt in pluribus) committere licebat elementum, quippe cum innumerabiles habeantur combinationum & compositionum differentiæ. Qua de re qui primus apparet hanc artem transtulisse á Græcis ad Latinos: deridet Græcorum quorundam studium verborum imagines conscribere volentium, atque ita eas sibi parare, vt cum opportunæ fuerint in inquirendo tempus non consumetur. Videbat. n. verborum infinitam esse multitudinem, ideoque ridiculum esse illam persequi velle. Atqui nobis non solum possibile sed & facile compertum est posse apparatus haberi imagines, quibus singulis quibusque locis cuiuscumque generis terminos integros apponam, idque pluribus modis, vt in pluribus tractatibus ad diuersas ordinatis intentiones manifestamus: In presentiarum vero per hunc qui sequitur proponatur modum.

*Prima praxis quæ vocum est.
De fixione rotarum.*

I.

Ad ordinatam parandam exercitationem: primò elementorum prompta habeatur conceptio: elementorum inquam illis adiectibilibus explicabilium, quæ ad omnes producendas actiones nec-non ad passionem omnes recipiendas sunt aptissima.

II.

Ex iis ergo triginta tuæ notitiæ melius inhærentes ad triginta elementorum expressionem faciendam eligantur: quæ completum reddunt numerum, eorum quæ diuersis inseruiunt in tribus idiomatibus pronuntiationum differentus: neque. n. necessarium est triplex instituere elementarium, cum A ipsum equiualeat ipsi α [alpha] & [aleph] B. ipsi β [beta] & [beth]. similiter & alia multa aliis. Vbi vero super nostri generis elementa sunt Græca vt ψ ω θ [psi omega theta] & vltra hæc & illa, sunt Hebræa: propriis sunt notata characteribus. Et ita vnum simplex elementarium deseruit tribus linguis & iis quæ illis sunt subalternatæ.

III.

Triginta igitur adiecta promptitudine citra omnem dilationein possibili tuæ se offerant phantasiæ, dum alius vel tu te intentes ad prompté respondendum quid pro singulis elementis ordinate, regressiué, & progressiué, item & inordinate propositis habeatur.

III.

Quo quidem peracto, adtribuendum singulis singulas appropriatas operationes procedatur: quæ omnes sint ad oculum sensibiles; quæque non sine corporis motu prosequantur. Tu prout tibi commodius videbitur ordinabis atque statues: nos interim eiusmodi sub typis proponemus Agentes & actiones.

In quibus non requiritur necessarió primum nominis agentis vel actionis elementum; idem esse cum illo cuius est expressiuum: sufficit enim ambo hæc determinato huic significando esse adscripta.

Rotam igitur primó immobilem intra alteram immobilem ita situabis: vt exterior homines; interior autem appropriatas denotet actiones.

V.

Quibus foeliciter succedentibus ad vltiorem fiat progressus operationem. Placeat inquam homini & hominis actioni addicere instrumentum vel insigne non quidem quod ad illius tantum referri debeat actionem, sed quod sit omnibus vt fieri potest adaptabile vel saltem omnibus in operibus obeundis compatibile. Non. n. ideo fixæ figurantur hæ rotæ vt maneant perpetuo: sed vt vnus adiecti appropriata nostræ figantur memoriæ: vt cum huc, illucque prodeunt: semper atque statim referri possint ad illum (vt in vltioribus patebit) ad quem præsentia sunt ordinata. Habet ergo Lycas catenam, Deucalion vittam, Apollo baltheum, Argus caputium, Arcas peram, Cadmus antesinale, Semele suppositam sedem, & ita deinceps alij alia, quæ licet singulis sint propria: sunt tamen pro viribus omnibus appropriabilia quod quidem magis est curandum. Rotam igitur secundo immobilem intra duas alias immobiles pro appropriatis duobus: quæ ad hominem referuntur constanter nanciscendis collocato: quatenus perpetuo naturam elementorum vbicumque ponantur, & quomodocumque disponantur præsentare queant. Rotæ fixæ mentis oculo conspiciendæ sunt huiusmodi.

Ibi exterior significat homines Media proprias actiones. Interior vero insignia hunc in modum.

Similis de aliis esto institutio, ordinatio, & iudicium. Vbi vero ad tertij elementi significationem instrumentum addere contigerit (quamuis hoc minus commodum sese offerat, accidit enim actionem appropriatam, vel contingentem non pati in manu tale appositum) ipsum pro commoditate imagnetur aliquo adiectum vel alligatum vel interiectum pacto, vt operationem Turbet, Adiuuet, & vel Abiiciatur, Euertatur, Eximatur, Extricetur, Euacuetur, Ruat, Incidat, vel quomodolibet aliter pro operis congruentia se habere possit: Cæterum incomparabiliter conuenientius est insignire: quippé cum sine vlla difficultate insignia possint ad omnes referri & applicari.

VI.

Consulto plané industriæ tuæ committere placuit inueniendas congruentes actiones, & organa, sine insignia, sicut enim singulis peculiares determinatorum hominum sunt magis notæ & celebres effigies: ita etiam (cum trahat sua quemque voluptas) habent singuli quibus operibus instrumentis & insigniis, sollicitentur magis, magisque in affectus concitentur. In superioribus. n. Ianuæ memoriæ dicebantur affectus; hósque potentiores, patentiores: ij vero nec iidem sunt, neque ab iisdem emanant principiis in omnibus.

ARGUMENT OF THE NOLAN UPON THE HEROIC FRENZIES

Dedicated to the Most Illustrious Sir Philip Sidney

Most illustrious knight, it is indeed a base, ugly and contaminated wit that is constantly occupied and curiously obsessed with the beauty of a female body! What spectacle, oh good God, more vile and ignoble can be presented to a mind of clear sensibilities than a rational man afflicted, tormented, gloomy, melancholic, who becomes now hot, now cold and trembling, now pale, now flushed, now confused, or now resolute; one who spends most of his time and the choice fruits of his life letting fall drop by drop the elixir of his brain by putting into conceits and in writing, and sealing on public monuments those continual tortures, dire torments, those persuasive speeches, those laborious complaints and most bitter labours inevitable beneath the tyranny of an unworthy, witless, stupid and odoriferous foulness!

What a tragicomedy! What act, I say, more worthy of pity and laughter can be presented to us upon this world's stage, in this scene of our consciousness, than of this host of individuals who became melancholy, meditative, unflinching, firm, faithful, lovers, devotees, admirers and slaves of a thing without trustworthiness, a thing deprived of all constancy, destitute of any talent, vacant of any merit, without acknowledgment or any gratitude, as incapable of sensibility, intelligence or goodness, as a statue or image painted on a wall; a thing containing more haughtiness, arrogance, insolence, contumely, anger, scorn, hypocrisy, licentiousness, avarice, ingratitude and other ruinous vices, more poisons and instruments of death than could have issued from the box of Pandora? For such are the poisons which have only too commodious an abode in the brain of that monster! Here we have written down on paper, enclosed in books, placed before the eyes and sounded in the ear a noise, an uproar, a blast of symbols, of emblems, of mottoes, of epistles, of sonnets, of epigrams, of prolific notes, of excessive sweat, of life consumed, shrieks which deafen the stars, laments which reverberate in the caves of hell, tortures which affect living souls with stupor, sighs which make the gods swoon with compassion, and all this for those eyes, for those cheeks, for that breast, for that whiteness, for that vermilion, for that speech, for those teeth, for those lips, that hair, that dress, that robe, that glove, that slipper, that shoe, that reserve, that little smile, that wryness, that window-widow, that eclipsed sun, that scourge, that disgust, that stink, that tomb, that latrine, that menstruum, that carrion, that quartan ague, that excessive injury and distortion of nature, which with surface appearance, a shadow, a phantasm, a dream, a Circean enchantment put to the service of generation, deceives us as a species of beauty.

This is a beauty which comes and goes, is born and does, blooms and decays; and is eternally beautiful for so very short a moment and within itself truly and lastingly contains a cargo, a store-house, an emporium, a market of all the filth, toxins and poisons which our step-mother nature is able to produce; who having collected that seed of which she makes use, often recompenses us by a stench, by repentance, by melancholy, by languor, by a pain in the head, by a sense of undoing, by many other calamities which are evident to everyone, so that one suffers bitterly, where formerly he suffered only a little.

But what am I doing? What am I thinking? Do I perhaps despise the sun? Do I regret perhaps my own and others having come into this world? Do I perhaps wish to restrict men from gathering the sweetest fruit which the garden of our earthly paradise can produce? Am I perhaps for impeding nature's holy institution? Must I attempt to withdraw myself or any other from the beloved sweet yoke which divine providence has placed about our necks? Have I perhaps to persuade myself and others that our predecessors were born for us, but that we were not born for our descendents? No, may God not desire that this thought should ever come into my head! In fact, I add, that for all the kingdoms and beatitudes which might ever be proposed or chosen for me, never was I so wise and good that there could come to me the desire to castrate myself or to become a eunuch. In fact I should be ashamed, whatever may be my appearance, if I should desire ever to be second to any one who worthily breaks bread in the service of nature and the blessed God. And that such participation can be of assistance to one's good intentions I leave for the consideration of him who can judge for himself. But I do not believe I am caught. For I am certain that all the snares and nooses which those people devise and have devised who specialize in knotting snares and entanglements will never suffice for my enemies to ensnare and entangle me. They would avail themselves (if I dare say it) of death itself, in order to do me mischief. Nor do I believe myself to be frigid, for I do not think that the snows of Mt. Caucasus or Ripheus would suffice to cool my passion. See then if it is reason or some insufficiency which makes me speak.

What then do I mean? What conclusion do I wish to arrive at? What do I wish to decide? What I would conclude and say, oh illustrious knight, is that what belongs to Caesar be rendered unto Caesar and what belongs to God be rendered unto God. I mean that although there are cases when not even divine honors and adoration suffice for women, yet this does not mean that we owe them divine honors and worship. I desire that women should be honored and loved as women ought to be loved and honored. Loved and honored for such cause, I say, and for so much, and in the measure due for the little they are, at that time and occasion when they show the natural virtue peculiar to them. That natural virtue is the beauty, the splendor, and the humility without which one would esteem them to have been born in this world more vainly than a poisonous fungous occupying the earth to the detriment of better plants, more odious than any snake or viper which lifts its head from the dust. I mean that everything in the universe, in order that it have stability and constancy, has its own weight, number, order and measure, so that it may be ordered and governed with all justice and reason. Therefore Silenus, Bacchus, Pomona, Vertunnus, the god of Lampsacus and similar gods of the drinking hall, gods of strong beer, and humble wine, do not sit in heaven to drink nectar and taste ambrosia at the banquet of Jove, Saturn, Pallus, Phoebus and similar gods; and their vestments, temples, sacrifices and rites must differ from those of the great gods.

Finally, I mean that these heroic frenzies have a heroic subject and object, and therefore can no more be esteemed as vulgar and physical loves than one can see dolphins in the trees of the forests or savage bears under the rocks of the sea.

However, to deliver all from such suspicion, I thought at first of giving this book a title similar to the book of Solomon which under the guise of lovers and ordinary passions contains similarly divine and heroic frenzies, as the mystics and cabbalistic doctors interpret; I wished, in fact, to call it Canticle. But in the end I restrained myself for many reasons, of which I shall report but two. One for the fear which I conceived of the austere frown of certain Pharisees, who would judge me profane for usurping sacred and supernatural titles in my natural and physical discourse, while they, consummate scoundrels, and ministers of every ribaldry, usurp more basely than one can say the names of holy ones, of saints, of divine preachers, of the sons of God, of priests, of kings. But then we await that divine judgment which will make manifest their malicious ignorance and doctrines; our simple liberty and their malicious rules, censures and institutions. The other for the great dissimilarity which is seen between the appearance of this work and that one, even though the same mystery and psychic substance is concealed under the shadow of the one and the other; for no one doubts that the first idea of the Sage was to represent things divine rather than to present other things; with him the figure is openly and manifestly a figure, and the metaphorical sense is understood in such a way that it cannot be denied to be metaphorical, when you hear of those eyes of doves, that neck like a tower, that tongue of milk, that fragrance of incense, those teeth that seem a flock of sheep returning from the bath, those tresses that resemble goats descending the mountain of Galaad. But this poem does not show us a face which so keenly invites one to seek a latent and occult sense; so that through the ordinary mode of speech and by similitudes more adapted to the sentiments which gentle lovers usually employ, and experienced poets put in verse and rime, sentiments are expressed similar to those used by the poets who spoke of Cythereida, or Licoris, or Doris or Cynthia, Lesbia, Corynna, Laura and other such ladies. Thus anyone could be easily persuaded that my primary and fundamental intention may have been to express an ordinary love, which may have dictated certain conceits to me, and afterwards, because it had been rejected, may have borrowed wings for itself and become heroic; for it is possible to convert any fable, romance, dream and prophetic enigma, and to employ it by virtue of metaphor and allegorical disguise in such a way as to signify all that pleases him who is skillful at tugging at the sense, and is thus adept at making everything of everything, to follow the word of the profound Anaxagoras. But think who will as it seems to him and pleases him, in the end, willy nilly, if one is to be just, each must understand and define it as I understand and define it, and not I as he would understand it and depict it; for just as the passions of that Hebrew have their own proper modes, succession and names, which no one has been able to understand and could never explain better than he, if he were present, so these canticles of mine have their own names, succession and modes which no one can explain better and understand than myself, since I am not absent.

Of one thing I wish the world to be assured: what I have essayed in this preliminary preface, wherein I address you in particular, excellent sir, and in the dialogues formed upon the subsequent articles, sonnets and stanzas, is to have everyone know that I should deem myself most shameful and bestial, if with much thought, study and labor I should have ever delighted or relished imitating (as they say) an Orpheus who adores a living woman, and proposes after her death (if it be possible) to rescue her from hell; when in fact I would hardly esteem her (without blushing) to be worthy of being loved naturally even in that instant when her beauty is in flower and when she has the power of bringing offspring to nature and to God: so much the less would I desire to appear similar to certain poets and versifiers who glory in a perpetual perseverance in such love, as in such a pertinacious madness, which can certainly compete with all the other species of folly that can reside in a human brain. So much, I say, am I removed from that most vain, most vile and most infamous glory, that I cannot believe any man who possesses a grain of sense and spirit can expend any more love on such a thing than I have spent in the past and intend to spend in the present. And, by my faith, if I wish to employ myself in defending the nobility of that Tuscan poet, who showed himself so distraught on the banks of the Sorgue for a lady of Valclusa, and not say that he was a madman fit to be chained, I shall have to believe and force myself to persuade others, that for lack of genius apt for higher things he set himself the task of nourishing his melancholy, and belaboring his wit in confusion, by analyzing the effects of an obstinate vulgar love, animal and bestial, as so many others have done who formerly have sung the praises of a fly, a beetle, an ass, of Silenus, of Priapus, of apes, and those who have in our time sung the praises of urinals, of the shepherd's pipe, of beans, of the bed, of lies, of dishonor, of the furnace, of the knife, of famine, and of the plague, things which perhaps give the appearance of being no less lofty and proud by reason of the celebrated voices of those who sing of them than these and other ladies I have mentioned are, perhaps by reason of the poets who have celebrated them.

Yet (that there be no mistake) I do not wish that here should be taxed the dignity of those ladies who have been worthily praised and who are praiseworthy: and those, especially, who may and do reside in this British land, to whom we owe the love and fidelity of the guest; for even if one were to find fault with the whole worold, one could not find fault with this nation, which in this respect is not the terrestrial world, nor a part of it, but is entirely separated from it, as you know: so that any discourse regarding the whole feminine sex could not and would not include any of your women, who must not be considered part of that sex; because they are not women, they are not ladies, but, in the guise of ladies, they are nymphs, goddesses and of celestial substance, among whom it is permitted to contemplate that unique Dianba, whom I do not desire to name in the rank or category of women. [Queen Elizabeth] Let it be understood, then, that I mean only the ordinary genus. And I should unworthily and unjustly persecute any individual of this class: because to no particular person ought the weakness and condition of the sex be imputed, just as as defect or vice of constitution, assuming there is some fault or error there, must be attributed to the species or to nature, and not in particular to the individuals of the class. Truly, with respect to that sex, what I abominate is that zealous and disordered venereal love which some are accustomed to expend for it, so that they come to the point of making their wit the slave of woman, and of degrading the noblest powers and actions of the intellectual soul. If my intentions are understood, far from being saddened and becoming vexed with me because of my natural and truthful discourse, every honest and chaste woman will rather agree with me and love me the more because of it; and they will allow that the venereal love women have for men is a dishonorable thing, as I actively reprove the venereal love men have for women. Therefore, with a determined heart, mind, opinion and purpose, I affirm that my first and principal, secondary and subordinate, final and ultimate design in this work to which I have been called, was and is to signify divine contemplation and present the eye and ear with other frenzies, not those caused by vulgar love, but those caused by heroic love. These frenzies will be explained in two parts, each of which will be divided into five dialogues.

The argument of the five dialogues of the first part

In the first dialogue of the first part there are five articles, [9] whence, in order: in the first is shown the causes and principal intrinsic motives under the names and figures of the mountain, and the river, and of the muses which declare themselves present, not because they have been summoned, invoked, and searched for, but rather as if they had often importunately offered themselves. By this is signified that the divine light is ever present, that it forever offers itself, ever calls and knocks at the doors of our senses and other powers of cognition and apprehension, as it is indicated in the Song of Solomon where it is said, "En ipse stat post parietem nostrum, respicinse per cancellos et prospiciens per fenestras", [Cant. 2:9: "Behold He standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, looking through the lattices..."] which light very often through various occasions and impediments remains excluded and withheld. In the second article is shown what are those subjects, objects, affections, instruments, and effects by which this divine light enters, shows itself, and takes possession of the soul, in order to raise it and convert it unto God. In the third, the intention, definition, and determination which the well-informed soul makes with regard to the one, perfect and ultimate end. In the fourth, the civil war which follows and breakis out against the spirit after such determination, whence the Canticle says, "Noli mirare, quia nigra sum: decoloravit enim me sol, quia fratres mei pugnaverunt contra me, quam posuerunt custodem in vineis". [Cant. 1:5: "Do not consider me that I am brown, for the sun has altered my color: for my brothers have fought against me, whom they have made the keeper in the vineyards..."] In that place are represented as four standard bearers the affection, the fatal impulse, an appearance of the good, and the conscience, which are followed by the numberless cohorts of the many, contrary, varied and diverse powers, together with their ministers, intermediaries, and organs which exist in this organization. In the fifth is described a natural contemplation through which it is shown that every contrary is reduced to friendship, whether through the victory of one of the contraries, or through harmony and conciliation, or by some vicissitude, every discord to concord, every diversity to unity; which doctrine has been developed by us in the discourses of other dialogues.

In the second dialogue is more explicitly described the order and action of the conflict which is in the substance of this complex of the frenzied one, to wit: in the first article are shown three sorts of contraries. The first is the conflict of two opposed affections or acts, as for example where hopes are cold and desires hot. The second treats of the same desires and acts in themselves, not only that different times, but at the same time, when each one, for instance, dissatisfied with himself, looks to another, and at the same time loves and hates. The third is between the power that follows and aspires and the object which flees and eludes it. In the second article is described the opposition which results from two impulses which are opposed in general, to which are related all the particular and subordinate contraries, for example, when one climbs or descends toward two opposite places or goals at the same time. Thus it happens to the complex being by reason of the diversity of the inclinations which are in his several parts and the variety of dispositions which result from these, that he rises men and falls at the same time, goes forward and backward, withdraws himself from himself and also withdraws into himself. The third article discusses the consequence of such oppositions.

In the third dialogue is disclosed how much power belongs to the will in this combat, for to the will alone pertains the organizing, the initiating, the execution and completion; for it is the will the Canticle addresses when it says, "Arise, hasten, my dove, and come: for already winter is passed, the rain is gone, the flowers have appeared in our land; the time of pruning is come." (Cant. 2:10-12) It is the will that in any ways bestows power to the other potencies; and bestows power especially to itself, when it reflects upon itself and increases itself two-fold, when it wishes to desire, and is pleased with what it desires; it withdraws itself, on the contrary, when it dislikes the object of its desire, and is displeased to desire it. Thus everywhere and in everything it approves what is good and what the justice of natural law prescribes for it, and never approves at all what deviates from that law. And this is how much the first and second article explain. In the third article is seen the double fruit of a similar power. Accordingly, as the result of the passion which draws and ravishes them, lofty things become base, and base things become lofty. Thus it is customary to say that by the force of vicissitude and vertiginous attraction, the element of fear is condensed into air, vapor and water, while water is refined into vapor, air, and fire.

In the seven sections of the fourth dialogue are contemplated the impetus and vigor of the intellect which carries the affection away without it; the development of the thoughts into which the frenzied lover is divided, and the sufferings of the soul under the government of this so turbulent republic. There it becomes clear who the hunter is, the birdcatcher, the wild beast, the dogs, offspring, the cave, the noose, the rock, the prey, the issue of so many labors, peace, rest, and the desired end of so laborious a conflict.

Into the fifth dialogue is further described the state of the frenzied one and is shown the order, condition and reason for his labors and fortunes. In the first article is shown what pertains to the pursuit of the object which withdraws itself; in the the second is shown the continuous and relentless competition of the passions; in the third the lofty and cold, because vain purposes; in the fourth the voluntary desire; in the fifth the prompt rescue and powerful bulwark. In the following articles are shown in their variety, according to their reasons and appropriateness, the vicissitudes of his fortune, condition, and labors, each article expressing them by antitheses, comparisons, and similitudes.

Argument of the five dialogs of the second part

In the first dialogue of the second part is offered the origin of the modes and reasons for the state of the frenzied lover. In the first sonnet is described his state beneath the wheel of time; in the second is described the defense he offers for his esteem of ignoble occupations and for the unworthy squandering of time which is so brief and narrowly measured; in the third he confesses the impotence of his studies, which, although illumined within by the excellence of their object, begin to obscure and cloud that object when they come in contact with it; in the fourth he complains of the profitless strain of the faculties of the soul as his soul seeks to rise with powers unequal to the state it desires and venerates; in the fifth is recalled the contrariety and familiar conflict found in him, a conflict which may hinder him from applying himself entirely to his end or goal. In the sixth is expressed the aspiration of desire; in the seventh is considered the poor correspondence found between him who aspires, and that to which he aspires; in the eighth is seen the distraction the soul suffers because of the conflict between external and internal things, internal things among themselves, and a similar conflict of external things among themselves; in the ninth is explained the age and the time in the course of life most propitious for the act of lofty and profound contemplation, a time when the soul is not disturbed by the ebb and flow of its vegetative constitution, but finds itself in a state of immobility and in a sort of tranquility; in the tenth is described the order and matter in which heroic love sometimes attacks, wounds, and awakens us; in the eleventh is explained the multitude of species and particular ideas which show the excellence of the mark of their unique source and are the means by which the desire toward the heavenly is aroused; in the twelfth is expressed the state of every human effort toward the divine enterprises. Much is presumed before one engages himself in them, and much during the engagement itself. But, then, when one is engulfed and penetrates more and more into the depths, this fervent spirit becomes extinguished by presumption, the nerves begin to yield, the strength is slackened, thoughts discouraged, all intentions vanish, and the soul remains confused, vanquished and reduced to nothing. Pertinently, therefore, was it said by the Sage, "he that is a searcher of majesty shall be overwhelmed by glory" (Prov. 25:27). In the last article is more clearly expressed what the twelfth demonstrated by similitude and figure.

In the second dialogue, in a sonnet and in the dialogue which is a commentary upon it, is made specific the first cause which subdued the strong one, softened the hard one, and reduced him to an amorous servitude under the command of Cupid, but in that way raised and disposed him to celebrate his zeal, ardor, election, and purpose.

In the third dialogue in four questions and four answers of the heart to the eyes and the eyes to the heart is explained the being and mode of the appetitive and cognitive faculties. In this dialogue is shown how the will is reawakened from sleep, given direction, urged and led by the cognition; and reciprocally how the cognition is aroused, formed, and revived by the will, the one proceeding from the other, alternately. It is doubted if the intellect or the cognitive power in general, or even the act of cognition is greater than the will or appetitive power in general, or even greater than the affection. If one cannot love more than one can understand, and if everything which in a certain mode is desired, in a certain mode is also understood, and the reverse also be true; then it is fitting to call the appetite cognition. For we see that the doctrine of the Peripatetics, which has raised and nourished us from our youth, goes so far as to call the appetite in potency and natural act cognition, so that they distinguish all effects, means and ends, principles, causes and elements into those primarily, intermediately, and ultimately known according to nature, in which, they conclude, the appetite and the cognition concur. Thus is proposed the infinite potency of matter, and the assistance of the act thanks to which that potency is not in vain. For just as the act of the will is infinite with respect to the good, so is the act of cognition infinite and endless with respect to the true: accordingly, being, truth, and goodness take on the same significance when they are referred to in the same way, that is: as infinite goals.

In the fourth dialogue are represented and in some manner explained the nine reasons for the ineptitude, disproportion, and deficiency of the human sight and apprehensive potency toward things divine. The first lover, who is blind from birth, is blind because of the nature which debases and humiliates him. The second lover, blinded by the poison of jealousy, is blind because of the irascible and concupiscible which diverts and misleads him. The third, blinded by the sudden appearance of intense light, is blind because of the brilliance of the object which dazzles him. The fourth, received and nourished for a long time in the light of the sun, is blind because of much lofty contemplation of the unity which removes him from the multitude. The fifth, whose eyes are forever filled with dense tears, is blind owing to the disproportion of means between the potency and the object which impedes him. The sixth, who through much weeping has extinguished the organic visual humour, is blind because of a lack of the true intellectual nourishment, a lack which weakens him. The seventh whose eyes are reduced to ashes by the ardor of his heart, symbolizes the burning passion which disperses, weakens, and sometimes devours the power of discernment. The eighth, blinded by the wound of an arrow's point, is blind through the very act of union with the form of the object that conquers, alters, and seduces the apprehensive potency, which is oppressed by the weight of the form and falls under the impetus of its presence; therefore, not without reason is the appearance of this object sometimes represented in the form of a penetrating thunderbolt. The ninth, because he is mute and is unable to explain the cause of his blindness, is blind for the highest reason, the secret design of God, who has given man this zeal and solicitude to search, so that he may never be able to reach higher than to the knowledge of his own blindness and ignorance, and no higher than to deem silence more worthy than speech. But this does not suggest that common ignorance is to be excused or favored, for he is doubly blind who does not see his own blindness. And there is a difference between the profitably zealous and the stupidly idle. The stupidly idle are buried in the lethargy of the incapability of judging their own blindness, and the profitably zealous are aware, awakened, and prudent judges of their own blindness, and for that reason are in quest and of the threshold of the attainment of the light from which the others are banished for a long time.

Argument and Allegory of the Fifth Dialogue

In the fifth dialogue two women are introduced, for whom (according to my country's custom) it is unbecoming to comment, expound, decipher, or to be so wise and learned as to usurp the office of teaching and giving men institutions, rules, and doctrines, but for whom it is fitting, when their bodies are found to have a soul, to divine well and to prophecy. Therefore the author has been content to make them merely recite the allegory, leaving to some male intelligence the care and labor of interpreting it. And even to him (in order to lighten his task, or I should say, discharge him of it), I shall explain how these nine blind men, by reason of their role, of the external causes of their blindness and of many other subjective differences, take on significance other than the nine of the preceding dialogue. According to the common imagination of the nine celestial spheres these blind men symbolize the number, order, and diversity of all things which are subsistent within an absolute unity, and in and over all of them are ordered those intelligences which, by a certain analogy, depend upon the first and the unique intelligence. The Cabalists, Chaldeans, Magi, the Platonists and Christian theologians hold that these intelligences are distinct in nine orders through the perfection of the number which governs the universality of things and in a certain way informs everything. They also hold that it is by a simple number that the divinity is symbolized, whose extension and square represents the number and substance of all things which depend upon it. All the more illustrious thinkers, whether philosophers or theologians, who speak either by reason and their own light, or by faith and a superior light, recognized in these intelligences the cycles of ascent and decent. Thus the Platonists say that by a certain revolution it happens that those who are above the fatality of time and change submit themselves once again to this fatality, while others rise and take their place. A similar revolution is alluded to by the Pythagorean poet, when he says:

All these, where the wheel of a thousand years comes round, a god summons to the river
Lethe in vast train, so that they may begin again to desire the return to the body. (Virgil Aeneid vi. 748-751)

Some say that thus are to be understood the words of Revelation in which it is said that the dragon shall be conquered by chains for a thousand years, and after that period released. To this interpretation adhere those who speculate upon the many passages of Revelation which express the millenium literally, represent it by a year, by a season, by one night, or by one span time or another. Beyond a doubt the millenium itself is not to be taken according to the revolutions called solar years, but according to more than one method of calculating the order and measure upon which the fate of things depends. For the years of the stars are as different as are their particular species. As for the fact of revolution, it is given out among the Christian theologians that from each of the nine orders of spirits, a multitude of legions were cast down to low and obscure regions; and so that those seats do not remain vacant, divine Providence wishes the spirits who now live in human bodies to be drawn up to that eminence. But among the philosophers Plotinus alone, to my knowledge, has seen fit to agree with all the great theologians that such a revolution does not concern all beings, nor take place at all times, but takes place only once. And among the theologians only Origen, following all the great philosophers, has dared to say, after the Saducees and other reprov'd sects, that the revolution is vicissitudinal and yet eternal, and that all those who ascend must descend to the bottom; as one can see in all the elements, and in all the things which exist on the surface, in the bosom and womb of nature. For my part, I confess and confirm as very appropriate the opinion of the theologians and those whose task it is to give laws and institutions to the people; just as I do not fail to affirm and except the opinion of those who, speaking according to natural reason, address themselves to the small number of the good and wise. The latter opinion has been justifiably reprov'd for having been exposed to the eyes of the multitude, for since it is only with great difficulty that they can be restrained from vices and spurred to virtuous action by belief in eternal punishment, what would happen were they persuaded of some lighter condition for the reward of heroic and human deeds, and the punishment of crimes and villainies? But to conclude this progression of mine, I say that now begins an explanation and discourse upon the blindness and the light of these nine men, first clairvoyant, then blind, and finally illumined. At first they are rivals in the shadows and vestiges of the divine beauty; then they are completely blind, and finally they enjoy themselves peacefully in the more open light. While they are in the first condition, they are led to the dwelling of Circe, who represents the generative matter of all things. She is called the daughter of the sun, because from the father of forms she has inherited the possession of all those forms which, by a sprinkling of the waters -- that is to say by the act of generation and by the power of enchantment -- that is by reason of a secret harmony -- she transforms all beings, making those who see become blind. For generation and corruption are causes of oblivion and of blindness, as the ancients explain by the figure of souls who bathe and inebriate themselves in the waters of Lethe. Then by that which the blind men lament, when they say, Daughter and mother of darkness and horror, is signified the dismay and sadness of the soul which has lost its wings, but will be relieved when it regains hope of recovering them. By Circe's words, Take another one of my fatal vases, is signified that men carry with themselves the decree and destiny of a new metamorphoses, which is, however, said to be offered to them by Circe herself; for although one contrary has its origin in the other, it may not be efficaciously uncovered by them. For that reason she said that although her own hand was unable to open it, it could entrust the vase to them. The other meaning is that there are two kinds of water. There are the inferior waters under the firmament which enlighten. These are the waters which the Pythagoreans and the Platonists symbolized by the descent from one tropic and the ascent to another. Then by her words, Traverse the width and depth of the world, seek out all the many kingdoms, is signify that there is no immediate progress from one contrary form to another, nor immediate regression to the first form, but that it is necessary to traverse, of not all, at least a very great number of the forms contained in the wheel of natural species. Then will they be enlightened by the sight of the object in which concur the three perfections, beauty, wisdom, and truth, revealed through the sprinkling of the waters, called in the sacred books the waters of wisdom and the rivers of eternal life. These waters are not found on the mainland of the globe, but separated entirely from the earth, in the bosom of the Ocean, of the Amphitrite, of the divinity, where that river rises which takes its source from the divine throne, whose flow is not at all like the ordinary flow of natural rivers. In that river are the nymphs, who are the blessed and divine intelligences which assist and administer to the first intelligence, similar to Diana among the nymphs of the wilderness. She alone among all the others has by her triple virtue the power to open every seal, untie every knot, uncover every secret and bring to light whatever is hidden. By her unique presence, by her double splendor of goodness and truth, benevolence and beauty, she pleases all wills and intellects, sprinkling them with the salutary waters of purgation. Then there follows a long chant and song by the nine intelligences, the nine muses, whose chorus is ordered according to the number of the nine spheres, so that the harmony of each one is continued by the harmony of the following one. And that there may be no vacuum interposed among them, the end of one song coincides with the beginning of the other, and the end of the last song concurs with the beginning of the first, as the circle is closed. For the most brilliant and the most obscure, the beginning and the end, the greatest light and the most profound darkness, infinite potency and infinite act coincide, as our method of argument has explained elsewhere.

Finally one observes the harmony and concert of all the spheres, intelligences and muses in a concert of instruments, so that the heaven, the movement of worlds, the works of nature, the discourse of intellects, the contemplation of the mind, the decree of divine Providence celebrate in complete accord that lofty and magnificent vicissitude which raises the inferior to the superior waters, changes night into day, and day into night, so that the divinity may be in all, according to the mode in which the infinite goodness is infinitely communicated according to the entire capacity of each thing.

These are the discourses, then, which it seems to me cannot be conveniently addressed and recommended to anyone than to you, excellent Sir. For I would not risk doing again what I think at times I have done inadvertently, and what many others ordinarily do who present a lyre to a deaf man and a mirror to a blind one. To you then these discourses are presented without fear, because here the Italian reasons with one who understands him. My verses are submitted to the censure and the protection of a poet. My philosophy stands naked before so pure an intellect as yours. Heroic things are addressed to the heroic and generous spirit with which you are endowed. My services are offered to one who knows how to accept them graciously, and my homage to a gentleman who has ever shown myself worthy of such. And in that which particularly concerns me, I know that through your good services you have guided me with a magnanimity far greater than any recognition you may have given to others who may have since come to you. Farewell.

The Apology of the Nolan

To the most glorious and virtuous ladies

Oh glorious and enchanting nymphs of England, my spirit neither shuns nor disdains you, nor dishonors you when it deprives you of the traditional name of women, by neither counting you among them nor excluding you.

I am sure the name of goddesses are more meet for you, because you are endowed with more than common life,
and are upon the earth what the stars are in heaven.

Oh, Ladies mine, your sovereign beauty my sincerity can never harm, nor does it wish to do so, because it cannot reach your superhuman kind, but by bitter torment, it aspires to that place where Diana is queen above all, who is among you what the sun is amid the stars.

Labor and art humbly offer you by invention, my words and the strokes of my pen such as they may be.

Giordano Bruno: Cantus Circaeus ('Incantation of Circe')

This digital edition Copyright © 2000 by Joseph H. Peterson. All rights reserved.

Cantus Circaeus ("Incantation of Circe") is an early work by Bruno on the art of memory with strong magical elements. It is written in the form of a dialogue between the great sorceress Circe and her assistant or apprentice Moeris. It opens with Circe's incantations to the planets which appear to be based on Agrippa, De Occult. Phil. II, lix. These incantations are described as "barbara & arcana". These are accompanied by various magical operations including the use of an altar, fumigations, and notae. This is followed by an Art of Memory.

According to I.P. Coulano, "Giordano Bruno's magic is based not only upon the Ficinian tradition but also on techniques relating to the art of memory. This art consisted of a manipulation of phantasms or inner images, whose purpose varied from the mere learning by heart of a text to mystical contemplation." ('Magic in Medieval and Renaissance Europe' in Hidden Truths: Magic, Alchemy, and the Occult: 1987).

Cantus Circaeus follows chronologically De Umbris Idearum, which is mentioned in the preface. The character of Circe also recurs prominently throughout Bruno's works, including his The Heroic Frenzies, and his final work De imaginum ... compositione (1591).

magnum Galliarum Priorem, in Prouincia Regis locumtenentem, &c.

PARISIIS,

ILLVSTRISSIMO ALTISSI-

MOQVE PRINCIPI HENRICO D'ANGOV-

lesme Magno Galliarum Priori, Prouinciæ Gubernatori, ac Locumtenenti generali, & totius maris orientalis pro Regia Maiestate Admiralio Io. Regnault eiusdem Illustrissimi á secretis Consiliarius.

Cum ad manus meas, Altissime princeps, duplex de cantu Circæo & eius ad memoriæ Artem applicatione Dialogus peruenerit; cūmq̃ue artis ipsius excellentia, & fructus non me lateat: dignissimam quæ nobilibus & generosis ingeniis communicaretur existimaui. Materiam enim minime vanam, de rebus maxime desiderabilibus comprehendit. Mitto quod præter titulum, & artis elementa nihil habet cum aliis hactenus editis commune: eaque admittit propria, quæ Iordanum non solum autorem sed & frugi inuentorem testificabuntur. Ad hæc artis istius editio ad eius famam, & iustificationem pertinet: accidit enim eius exemplaria successu quodam fuisse vitiata: & conspurcata circumferantur: quatenus & auctor reddatur vulgo suspectus, & Ars minus commendabilis. Consultum ergo mihi fuit eam ipsam artem habentem pro titulo prohemium (in quo quæ promitti possunt proponuntur) cum suo progressu cuius erat exemplar apud me, fidelissime vt olim quibusdam dictata fuerat, vtque dialogo Circæo cum eiusdem applicationibus ad augmentum & non modicum ornamentum & claritatem facientibus postea per Ior. est efformata, in lucem edere. Cui quidem amico consilio atque sententia libentissime vt par erat consentiuit Iordanus meque roquuit vt (cū sit ipse grauioribus negociis intentus) ego eam ipsam curam susciperem & complerem. Post igitur aliam artem per ipsum editam, & christianissimo Regi dicatam: quæ de vmbris idearum intitutatur: hanc ego edendam suscepi, quæ quidem illud habet peculiare, atque proprium: vt memoriam verborum seu dictionum quam aliæ artes inter millibus suppositis imaginibus, & centum millibus locis difficile complebant: ista in centum, & viginti præcipuis formis (vt ipse loquitur) subiectiuandis: iuxta terminorum, sententiarumque numerum facillime perficiet, determinatis operationibus insigniis, circumstantiis, & adsistentibus. Quibus efficit vt hæc ars pro memoria verborum longe minus labore, industria, & exercitatione: quam cæteræ omnes quæ legi possint indigeat. Adeo vt facilius, & certius hanc viam incedentibus præstent tres quatuorue menses, quam aliorum tramitem persequentibus, tres quatuorue præstare valeant anni. Quod sane artem hanc alijs comparare potenti non potest esse dubium. Quod veró ad memoriam rerum & sententiarum attinet: satis apertum est quod mox auditis artis præceptionibus: quilibet eadem possit pro sua vti capacitate: & ab eius profectu non est iudicij compos qui excludatur. Dictas igitur cum in ipsa singularitates acceperim dignum existimaui vt sub tui nominis splendore curreret: quatenus etiam obsequium perpetuæ seruitutis qua tibi ex toto pectore sum addictus, hoc etiam signo percipere possis: vt & si qui fructum ex huius artis canonibus emetent, ipsum ex parte ad te, cuius secundis auspiciis est edita, referant. interim celsitudo tua muneris exiguitatem., animi affectusque magnitudine compenset obsecro. Vale, & quamdiutissimé Regiæ Ma. Patriæ, & admnistrationi tuæ, tuisque foelix & incolumis viue.

Tuæ amplitudini addictiss. & obsequen-tissimus seruus Io. REGNAULT.

DIALOGVS PRIMVS

Interloquunt. CIRCE & MOERIS.

CIRCE.

Sol qui illustras omnia solus. Apollo, carminis audior, pharetrate, arcitenens, sagitti-potens, Pythie, lauriger, fatiloque, pastor, vates, augur, & medice. Phæbe, rosee, crinite, pulchricome, flauæ, nitide, placide, cytharæde, cantor, & veridice. Titan, Milesi, Palatine, Cyrrhæe, Timbræe, Deli, Delphice, Leucadice, Tegæe, Capitoline, Smynthæe, Ismeni, & Latialis. Qui mirabiles impertiris naturas elementis: quo dispensante tumescunt, & sedantur maria: turbantur & serenantur aër & æthera: viuida quoque intenditur, reprimiturque ignium vis atque potentia. Cuius ministerio viget istius compago vniuersi, inscrutabiles rerum vires ab ideis per animæ mundi rationes ad nos vsque deducens & infra, vnde variæ atque multiplices herbarum, plantarum cæterarum, lapiduinque virtutes, quæ per stellarum radios mundanum ad se trahere spiritum sunt potentes.

Adesto sacris filiæ tuæ Circes votis. Si intento, castoque tibi adsum animo, si dignis pro facultate ritibus me præsentō. En tibi faciles aras struximus. Adsunt tua tibi redolentia thura, sandalorumque rubentium fumus. En tertio susurraui barbara & arcana carmina. Peractæ sunt lustrationes. Septem suffituum genera pro septem mundi principibus expediui. Solutiones & ligamenta de more sunt peracta. Sygillauimus omnia. vnum abest vt præcationum quæ præcurrere debuerunt, quæque ad suos repetitæ sunt numeros concupita proferamus. Moeri inspicere lineam, & vide an adhuc altum cæli sol teneat.

MOERIS. Nil abest.

CIRCE. Conuertor igitur ad te meridianum solem, per mirabilem potentiam qua vnus tam plurima facis. Per concitatorum equorum tuorum cursus, qui vniuersa detegens duo latentia percurris hemisphæria. Quis quæso rerum modus est? Ecce sub humano cortice ferinos animos. Conuenit ne hominis corpus vt cæcum atque fallax habitaculum bestialem animam incolere? Vbi sunt iura rerum? vbi fas, nefasque naturæ? Si repetiuit Astræa cælum, cuius ne vestigium quidem terra videat: cur non de cælo saltem apparet Astræa?

Ecce subiuius minimé occultum Chaos. Cur non miscentur ignibus maria, & limpida nigris terris astra: si in terris ipsis & earum gubernaculis nihil est quod faciem demonstret suam? Ipsa ne nos mater natura decipit? Matrem dixerim an nouercam? Veritati nil ipsa odibilius esse debet falsitate: bonitati nil ipsa malitia molestius. Non est, non est certé modicum ô clarissima mundi lampas, quod & visibilium, et non sensibilibus ratiocinantibus circumueniamur ingeniis. Cur ergo similem debuimus in ipsa natura ypocrisim experiri? Si perpauci hominum animi sunt effincti, cur quæso tot hominum sunt efformata corpora? Conuertere igitur ad partes tuas ô Sol, & tantum naturæ & dignitatis tum præiudicium vindicato. Insignito Circem tuam tu cæterique præpotentes dii, vt eidem potentia qua ministerialibus spiritibus proximisque corporum istorum formatoribus imperare valeat.

Adiuro vos per mendaces vultus errorum ministros, per altam præsidum naturæ potentiam, vt à singulis brutalium specierum indiuiduis humanam abstrahentes faciem, in suas ipsa faciatis extrinsecas atque veraces prodire figuras. Si quando repressum cursum obire debent flumina. Si quando altum suum arripere debent ignes. Si nullum est æterno violentum. Si tandem omnia suos ad terminos debent appellere. Mutatur ne aliquid Moeri?

MOERIS. Nil prorsus.

CIRCE. Adiuro vos iterum quid trepidatis? quid hæretis vectores formarum, sygillorum naturæ falsificatores. Iuppiter verax, cuius per vos est læsa maiestas vobis imperat. Cogit vos pater hominum, in cuius virtute vos ter, atque quater adstringo. Impero quoque vobis per cæteros qui supra cætera animantium genera habent imperium deos: vt sophistico hominum remoto vultu non impediatis quominus singulorum in lucem conspiciendæ prodeant figuræ. Respice Moeri.

MOERIS. Nil adest noui.

CIRCE. Tertiam igitur adiurationem aggrauabo.

Adeste simul omnes septem mundi principes, & in Circeni vestram intendite, vt vestra mutuata potentia (quam in vicariis vestris herbarum succis, & ignium fumis, & lapidum appensionibus insinuo) administratores figurarum valeam adstringere, vt vel coacti faciant alius generis viuientium species latentes (ementita hominis recedente figura) ex occultis in apertam prodire lucem.

Iterum ergo atque iterum coniuro vos, atque confirmo, vastatores iniqui, impudentissimi, impij, pertinaces, non me fugietis. Recedant, recedant vel inuitis nobis humani vultus á bestus. Potenter vobis impero inconspectu solis istius, per Iouem altitonātern, & per deos omnes qui segnitiam & tergiuersationem vestram viciscentur. Creditis ista deos non curare? En literæ deorum sacræ: quas in hac lamina ostendo. En quos in aerem explico characteres. En vestigium magni sygilli. Moeri, explica membranā in qua sunt potentissimæ notæ, quarum mortales omnes latent misteria. Hæc sunt quibus ipsas credimus nos posse mutare naturæ leges: cur non per ipsas licebit easdem impié prophanatas instaurare? Adde ignibus thura, fumigiorumque cæteras species, hæcque dum ipsa submurmurauero, respice de fenestra quid se turba fiat:

MOERIS. Mirabile visu Circe, mirabile, de tot quos vidimus hominibus, tres quatuórue tantum, qui trepidi ad tuta confugiunt remansere. Cæteros omnes quorum alij in proximas se recipiunt cauernas, alij in arborum ramos aduolant, alij se dedant in proximum mare precipites, alij domestici magis ad nostras fores adproperant: in diuersi generis animantia video transformatos.

CIRCE. Imó proprias explicauere formas. Futurum est vt inculper Moeri: beneficam Circen maleficam imprudentes homines appellabunt. Ij qui adhuc perstant veri sunt homines: illos nec vult, neque potest cantus noster attigisse.

MOERIS. Terrore concutior mea diua & regina, quoniam visu terribiles nobis bestiae comminantur.

CIRCE. Paulo ante formidabas?

MOERIS. Minimé quidem.

CIRCE. Nunc igitur minor tibi datur timoris occasio.

MOERIS. Cur id?

CIRCE. Non enim differunt hæc quæ modo vides bruta & bestias (vt & ipsa nosti) ab iis quos paulo ante videbas homines, præter quam quod apertos nunc habent vngues, dentes, aculeos, & cornua quæ latebant. Imó & hoc te non ignorare volo, quod cum illo careant organo, quod est ad ipsa animorum intima ledenda efficacissimum: longe minus nocua, atque formidanda sunt effecta.

MOERIS. Quid ipsum?

CIRCE. Lingua.

MOERIS. Dij me ament quid fecerint magis timeo quam quid dixerint.

CIRCE. Minus ideo sapis. At & hoc indicabo tibi quod & nunc pro eo in quo versaris formidinis genere minus debeas esse sollicita. Ipsi enirn, quorum alios cornutos, alios aculeatos, alios ita dentatos, alios letiferé vnguitos aspicias: erant omnes atque singuli cornu simul & aculeo , & dente, & vngue terribiles. Iam diuersa atque singularia quibus se tueri, & alios ledere possint arma nacti sunt, cúm prius haberent omnia.

MOERIS. Quonam pacto id mihi suadebis?

CIRCE. Nescis eum qui manu armatur magis omnibus armari? nescis manum omnibus carere armis: vt omnibus præpotens esse possit armis? ignoras ipsam sibi & aculeos, venena, & cornua, & dentes adaptantem, á nullis sibi timere bestiarum insultibus, & eo tantum instrumento animantibus omnibus quæ videntur imperare consuenisse? Temeré igitur & imprudenter es facta timidior. Omnem igitur formidinem pelle ex animo, omnem abigas ambiguitatem, & mecum in ipsorum examen pergito.

MOERIS. Non possum non timere præsentia, aptata, atque conuersa contra nos inermes atque debiles cornua, cæteraque quæ video mortis instrumenta.

CIRCE. Tutó propera, facili carmine superabimus omnia.

MOERIS. Id si dea potens polliceris , nihil hesitans pergo.

CIRCE. Principio isthæc domestica vestigemus animalia. En proximos nobis porcos qui fugam versus tecta arripuere, facillimé omnium istos sub humano cortice cognouisses.

MOERIS. Facillimé quidem.

CIRCE. Porcus enim est animal A, auarum. B, barbarum. C, coenosum. D, durum. E, erroneum. F, foetidum. G, gulosum. H, hebes. K, Kapitosurn. L, Li bidinosum. M, molestum. N, nequitiosum. O, ociosum. P, pertinax. Q, quærulum. R, rusticum. S, stultum. T, turgidum. V, vile. X, lunaticum. Y, auriculatum. Z, mutabile, , non bonum nisi mortuum.

MOERIS. Cum elementarium porcinum institueres Circe, vnum de mage necessariis elementum prætermisisti.

CIRCE. Non illud inconsulté factum, quia ipsum est tum in aliis omnibus elementis implicitum, tum & ipsorum elementum videtur elementorum. In vno ergo adferantur omnia, sicut in omnibus allatum est vnum. A ingratum. B immundum. C inconsultum. D infidum. E inconstans. F impaciens. G indiscretum. H inciuile. I impudens. K impetuosum. L incautum. M infaustum. N ineptum. O iniquum. P inhumanum. Q immite. R inuerecundum. S inquietum. T insanum. V intemperatum. X ignobile. Y incultum. Z inhospitale. immemor.

MOERIS. Et ego per numeros ex naturalibus ipsum considerabo. j. Paruos habens oculos, hosque non nisi gulæ inseruientes. ij. acutas habet aures. iij. peramplas fauces. iiij. immunditias ad omnes nares adpositas. v. læsius dentes. vj. augustum. angustum volo dicere frontem. vij. cerebrum pinguiusculum. viij. caudam semper mobilem, semper adnodantem, nunquam veró nodantem, quasi semper negociantem, & numquam proficientem. ix. ventrem habet vnum & ampliorem. x. dentes nunquam amittit. xj. intra eius ossa nihil aut modicum reperies medullæ. xij. quadrupedum omnium difficile pilum mutat, aut amittit. xiiij. habet pediculi genus familiare. xiiij. propriam habet ad coitum vocem. xv. foemina eius ipso mare est vocalior. xvj. acerrimé sænit tempore coitus. xvij. foecundissimum multorum animalium. xviii. non est vno cibo constans. xix. facile in omnibus cibi generibus assuescit. xx. pabuli mutatione, & varietate maximé gaudet. xxj. illius qui glandibus est pastus caro, magis, meliúsque sapit. xxij. in urbanum & sylvestre genus diuiditur. xxiiij. ibi deliciosius degit vbi lutum repperit. xxiiij. brutale omnino.

Tot igitur indicia sui cúm porous habeat, quis ipsum facilité (quantumcumque sub homine lateat) non cognoscet? Si tibi videtur domina, cætera vnico, magisque adcommodato signo persequamur: præstare enim videtur leuius multa tangere, quàm duo comprehendere, vel vnum.

CIRCE. Ita faciendum.

QVÆSTIO PRIMA.

MOERIS. De pluribus quæ video canum generibus, cæteris omissis vt hac quæ mordax est & proprié Cynica, quæ non minus est ipso porco illustris: quomodo istud ignauum canum genus sub humana figura potuissem agnoscere?

CIRCE. Ipsum est genus illud barbarorum, quod quidquid non intelligit damnat atque carpit: vt modo ignaui & ipsa figura noti canes allatrant in ignotos omnes etiam beneficos, in perditos etiam atque scelestissimos notos mitiores.

QVÆSTIO II.

MOERIS. Asinos modo prætermittam: de ipsis n. alias grauius, atque maturius considerabitur. Hos asinorum filios puta mulos, qua nota dinoscere potuissem?

CIRCE. Ij sunt qui vt philosophi haberentur & eloquentes: nec philosophi nec eloquentes erant. vt poëtam iactantes & oratorem: neutrum essent. vt sub titulo legistarum atque scholasticorum: nec tales haberentur neque tales. vt grammatici & disceptatores: in vtroque deficerent munere. vt mercatores & nobiles: secretius ignobilitatis genus incurrerent. vt togati & armigeri: bello essent & literis inepti. vt aulici & religiosi: etheroclitii generis se præstarent animal. vt pulchri & terribiles: neque foeminam ederent neque virum. veluti modo ex equa matre & asino patre, non sunt equi nec asini: & ruditum cum hinnitu mixtum habent.

QVÆSTIO III.

MOERIS. Hyrcos quid mihi significasset?

CIRCE. Vel odor hyrcinus, vel quod quandiu viuunt, tamdiu coeunt. vel hoc quod gestiunt cum socium cum sua foemina coeuntem viderint, tunc præ gaudio crissant, & exultant vt arietes.

QVÆSTIO IIII.

MOERIS. Quomodo potuisses simias obseruare?

CIRCE. Vel ab ipso naso, vel ex hoc quod cûm optima quæque affectarent, vt vel optimam poësim, vel sophiam, vel orationem, vel hystoriam: infælicissimé tamen in omnibus se gerebant. Ex hoc inquam quód tendentes ad optimum inciderint in pessimum. vt nunc vides, quód cûm hominem animalium pulcherrimum imitentur, hoc ipso fiunt maximé omnium deformes.

MOERIS. Non obstante quod simius simio pulcher.

QVÆSTIO V.

MOERIS. Quomodo distinxissem ab isto genus illud aliud simiarum?

CIRCE. Illi in serus grauibusque rebus inutiles, ma gnatibus adulando, & hystrionando, & parasitos agendo placebant: vt modo cûm non valeant cum asinis ferre onera, cum equis militare, arare cum bobus, cum porcis mortui pascere: sic tantum vsuueniunt vt risum faciant.

QVÆSTIO VI.

MOERIS. Est & tertium simiarum genus sepositum, respice ad ripas fluuii, quid illud indicabat?

CIRCE. Erat videre barbarum parentum genus, inurbanos, inciuiles, & malé natos educans filios, dum immodico & irrationali affectu moribus illorum indulgerent: vt modo vides in propria forma catulos suos strictius amplexando necare.

QVÆSTIO VII.

MOERIS. Qua nota camelos aspexisses?

CIRCE. Dicam. Cúm sub eo quod hominis est latitarent, puris rebus minimé delectabantur, sed cuncta ad morem suum conspurcata probabant: de quorum genere sunt qui sapientum monimenta puerilibus & sordidis infecta adjectionibus suscipere malunt, aut suscipi: vt modo totum camelum præferentes potu mininie gaudent, nisi cúm pedum conculcatione turbata fuerit aqua.

QVÆSTIO VIII.

MOERIS. Isti proximum genus & capite persimile non cognosco. hæret enim cameli capiti ceruix equina, maculísque intincto dorso tigrim refert, & pedibus bouem.

CIRCE. Cameleopardales ipsos appellant, quos inde percipere potuisses, quia ritu quodam erant deorum cultores, voce carnifices, vita diuerso vitiorum genere immundi, scripturæ monumentis bubulci.

QVÆSTIO IX.

MOERIS. Qui erant hienæ gestus?

CIRCE. Blandiebantur obsequio, vt in perniciem traherent: vt modo humanam sciunt referre vocem, & homines proprio quod audierint nomine aduocare, quos discerpant.

QVÆSTIO X.

MOERIS. Videtur adstare & aliud hienæ genus.

CIRCE. Ipsum idem sub actionibus diuersis agnouisses. vides quemadmodum adcurrant ad hominis excrementa, quæ si atius essent (vt nequeant attingere) suspensa: porrectu corporis lassæ interirent. Iisdem cúm homines referrent, foedissima quæque habebantur dulcissima, & de optimis ipsum pessimum consulebatur accipere. Sicut in saccis quibus vina colantur apparet: ipsi enim vina effundentes, solas sibi retinent feces.

QVÆSTIO XI.

MOERIS. Ceruorum genus istud tam celebriter cornutum?

CIRCE. Isti sub quorundam principum tegumento latebant, quibus si quid placebat, id procul percipiebant: si quid minus arrisisset quantumuis clamasses non intelligebant. vt modo si arrigant aures, acutissimo pollent auditu: si demittant surdissimi sunt.

QVÆSTIO XII.

MOERIS. Quid nos in elephantum prospectum adduxisset?

CIRCE. Hoc quod nares habebant pro manu, vel quod carentes manibus, vtebantur naribus: nihil enim ipsi cūm facere nescireut: in aliorum factis iudicandis tantummodo occupabantur.

QVÆSTIO XIII.

MOERIS. Quis vrsos istos olfecisset?

CIRCE. Quicumque expertus esset illorum naturam contumacem, barbaram, atque feram: quos pariendo, fouendo, nutriendo, & lambendo promouerit. Hoc enim animal quantumuis lingua aliisque oris lenimentis ex infigurato rudique partu formetur: ferum tamen adolescit, durum, & alpestre.

QVÆSTIO XIII.

MOERIS. Quis leones cognouisset?

CIRCE. Qui considerasset quod cūm principes essent, á viribus infimorum conuitiis illis erat metuendum, veluti nunc natura ipsa coguntur cristam, vocemque galli formidare.

MOERIS. Nunquid propterea in feras sunt mutati?

CIRCE. Minimé, sed erant ipso addito furore leones.

QVÆSTIO XV.

MOERIS. Cætera illa maiora alias considerata relinquo. Qua nota istricem mihi potuisses indicare?

CIRCE. Nonne vides ipsum aristas spinasque suas non nisi prouocatum, accitum, instigatum, & compulsum iaculari?

MOERIS. Intelligo.

QVÆSTIO XVI.

MOERIS. Echinos facile cognouissem, quia vt modo spinas , spinis circumquaque contexti ingrediuntur: sic olim in omnibus negociis acerbitatem seruabant, cūm animum intus asperum retinerent.

CIRCE. Veré quidem.

QVÆSTIO XVII.

MOERIS. Vnde pro testudinibus illos diuinassem. & quale testudinum genus (omissis aliis) est istud?

CIRCE. Hi extiterant magnifica expectatione allecti ad aulas principum, quarum deliciis delectari poterant, adusque vt eis postea liberé in suum se ocium atque quietem recipere non licuerit: veluti nunc humano deposito velamine, & suo apparentes cortice contextæ, cum meridiani solis oblectatæ calore, totum illi excalfaciendum dorsum exposuerint, adeo potentia solis ipsarum corticem exsiccauit, vt eodem quasi supernatante subere repressæ: nequeant ad tutiores, interiorésque recessus adnatare, vnde & nullo negotio iam possunt á venatoribus captari. Hoc testudinum genus Indicum appellant.

QVÆSTIO XVIII.

MOERIS. Quid ais de cancris istis quos pinnoteras appellant?

CIRCE. Nonne vides quemadmodum sub inanibus se condunt concharum testis: minores sub minoribus, sub capacioribus autem maiores? Iam videre licebat multos qui cum per sese nihil valerent: propria diffusi sufficientia, maiorum dominorúmque suorum titulis tuebantur.

QVÆSTIO XIX.

MOERIS. Vidisses crocodillos?

CIRCE. Contra plaudentes ferociebant, concedebant autem contemnentibus & obstantibus: vt modó terribiles extant in fugaces, fugaces in terribiles.

QVÆSTIO XX.

MOERIS. Aspides quoque?

CIRCE. Hi in parentes, magistros, & beneficos: contumeliosi, ingrati, homicidæ: vt modó filij, matres morsibus enecant.

QVÆSTIO XXI.

MOERIS. Quomodo illuxissent isti pro chameleontibus?

CIRCE. Vel quia adultores & imitatores omnium præter quàm eorum quæ onesta & clara videntur: sicut nunc præter rubrum, atque candidum, colores omnes imitantur. Vel quia aura popularis eos alebat nec quippam aliud ab humana laude & gloria aucupabantur. Aspice illos ore semper hiantes, vtque alio quàm aëre non pascantur. Vel quia intra maximum quem habent atque capacissimum pulmonem nil possident: veluti iam præter ventosam iactantiam nil potuissent animorum notomistæ in ipsis contemplari.

QVÆSTIO XXII.

MOERIS. Vno dic verbo, quis aspectu homines, conuicisset esse aquaticos istos?

CIRCE. Dicam. Qui illos malorum turpiurnque libenter auditores & imitatores considerasset: ita. n. Sycias comperisset, quæ modo id quod in corpore pessimum est, & insuaue potenter attrahunt. Illos Polypos cognouissent, si vidissent quomodo diuersorum se moribus adcommodando, & animalium diuersi generis (vt aucupes facere consueuere) fingendo voces: rem domesti cam nouerant simulando augere, quemadmodum modo coloris mutatione venantur.

QVÆSTIO XXIII.

MOERIS. Dimissis istorum speciebus aliis, aliás considerandis: leuemus oculos Circe ad aues istas quæ ad proximam Syluam & eminentias aduolare. Qui erant hyrundines quæ in ipsis nidulantur tectis? Suo satis vultu ipsas eos figurare fertur qui vultum suum serenante fortuna amicis aderant: qua sæuiente & inconstantem obnubilante faciem. terga dabant: vt modo veris tempore nobis adsunt, hyeme veró vrgente recedunt.

CIRCE. Bene. Sed & in hoc Cognosci poterant, cúm sub hominis tegumento sirnul cum veris conuersarentur hominibus, & humanus adirent patrias, atque domos, de abiectis paleis, & festucis eorum se adcommodantes: ipsis tamen non poterant assuescere: sicut & mures nequeunt cum hominibus conuenire, quantumuis sub eodem degant atque viuant tecto.

QVÆSTIO XXIII.

MOERIS. Pauones quoque facilé cognouissem, videbam enim gloriosos altigrados, pennas colorésque suos amplantes, inflato pectore tumentes.

CIRCE. Certe. Sed & eos intelligere pauones debuisses, qui nihil nisi laudati faciebant: vt modo cum quis eos laudauerit, se pennis explicatis faciunt perspicuos.

QVÆSTIO XXV.

MOERIS. Lusciniæ quoque non ignorassem. Erant quoddam loquacium hominum genus, qui multum dicebant vt multum sapere viderentur: quos quidem stultorum alebat existimatio: sapientibus æque atque stulti contemptibiles, quibus illud non latet quod dicitur. VAS VACVVM MVLTVM SONAT.

CIRCE. Optimé. Erat & quoddam garrulum poëtarum genus, quod inanibus modulationibus abundabat.

QVÆSTIO XXVI.

MOERIS. Quem refert auis pusilla quæ vocem bouis imitatur?

CIRCE. Istos cognouisses cúm villa, atque pusilla subiecta: sufficientia, animo, & natura viles: vocem (de rebus magnis loquentes, & decernentes) magnificabant.

QVÆSTIO XXVII.

MOERIS. Coccices noui, cum alienas vxores suorum facerent filiorum matres: vt nunc videmus oua in alienis supponere nidis.

CIRCE. Recte iudicasti.

QVÆSTIO XXVIII.

MOERIS. Aquilam quam auem regiam appellant, contortis rapacibúsque digitis satis ipsam se declarantem, quis non cognouisset? quis ipsam sub homine vociferantem non audisset?

CIRCE. Certum est & aquilas multas sub quorundam potentum vultibus latere. Omnes aquilæ sunt potentes, atqui non omnes potentes, aquilæ. Neque enim Circen tuam ex hac parte aquilam dixeris, cúm deam asseras, atque reginam.

MOERIS. Minimé quidem, sed quid esset iniuriæ? nonne & deorum pater Iuppiter ipse sub aquila latuit?

CIRCE. Recedis á proposito, iam de aquilis quæ sub homine latebant loquimur, non de hominibus atque diis qui solent sub aquilis & animantibus aliis latere.

QVÆSTIO XXIX.

MOERIS. Auemn illam quæ aquilam videtur oppugnare, non cognosco.

CIRCE. Cybindum appellant. Aquila & Cybindus latebant sub specie principum, qui cúm inter se consererent, á tertio inuadente subuertebantur: vt modo ad usque cohærent vnguibus & rostro so dilacerantes: vt ad inferiora terræ mutuo conflictu depressi, ab aliis corripiantur.

QVÆSTIO XXX.

MOERIS. Dij optimi nunquam adeó magnam auim vidisse memini.

CIRCE. Illa est strutio camelus auium maxima, atque stolidissima: quæ cum frutice collum occultarit, latere se existimat. Tales sunt & phasiani, tales sunt & mugiles, in aquis. Ipsam aspicere potuisses cùm homo ingenti corpore onustus atque mole, minimum habens iudicij præsentabatur.

QVÆSTIO XXXI.

MOERIS. Siquidem multis volatiliū communem esse constat rapacitatem & carniuoracitatem, quónam Circe vultures (si vultures sunt quos video, ob ipsas enim quæ superuenere tenebras non bene possum eas quas ibi video nigras aues distinguere) signo seorsum ab aliis cognouissem?

CIRCE. Ipsi sunt vultures. Ipsi iam imminentes diuitum captabant mortes, quas pluribus præcedentibus annis olfaciebant: vt modo ad cadauera aduolant, quæ ante triduum futura præsentunt. Sed nos famem futuram non præsensimus, & nimium volatilibus istis intentæ, tenebras in ipso extremo sentiuimus crepusculo: quæ stellarum nobis reddito conspectu, nos ab istorum animalium intuitu distraxere. Tectum ergo coenaturæ repetamus.

MOERIS. Crastinam ergo diem si lubet totam ad inspicienda reliqua destinemus.

CIRCE. Ita, si á magis vrgentibus non auertar.

QVÆSTIO XXXII.

MOERIS. Sed diuersi generis noctilucas istas quæso domina Circe ne differas significare mihi, sub quibus latuisse possunt faciebus?

CIRCE. Isti sunt docti, sapientes, & illustres: inter idiotas, asinos, & obscuros.

QVÆSTIO XXXIII.

MOERIS; Qui erant hoc adeo venustum, affabile, humanum, conuersatile, & officiosum animalis genus: quod ante nos vrgente nocte ad perticas domesticas aduolauit? Gallos inquam istos quomodo cognouissem?

CIRCE. Gallus cùm sit animal pulcherrimum, canorum, nobile, generosum, magnanimum, solare, imperiosum & pené diuinum: seipso tamen abutitur, & ob id vnum meliori exuitur forma: quod cum simili atque consorte, pro vilibus & ociosis gallinis vt plurimum in pugna commoritur, isque qui victor euadit aliis oblectamen spectatoribus, cantu se testatur superiorem. Istum vidisses in illis latere, qui mutuis dissidiis mutuo se consueuerunt atterere, quique sua in suos facinora cæteris ridiculi iactabant.

ALBERICVS.

AMICE Borista, in lectione Circaei cantus, eiusdémque fictorum successuum, exigui quo vti licet temporis triuisse partem, non potest metedere. Ibi non modicam rerum conspicio varietatem, ibi multos in ipso verborum cortice sensus explicitos: intentiones quoque medullitus implicitas, innumeras esse coniicio, de quibus omnibus id quod seriusum est atque præcipuum, ignorare me fateor.

BOR. Nec facile intelliges.

ALB. De iis autem in quorum captum possem promoueri, vnum duntaxat est quod ardenti animo concupisco.

BOR. Quidnam?

ALB. Vt eam ipsam quæ in dialogi facie est varietatem valeam (quatenus per artem fieri posse audio) eodem quo parta fuit ordine, absque negocij arduitate memoriter fixam retinere. Ipsum enim & per laboris impatientiam labilémque (quæ à natura est) retinendi facultatem, alioqui me facere posse diffido. Audio te ex Iordani inuentis haud istrionicam quandam, qualem iactant alij, ex considerationibus de vmbriis idearum expressam callere artem: quam multi valde arduam. proprióque studio inaccessibilem iudicant. Nonnulli ex iis qui doctiores vulgo videntur, ne ipsorum insufficientia delitescat, & cùm suam pudeat eos fateri paupertatem, quod quippiam ex ipsis non percipiant ad artem quam asserunt esse confusam referunt.

BOR. Artem quidem inaccessibilem, sed sine schala concesserim facilé. Difficilem quoque fateor, sed non propterea accusatione dignam: omnia quippe optima velimus nolimus, decreto deorum in arduis esse sita, non est quem lateat. Quod etiam doctorum multi per se ipsos eam non intelligant, non est eorum ignorantiae, nec artis confusione tribuendum: nihilo enim minus absque istius artis intellectu doctissimi esse possunt. quod enim ad ipsos attinet, illud est in causa, quod allis in negotiis negotiis magis occupati, modica artis istius sententias legunt attentione. Non enim satis est quod membra intentionúmque partes omnes intelligant: sed & insuper necessarium est eos dignari, vt circa eadem considerent & contemplentur, nec non intentiones alias ad alias referant, relatásque cum aliis ita conferant, vt quasi ex simplicibus intentionibus, terminorum conflent combinationus, & per se ipsos ea quæ in proposito inuentionis iudicij & memoriae deduci possunt deducant. Pro iis autem qui tantum subire laborem & ad tantam pertingere perfectionem minimé valentes; aliqualem praxim tantummodo captant: extat eius editio quædam, paucis quibusdam amicis communicata, iis qui in huius generis artium studio sunt versati, facilis ad intelligendum. vbi quid alienis addiderit inuentis, quidque totum adinuenerit ipse, per te facile poteris videre.

ALB. Propitij sunt mihi dij: rem mihi desideratissimam videbor esse per te consecutus, si dictis facta respondebunt.

BOR. En exemplar aperio, sis attentus animo, & audita considera , & si quippam non intellexoris perquire. Habet libellus pro titulo suum proæmium.

ALB. Lege.

INTENTIO AVTHORIS.

BORISTA.

Intentio nostra est, diuino annuente numine, artificiosam methodicámque prosequi viam: ad corrigendum defectum, roborandam infirmitatem, & subleuandam virtutem memoriae naturalis: quatenus quilibet (dummodo sit rationis compos, & mediocris particeps iudicii) proficere possit in ea, adeo vt nemo talibus existentibus conditionibus, ab ademptione istius artis excludatur. Quod quidem ars non habet a seipsa, neque ex eorum qui præcesserunt industria, á quorum inuentionibus excitati: promoti sumus diuturnam cogitationem ad addendum, tum cis quæ faciunt ab facilitatem negotii atque certitudinem: tum etiam ad breuitatem. Quandoquidem quæ secundum viam aliorum requirebant diuturnam exercitationem, intensam attentionem, & quadammodo ab aliis studiis abdicationem, adeo vt feliciora ingenia tale studium dedignarentur: iam per nos Altissimi gratia adeo facile & illustre & dignum negotium proponitur: vt nemo sanæ mentis sit, qui nedum artem amare debeat: verum quoque toto appulsu atque neruis, in eius studium incumbere. Quandoquidem ars ista adiuvat omnes alias, & ostendit viam, & patefacit aditum ad inuentiones alias plurimas. Siquidem ita faciet, ad memoriam, vt etiam maximé conferat ad iudicium. Sed quid in laude, & momento huius artis detineor? Successus rem ipsam comprobat. Vnum tantummodo est difficile, vt aliquis hæc ipsa per se ipsum possit intelligere. A docente omnes intelligent. Quod quidem non euenit ex eo, quia nos difficultati studeamus: sed a nouitate rei & celebritate terminorum. Hortatur autem Plato in Euthidemo vt res celeberrimæ atque archanae habeantur á philosophis apud se & paucis, atque dignis communicentur. Aqua enim inquit ille vilissimo pretio emitur, cúm tamen omnium rerum sit pretiosissima. Idem nos amicis nostris facimus, atque intensius: maiori etenim occasione ducimur quám Plato in eo proposito duceretur. Idem omnibus iis, in quorum manus ista deuenerint, consulimus: ne abutantur gratia & dono eisdem elargito. Et considerent quod figuratum est in Prometheo qui cúm deorum ignem hominibus exhibuisset, ipsorum incurrit indignationem. Cætera quæ in præmiis & ampullatis exordiis solent proponi, prætermittimus. Sufficit enim necessaria adducere & ea quæ ad præsentis intentionis complementum faciunt.

DIVISIO LIBRI.

«Habet præsens negotium vt diuidatur in Theo«riam & Praxim, vtpote in rationem artis, & prin«cipioruin ipsius: Et præcepta illa á quibus maxi-«mé proximeque operatio proficiscitur.

«Theoria habet tres partes: Aliam quæ est de

«modo inquirendæ artis in gubernanda phantasia &
«cogitatiua, quæ sunt portæ memoriæ; Aliam quæ
«est de ratione subiectorum seu locorum; Aliam
«quæ est de ratione adiectorum seu imaginum.

«Praxis veró habet duas partes: Alteram quæ «respicit memoriam rerum; Alterain quæ respicit «memoriam verborum.

DE THEORIA PRÆSENTIS

ARTIS

PRIMA PARS TEORHIÆ.

CAP. I.

«Modus & ratio gubernandorum sensuum internarum
«ad instruendam & construendam memoriam.

«§ I Ordo potentiarum & organorum.

«Satis famosum est, atque concessum: quatuor
«esse cellulas, pro quatuor sensibus internis, qua-
«rum: Prima, sensus communis appellatur, situata
«in anteriori parte cerebri. Secunda, vsque ad ce«rebri medietatem, phantasiæ domicilium nuncupa«tur. Tertia illam contingens cogitativæ doinus di«citur. Quarta veró memoratiuæ. Hoc modicum est «vt ad præsentem spectat considerationem: præ«terquam ea de causa, vt habeamus ordinem ope«rationum istarum potentiarum, ad perficiendam
«menieræ operationem,

§ II. Ordo operationum siue actuum.

«Ordinantur igitur ita operationes istæ, vt per «aliam, ad aliam progredi non valeamus, usque ad
«vltimum memoriæ cubile: nisi successiué inceden«tes ab vna in aliam, eodem ordine quo per sua «organa, & domicilia á matre natura fuerunt in«stitutæ, & ordinatæ secundum situm. Imaginentur
«enim vt quatuor cameræ, seu cubilia non quidem
«seposita, sed vt altero intra alterum collocato,
«ita vt in quartum pateat ingressus per tertium:
«in tertium per secundum: in secundum per pri«mum. Dico in proposito vt nihil ingrediatur me-«moriæ, nisi per atrium cogitativæ: nihil cogita-«tiuam, nisi per atrium phantasiæ: nihil phantasiam, «nisi per atrium sensus communis.

Comparatio § III.

«Habenda ergo ratio est in arte ista eadem cum «ea quam naturam ipsam habere perapicimus: vt
«videlicet ars ipsa & imitetur, & sequatur, emu-«letur, & adiuuet naturam. Idque ipsum præstet
«in duobus. Tum videlicet in eo quod faciat res «memorabiles. Tum etiam in eo quod easdem or-«dinatè memorabiles reddat, atque promptas. Pri«mum efficitur beneficio imaginatiuæ: secundum «beneficio phantasiæ. Imaginatiua enim perficit i«mages cum rationibus suis, phantasia vero præ-«sertim atque proprie loca atque sedes imaginum.

CAP. II.

De modo inquirendæ artis, in gubernanda phantasia.

«Cogitatiua igitur formatur (vt naturalea volunt)
«per species non sensatas, quæ á speciebus sensa-
«tis educuntur. Est ianua, & introitus, & clauis
«vnica cubilis memoriæ. Vnde eorum tantummodo
«meminimus, quorum impulsu cogitatio sollicitata «fuerat (dico cogitationem vniuersaliter dictam in «genere ratiocinantum: hæc enim facultas in bru-«tis æstimatiua dicitur ab ipsis qui solemnius phi«losophantur) per amorem, odium, metum, spem, «tristitiam, lætitiā, abbominationem, delectatio«nem, & species aliarum affectionum animalia, qui«bus quidem memoria redditur habilis ad receptio«nem specierum sensibilibus: & species sensibiles
«aptissime actu ab eadem recipiuntur.

«Ecce quomodo species redduntur memorabiles &
«formabiles. Iuxta quam facultatem solam tantum-
«modo hoc nobis feliciter succedit: vt ea quæ vi«dimus nos vidisse recordemur cūm occurrerint.
«Alterum necessarium est pro vsu doctrinæ, vt or«dinate & ad libitum eorundem recordemur. Et i-«deo sicut in scriptura extrinseca atque pictura quæ «seruiunt oculis extrinsecis duo requiruntur: ratio
«videlicet formæ atque figuræ characterum & ima-

«ginum, & materia atque subiectum in quo for«mæ illæ & imagines possint subsistere, manere &
«perdurare. Ita etiam in scriptura intrinseca atque
«pictura, quæ seruiunt oculis intrinsecis, duo sunt
«necessaria. Alterum quod habeat rationem figura-
«rum, imaginum & literarum: alterum quod habeat
«rationem libri, paginæ, lapidis, atque parietis, vnde «pendet ratio proximé dicendorum.

SECVNDA PARS THEORIÆ

CAP. I.

De his quæ faciunt ad Theoriam subiectorum & formarum.

«Oportet igitur pro basi & fundamento istius,
«primo quasi paginam apparare: deinde rationem
«adscribendorum characterum, & appanendarum
«imaginum adferre & insinuare modo quo alia ad
«alia referantur. Facile subinde erit mediocribus «considerationibus & conceptis, prodire ad opera-«tionem.

§ I.

De subiectis: & primo quid sit subiectum.

«Subiectorum ergo ratio, primo considerata oc«currit, ante quam promoueamur ad insinuanda ea
«quæ illis adueniunt. Subiectum ergo in proposito
«non sumitur secundum intentionem logicam, vel
«phasicam: sed secundum intentionem conuenien-«tem quæ technica appellatur, vtpote secundum in«tentionem artificialem: & est subiectum, non for«malium prædicationum, quod distinguitur contra «prædicatum. Non formæ substantialis, quod ile di-

«citur, quod est materia prima. Nan formarum ac«cidentalium, quod est compositum physicum. Non «formarum artificialium inherendum naturalibus cor-«poribus. Sed est subiectum formarum phantasiabi«lium apponibilium, & remobilium, vagantium, &
«discurrentium ad libitum operantia phantasiæ, &
«cogitativæ. Ex quo desumitur ratio sua definitio «subiecti pertinentis ad hanc artem in sua gene-«ralitate: quod distinguitur in suas species, pacto
«quod sequitur.

§ II.

De subiecto quod est præsentis intentionis.

«Subiectum vero istud (vtpote quod est aptum
«natum ad recipiendas formas memorabiles vt me-«morandæ sunt) pro commodo esse potest vel com«positum naturale, vel semimathematicum, vel ver-«bale positivum. Ipsum vero naturale, Vel potest
«esse communissimum, extentum iuxta latitudinem
«ambitus vniuersi, Vel communius iuxta latitudinem
«Geographiæ, Vel commune iuxta latitudinem alicu-«ius continentis, Vel proprium iuxta latitudinem po«liticam, Vel proprius iuxta latitudinem domesticam, «seu œconomicam, Vel propriissimum iuxta multi-«tudinem atque numerum partium domus, & par«ticularum eiusdem.

«Tot existentibus subiecti speciebus: ipsæ quæ
«sunt infra latitudines proprietatis: maximè sunt ad
«vsum præsentem accomodatæ, licet etiam hæ quæ
«sunt infra latitudinem communitatis vsu venire
«valeant. Porro praxis illarum, vna cum praxi su-«biectorum semimathematicorum currere potest. De «quibus fortasse in regulis practicis aliquid com«monstrabimus. Nunc autem consequens est in me«dium afferre conditiones subiectorum per ordi«nem.

CAP. II.

De conditionibus subiectorum.

§ I.

«Subiecta ergo sensibilia atque materialia, iudi-
«cio omnium qui de hac arte hactenus bene dixe«runt: prima quó ad subatantiam ita sunt eligenda,
«vt sint ad oculum sensibilia: quorum Alia sunt
«naturalia vt lapides, arbores & similia. Alia sunt «artificiosa, vt aulæ, columnæ, anguli, statuæ &
«similia. Alia sunt vtroque modo sese habentia, vt
«quæ partim natura, partim arte constant.

§ II.

«Quó ad quantitatem eorum continuam, subiecta
«propria debent esse non admodum magna, ne qua«si visum obtundant & disperdant, nec admodum
«parua, ne quasi visum fugiant: sed mediacria ad
«hominis magnitudinem talem, quæ sit iuxta al-«titudinem eleuatorum & latitudinem extentorum «brachiorum.

§ III.

«Quó ad quantitatem discretam sint tot quot sunt «præcipuæ species memorandæ. Modica quidem at«que pauca sufficiunt ad rerum & sententiarum me«moriam: plurima veró ad memoriam verborum re«quiruntur.

«Quod etiam ad copiam subiectorum attinet, quo«niam aliquando non sufficere solent ipsa quæ ex
«vna domo vel ædificio desumi & eligi possunt:
«confugiendum est ad actum proportionalem ei,
«quem scriptores ad oculum extrinsecum facere con«sueuerunt. Vbi quippe eis pagina vna non sufficit
«ad integri negotij expressionem, paginam paginæ
«adnectunt atque consuunt: vt quod tabella non ex-«primit, liber exprimat. Ita fermé nobis consulitur
«in præsentí operatione, vt propria institutione loca
«communia locis communibus connectamus. Et o-

«pere nostræ cogitationis, & phantasiæ, ea quæ re
«ipsa sunt diuisa, disiuncta, & ab inuicem elonga-
«ta: vniantur, coniungantur, & aproximentur. Fiat «igitur hoc pacto. Fini & termino vnus, adhe«reat principium alterius vel adherere intelliga«tur. Nihil enim obstat quo minus possis fini atque «termino tuæ domus, quæ est in vna parte ciui«tatis, apponere principium vnus ædificij, quod
«est in alia parte ciuitatis. Pariter nihil obstat quo
«minus valeas extremo locorum Romanarum ad-
«nectere primum locorum Parisiensium, dummodo
«sit fixum apud te, atque sancitum, vt semper tali «fini tale principium intelligas succedere.

§ IV.

«Quo ad Qualitatem. Subiecta vt volunt omnes
«non debere esse nimium illustria, neque admodum
«obscura: sed talia qualia non intelligentur excel-«lentia sua visum turbare, vel defectu suo visum
«minus mouere.

§ V.

«Quo ad Differentiam. Volunt vt caueatur tan«quam ab igno á pluralitate similium locorum, sed
«in omni electione commendetur varietas. Vndo di-«mitte (inquiunt) plura inter columnia similia, si«miles fenestras, dimitte vacua spatia. In quibus
«tamen si placeat aliquid collocare: instituere potes
«aliquod receptaculum cuiusmodi est altare, mensa, «solium, ceteraque huiusmodi.

§ VI.

«Quo ad Relationem. Subiecta debent intelligi
«formata, mota, & alterata aduentu imaginum: vt
«easdem valeat commodé repræsentare. Intelligentur «inquam affecta, sicuti de facto afficitur pagina per «aduenientem literam: vel si fieri potest, & melius, «sicut afficitur cera per nouæ imaginis impressio-
«nem. Et hoc notasse valet at id quod sciri debet

«quo ad actionem, & passionem.

§ VII.

«Quo ad Ordinationem. Ex omnium sententia lo-
«ca sine delectu non sunt assumenda: sed ordinaté:
«sicut per ordinem sibi succedunt partes, & mem-
«bra ædificiorum.

§ VIII.

BOR. Percepisti ne Alb. subiectorum rationem.

ALB. Percepi, & in ipsis quod ad modos & conditiones eligendorum locorum spectat, nihil amplius adferre videtur præter id quod hactenus ab aliis extat allatum.

BOR. Rem superficie tenus considerasti. Sed concessum sit eum de iis quæ pertinent ad loca sensibilia nihil permutare. Quid dices si hæc, quæ mortua prius habebantur, per ea quæ proximé subsequenti capite habebuntur viuificare doceat, subiectorum maximi faciendam rationem adferens? Certe si animam applicueris: celeberrimam habebis artis speciem, ad artium intentiones & ordinandas, & perpetuo retinendas.

ALB. Bene, ad propositam applicationem faciendam progredere.

BOR. Ita fiet. Habes igitur ex arte communi quemadmodum adparanda sint subiecta. Sensibilia. Naturalia. Artificialia. Mixta. Mediocris spacij. Mediocris perspicuitatis. Iuxta memorabilium specierum numerum. Diuersa. Differentia. Congruas habitudines ad apponendas formas seruantia. Ordinata.

CAP. III.

Cautela ad firmitatem subiectorum pro formarum retentione, quæ paucis fuit nota & leuiter tacta. Et est quod potest pertinere ad rationem subiectorum, quo ad vltimum prædicamentum quod est HABERE.

§ I.

«Subiectorum alia substantiua, alia adiectiua sunt.
«Subiecta substantiua appello ea de quibus hactenus meminimus. Subiecta vero adiectina sunt quædam quæ locis prædictis adiici possunt differentia «á suis substantiuis in hoc quod illa perpetuo manent eadem & immobilia: hæc veró licet perpetuo
«inibi manere debeant atque maneant: tamen pro occasione aduentantium formarum, atque imaginum
«mouentur, alterantur, & in varios, atque diuersos vsus assumuntur, dum per ea aliquid sit, vel ipsi
«actioni eadem inseruntur quoquo pacto. Ista nimis mirum addere valent virtuti locorum quantum anima corpori, adeo vt sine istis loca mortua habeantur: cum istis veró viuentia. Adde igitur angulo pileum, sedi pugionem, fenestræ cyatum, cæterásque aliis huiusmodi vtensilia, atque mobilia: quandoquidem nihil adeo modicum est, quod ad innumeros vsus innumeras non valeat habere relationes. Nunc in angulo dum vapulat Albertus «pileus, vsu venit ad munus scuti. Nunc dum pingit Ideus: pileus deseruit pro continentia colorum.
«Nunc dum fodit rusticus: ligone Pileus inciditur, & ita successiue aliis alia agentibus, atque facientibus: aliter atque aliter pileus operationibus «inseritur. Hinc aliquando si non occurrat loco appositum, quasi á reuelatore fideli, poteris ab ipso adiectiuo subiecto de re apposita certior effici: cúm «quæras quid factum est de te pileo? quid factum est de te pugione?

ALB. Dij me ament Borista, eo magis huius præceptionis industriam laudabilem argumentor, mihi que persuadeo, quo maturius super ista cautela & viuificatione locorum á celeberrimis antiquorum tacta quidem, sed minime comprehensa considero.

BOR. Iam incomparabilem habes inuentionem, cuius ne vestigium quidem prioribus coniectare licet artibus.

ALB. Qua de re?

BOR. De ordinatione semimathematicorum subiectorum.

ALB. Audiam nouitatem subiectorum semimathematicorum.

CAP. IV.

§ I.

De ratione subiectorum semimathematicorum.

«Subiecta puré mathematica vsu venire non pos«sunt, quandoquidem abstracta sunt & sua abstrac-«tione phantasiam pulsare vel mouere non possunt, «quandoquidem abstractio pertinet ad superiorem fa«cultatem, quam sit ipsa phantasia.

§ II.

«Illud ergo quod valent præstare Mathematica-
«lia secundum se, est ordo solus: & hic in duobus «inquiri potest (in quorum tamen vno feliciter suc-«cedit) in figuris videlicet & numeris. In figuris qui-«dem procedendo á triangulo ad quadrangulum: á «quadrangulo, ad pentagonum: hinc ad exagonum:
«hinc ad eptagonum, & ita deinceps in innumerum
«per planas figuras. Similiter in solidis figuris, á cor«pore trilatero ad quatrilaterum, ab ipso quod est
«trium superficierum, ad ipsum quod est quatuor su«perficierum: & ita deinceps ad alia. Qui progressus «difficile formari potest in vsum præsentis artis.

§ III.

«In numeris autem, procedendo á monade ad dua-«litate: á dualitate ad trinitatem: & ita deinceps in «innum. Veruntamen ipsi numeri non valent
«repræsentare: sed ordinem tantummodo insinuare.
«Applicentur igitur rebus aliquibus naturalibus, &
«per easdem colorentur, atque formentur. Destinen-«tur ergo pro primo denario linea, pro secundo li«gnea, pro tertio ferrea, pro quarto ænea, pro quin-
«to argentea, pro sexto aurea, pro septimo sericea,
«pro octauo pannea, pro nono coriacea, pro decimo
«pellicea. Vel pro prime organa agriculturæ, pro se«cundo organa artis ferrariæ, pro tertio militiæ, pro
«quarto vestiarias, pro quinto lanionicæ, pro sexto «hortensis, pro septimo coquinariæ, pro octauo me«dicinæ, pro nono tonstrinæ, pro decimo funerariæ,
«pro vndecimo sacrificiæ, & ita deinceps.

§ IIII.

«Quibus decadibus ordinatis & determinatis, siue
«istiusmodi, siue aliis modis: siue secundum hunc
«modum, siue secundum alium: modicis aliquibus
«differentiis poteris tibi decernere, & diffinire dif-
«ferentias, ad insinuandos digitos numeros in sin«gulis decadibus. Siquidem in ligneis, aureis, cete«risque huiusmodi, sunt differentia instrumenta, «atque res. Similiter in coquinariis, hortensibus &
«similibus.

§ V.

«Applicari igitur possunt intentiones rerum me-
«morabilium rebus istis suo ordine: vnde non solum «rerum memoriam & ordinem: verum quoque & nu-
«merum situm, & regionem, cum intentione partium
«& caput possibile est retinere: sed rem fusius
«quám par esse videtur artis dignitati explicuimus.

ALB. Dij beni quám prægnans inuentum ipsum sine tua declaratione percipio: clarius. n. non poterat nec debebat aperiri.

BOR. Ipsum sané maturiori consideratum iudicio maturius & excellentius apparebit. Ipsum ingenus etiam non admodum excitatis ad maximos vsus notabilem offert occasiouem.

ALB. Illud etiam in re proposita perpendas velim: quod non solum locorum, sed & imaginum fœcundissimam rationem explicuit, vbi & loca per imagines, & imagines per loca docuit viuificare. Hic etiam rationem engraphicé habendarum artium inspicio.

ALB. De iis hactenus. Lege.

BORISTA.

§ VI.

De locis verbalibus positiuis.

«De locis autem verbalibus positiuis, non est præ«sentis negotii tractare: & non nisi violenter tracta«ri pesserent in partem istius artis, de ipsis enim con-«sideramus in libro clauis magnæ, qui est de inuen-«tione, & iudicio scientiarum, & de arcana retentione
«& fixatione. Sufficiat ergo in proposito, proximé dicta
«semimathematicalia, quæ capitum, sententiarum,
«legum, vel paragraphorum, vel cuiuscumque rei
«esse possunt subiecta: verum etiam valent ad hoc «ipsum vt sint imagines numerorum in allegationi«bus, cæterisque huius modi.

§ VII.

«Illud etiam est considerandum quod pro diuersis
«materiis, & occasionibus, ex diuersis generibus, se«mimathematicalia loca possunt atque debent diuer«simodé formari: quorum duos enumerabimus: alií-«que multi similiter enumerari possunt.

ALB. Habes ne verbalium locorum rationem Borista?

BOR. Nullam prorsus, eámque si haberem non esset hic locus nec tempus eiusdem adducendæ.

ALB. Quomodo talem iudicas si non cognoscis?

BOR. Id ergo non te prætereat, ad applicandum numerum Circaeum, vt iuxta capitalium terminorum multitudinem, locis sensibilibus, á quorum tibi praxi est exordiendum, apparatis: mox in rerum memorandarum, quæ tum locorum ordinem, tum & á locorum ordine consequuntur, appositionem intendas animum.

ALB. Recte. Iam quasi paginam in qua scribendum, vel tabulam in qua pingendum est habeo dispositam. Mox igitur inscribendi, figuratidique rationem explicato de formis.

TERTIA PARS THEORIÆ DE

RATIONE ADIECTORVM SEV

CAP. I.

Quid sit forma, & quotuplex.

«Forma quoque in proposito non sumitur secun«dum intentionem Methaphisicam Platoniam vt poté
«pro idea. Nec secundum intentionem Methaphisicam «Peripateticam, vt poté pro essentia. Nec secundum
«rationem physicam, vt poté pro forma substantiali «vel accidentali informante materiam vel subiectum.
«Nec secundum intentionem technicam vtpote arti-
«ficialem additam rebus physicis actu existentibus «quas supponit. Sed secundum rationem logicam non «quidem rationalem, sed phantasticam (quatenus no«men logices amplius accipitur) respondentem inten-«tioni subiecti, quod supra pariter diuidendo, & di«stinguendo ab aliis, diffiniuimus.

§ II.

«Est igitur forma in proposito aliquod cogitatum
«vel cogitabile opere phantasiæ & cogitatiuæ, adiec-
«tum locis seu subiectis iuxta triplicem superius il-

«latam differentiam, triplicibus: ad aliquod repræsen«tandum, & retinendum pro informatione, & perfec«tione memoratiuæ facultatis.

§ III.

«Formarum ergo aliæ sunt naturales, aliæ sunt
«positiæ. Naturalium intrinsecæ vsu non veniunt
«in proposito: Siquidein (vt patet) non sunt imagina-«biles, extrinsecæ veró, quæ in sensibus obiiciuntur,
«nec omnes vsu venire possunt, sed illæ tantummodo,
«quæ per visum, & auditum sensus internos ingre«diuntur, selectissimæ veró sunt formas visibiles. Gu-«stus enim & ex intimis sentit obiecta, tactus veró
«extrinsecus adherentia, olfactus modicum distantia, «auditus distantiora, visus vero distantissima ab ipsis
«mundi imaginibus obiecta concipit. Ideo omnium
«spiritualissimus, & diuinissimus, sicut naturaliter
«antecellit: qui determinant in præsentis proposito «formas extrinsecas visibiles, quæ quidem licet non «sint formæ de quibus loquimur: tamen sunt fontes «á quibus illæ emanant, & matres quas illas partu-«riunt. Vnde si ipsæ exteriores vestigia appellantur
«idæarum: interiores vmbras appellantur earundem
«á nobis in libro qui de vmbris inscribitur.

§ IIII.

«Formæ veró aliæ quæ sunt intrinsecæ, extrinse«carum riuuli atque filiæ, quæ per vehicula & cana«les sensuum externorum, sese in phantasticam fa«cultatem ingesserunt, sunt præsentis intentionis. Et «istæ dupliciter sumi possunt vno pacto, secundum
«suam naturam, nuditatem, & puritatem, & eiusmodi
«sunt cúm sensum ipsum internum aggrediuntur:
«Altero pacto alteratæ, commutatæ, deordinatæ, &
«commistæ, & ita dupliciter, vel ab intentione, vel
«ab aliorum naturalium accidentium perturbatione.
«Primo modo possint esse artificiales, secundo vero «minimé.

§ V.

«Itaque duo sunt genera imaginum. Aliæ enim
«sunt similes rebus extrinsecis secundum totum vel
«per integrum, vt image Socratis vel Platonis, image
«equi, vel tauri. Aliæ vero sunt similes rebus extrin«secis secundum partes, sed non secundum totum:
«vt image montis aurei, centauri, harpiæ, & simi«lium. Vtrumque generum commodum est ad praxim «præsentis artificij, siue etiam necessarium.

CAP. II.

De Conditionibus formarum seu imaginum.

§ I.

«Formæ vero quod ad essentiam & substantiam
«attinet, debent esse ex eorum genere quæ maximé «valeant phantasiam pulsare, & cogitatuam excitare.
«Genus veró illarum in proxime dictis est manife«statum.

§ II.

«Quod ad quantitatem discretam attinet, iuxta mul«titudinem locorum sunt multiplicandæ: & ad commo«dum rerum insinuandarum distinguendæ, plures in«quam simul, vtpoté in eodem loco non concurrant.
«Hinc enim accidit vt aliæ alias confundant, vt eue«nit in literis complicatis. Illud tamen feliciter con-«tingere potest, vt in eodem loco plures ita collo«centur vt aliæ alias consequentes attingant, quæ in «antecedentibus ita continebantur, sicut virtualiter
«in præmissis sunt illationes.

§ III.

«Quod veró ad quantitatem continuam attinet, ca«ueto á paruis imaginibus, & ab immodicis. Illæ enim «sensus non excitant: istæ vero extensione sua vi«sum, internumque obtutum dispergunt. Extrinsecum «quippe oculum non mouet, vel lente mouet musca,

«ægre veró formam suam insinuat gigas in magno
«pariete depictus. Ad mediocritatem ergo contrahan-«tur ampliora, & extendantur exigua. Ideo dicitur
«in libro clauis magnæ. Aut modica, aut modificata.
«Aut magnifica, aut magnificata: vnde licet elicere
«quot ipsum secundum se modicum, & impotens ad
«mouendum: beneficio concomitantis reddi potest
«magnum atque potens. Scutum & cadauer præsen«tabit muscam, sagittarius, sagitt. Sutor acum, scrip-«tor calamum.

§ III.

Quod ad qualitatem pertinet, illud in memoriam reuocandum est: quod tales eligendæ sunt formæ, quales admirationem, timorem, amorem, spem, abhominationem, similésque alios eius generis affectus valeant accire. Quod si imago hoc ipsum de sui natura non præstet: faciat tua institutione, destinatione, & secundum genus applicatione. Ita enim mortuam imaginem (nisi admodum hebetis extes ingenij) viuificare poteris. Hinc si ex hominum genere magis tibi notos, atque celebres, monstruosos, pulchros, dilectos, exosos omnes adsumas: melius usu venire poterunt. Cúmque duo sint genera formarum, animata videlicet & inanimata: prima præstant secundis. Animatorum quoque cúm duæ sint species, rationalia videlicet & irrationalia: prima secundum omnem modum præcedunt vniuersa. Ipsis enim omnis actio, omnis passio, motus, omnis tandem vsus potest conuenire.

Quodcunque enim valent ferre cæteræ omnes: hæ solæ possunt, atque amplius. Vnde & mundos eas appellare licet.

§ V.

«Quod ad relationem vicissim dicitur de istis,
«quod supra de subiectis dictum est.

«Non inquam decipiaris aliquando non collocans «& putans te collocare, non affigens, & putans te «affigere. Quandoquidem aliquando accidit (imo vt «plurimum) vt per minorem applicationem, siue in«tentionem naturali memoriæ committas, quod putes
«te loco committere, id est cum quasi in aërem fun-«dens excogitatam formam, subiecto illam minimé
«facis inhærere. Contra quam delusionem ita repa-«randum est. Assuesce vt habeas semper veram loci «formam ob oculos, & germanam formam collocan«dæ rei, vt in sene capillos albos, curuum bustum,

«tremulas manus, cæteráque huius modi intuearis:
«Et cum istis omnibus eius applicationem ad locum, «& habitudinem loci ad ipsum, quasi dicas. En vbi
«homo ille, En quid locus ille capit, similiter de aliis «formis est iudicandum. Proinde, mitto quod supra «dictum est de locis adiectiuis.

§ VI.

«Quod ad actionem & passionem attinet. Intelli«gatur forma in locum aliquid agere, vel aliquid pati «á loco, aptum vel ineptum: iucundum vel triste:
«commodum, vel incommodum. Hinc enim pendet
«robur & fixio adiecti cum subiecto, & eius quod
«proportionale est materiæ cum eo quod formæ pro«portionatur.

§ VII.

«Mox á similitudine & vniformitate non minus
«cauendum est quam á quolibet alio, quod minus
«fauet, atque contrariatur rationi perfectionis imagi-«num. Turbat enim & confundit crebra eiusdem i-«maginis repetitio, & appositio. Quod si necessitas «vrgeat (distinctis tamen interuallis) vt eandem for«mam iterató accipias: recipias eam alteratam, al-«teram, & aliis habitudinibus indutam. Sicut enim «natura ipsa abolet similitudinem, ipsam (de simili-«tudine numerali loquor) ita & ars. Nunquam enim «natura duos homines similes constituit, imo nec
«vnum hominem omnino similem perseuerare facit, «sed quem mane sumpsit vt unum, vespere su mit
«sensualiter vt alterum.

ALB. De iis quæ ab antiquis necessaria notatúque digna præcepta sunt, quod faciat ad facilitatem, ordinem, atque sufficientiam: nihil est quod prætermisisse videatur.

BOR. Nimirum præter errores, ineptias, & infantias quæ ab obscuris & irrationalibus quibusdam allata sunt, omnia continet ista consideratio, omnia sufficienter distinxit, numerauit, digessit in species, & ordinauit. Duo sunt quæ sibi peculiariter potest vindicare. Alterum quod adeo (si intelligatur) spiritum ipsum regulare docet: vt tantum absit ne formas in ipsis doceat depingere subiectis, vt mirum in modum quomodo eadem in ipsis insculpi valeant aperiat. Alterum quod paucis aliorum inuenta perficiat, & ad vlteriora promoueat.

ALB. Prosequere.

CAP. III.

Modi aliquot imaginum ad rerum figurationem atque vocum.

§ I.

«Extant nonnullæ rationes, atque modi: quibus
«possunt tum nomina, tum res ipsæ vnica imagine «figurari. Primum quidem distinguendum est de mo-
«dis in genere hoc pacto. Eorum á quibus recipi po«test signum rei repræsentandæ, alia retinent simi«litudinem secundum rem, alia vero secundum di«ctionem.

§ II.

j. «Collocamus ergo aliquando rem ipsam si ipsa «est figurabilis á phantasia, vt scamnum pro scamno, «equum pro equo.

ij. «Aliquando veró similem in voce, pro simili. vt-«pote collocamus rem figurabilem, quæ denomina«tione sua causat memoriam rei infigurabilis, cuius
«nomen affine est nomini illius. Sic apponimus «equum ad equitatem memorandam, vitim ad vitam.

iiij. «Aliquando veró per Etimologiam, solemus «venari illud á quo ipsa desumitur, utpoté infigura«bile á figurabili, á Romano Romam, á montano «montem.

iiij. «Aliquando á similitudine capitis, vtpotè prin«cipij dictionis, consueuimus reuocare memoriam
«eius quod in fine est dissimile. Ita per asinum loco «appositum solebam asilum recordari, vel Aser.

v. «Aliquando á translatione nominis, quemadmo-

«dum á Phillippo loco apposito, venabar memoriam «amatoris equorum. vel é conuerso aliquando.

vj. «Ab antecedente, venari solebam consequens,
«quemadmodum naturaliter ab aurora solis exortus
«concepitur, & á pastu digestionem figuratam conci-«pimus.

vij. «Aliquando ex concomitante, sicut á socio so-«cium qui semper ipsi vnitur consueuimus recordari.
«Vbi igitur aliquid est infigurabile, sicut mors, potest «figurari per cædem vel cadauer.

viiij. «Aliquando á consequente, quod dicitur vicis-«sim cum antecedente: sicut á fumo nominas ignem «præcedentem, et per ignem recolimus fumum sub-«sequentem.

ix «Aliquando ab accidente subiectum, quem ad-«modum á re alba apposita, niuem lucramur, á sal-«tatione saltatorem.

x. «Aliquando á subiecto accidens: sicut ex alueo «mellis collocato, recolimus dulcedinem, ex leone fe-«rocitatem, ex vrso iram.

xj. «Aliquando ex Hyeroglifico suum designatum:
«sicut ex lance & statera iustitiam. Ex speculo pru-«dentiam.

xij. «Alquando ex insigni insignitum: vt ex ense «Martem, ex clauí Ianum.

xiiij. «Aliquando ex simbolo simbolatum, vt ex ho-«mine nasuto Tongilianum, de quo illud, Nil præter «nasum Tongilianus habet. Ex homine armato Han-«nibalem: ex togato, lacerata tunica, nudis pedibus, «detecto capite, Diogenem.

xiiij. «Aliquando ex contemporaneo tompus, sicut «ex floribus Aprilem: ex torculari Autumnum, & sic «de aliis.

xv. «Aliquando ex circumstantia locum atque sub«iectum, vt ex certo habitu Theutonicum seu Ger-«maniam, Africanum, seu Africam.

xvj. «Ex proportionato proportionale, quemadmo«dum ex figulo ad lutum, subit nobis consideratio «vniuersalis plasmatoris ad vniuersum plasmabile. in «magno synapi hæc propositio. Modico in semine at«que principio maximi effectus præexistunt: vnde «paruus error in principio, magnus in fine.

xvij. «Ex conuertente conuersum, quemadinodum «ex voce Maro clarescit Roma, ex voce Remo more.

xviii. «Ex partibus totum, ex componentibus com«positum, vnde Dauus cūm viti obiicit infigurabile «Dauid.

xix. «Ex capitis diminutione vel additione, corpus «alterius significati, sicut ex Palatio latio clarescit.

xx. «Ex capitis sitnilitudine, capite adsimulatum, «sicut ex pariente Paralipomenon liber clarescit.

xxj. «Ex assolente proferre, vocabulum ipsum, vel «sententiam: hinc quidam qui dicere solebat omnia «amicorum sunt communia loco appositus reducit te
«in memoriam sententiæ illius. Et nota hic quod «etiam ex tua institutione potes eiusmodi sententias, «& terminos quibusdam accommodare, veluti vsu «venire potest modus proximé sequens atque magis.

xxij. «Ex subiecto recipiente verificationem sen«tentiæ, vel significationem termini, sententiam ipsam
«atque terminum, sicut mihi quidam garrulus & ma«ledicus, nec bené fortunatus: sententiam illam psal-«mistæ. vir linguosos non dirigitur in terra.

xxiij. «Ex metaphora seu transpositione, transpo«sitionis subiectum: ex argento lunam: ex plumbo «Saturnum. Ex stamno Iouem. Item & ex vulpe a-«stutiam. Ex cane adulationem. Ex simia imitatio-«nem & emulationem.

xxiiij. «Ex propria passione, ipsum cui appropria-«tur, sicut ex boue mugitum, ex porco grunditum.
«Ex quibus etiam aliquando translatio fieri potest,
«sicut postquam ex asino habemus ruditum, ex ru«ditu habere possumus fatuum sermonem, eo enim «& asinilogos solebam mihi describere.

xxv. «Ex instrumento artificem, & instrumenta-«tum in genere, sicut ex sphaera & astrolabio, astro-«logum possum meminisse.

xxvj. «Ex habituato, habitum infigurabilem, sicut
«ex muliere grammatica, quæ est substantia cum ac«cidente, seu subiectum cum qualitate: ipsam gram«maticam quum qualitas quædam est conceptare pos-
«sem. sicut ex musico, musicam. Similiter ex ha-«bente id quod habetur, vt ex predium habente, pre-«dium: ex principe principatum: licet sit aliud præ-«dicamentum. Similiter in qualitatis genere, ex mo«dificato, modum: sicut ex recipiente rationem ali«cuius aduerbii, ipsum aduerbium: sicut ex bené sal-«tante, aduerbium bené occurrere potest.

xxvij. «Ex Ex specie genus, sicut ex boue loco appo«sito figurabili, meminisse possum animal genus in«figurabile.

xxviii. «Ex relatiuo correlatiuum, sicut ex domino «seruum.

xxix. «Ex contrario, contrarium per antiphrasim:
«sicut per aliquem inculté loquentem, Demosthenem, «per fatuum, Aristotelem.

xxx. «Ex agente, actum, vel actionem: sicut ex
«furanto, furtum. Si qui autem alij modi prætor istos «imaginentur, omnes habeantur vt in istis inclusi &
«ad istos reducibiles. Perfecta si quidem enumera«tione atque respectu ad talem redacti sunt numerum,

«vt patet callentibus rationem magnæ clauis.

ALB. Certé alios difficile possem imaginari modos qui (quatenus spectat ad ea quæ sensibilibiter mouere continget) in enumeratis triginta non contineantur.

BOR. Cur dicis sensibilibiter?

ALB. Quandoquidem ad reminiscentiam atque memoriam quam per ordinem semimathematicalium subiectorum atque verbalium positiuorum: adipiscimur, possumus aucupari: ex prædictis triginta discursibus, quibus alia per alia possunt præsentari (quatenus ex vnus appositæ memoria in alterius vel infigurabilis, vel egré figurabilis solemus promoueri) nullus est qui conducere videatur.

BOR. Pace tua, nullum est memoriæ genus in quo aliquod vel plura harum figurationum genera non vsu veniant: sicut enim citra species phantasiabiles nec intelligere nec memorari possumus: ita nec citra vsum alicuius ex enumeratis generibus.

CAP. I. § I.

ALB. Certé nihil amplius requirebatur ad praxim. Quis non videt quemadmodum ipsius praxis ratio sub titulo theoriæ latissime continetur & explicatur.

BOR. Credo hanc tituli distinctionem potius ob ordinem doctrinæ, quàm ob aliam causam adduxisse authorem: Sed audi hæc deinceps habebuntur. Ex iis enim non modicum pro vtriusque memoriæ specie releuaberis.

PRO REBVS PRÆSEN- TANDIS.

§ II.

«Quamuis his quæ supra allata sunt sub titulo
«theoriæ sufficientissime etiam á mediocribus inge«niis ratio praxis tota possit educi: tamen per hæc «quæ mox subinferimus superiora confirmamus, &
«superioribus addimus.

§ III.

Pro rebus præsentandis.

Paratis ergo dispositis ordinatis, determinatis, atque
«confirmatis subiectis: facile est formas ipsas appone-
«re. Sensibilium quidem sensibiles, non sensibilium «veró etiam sensibiles. Porro sensibiles formæ rela-«tæ ad sensibilia obiecta, rationem veram imaginum
«& exemplarum admittunt. Relatæ vero ad non sen«sibilia obiecta, habent rationem signorum, notarum, «& indiciorum. Quomodo autem quælibet significari
«possint, designari, & effigiari, demonstrauius ex
«parte magna, magis quám vnquam demonstratum
«fuerit ante nos. Vnum tantummodo abest vt succur-«ramus iis terminis qui per prædictas imaginum ra-«tiones non possunt figurari: cum de triginta modis
«illis nullum aliquando possumus ad propositum
«adaptare: siue difficultate proueniente á nobis, siue «á re ipsa cuius memoria est habenda, & commodam «præsentationem quærimus. Modo igitur proximé sub «inferendo prouidendum. Qui quidem nullum memo«rabile excludit, siue sit terminus intellectus siue
«non intellectus, siue significatiuus. quomodocumque

CAP. I.

De memoriæ verborum praxi.

§ I.

Vbi igitur res ipsas collocare nequimus, quia sunt infigurabiles: aptemus nobis nominum, vocumque quarumlibet inscriptionem tali pacto habendam. Primo sint homines, iuxta elementorum numerum distincti, quorum alij vnum, aliud alij tibi designent elementum, siue ex institutione vt poté ex appropriato: siue ex veritate, vt poté ex proprio nomine. Sint inquam tibi pro elemento A designando plures Aristarchi. pro elemento B plures Bacchi. pro C Cæsares, qui quidem loco apposit, hæc tibi repræsentabunt elementa.

§ II.

Sint proinde aliæ res inanimatæ quæ possunt vsu venire prædictis hominibus: ita vt Armarium, auriculare, arcus, & similia significant tibi elementum A. Baculus B. Corbis C. similiter & alia instrumenta, & armamenta, alia tibi designent elementa. Et ita tum homines plures, tum etiam plures tibi reliquas res & operationes ab hominibus contractabiles ordinabis, quibus quidem valebis eidem loco integram committere dictionem.

§ III.

«Quod si dictio erit prolixior, poteris illam in duo-
«bus vel tribus locis committere & extendere, quod «consulimus quando extemporanea replicanda sunt
«lecta vel recitata.

§ IIII.

«Vbi veró tu ipse tuam tibi materiam disposue«ris, poteris vni loco dictionem quantumlibet pro«lixam committere, apponendo duos vel plures ho-«mines ordinatos: qui cum suis instrumentis & si-
«gnis & nominibus propriis literas repræsentando, «quamcumque tibi proferant dictionem.

BORISTA. Quod ad memoriam verborum pertinet: á labore in quem nos artes antiquiores impellunt, mirum in modum nos releuare videtur. Quibus licet modicum considerantibus, modicum videatur addere: melius tamen negocium perpendentibus longé aliter apparebit. Elementa enim quæ per antiquorum præceptiones, singularia tantum docebamur præsentare: nunc ad syllabarum & quarumcumque dictionum ex ipsis complexarum complementum, vnico cuicumque loco integrum ipsum docemur apponere terminum. Armamenta enim & actiones, non ociosa, leuia, atque vaga nunc instituuntur: neque solum ad memoriam excitandam homines hominibus adstare, résque alias aliis applicari debere perdocemur: sed omnia pluribus onusta muneribus accipere, vt quám facilité commodéque quod antiquis impossibile videbatur nacti simus, non sit difficile videre. Audi quid senserit Tullius in suis ad Herennium.

Scio plerosque græcos qui de memoria scripserunt fecisse vt multorum verborum imagines conscriberent, vt qui eas discere vellent, paratas haberent, ne quid inquirendo consumerent opere. Quorum rationem aliquot de causis improbamus, quarum vna est quod in verborum innumerabilium multitudine, mille verborum imagines ridiculum sit comparare: quantulum enim poterunt hæ valere cum ex infinita verborum copia modo vnum modo aliud nos verbum meminisse oportebit?

Ex quibus sané verbis manifestum est illud Tullium existimasse inipossibile factu: quód non modo in se facillimum comperitur, verum etiam vniuerso negotio facilitatem causat. Cur autem hunc in modum Græcorum illorum derideat industriam, illud est in causa quod ipsum alio pacto fieri non posse existimabat, quam singulis dictionibus singulas destinando imagines. Quod tentare ridiculum est. Nos veró tantum abest vt imaginum numerum multiplicemus: vt in singulis perficiendas atque complendas locis ad expressionem infinitorum terminorum siue significantium sine non: completas, paucas, determinatas, & celebres ordinemus imagines. Habes ergo facultatem qua tum res ipsas seu rerum intentiones in Circæo cantu positas, tum & ipsa quibus explicantur verba, locis valeas affigere. Exerceri tui similes in istis secundis non probarem. Ad vanam quippe atque puerilem facere videntur iactantiam, quatenus enim occurrentium figurandorum terminorum necessitas exquirat: solertia vsus triginta configurationum succurrere poteris. In pueris autem & studiosis adolescentibus præter breuem istam viam & alias quas Iordanus instituit nullam laudauerim, grauis. n. cura diuturnaue intentio, & abductio á seriis studiis ad quæ fortasse per ipsas redduntur inhabiles (in ipsis. n. actibus expediti, atque aptissimi alioqui stupidi mihi comperti sunt) perceptione fructus qui colligi possit in tardo lentóque fine minimé compensantur. Per hæc autem nostra studium non impeditur, memoria naturalis non hebetescit, non languet, sed proficere potest ingenium. Interim spero futuros qui inuentionis istius semina multiplicent. Porró, licet hæc consideratio tanta sit si cum antiquioribus conferatur: sine præiudicio gratiarum quas primis inuentoribus & viam præmonstrantibus habere debemus: nihil tamen est aliarum respectu, quarum integer inuentor apparet iste. quarum mox vnam in breuibis contentam explicabo tibi. Sed hæc de arte, tredecim quibusdam amicis dictata sufficiant.

ALB. Proferas rogo te aliam artem.

Habes etiam, sub singulis trium animantium generum, plures infimas pro commodo enumeratas species. illæ in specialibus subiectis illorum multiplicentur in trinum. Istæ veró in propriis pariter subiectis deducantur.

Book Description

Giordano Bruno's notorious public death in 1600, at the hands of the Inquisition in Rome, marked the transition from Renaissance philosophy to the Scientific Revolution of the seventeenth century. This volume presents new translations of Cause, Principle and Unity, in which he challenges Aristotelian accounts of causality and spells out the implications of Copernicanism for a new theory of an infinite universe, and of two essays on magic, in which he interprets earlier theories about magical events in the light of the unusual powers of natural phenomena.

★★★★★ A Good Look at Giordano Bruno's Philosophy, May 10, 2001

Reviewer: Tan Kwan Seng \(see more about me\) from Singapore
This book consists of 2 parts. The first part "Cause, Principle and Unity" is about his theory of an infinite universe. While you may either agree or disagree with him on certain points, I think (maybe you, too) will find the idea of a "world-soul" intriguing. This part consists of 5 dialogues.

The other part comprise two essays, one on magic and the other is his treatise on bonding in general. This part presents some ideas which I think would be interesting not just to magicians but anybody who wants to know and wonder, from a philosophical point of view, what magic is and bonding in general.

Any student of philosophy is likely to enjoy this book (either the first or second or both).

★★★★★ brilliant book in brilliant new edition, March 19, 2001
Reviewer: A reader from Africa

This is certainly one of the most hilarious books ever written. No philosopher has ever combined brain-busting metaphysics with slapstick comedy the way Bruno consistently does. Bruno is known primarily as a fascinating loose cannon in the history of philosophy, but read his critique of Aristotle patiently and you will find that it has profound merits. If only more philosophy books were written in a style similar to this one!

GIORDANO BRUNO

(THESES DE MAGIA)

This digital edition Copyright © 1998 by Joseph H. Peterson. All rights reserved.

I.

Magia sumitur multipliciter: communissime, communiter, proprie et propriissime. Primo modo pro omni genere scientiae et sapientiae; secundo pro scientia naturali, seu rerum naturalium in genere; tertio pro sapientia, quae complectitur triplex genus scientiarum realium cum triplici moralium et triplici rationalium; quarto pro aggregato habitu ex omnibus his vel pluribus, cum facultate mirabiliter cognoscendi vel operandi; et hoc dupliciter: vel per se, vel per aliud; et hoc tripliciter: vel per superiora, vel per aequalia, vel per inferiora; et hoc iuxta diversas circumstantias notatas et inclusas in significationibus decem quibus dicitur magus. Nos in praesentiarum intelligimus de Magia iuxta significationem qua proprius dicitur.

II.

Magia est triplex: divina, physica et mathematica. Et ita dupliciter consideratur: vel ex parte subiecti, scientiae seu cognitionis, et ita absolute et simpliciter est bona; vel quatenus venit in usum scientis, et ita interdum bona est, interdum est mala, malam autem esse non intelligimus sub ratione scientiae proprie dictae (scientia enim quatenus scientia semper est bona et de omni et per se), sed sub ratione scientiae communiter dictae seu particularis noticiae, quatenus ad definitam materiam seu singularem contrahitur, quo etiam pacto in natura accidunt monstra non sub ratione naturae absolute et universaliter, sed sub ratione istius vel illius, in hoc vel in illo.

Omnis superstitio et improbitas, quae vel per se vel per accidens reducitur ad magiam et concomitatur illam, pertinet ad tertiam speciem, quae est mathematica.... [parole illeggibile M; om. C] Omnis enim error et peccatum versatur circa ea potissimum, quae a divino et naturali sunt aliena. Hic distinguendum est de mathematica secundum rationem communiter dictam, et hic mathematicum distinguitur per Arithmetica Astronomiam, Opticam, Musicam etc.; alio pacto secundum rationem hic propriam, quae est secundum analogiam ad illam communem.

III.

Magia mathematica media est inter divinam et physicam magiam, sicut mathematica simpliciter media est inter naturalem et metaphysicam.

Distingue de medio.

IV.

Principium magiae est considerare ordinem influxus seu scalam entium, qua Deum in Deos, Deos in astra, astra in daemones, daemones in elementa, elementa in mixta aliquid immittere comperimus etc.

Distingue de influxu. Influxus est duplex: essentialis et accidentalis; et hic intrinsecus et extrinsecus: primus influxus largitur esse, secundus vero modum essendi seu essendi perfectionem. Et hic notandum quod in hoc ordine alligata sunt superiora inferioribus, ut propitiantia, protegentia, moventia; alligata inferiora superioribus, ut obsequentia, obedientia. Item distinguendum est de ascensu et descensu istius scalae. Est vero duplex: contemplativus quo res cognoscuntur, et activus quo res fiunt. Et hoc fieri est duplex: principale quo videlicet etiam sunt, et accidentale quo fiunt accommodata nobis seu applicata.

Distingue item circa progressum lucis et tenebrarum, quae sunt in scala. Lux enim et tenebrae sumuntur dupliciter: uno pacto significant substantialiter, tunc lux significat actum, formam, tenebrae significant potentiam et materiam; vel accidentaliter, et tunc lux significat potentiam activam et perfectivam specierum, tenebrae vero potentiam passivam et perfectibilem subiectorum.

V.

Iuxta tres praedictos magiae gradus tres mundi intelliguntur etc.

Hic distinguendum est de mundo secundum significationem communem, propriam et propriissimam. Primo modo mundus idem est quod universum, et hoc pacto est unus tantum, ut universitas est una absolute, secundum quam significationem dixit Parmenides et Xenophanes ens unum. Secundo modo mundus distinguitur, ut modo dictum, iuxta tria entis genera, quae ad unum genus reduci non possunt; intelligibile (enim), naturale et rationale differunt plus quam genere, hoc est non genere differunt, sed differentia sunt genera. Tertio modo mundus sumitur sicut apud Democritum, qui innumerabiles et infinitos intellexit, mundum unum accipiendo terram, alium lunam, alium singula astrorum, quorum non est definitus numerus.

Sumitur etiam mundus improprie et proportionaliter seu similitudinarie, ut homo dicitur mundus, quia partibus eius partes universi repraesentat, sicut et modo suo singula animalium et plantarum.

Hanc mundi distinctionem iuxta tria praedicta significata comprobant naturae veritas, ratio et divina revelatio: primum quia nihil est in mundo sensibili, quod ab archetypo non dependeat; secundum quia nihil est in intentione, quod non sit in rebus fundamentaliter;

Distingue fundamentaliter et realiter; fundamentaliter secundae intentiones, realiter ut primae. Secundae intentiones fundatae sunt in primis, logica est de secundis intentionibus adiunctis primis. Avicenna in L. De sufficientia.

tertium quia veritas veritati non contradicit et multoties haec distinctio in divinis libris reperitur.

VI.

In genere duplex est efficiens.

Ibi distingue de efficiente seu agente iuxta capita distinctionum. Item distingue de causa iuxta idem.

VII.

Elementum rerum omnium vere atque proprie est unum, proxime duo, proxime quatuor: una materia, duo contraria, quatuor prima et simplicia corpora quae posuit Empedocles.

Ratio. Quia principium materiale est unum tantum, utpote quod subest duobus contrariis, quatuor item primis corporibus, quae cum in invicem sunt transmutabilia, necesse est ut in communi quadam materia convenient; quae enim invicem transmutantur, subiecto convenient oportet. Est ergo primo unum subiectum, secundo distinctum in duo contraria veluti subiecta, ut ignem et aquam, vel solem et tellurem, tertio in quatuor, quorum duo sunt activa, duo vero passiva.

Quando ponimus duo elementa, non est dicendum calidum et frigidum accidentia, sed substantias et completas substantias. Sic solem et tellurem dicimus principia omnium particularium substantiarum seu specierum, ut facit Hesiodus, Virgilius et Parmenides.

VIII.

Stultum est omnes operationes et effectus rerum naturalium referre duntaxat ad qualitates activas et passivas; sunt enim effectus animae et spiritus, qui nullam harum qualitatum recognoscunt.

Distinctio est in § VIII. Virtutum enim, quae de subiecto in subiectum deferuntur, aliae sunt sensibiles seu per qualitates activas et passivas, quae sensibus externis perviae sunt; aliae occultiores, quae sub actu cogitationis et imaginationis comprehenduntur, ut ea quae concupiscibilem et irascibilem facultatem attingunt. Primi generis qualitates per contactum quendam per se exuscitantur, secundi vero neque per se neque semper. Utrumque genus a compositis corporibus proficiscitur et in eadem illabitur, propter communionem spiritus et animae, non tamen propter corporeas qualitates utrumque, nempe eas quae principaliter sunt ab elementis, sed a qualitatibus, quae sunt in substantia animae et spiritus (quae si corpora sunt, alius generis esse ab illis oportet), proficiscuntur; quandoquidem tales qualitates non requirunt perpetuo approximationem subiecti ad subiectum, sed etiam sola imaginatione exuscitantur in subiecto. Unde tum anima interna, tum externa, cum in meditationem aliquam assurrexerit seu cogitationem, corpus suum alterat; quod tamen nemo dicit eam facere per contactum, quandoquidem substantia eius individua est, et eius potentiae non sunt corpora, neque corporum more insunt in toto et in partibus.

IX.

Quicquid immaterialiter est alicubi, est totum, non solum substantia immaterialis, sicut anima, quae tota in toto, et tota in qualibet parte, sed etiam et immateriales qualitates, sicut vox, et species rerum sensibilium delatae in oculos, et imagines in speculis et partibus speculorum. Itaque spiritus et spiritalia loco et subiecto non sunt alligata.

Disting. Anima est in toto tota, hoc est secundum essentiam et potentiam, non autem est in toto totaliter, hoc est secundum operationem et actum, quia non undique videt, undique audit, quia non ubique sunt organa videndi et audiendi; itaque non est totaliter, hoc est per omnia. Item distinguendum est de potentia, in potentiam primam et proximam. Potentia prima est ubi est animae essentia, potentia vero proxima est ubi sunt organa et media. Prima potentia est tota in toto et in qualibet parte, secunda vero in certis est et definitis partibus.

X.

Nulla productio, nulla generatio est sine idea et sine cognitione, nempe efficiente, qui ad propositae ideae normam aliquid producit. Idea autem, qua homo generat hominem et leo leonem, non est separata, sed coniuncta ipsi leoni et ipsi homini; efficiens vero partim separatum est, partim coniunctum; materia neque separata neque coniuncta.

Cognitione] Disting. Quae est sensibilium sensitiva, intelligibilium intellectiva.

Item de efficiente, qui coniunctus est, anima et natura propria; separatum est, sol, astrum, aër.

Materia] Quae erat unum postea fit aliud, non autem quae erat in uno postea est in alio, et ipsa quia est cui formae coniunguntur, non quae formis coniungitur, non est ipsa quae accedit et recedit, sed cui aliquid accedit et a qua aliquid recedit accidentaliter vel substantialiter, mediate vel immediate, ipsa est substantia individua ante quantitatem, ante rationem partis et totius; unde in composito iuxta hanc rationem materiae, quae prima est et subiectum formae substantialis, non est accipere hanc et illam partem, quam in ipso composito est accipere, hanc et illam manum, hanc et illam capitis partem, et hoc brachium huic humero coniunctum.

Disting. de Idea. Idea tripliciter sumitur: ante rem, in re et post rem; primo modo propriissime, secundo modo proprie, tertio modo communiter loquendo. Idea ante rem est quae est causa rei producendae et principium existens ante ipsam, sicut forma canis est principium proximum quo hic panis convertatur in semen caninum, et forma hominis est causa qua idem panis ibi convertatur in semen humanum et producat hominem; et haec forma ante rem est duplex: universalis, quae est in virtute naturae universalis producentis, qua simpliciter homo generat hominem, et generaliter animal generat animal; et particularis, quae est in virtute huius et illius singularis subiecti naturalis, qua hic homo hunc hominem generat, hic canis hunc canem. Idea in re est quae reperitur in ipsis rebus productis, et habetur pars compositi. Idea post rem est quae reperitur in sensu vel intentione vel ratione vel intellectu abstrahentibus species a rebus.

XI.

Regulariter loquendo, ideae sunt entia metaphysica, vestigia idearum sunt entia physica, umbrae idearum entia rationis; prima proportionantur sigillis imprimantibus, secunda formis impressis, tertia apprehensis oculo vel sensu.

Idea universaliter secundum rationem universalem, in qua non est locus, motus et tempus (est enim forma extra subiectum); ut autem huius formae est exemplificatum est coniunctum materiae, facit seu producit formam physicam; ut autem est species abstracta et separata materiae secundum actum cognitionis sensitivae vel rationalis, sic perficitur tertium ideae genus quod est causatum a rebus naturalibus, quae dependet ab illis sicut secundum genus a primo.

Ex rerum experientia manifestum est omnem animam et spiritum habere continuitatem cum spiritu universi et anima, et non comprehendi a corpore, sed potius ab ipsa corpus comprehendi, sicut universaliter non materia formam, sed forma materiam complectitur.

Forma materiam terminat et continet, quia eiusdem est definire illam, quandoquidem illi dat et describit tum figuram tum magnitudinem; unde sicut alia est figura formicae quam canis, ita et alia est magnitudo.

Ratio. Anima non est alicubi tanquam in loco, sed tanquam in subiecto, et non ut pars integralis (quantitativa) sicut pars corporis est in corpore, sed ut pars essentialis (substantialis) sicut anima et corpus animati esse constituunt. Item non est alicubi (ut in ipso corpore quod vivificat) terminabiliter, sed terminative, hoc est quia terminat, non terminatur; 3. item non est circumscriptive, sed definitive; 4. item non inhaerenter, sed adsistenter.

Integrales partes sunt proprie loquendo quae faciunt maius, et proprie ea quae sunt partes quantitativae (integrare enim in proposito sumitur secundum conditiones praedicamenti quantitatis), partes vero essentiales sunt quae complement esset non magnitudinem tantum.

XII.

Anima per se et immediate non est obligata corpori, sed mediante spiritu, hoc est subtilissima quadam substantia corporea, quae quodammodo media inter substantiam animalem est et elementarem; ratio vero istius nexus est, quia ipsa non est omnino substantia immaterialis.

Disting. Materiale uno modo sumitur communiter pro omni eo quod est sensibile, ut vulgo appellant materialia quae sensibus ipsis exponuntur. Secundo communius tum pro ipsis elementis, tum pro natura in ipsis elementis, tum in his quae ex elementis sunt conflata. Proprie tertio materiale dicitur omne quod habet materiam tanquam partem sui. Quarto reductive (quia tribus praedictis modis principaliter dicitur) materiale dicitur quicquid habet commercium cum materia, nae accidentia omnia corporea, quae sunt circa corpora, materiale quiddam sunt et corporale, non quia sunt corpora et materia, sed quia circa corpus et materiam. Hoc modo etiam omnes formae substantiales physicae sunt materiales, et anima necessario est corporea et materialis forma, ut non negabunt etiam Peripatetici. Quod vero ad materiam, quae ad intrinsecam eius substantiam attinet, in praesentiarum non disputamus.

Omnia quae formam habent et materiam in se ipsis, sunt materialia; omnia physica simplicia sive composita sint, sunt materialia.

XIII.

Non solum substantia haec quae est anima, sed et pleraque accidentia, ubi sunt, tota sunt, et per se loco ulli non astringuntur, siquidem postea de ratione corporis tantum est totum circumscriptive in uno spacio seu loco, et secundum innumeras partes (in) innumeris spaciis atque locis reperiri.

Ratio. Istae enim sunt conditiones quantitatis continuae constantis, ex partibus positionem habentis, et terminorum ipsarum, nempe linea, superficies, corpus et punctus. Omnis terminus lineae est alicubi, punctus est alicubi.

XIV.

Imateriales substantiae, ut ubi sunt, totae sunt, ita etiam in uno et eodem spacio, eo modo quo esse possunt, totae in toto et totae in qualibet parte illius; sicut etiam accidentia, quae non sunt terminus corporum inhaerenter, in eodem spatio possunt esse innumerabilia tota absque mutua penetratione, qua necessarium sit unum alteri cedere. Porro omnia totum tota, et totius omnes partes tota incolunt.

Vide rationem in * * *. -- Sicut in eodem spacio alicuius vox tota auditur, si innumerae voces audiuntur etiam innumerae.

XV.

Propterea omnis anima est in toto horizonte, et a toto horizonte influxum accipit, et in totum inprimit horizontem; unde locus est magicis operationibus, quae nihilominus physicae sunt, quibus subiectum valde distans virtute quadam spirituali in subiectum remotum affectus et passiones quasdam potens est inprimere.

Contra quod esse videtur quod omnis actio est per contactum. Ubi distinguendum est de contactu, sicut habetur in capite De tactu in libro De generatione; et distinguitur tactus in realem seu naturalem seu physicum communiter dictum, et virtutalem seu potentialem, quo etiam verba quaedam, veluti convitia, quae nihil sunt nisi soni attingentes aurem, per virtutem quandam significativam et repraesentativam attingunt potentias animae, nempe cognoscitivam et appetitivam, unde consequuntur ira, despectus et alii affectus. Similiter et species pulchritudinis quaedam defertur ab oculo usque ad intimas animae potentias, unde exurgit amor, voluptas, laetitia, et per contactum quem vulgus physicum appellat non proficiscuntur, sine contactu tamen non sunt.

XVI.

Hinc non est inopinabile contra rationem, sed valde rei naturae consonum, quod Medicus vulnera longius absentis possit curare, non solum certis adhibitis partibus, quae cum illius corporis materia communionem aliquam adeptae sunt, et instrumentis, verum etiam, si profundioris erit virtutis et efficaciae, immediate per spiritum universi omnia poterit perficere.

Ratio istius ex praecedenti distinctione.

XVII.

Corpora maxime activa sunt insensibilia, quae Lucretius 'corpora caeca' appellat; et corpus quanto sensibilius est, tanto minus est activum et magis passivum. Huiusmodi est spiritus, quem eundem dicimus aërem et eundem dixerunt animam plerique philosophorum, a quo ignis, prout definitur ab Aristotele, non nisi accidente quodam differre videtur. Unde melius tria elementa nominari videntur, loco ignis adiiciendo lucem, sicut fecit Moyses, Chaldaei, Mercurius Trimegista et Orpheus.

Ultra ea quae sunt in articulo XVIII^o, notandum est quod Aristoteles ignem nihil aliud dixit esse, quam aërem attritum, et ex aëris attritione genitum esse dixit, quae attritio est ex rapiditate motus caelestis, et propterea ignis ab aëre in via illius non differt plus quam vapor ab aqua, nempe hoc solo quod est magis rarefactum. Porro sicut vapor respectu aquae novam elementi speciem * * *, ita neque ille ignis respectu aëris producere debet.

Proinde ignis causa videtur esse lux, quae repente absque motus continua successione ab immenso spacio calorem exuscitat et ignem quem dicimus ingignit, et lux videtur esse elementum et principium ignis, non e contra ab igne procedens accidens quoddam. Atque hoc est manifestum in speculis excipientibus radios solis, quos in profundum et tenebrosum adversum alveum immittentes, mediante illuminatione virtutem calidam imprimendo, corpora calefaciunt et adurunt. Ubi non est verisimilis impressio lucis per calorem, sed caloris per lucem, neque caloris cum luce, sed caloris a luce; ratio enim elementaris caloris non est ut repente se ingerat in corpore, sed cum tempore et successione. Ergo ipse lucem habet praevidiam, non autem ipse est luci praevidius; ut etiam per se est manifestum, quia corpora prius illuminantur quam calefiant, et prior ignis est participatio lucis quam caloris.

XVIII.

Duplex est motus naturalis: rectus et circularis. Primus est rerum naturalium non naturaliter constitutarum, secundus vero rerum naturalium naturaliter constitutarum; primus etiam est rerum naturalium melius habere cupientium, secundus bene habentium; primus fugientium et persequentium partium, secundus vero totius duntaxat et partium in suo toto.

Ratio. Quia omnia naturalia in suo loco aut quiescunt aut circulariter moventur, et integrum corpus, ut tellus, luna, motu recto non movetur, sed partes istorum corporum tantum, quando fuerint extra propriam sedem, vel quoties ad locum conservationis meliorem appellant. Quod partes circulariter moveantur in ipso toto, manifestum est in fluminibus et successione seu transmutatione locorum, quando montes migrant in planities et valles, et istae in montes, item mare in continens et continens in mare.

Omnes casus partium sunt arcuales, et aqua arcualiter ascendit et descendit a visceribus et ad viscera.

XIX.

Circulus quoque ille, quo ab uno puncto ad eundem punctum fit conversio, a cuius videlicet centro ad peripheriam omnes radii sunt aequales, non est naturalis neque in naturali ullo subiecto reperitur, sive magnitudinem seu molem corporum spectes, sive motum et mutationem; nullus enim unquam sensus seu experientia circulum eiusce generis comprobavit neque potest comprobare. Circulum ergo rerum seriem cum certa vicissitudine, qua ad similia fiat reditio, non autem ad eadem, intelligatur.

Distinguendum est de circuitu, qui est duplex: physicus et geometricus, seu naturalis et rationalis atque artificialis. Primus est in rebus naturalibus, secundus est tantum opus contemplationis; sol enim neque motu diurno neque annuo, sicut etiam nullum astrorum quae moveri videntur, ad eundem punctum remeavit unquam neque remeabit.

XX.

Praeter has duas vulgatas a Peripateticis motus species, est tertia quae neque centri est neque circa centrum, sed a centro, nempe qua ab omnibus corporibus naturalibus effluit, et ad centrum, nempe qua in corpora omnia naturalia influit aliquid. Et hic effluxus non solum est corporum, sed etiam certorum accidentium, quae in corporibus, a corporibus et ad corpora; quem motum neque rectum neque circularem secundum dictas species appellamus, quia non est secundum lineam rectam unam sed circum undique continuus, sed sphaeralem appellamus; sicut sensibiliter sonus et lux a medio corpore circum undique diffunditur, similiter et odores, colores et alia accidentia, quae non sine corporis partibus tanquam proprio subiecto progrediuntur, ut est manifestum in magnete secundum genus.

XXI.

Et in istis manifestum non modo corporalem virtutem a corporibus diffundi, sed etiam talem quam ad materiam ullam sensibilem vel materiae sensibilis accidens vix quispiam referre posset, quandoquidem potius in genere accidentium animae comprehensa convincimus.

Ad quod demonstrandum et defendendum nihil opus esse videtur, praeterquam exemplo ipso, quod eam virtutis diffusionem protestatur, cuius subiectum non videtur esse corpus, sed vel anima vel compositum animatum propter animam, ut laetitia, timor, amor et similia accidentia quaedam sunt.

XXII.

Ratio, qua magnes secundum genus attrahit, est consensus quidam formalis et effluxus quidam partium materialis, qui est ab omnibus corporibus ad omnia.

Ratio huius consistit in exemplis quae sunt in articulo 22°.

XXIII.

De attractione vero magnetis a polo variae sunt sententiae. Nos tamen, omnibus hisce praetermissis, eam eius rei rationem probamus, quae non est ab attractione similis speciei, nempe quod illic sint montes magnetis (hac enim causa effectus iste non sequitur), sed universam rationem ac firmam ex contrarii fuga esse asserimus et antipathiam quandam quam habet ad loca opposita.

Rationes sunt in 23° articulo.

XXIV.

In omni actione seu magica seu physica seu cuiuscunque generis illa sit, tria requiruntur: potentia activa, passiva et debita applicatio alterius ad alteram. Et ex defectu omnium istorum accidit impedimentum secundum totum vel secundum partem, simpliciter vel secundum quid, in omnibus productionibus.

Distinguendum est hic de potentia et de actione, quae alia est immanens, alia transiens etc. Item est distinguendum de defectu omnium considerando vel simpliciter vel secundum quid; simpliciter enim uni ex parte illorum trium impedimento in his, quae tria illa requirunt, sequitur impedimentum omnium; secundum quid vero, hoc est ex parte proprii principii, impedimentum potest esse non ex parte unius vel duorum.

XXV.

Omnis actio et omnis mutatio est de contrario in contrarium; similis enim in simile non est mutatio, neque eiusdem in idem.

Animadvertendum quod transmutatio est eorum quae communicant in materia, seu quorum commune est subiectum; unde vulgata illa propositio 'contraria apta nata sunt fieri circa idem'. Hoc enim est contrariorum munus, ut mutuo se expellant ab eodem loco seu subiecto, et invicem in eodem subiecto seu loco succedant; hinc calidum et frigidum sunt circa idem compositum, sicut dulce et amarum circa gustum, lux et tenebrae circa visum etc. Huc spectat illa doctrina quae est in I Physicorum, quae est de generatione ex contrariis.

XXVI.

Non obstat quasdam affectiones, seu passiones mavis dicere, esse similitum a similibus, seu similitum cum similibus et dissimilitum cum dissimilibus, immo etiam contrariorum cum contrariis, ut admixtiones, compositiones et apprehensiones.

De his enim aliud est iudicium quam de actionibus et passionibus. Et aqua aquae admiscetur melius quam cum vino, et vinum aquae melius quam oleum vel adiposum quiddam, quia magis est simile; et in luti compositione concurrunt aqua et pulvis, in oxymelle mel et acetum. Apprehensio quoque sensitiva et intellectiva est per similitudines specierum abstractarum ab obiectis cum his quae sunt in eorum superficie. Notanda etiam est distinctio similitudinis. Est enim similitudo quaedam aequiparantiae, quaedam analogiae, quaedam proportionis, quaedam proprie: prima qua homo est similis homini, secunda qua homo Deo similis est, tertia ut qua ita se habet sensus ad sensibile sicut intellectus ad intelligibile, quarta ut species Socratis in imaginatione similis est speciei quae est in ipso subiecto naturali physico.

XXVII.

Ad debitam agentis et patientis applicationem, item miscibilium, componibilium et apprehensibilium ad ea quibus admiscentur, cum quibus componuntur et a quibus apprehenduntur, maxime requirit respectum partium ad partes, nempe ut sit consideratio in operante, quibus loci differentiis corpora sint permeabilia seu penetrabilia.

Ratio huius est in exemplis quae sunt in 27^o articulo.

XXVIII.

Ultra partium qualitatem atque situm illud operator debet insuper intelligere, quod facit ad captum eorum affectuum seu accidentium quibus res debent immutari, ut sint apta nata recipi a talibus subiectis; hoc enim potissimum est omnis operationis ex praescripto propositi finis, ut videatur quae a quibus patiantur, et secundum quas transmutationis species afficiantur.

Ratio istorum ab exemplis 28°.

XXIX.

Ad hoc refertur ratio miraculorum, quae accidunt ab igne fulminum; differentiae vero illorum activorum accidentium, quibus certae dispositiones in activis respondeant, nullo iudicio et arte possunt definiri.

Hoc satis probatur, quia adversario nullus potest occurrere locus seu ratio, qua possit earum rerum causam aperire; talis enim etiam oportet esse is qui huiusmodi effectus valeat ea ratione producere. Probatur insuper autoritate tum Aristotelis tum communiter philosophantium, qui dicunt ultimas rerum differentias esse occultas et innominabiles, quarum videlicet neque nomen neque definitionem referre possimus. Defenditur item enumerando effectus, qui sunt in articulo 29°, quorum nulla ratio adduci potest.

XXX.

Manifestum fit quod dicitur etiam in nutrimentis, venenis et antidotis, quae aliis alia conveniunt, et quaedam quibusdam sunt venena, quae aliis sunt nutrimentum; quorum rationem nemo aliam potest adducere praeterquam temperamenti et complexionis contrarietatem vel diversitatem, in quonam vero illa contrarietas consistat atque diversitas, non facile poterit pronunciari.

Illud si praestabit argumentator, nos libenter docebimur ab ipso.

XXXI.

Hac vero differentiae procul dubio non proveniunt ab intrinsecis specificisque rerum differentiis, sed ab accidentibus quibusdam transcendentibus.

Privilegium enim naturae, quo quaedam plantae ab ignibus caelestibus sunt immunes, etiam in individuis quarundam specierum animalium, ut in certis hominibus et bestiis, comperiuntur. Proinde serpentum morsus, qui mire festinanter homines generaliter interimunt, quidam populi integri * * * ut de Psyllis recitat Lucanus, quorum infantes cum aspidibus ludebant, a quibus plurimi Romanorum exercitus repente perempti fuerunt, quod sane est a complexione illius gentis; et inter nostros etiam Europae comperiuntur familiae, quae absque alia arte vel industria eodem sunt donatae privilegio, et alios propria saliva curare possunt. Adde quod et hic habitus potest innovari seu noviter ingenerari, quandoquidem et Romani assuescebant uti veneno et maxime cicuta, quo minus illius propinatione laederentur. Et referunt Averrhoëm ita nutritisse puellam et adolevisse, ut vel osculo potuisset hominem ad interitum adigere, quam cum ad Avicennam inimicum donum misisset, ipse ea vel minus visa negotium; percepit, quam cum iussisset ad ignem accedere, repente crepuit. Et in proëmio libri Physicorum dicit Averrhoës consuetudinem esse maximam causam, ut quae sunt venena non tantum vertantur in antidota, sed etiam in nutrimentum.

XXXII.

Non mediocriter errant qui rationem maioris et minoris penetrabilitatis referunt ad angustiam meatuum ac pororum, quandoquidem a potentissimis et his, quae penetrativissima videntur, interdum actiones proveniunt et actus penetrationum in ea quae sunt duriora et spissiora facilius quam rariora.

Ipsum patet per ea quae dicuntur in 32° articulo, nempe exemplo ignis et hircini sanguinis ad adamantem, item quia oleum aquam non ita penetrat sicut lignum etiam densissimum; unde patet laxiores poros in aqua et strictiores in ligno non esse causam qua minus penetrentur. De oleo quodque est manifestum, quemadmodum habeat partes magis invicem obligatas, quasi amato nexu invicem complicatas, quae tamen non minus penetrant lignum quam aquam. Proinde nullus est qui opinari possit propter maiorem penetrativitatem, quae est a subtilioribus partibus, sanguinem hircinum eo penetrare quo non penetrat ignis.

XXXIII.

Multiplex est vinculorum genus, quo spiritus atque corpora physice alligantur, quorum primum genus non ex natura rei, sed ex positione constituimus, ex voce et cantu. Cantum vero non solum harmonicum anteferimus seu mathematicum, sed etiam occultum quendam, qui nihil ad tibiam vel ad lyram, qui non ex consensu quodam animae operatur, sed interdum ex occulta quadam violentia.

Patet ex his quae habentur in 33° articulo.

XXXIV.

Vox et cantus non solum audita vincere comperiuntur, sed etiam longe a vinciendis et a remotis non absque aliqua ratione, ab aliis tamen audita vel a concitato incantantis spiritu virtutem accipiunt.

Ex 34° articulo.

XXXV.

Numerus unius vocis alterius vocis numerum subprimit, confundit vel etiam tollit.

Per ea quae in 35° articulo.

XXXVI.

Item unius vocis numeri ex uno subiecto migrant ad excitandos actualiter numeros in alio subiecto comproportionaliter se habente vel in eadem temperie constituto, si sufficiens unius ad alterum fiat approximatio.

Patet ex 36° articulo.

XXVII.

Non solum ut similis speciei vocem educant seu exuscitent, verum etiam in dissimilem speciem.

Patet exemplo canum quorundam, qui ex tubis, et equorum, qui interdum ad tubarum bellicarum sonitum saltant, quod in certis accidit pro certa complexione. Et hoc nemo negare potest esse genus quoddam vinculi ex voce.

XXXVIII.

Certa etiam vox et harmonia comperitur etiam venenorum potentiam tollere, quod certis experimentis et sufficienti ratione comprobatur.

Experimentum ex phalango. Ratio sumitur ex attactu sensus et spiritus, qui ita per illud venenum est in intemperiem adactus, ut ad eandem per talem harmoniam possit ad temperamentum revocari. Ex cura vero spiritus sequitur corporis cura non solum in hoc, verum etiam in aliis evidentissimis; multi enim morbi contrahuntur ex opinione seu phantasia, et per contrariam opinionem et phantasiam, seu illius opinionis abactionem, curantur.

XXXIX.

Furor etiam <et> mania, quae sunt in fanaticis et energumenis, et ratione et experimento comprobatur cantu et harmonia curari.

Experimentum est in Saule, quem cum arriperet spiritus malus, Davide citharam pulsante convalescebat.

Ratio est quia musica exhilarat et ♀^{is} vel ♂^{is} inducit impressionem seu spiritum exuscitat, qui sunt contrarii spiritibus, qui ex melancholia seu atra bile proficiscuntur vel in eodem humore consistunt et incubant, qui referuntur ad ♀^{is}.

Notandum non quamlibet harmoniam cuilibet esse aptam, sed certos cuique numeros esse definitos; potest enim esse quaedam quae omnes vinciat, quaedam quae plures, quaedam quae pauciores, neque semper sub specie sed sub aliqua alia incantato primo, manifesta vero alicui quod est in ipso; unde quidam per verba auribus insusurrata et non intellecta ab incantato spiritus eiiciunt et immittunt.

XL.

Non solum genera incantationis physicae et mathematicae, sed etiam logicae, potentiam habent ad vinciendum corpus, non solum spiritum.

Patet in incantatione, quae est per artem rhetoricam, quae vincit animos per se primo et immediate, vincit etiam corpora mediate et consequenter, sicut ex ira, indignatione, timore et aliis huiusmodi affectibus, qui sicut proprii viventibus propter animam ad perniciem usque corporis invalescunt. Vincula vero corporis intelligimus omne genus, quo ipsum certa affectuum passione ita obligatur, ut aliqua eius actio laedatur seu impediatur, hoc autem est devinctum esse; unde aegritudinem inducere est ligare, curationem vero, solvere; unde et in vulgus modus loquendi inolevit, ut dicantur curati soluti, liberati ab infirmitate, quod significat esse extra vincula quibus detinebantur.

XLI.

Visum etiam vincere seu per visum spiritum obligari, inculcari, alterari et consequenter corporis et compositi totius immutationes notabiles ingenerari non dubitamus, neque sapiens quispiam dubitare debet.

Probatur per exempla articulo 41° allata, et satis compertum est ut quaedam species visibiles horrorem, abominationem, odium, amorem, laetitiam, maestitiam et indignationem cum universi videntis alteratione commoveant. Alteratio igitur in corpus secundum qualitates activas et passivas a qualitatibus huiusmodi seu speciebus, quae neque in ordine activorum neque passivorum habentur a vulgo, exuscitur; timor autem infrigidat, ira calefacit, tristitia exiccat. Neque obest dicere eiusmodi alterationes esse per quandam non principalem, sed mediatam quandam actionem et per aliud quiddam [actionem] proficiscentem; quomodocunque enim fiat, ad genus activarum qualitatum non minus principale referendum est hoc quam illud. Ignis etiam et aqua etiam interdum per accidens et mediate frigefaciunt et calefaciunt, tamen sufficit ad praesens notare illud, quod huiusmodi qualitates habent vim ligandi, alterandi, infirmandi, immutandi usque ad corruptionem subiecti, quandoquidem ex specie visa plurimi repente mortui sunt.

XLII.

Non magis ea laedunt, quae magis sentiuntur vel sensum afficiunt; multa enim per sensus vel etiam iocunde et incaute ingeruntur in spiritum letalia et obligant spiritum seu universum animal, quorum alia secundum sensum affectio non praecedit; siquidem veluti per gustum multa sunt amara, acria, aspera, quae non laedunt, ea tamen vel sunt medicinae interdum et nutrimenta, pleraque etiam nullo sensu, ut aër pestifer et quaedam quae per os ingeruntur sunt venena sine sensu, usque ad hoc ut etiam sint dulcia et iocunda quae sunt venena, ita et multo magis per oculum.

Manifestum est ex articulo 42°.

XLIII.

Quae potentiam cognoscitivam afficiunt, omnia oportet per ostium phantasiae animo se insinuare; nihil enim est in ratione quod aliquo pacto non fuerit in sensu, et nihil a sensu pertransit in rationem quod per phantasiam non deferatur; unde illa sententia 'nihil est in intellectu quod prius non fuerit in sensu'.

Intelligitur originaliter, occasionaliter, fundamentaliter; omnino enim secundum rem seu realiter et specificè aliae sunt species in sensu, aliae in intellectu; sensibiles enim species, ut colores, sapes etc. et soni, neque per se neque per accidens sunt in intellectu seu ratione, et ideo per istas principaliter non vincitur ratio seu opinio. Unde bene dixit Epicurus et Heraclitus sensum non fallere neque falli; omnis enim falsitas est sub acta affirmationis et negationis, sensus vero non affirmat neque negat, sed solum species praesentatas excipit. Videre aurichalcum oculi est realiter, hoc est secundum speciem externam, item phantasiae secundum speciem internam (ut phantasia significat potentiam apprehensivam et retentivam specierum; alioqui enim proprie non ipsius est definire, sed imaginationis); iudicare vero aurichalcum esse aurum vel esse aurichalcum ipsum secundum actum affirmationis, hoc est opus intimioris potentiae. Satis autem naturaliter sensus est verus et phantasia est vera, si vere sentiat, si vere apprehendat et teneat speciem obiectam.

XLIV.

Neque sensus externus, neque sensus communis internus, neque phantasia fallitur aut fallit.

Sed ex horum perturbatione falli sequitur et fallere; per se enim immediate et proprie cogitativa fallitur, et secundum ipsam opinio vera dicitur et falsa.

XLV.

Nullus sensus particularis cognoscit se sentire, neque differentiam inter se et alium, neque alio pacto actum reflexum habet circa propriam actionem.

Visus enim ipsius est videre, non autem ipsius est cognoscere se vere videre vel false, sed hoc ad internam potentiam spectat, nempe sensum communem. A cogitatione igitur seu cogitativa potentia incipit actus reflexus cognoscitivae potentiae, et eius est vinciri primo et proprie in erroribus opinionis. Vincula et nodi sunt ex parte specierum sensibilibus et perturbatorum actuum, sensuum vel externorum vel etiam internorum; vinciri tamen phantasiam et sensum suo modo dictum est, ita ut facile pateat quae sit differentia inter illius generis vincula et istius.

Sub nomine phantasiae accipimus generaliter omnem potentiam sensitivam internam quae est ante cogitativam, nempe ut includit etiam sensum communem.

XLVI.

Analogia quaedam est a corpore ad spiritum, a spiritu ad sensum, a sensu externo ad internum, a sensu generaliter ad rationem, a ratione ad intellectum, ab intellectu ad mentem; unde ex obligatione et impedimento praeviarum facultatum sequuntur impedimenta et ligamenta consequentium.

Ratio quia ubi corpus fuerit crassum, hebetatum, tardum, spiritus etiam erit suppressus et hebes, sensus non poterit esse exquisitus, cum nae bene Aristoteles 'deficiente aliquo sensu necesse est aliquam scientiam deficere. Hinc ratio, quae speciebus sensibilibus informatur, propter nuntiorum ipsorum imbecillitatem, inconstantiam et lubricitatem consequenter fluctuat, et loco experientiae perturbatus quidam habitus secundum notabilem a pluribus conditionem consequitur (unde quidam stulti et amentes habentur), vel non usque adeo notabilem nisi a paucis; et ita interdum tales etiam sapientes existimantur.

XLVII.

Duplex a theologis genus stultitiae non irrationabiliter (ut quod etiam philosophi debent agnoscere) adducitur, si stultum definiamus eum qui non sapit ut communiter seu ut vulgus. Hoc autem contingit dupliciter: uno pacto infra vulgi opinionem et deterius sentiendo, nempe sensu et cogitatione magis tenebris immersa; et supra vulgi sensum, utpote opinione altius emergente et ingenio animique obtutu.

Ex primo genere sunt stulti simpliciter et respective, ex secundo respective tantum. Primum ex turbatione, mixtione et confusione; secundum ex digestionem et distinctionem et ordine principiorum cognitionis. Primum genus solet esse ex praedominio alicuius spiritus furiosi, irrationalis, praecipitis, inhaerentis materiae, unde spiritus proprius universi ipsius particulari seu microcosmo torpescit, seu ut ita dicam stupescit, peregrino quodam et adventitio grassante ubi magis ubi minus. Sicut ergo ex nimio vini potu accidit furor et multiplex inordinata incitatio, sicut ex contemperamento atque potu animus etiam subtiliatur atque reficitur, et ex inedia in maerorem, tristitiam, indignationem, iram, rerum negligentiam et similes alios Saturnios quos vocant affectus animal compellitur, ita et ex definitis quibusdam nutrimentis et medicaminibus varii affectus ex affectuum variis principiis, qui sunt varii spiritus, quorum tam multa sunt genera quam multae possunt esse complexionum species, tam multi modi quam multi in singulis speciebus possunt esse gradus. Unde illa principia alia sunt rationalia, alia irrationalia secundum actum, alia secundum naturam quae refertur ad unum, alia secundum naturam quae refertur ad alium planetarum, et ad haec definienda multum facit complexio subiecta, unde idem vinum alios omnino in stuporem adigit et mente captos efficit, alios subtilioris vegetiorisque ingenii et Ioviae cuiusdam affectionis, alios tristes, alios salaces, alios strenuos et mavortios, alios pios, sanctos, in caelum suspirantes et seculi huius statum deplorantes, quod totum fit externo quodam accedente spiritu. Itaque videmus materialibus quibusdam forinsecus affectum et ingenium immutari a spiritu inexistente, qui materiae videlicet iniectae adhaeret, cum qua digesta digeritur, egesta egeritur, cum qua haerente haeret, vinciente vincit et obligat. Iusta hoc genus vinculorum, quod videlicet est ex parte spirituum inhaerentium et inexistentium, sequitur mania, stultitia et alii affectus, quos temere omnes ad atram bilem referunt plurimi loquentes plus quam ratiocinantes medici. Omnes huiusmodi infra vulgi opinionem sapiunt et vere sunt stulti.

Est aliud genus eorum quorum spiritus seu animus, licet tangatur corporeis quibusdam affectionibus, non tamen penetratur, vincitur, sed per vegetam mentis virtutem altius sapit, ut non solum sit immunis a turbationibus stultorum, sed etiam a vulgi trepidatione, non credens quae illud credit, non timens quae illud formidat, contemnens ea in quae illud inhiat. Vulgus ergo in medio consistens et suo modo sapientiae limites et ordines constituens, omnes aequae extra suas metas et lineas constitutos extra sensum et intellectum et mentem et aequae stultum appellat. Talis habitus est Zoroaster, Socrates, Democritus et alii permulti, qui tandem Deorum ipsorum et naturae vocum testimonio sapientes sunt comprobati. Horum habitus et conditio a conditione cogitativae consequitur, quae non a turbulento spiritu insistente, sed a divino aliquo irradiante, illuminante et assistente regebatur.

XLVIII.

Hoc secundo modo dispositi etiamsi habeant ordine naturae cogitationis opus consequens post opus phantasiae, siquidem species cogitabiles a speciebus phantasiatis sunt abstractae (sicut timoris species et amoris ex speciebus phantasticis, inordinatis, monstruosis et alienis a sympathia cum hac potentia; sicut species serpentis et leonis non bene afficit, sive sensu externo concepta sive phantasiae opere fabricata, praesentem sensum, quae cogitativa appellatur in homine et aestimativa in brutis), tamen plus agunt in species phantasiabiles, quam a speciebus phantasiabilibus patiantur. Anima enim vegetior et minus in corpore consopita habet potentem iudicii et operationis reflexionem super illas, distinguens vera ab apparentibus et sensum ancipitem a definito et certo, ut ipso etiam sensu iudice et teste concludat contra multitudinis opinionem non omnia moveri quae videntur, neque bona, neque iusta, neque vera. [XLVIII.] Item non solum distinguit quae ex ordinata phantasia ab his quae ab inordinata proficiscuntur, sed etiam illam ordinat, corrigit, disponit, et eius species ad libitum componit.

Patet ex 48° articulo. Unde dominantur poetae, et sunt item pictores, apologi etc.

XLIX.

Quod attinet ad energumenos seu daemoniacos, qui supra proprium ingenium variis loquuntur linguis et habitum variarum scientiarum demonstrant, errant medici crassa quadam pertinacia negantes esse daemones et peregrinos intellectus; errant etiam sacristae quidam negantes ex humorum qualitatibus hoc provenire; totum vero ad daemonis opus referentes. Ratio vero omnis undique comprobatur hunc effectum ex novo quodam animali ingenito et concepto proveniri, cuius quidem corpus sit ex materia medicorum et anima ex spiritu sacristarum, quamvis alia conditio sit illius animalis et istius, cuius proprium sit corpus.

Patet ex his quae dicuntur 49°, quibus adde nos non appellare animal ingenitum et speciem ingenitam animalis [nisi] secundum veram speciem et consuetam significationem animalis, (sed) secundum quandam proportionalem seu analogicam, sicut etiam animalia appellantur astra et sphaerae et mundus ipse aliquando per animam adsistentem, aliquando per animam moventem tantum, non autem per animam inexistentem et actuantem et animantem, sicut in plantis et his quae vulgo animalia appellantur.

L.

A cogitativa, nempe sensu consequente phantasiam, est principium omnium affectuum, cognitionis et voluntatis, speculative vel moraliter, virtuosorum vel reproborum.

Sicut enim ex regula praecedentium sensuum sequitur regulatio cogitativae, ita et ex regula cogitativae sequitur dispositio intellectus et voluntatis.

LI.

Duplex est fides, sicut et duplex est cognitio et affectus, sensitiva videlicet et rationalis: prima est fundata in praevis facultatibus ante cogitativam, et quiescit in illa; secunda in subsequentibus potentiis et virtutibus, et exordium sumit ab ipsa; et istae duae fides mutuo regulantur et regulant.

Ratio est, quia sensitiva est ex parte materiae potius melior ac deterior, rationalis vero ex parte formae potius atque magis; et perfectionis sensuum principium per se est corpus seu organum bene dispositum, perfectionis vero rationis principium est spiritus bene harmonicus et temperatus, et anima bene libera et repurgata. Sicut ergo affectiones, quae sunt in corpore, consequuntur eas, quae sunt in anima (haec enim hilaris et libera et sibi consonans corpus bene dispositum conservat, ut dixit Zoroaster 'si anima consueveris divinis incumbere obiectis, et corpus ipsum a corruptione liberabis'), ita etiam e contra corpore bene firmo, temperato sequitur sensus regulatior, animus pacacior, tranquillior et vegetior.

LII.

Eorum quae alterant cogitativam seu movent, alia sunt principia pure physica, alia vero sunt positiva; et secunda non sunt minoris efficaciae, quam prima.

Species enim innovantur in anima seu noviter accedunt, quaedam ab extrinsecus obiectis regulariter, quaedam ex perturbatione phantasiae sine arte; et harum praecipua semina cogitationum seu affectuum formaliter, materialiter vero certa nutrimentorum genera. Unde facile est concludere rationem universalem seu artem certorum insomniorum concitandorum et quodammodo artificialiter ad libitum disponendae cogitativae, et tandem animae medicandae vel maleficiandae (animam inquam ipsum totum propter animam seu propter animae facultates). Practicant hanc rationem contemplatores et apocalyptici quidam et artis notoriae et propheticae professores et theurgi, qui certa victus ratione et certis meditationibus praevis animum ad certum pietatis genus disponunt, promovent et habituant, ut tandem stultissimi putant se quorundam tragicorum numinum perfrui colloquio, et mira quaedam vident et referunt, talia tamen qualia ad stultitiam et pessimum maniae genus sint referenda. Et novimus iugi experientia definitis cibus et cogitationibus et affectibus definita insomniorum genera conciliari, haec quidem ad Venerem, haec ad tragicos et lugubres, haec ad pulchrorum spectaculorum intuitum, nempe camporum, hortorum, viridariorum, haec ad maria, flumina, haec ad ignes, stellas, soles, haec ad ventos, tempestates, haec ad iurgia, rixas, iras, haec ad pavores, carceres, captivitates, horrores et phantasmata terribilia, quibus multum confert quod quidam addere consueverunt, certis succis inungendo venas iugulares. Item quidam lapides per effluxum atomorum, ut onyx, sub cervicali appensi dorso designata somniorum genera conciliant; sicut de onyce scribit Albertus, et ego sum expertus et alios experiri feci, non eo quem mentiuntur gemmarii, sed illo qui est omnino lapis niger cum venis albis, cuius maxima copia ad litora maris Tyrrheni et Ligustici. Ex quibus est manifestum quomodo ratio victus et materialia huiusmodi principia, vel per se vel mediante cogitatione praevia, certas dispositiones et habitus in animum intrudere valeant. Assuescit ergo animus aegrotare, bene valere, hoc est sapere vel desipere, iuxta cogitationum species quibus educatur, ad quod conferunt materialiter nutrimenta, balnea, unctiones, efficienter ea quae per sensus externos capiuntur. Si quis audire consuescat voces pecorum, rusticorum proposita, ignobilium, ignorantum et semiferorum, item videre tales vultus, tales species miserabiles, tragicos, deploratos, infortunatos, item iracundos, superbos, furiosos, ita anima omnino inficitur. Ita providendum maxime atque cavendum est ubi et cum quibus quispiam educetur, erudiatur, sub qua paedagogia, qua religione, quo cultu, quibus libris seu authoribus assuescat; quae omnia non per accidens, sed vere per se, si mala pessime aut deterius, si bona optime aut melius ingenium ingenerabunt, et cum hoc genium atque fortunam.

LIII.

Generalis cogitativae effectus et actus, in quo omnes mores et omne cognitionis genus est fundatum, est fides, quae requiritur active in operante, et passive in operato seu subiecto operationis; sed praesertim passiva ista requiritur in omni subiecto, sine qua neque naturalis neque rationalis neque divinus operator aliquid producit aut per ordinarium producere potest.

Ratio est in 53°. Ideo fides est vinculum magnum et vinculum vinculorum, quam sequuntur, veluti filiae, spes, amor, religio, pietas, timor, patientia, gaudium, ... indignatio, odium, ira, contemptus, et tandem omnis iustitia et iniustitia, omnis scientia et ignorantia pravae dispositionis.

LIV.

Vincula non attingunt rationem, intellectum et mentem, nisi quae iocunda sunt, bona et vera, nempe perfectiva.

Omnis enim falsitas, ignorantia, improbitas et iniustitia sunt extra rationem, intellectum et mentem, non in ratione, intellectu et mente.

LV.

Omnis ergo alteratio et immutatio compositi secundum animam principaliter vel secundum corpus, nempe prout dispositiones vel a corpore fluant in animam vel ab anima in corpus, si fuerint depravatae, habent causam ante cogitativam et consistentiam in cogitativa, quae contaminat corpus seu immutat alterando principia materialia, vicissimque principiis materialibus alteratis contaminatur et immutatur a corpore, sicut et, quemadmodum dictum est, corpore bene habente et sensibus canonice ordinatis et dispositis et obiectis non praevaricantibus ipsa non aegrotabit.

LVI.

Omnes affectus et vincula voluntatis reducuntur ad duo et referunt ipsa, nempe ad irascibilem et concupiscibilem, seu odium et amorem; odium tandem ad amorem reducitur; itaque vinculum unum voluntatis est amor.

Probatur, quia omnes alios affectus, quos quispiam possit adducere et effingere, nihil aliud sunt formaliter, fundamentaliter et originaliter praeterquam amor; invidia enim amor quidam sui est, quo meliorem vel parem non patitur; similiter aemulatio. Indignatio est amor virtutis, quo aegre fert quispiam indignos bene habere, dignos vero minime; verecundia, timor nihil aliud sunt praeterquam amor honestatis et eius propter quod timetur. Similiter de aliis omnibus affectibus. Odium tandem unius nihil aliud est praeterquam amor contrarii vel oppositi. Ira igitur etiam tandem amor quidam est. Satis ergo fecerit qui eam nactus fuerit philosophiam seu magiam, quae vinculum summum, praecipuum et generalissimum amoris sciat contrectare, unde fortasse amor a Platoniceis daemon magnus est appellatus.

De Magia Mathematica, by Giordano Bruno

This digital edition Copyright © 1999 by Joseph H. Peterson. All rights reserved.

I fogli 70-86^v del codice de Mosca (= M) contengono un altro trattato magico anepigrafo, che per la massima parte resulta di excerpta dal Tritemio, da Agrippa e dal Pseudo-Alberto Magno. Noi ben volentieri avremmo del tutto trascurata questa parte così compilata, limitandoci a riprodurre solo i primi paragrafi e quanto altro avesse carattere personale del Bruno (e che sia proprio lui il compilatore, lo dimostra anche la citazione del 'De umbris idearum' a p. 502, 23 sq. e il riscontro di p. 495, 17 sqq. con 'De Magia' p. 453, 14 sqq.); ma abbiamo dovuto dare ampia notizia anche del resto, per mettere il lettore in grado di giudicare delle relazioni che ha l'intero trattato con quel capitolo del 'De Mafia' che vi si riferisce (cf. sopra a p. 435, 23. 438, 6 sq.; e Lutoslawski l. c. p. 537 e 550). Ne diamo perciò una specie di collazione con le opere dalle quali il Bruno attinge; ma siccome egli non riproduce letteralmente, ed estrae solo quanto gli sembra di fondamentale importanza (v. 506, 17 sqq.), la nostra collazione vale solo a dare una idea generale del modo come la materia è trattata e distribuita. In genere possiamo dire che sono tralasciate le considerazioni più o meno ampie, che occorrono nelle fonti, e ne sono estratti semplicemente nomi, qualità e attribuzioni degli spiriti e sim. -- Della Steganographia del Tritemio adoperiamo l'edizione del 1606 (Francofurti, Ex officina typographica Mathiae Beckeri, Sumptibus Ioannis Berneri); della Occulta Philosophia di Agrippa quella del 1567 (Parisiis ex officina Iacobi Dupuys), dove sono anche gli Elementa magica di Pietro di Abano; dello Pseudo-Alberto Magno finalmente non abbiamo potuto vedere se non il volume Albertus Magnus De Secretis Mulierum Item de Virtutibus Herbarum Lapidam et Animalium. Amstelodami. Apud Ioannem Ianssonium. A° 1662, volume che contiene anche il De Secretis Naturae M. Scoti e due altri trattatelli, l'uno anepigrafo ed anonimo sulle ore (p. 165-170), ed un altro intitolato Eiusdem Alberti Magni De Mirabilibus mundi (p. 170-218), che sono entrambi adoperati dal Bruno e noi citiamo con la semplice indicazione della pagina.

(DE MAGIA MATHEMATICA)

Iordani Bruni Nolani

I. Influit Deus in angelos, angeli in corpora caelestia, caelestia in elementa, elementa in mixta, mixta in sensus, sensus in animum, animus in animal. Ascendit animal per animum ad sensus, per sensus in mixta, per mixta in elementa, per elementa in caelos, per hos in daemones seu angelos, per istos in Deum seu in divinas operationes.

II. Sic Dei vel a Deo est descensus per mundum ad animal, animalis vero est ascensus per mundum ad Deum; Deus est in cacumine scalae, cabalisticus Iacob in radice et fundamento illius; gradus mediarum creaturarum iuxta suos numeros altitudinem scalae constituunt, per quos virtutes operatrices superiores descendunt ad inferiora et infernae conscendunt ad superna; quia ascensus et descensus per exitum et ingressum duarum portarum Cancri et Capricorni (quarum altera Deorum dicitur, altera hominum) designati sunt ab antiquis profundae philosophiae authoribus.

III. Sapiencia triceps, a qua triplici capite triplicem latratum emittens Cerberus, ad Hecates tricipitis custodiam designatus, repellit obscuros et ignorantiae caecitatis affectos, et tantummodo admittit in Elysios campos, qui per metaphysicam a cacumine scalae descendentes per mathematicorum gradus ad physicum fundamentum * * * .

IV. Physicum fundamentum sunt duo activa elementa, terra et ignis, quae altrinsecus posita gradus scalae naturae ad naturalium constitutionem formant et complexione sua stabiliunt; quorum quidem virtutes, potentiae, operationes et actus per elementa physica suo sunt nobis explicata loco.

V. In praesentiarum ergo proponuntur in hac disciplina pro primae partis complemento, quae supranaturali innititur potentiae, contemplatio, fides, cultus, ritus et puritas ad pura; pro secundae partis complemento tempus et tempora, ordo, assequutio concordiae ad concordiam, litis ad litem, impedimentorum evasio, tempestiva exequutio; pro tertiae partis complemento applicatio activorum passivis, affabre apparitorum affabre apparitis: quorum omnium rationem in subsequentibus per trium tractatum discursus elucidabimus. Quorum primus est de cultu vel ad cultum; secundus est de observantia et temporum dispensatione, item figurarum, numerorum, sigillorum, characterum et annulorum ratione; tertius de rerum qualitate, ratione, applicatione; proprietate et ordine.

VI. Triplici ergo existente huius facultatis nervo, qui cum sit completus et perfectus, potentissimus est ad omnia ligamenta et ad omnem solutionem confirmandam efficacissimus, pro quo dixisse intelligitur sapientissimus inter Hebraeos Cabalista 'funiculus triplex difficile rumpitur'. Primum ergo funiculum invocationem appellamus et animi ad supernas virtutes directionem; ex nobis enim impotentes, sicut artifices, non nisi mutuata materia a rebus naturalibus, et impetrata efficacia et virtute a rebus supernaturalibus, quippiam efficere poterimus unquam. Primum ergo fundamentum universae unionis, qua virtutibus superioribus aut copulamur aut ipsas nobis copulamur, est fides ac credulitas, quam non modo in nobis operantibus vigere oportet, sed etiam in recipientibus; adeoque eiusmodi conditio est necessaria, ut sine ipsa nihil unquam valeat effectuari a quacunque virtute, nisi ea per violentiam sit efficax aut per impeditam naturam.

VII. Signum eius quod dicitur est, quod animi dominantur corporibus, iique sunt fenestrae quibus in animalia se ingerunt plurima accidentia. Patet enim mutatis animis corpora alterari in effectum irae, indignationis, invidiae, melancholiae et similium; unde idem Cabalista 'spiritus' inquit 'tristis exiccat ossa' etc. Idem iudicium est in aliis corporibus affectibus ex animo, qui si existat, obicem ponit et ianuam occludit, ne vel proficuae vel noxae irrepant, tum in ipsum tum in ipsius corpus, impressiones. Signum quoque est in efficacissimo Dei filio, de quo dicitur quod 'propter incredulitatem' eorum in patria nulla poterat efficere miracula, nec non saepissime videmus secundum fidem eorum in aliquos operando sanitati restituisse. Neque enim credibile est nec credendum proponitur, quod omnes praeter credentes etiam sanitati restituerit.

VIII. Fides igitur et credulitas in operante vigeat oportet cum spe consequendae rei negotiique patrandi, eandemque curare debet ut excitet in eo, in quem bona conferre statuit; timorem, vel v.... vel terrorem vel arte procuret in eum, in quem mala et adversa intorquere decreverit. Tales enim affectus animum afficiendo quasi dispositam materiam forma quam introducere percupit, exponunt.

De triplici fide.

IX. Est autem triplex, ad superna videlicet, a quibus sperandus est influxus et favor, et in quorum nomine et autoritate fiant universa; ad media, utpote ad ministeriales potestates, quae in omnibus, si rite inspiciantur et tractentur, supernis obtemperant virtutibus; ad inferna, utpote ad operabilia, de quibus non est desperandum.

X. Modus atque forma tractandi cum omnibus potestatibus non est arduus, sed licet apud plurimos huius artis indagatores intueri, ut, apud Albertum qui generales hac de re canones instituit atque breves. Verum tamen quod arduum dicimus esse, est nominum advocandorum noticiam habere pro diversis negotiis atque diversis effectibus diversorum; quae quidem nomina multae industriae viro et in hac arte felicissimo, Trithemio abbati, fuere revelata, et nos redegimus in hoc compendium ea quae in sua Steganographia dispersa proposuit ille.

XI. Iuxta igitur quatuor mundi cardines quatuor ille cognovit principes, quorum ad Septentrionem dominatur Armadiel etc. (Steganograph., p. 46). Sequitur ad Austrum habitans magnus princeps Caspiel etc. (p. 55). Sequitur ad Orientem Carnaziel etc. (p. 52). -- Ad Occidentem est Anchiadiel, qui etc. (p. 58). De aliis principibus locorum. Est et ad Septentrionem magnus princeps Demoriel etc. (p. 60 sq.) De ducibus determinatum locum non habentibus. Praeter hos principes et duces, qui certis locis orbis visibiliter deputantur, sunt quidam instabiles, quos Magi dicunt sicut muscas in aëre volare, sine ordine, habitatione et restrictione, et ideo ubicunque advocari possunt, quorum primus est Garadiel etc. Secundus post Garadiem est Buriel etc. (p. 63-68) -- Tertius princeps vocatur Hydriel etc. Quartus est princeps qui vocatur Syrrhichiel etc. Quintus princeps est Evomiel seu Evoviel etc. Sextus princeps Icosiel etc. (p. 69-77) -- De verbo naturae, de ceremoniis seu tempore agentis, characteribus et notis divinis. Decernit hic homo triginta spiritus, quorum singuli sunt in officio praesidentes (p. 89; segue la lista dei nomi degli spiriti coi rispettivi segni, diversi questi nella stampa) etc.

XII. De anima mundi et mundanorum iuxta priscorum magiam. Caelum et mundum esse animatum, insuper et caelestia quae videntur corpora, nobilissimis poëtis et sapientissimis philosophis est concessum, et quod unicus spiritus universalis est universae machinae insitus, una mens infusa per ipsius artus universam molem exagitat, ut dicit Pythagoras. Si quippe haec inferiora mixta et partialia animam habent atque vitam, cur non ipsum universum, a quo ista tanquam f.... quoddam producuntur, corpus nobilius et magis principale, quam sit planta, arbor? Cur enim terram et aquam negemus vivere, quae ex se innumerabiles plantas et animantes generant, vivificant, nutriunt et augent? Quomodo a non viventibus vita? Quomodo producet animam viventem non vivens? Et dicit Theophrastus non censendum esse philosophum, qui dubitet caelestia corpora vivere et animata esse, animata inquam anima rationali, ut ad perpetuum ordinem inter se conspirent certisque rationibus opera sua producant. Sit ergo in terra ratio terrenorum, in luna lunarium, in sole solarium, et hanc animam non abiecti corporis animae similem, sed intelligentem esse et cum corpore suo unum ex Diis efficere, quae multo meliores habeat actuum suorum rationes, quam nos nostrorum corporum; et convenit ut perfectius corpus perfectiori anima informetur. Hinc motus ille perfectissimus, regulatissimus, ordinatissimus, non vagus ac vicissim pervagans, electissimam tenens viam ad optimum finem, ubi mens perfecta non variat consilium et cum corporibus aliis vel<ut> unum monochordum constituit et universalem harmoniam per Apollinis lyram decantatam.

Nomina vero quae fingunt caelestium animarum, quarum aliae sunt cognoscentes, aliae vivificantes, sunt huiusmodi iuxta Orphicam et priscorum theologiam; unde in nona sphaera virtus cognoscitiva est Bacchus Cribronius, vivificationis Musa Calliopes, in coelo stellato sunt Picionius et Urania, in caelo Saturni Amphietes etc. (p. 297).

XIII. De nominibus animarum signorum. Signa duodecim per ordinem habent haec animarum nomina, ut apud Manilium constat; est enim in corde Arietis Pallas particularis etc. (p. 297 sq.) Proinde sunt nomina septem mundi gubernatorum satis vulgata a Saturno usque ad Lunam. Sunt proinde alia istorum nomina a Magis et Cabalistis assignata, ut primo planetae presides dicatur Zapkiel etc. Iuxta alios Saturno praest Oriphiel, Iovi Zachariel, Marti Zamael, Soli Michiel, Veneri Anael etc., quorum vicissitudines notavit Trithemius abbas in suo tractatu et considerando tempus dominii ipsorum et planetarum et spirituum. In temporibus aliis quibus dominabantur conditiones temporum futurorum aliquis quasi certa habere poterit (p. 377). Nomina praesidentium signis 12. Praesides signorum 12 per ordinem sunt: Malchidael etc. (in marg. di mano rec. è citato Cornel. Agr., L. III, c. xxiv, cioè p. 378 sq.). Nomina praesidentium 28 mansionibus lunae per ordinem. Geniel, Enediel etc. Nomina quatuor praesidentium quatuor ventis et quatuor mundi partibus. Sunt Michael super ventum orientalem etc. Nomina praesidentium quatuor elementis bonorum. Assignantur aëri Cherub etc. Nomina praesidum malorum principum. Principes vero potentissimi malorum spirituum in quatuor mundi partibus sunt: Uricus rex Orientis etc.

XIV. Nomina sex principum maleficorum. Vetusti Graecorum Theologi nominant Acteum etc. (p. 379) -- Nomina angelorum dierum et primo die Solis. Angeli diei Solis primi sunt tres, Michael, Dardiel, Huratapel (Petri De Abano, Elementa magica, p. 569). Nomina angelorum diei Lunae. Tres angeli primi Gabriel, Michael, Samael etc. (p. 571). Nomina angelorum die Martis. Tres sunt primi Samael etc. (p. 573). Nomina angelorum ad diem Mercurii. Tres primi sunt Raphael etc. (p. 575) -- Nomina angelorum diei Iovis. Primi tres sunt Sachiel etc. (p. 578). Nomina angelorum diei Veneris. Primi tres sunt Anael etc. (ib. 579). Nomina angelorum diei Saturni. Primi tres sunt Cassiel etc. (p. 581). Nomina angelorum malorum principum dierum. Angelus malus princeps diei Solis est Machen (p. 569), diei Lunae Shamain etc. (p. 571). Nomina angelorum veris. Sunt Caracassa, Core etc. Nomina angelorum aestatis. Sunt Gargatel etc. Nomina angelorum autumnii. Sunt Tarquam, Gualbarel etc. Nomina angelorum hiemis. Sunt Amabael etc. (p. 588 sq.). Nomina angelorum horarum diei. Incipiendo a die dominico angelus primae horae est Michael (p. 583 sq.). -- Nomina elementorum, quae etiam angeli seu Dii appellantur. Elementa diversis anni temporibus diversa sortiuntur nomina. Hinc terra in vere appellatur Amadai, in aestate Festatui etc. (p. 558 sq.). Nomina angelorum qui dicuntur horae dierum respondentibus suis horarum angelis. Prima hora dicitur Yayn (p. 557 sq.). De positivis quibusdam nominibus. Praeter data nomina sunt quaedam, quae ex rebus omnibus desumuntur, quibus proprium angelum ipsis praefectum nominamus; unde stellarum animas non temere appellabimus Sabatiel, Veneriel etc. (Agrippa, p. 386).

XIV. De aliis nominibus daemonum, quae ad malos homines videntur pertinere. Ita Aremnia est daemon cultus Damascenis (Remnia simulacrum idoli Damasceni dice Agrippa, p. 387; alla qual pagina rimanda il codice stesso in una nota marginale di altra mano) etc. Scimus etiam Membroth, Chodorlaomor, Balah, Amalech fuisse reges, qui modo suo cacodaemones appellantur.

XV. De divinis nominibus. Sunt nomina divina eminentissimae virtutis, quae in proposito oportet non ignorare; horum quaedam pertinent ad hierarchias ternas, quarum singulae tribus distribuuntur ordinibus, qui Curetes appellantur etc. (p. 330-31). Primum horum nominum est Eheie etc. Secundum nomen est Iod etc. Primo nomini respondet numeratio Ceter; secundo numeratio Hochma idest sapientia etc. -- Primum influit in Seraphim quos Hebraei vocant Haiod Hecatosch etc.

XVI. De characteribus et sigillis. Angelorum nominibus characteres et sigillos addere solent, quae sunt litterae quaedam et scripturae ignoratae, sacrae Diis, quas hieroglyphicas appellant etc. (p. 388). Quod quidem characterum genus pendebat ab arbitrio et illius instituentis autoritate, qui talium acceperat consecrandorum potestatem (p. 389).

XVII. De modo alliciendi tam bonos quam malos angelos. Boni daemones diversimode alliciuntur, nullis tamen vinculis, sed sacris obtestationibus, ut apud Apuleium, per caelestia sidera etc. (p. 396) -- XVIII. De vinculis. Vincula quibus alligantur spiritus et obtestantur vel exterminantur sunt triplicia etc. (p. 399) --.

XIX. De dispositione oracula suscipere volentium. Qui ad oracula petenda proficiscitur etc. (p. 463).

XX. Huc accedunt virtutes abstinentiae, castitatis etc. (p. 467).

XXI. De differentiis cultuum et orationum. In sacrificiis qui volebant se ipsos expiare, ut dictum est, ut pro exigentia se ipsos puros offerrent etc. (p. 482) --

XXII. De consecrationibus. Accedunt consecrationes quaedam, quae ex duobus principiis efficaciam sortiuntur, virtute videlicet personae consecrantis etc. (p. 484).

XXIII. Quaedam de Tempore. Pro quibusdam non vulgaribus actionibus temporum non est praetermittenda ratio; est enim religio etc. (p. 491).

XXIV. De reliquis religiosis observationibus. Requiritur... in omnibus ... ad Deum etc. (p. 492) -- Ad haec conferunt aptatio locis, temporis etc. (p. 494).

SECVNDVS TRACTATVS

XXV. Praeter ea quae dicta sunt, animadvertendum est omnia numero quodam atque mensura temporum, locorum et rerum tractandarum esse examinanda. Tempus enim praeest temporalibus rebus et continet eas, quemadmodum a superioribus corporibus inferiora continentur; qua de re tempus esse in primo caelo existimaverunt antiqui. Ideo animadvertendum generaliter, quod effectus ioviales sub Iove, saturnales sub Saturno, martiales sub Marte, iisque bene dispositis et in caelo faeliciter situatis sunt intentandi, sine quorum observantia nulli alii apparatus, nullae voces, nulli cultus quippiam valere possunt; perinde enim fiet ac si qui tempore non suo segetem spargant, non animadvertentes diversis seminibus diversa tempora deberi, quod sicut est in uno, ita est in omnibus. Quid enim? Nonne etiam religiones quasdam videmus cultus es atque diversos certis atque diversis temporibus destinare? Temporum enim multiplex est diversitas. Quisque enim planetarum habet secula sua, annos suos, aetates suas, lunationes et dies et horas; ita ut pro rebus perpetuis et multum duraturis dominia magnarum revolutionum, pro non tam diuturnis dominia minorum, pro minus illustribus dominia revolutionum dierum, pro vulgaribus autem et ad particulares personas attinentibus horarum dominia sunt advertenda, quae ter in die naturali contingere possunt. De his vero nobis in praesentiarum est habenda ratio, quoniam effectus, qui ad mutationes legum, principatuum et eorum quae a generalibus causis eveniunt, temere et incassum a nobis intentarentur.

De dominio horarum.

Animadvertendum est igitur quamlibet diem quantumcunque prolixam vel brevem, sicut et quamlibet noctem quantumcunque prolixam et brevem, in 12 aequales dividi partes, quae dicuntur 12 horae, quae ideo inaequales horae appellantur, quia secundum augmentum et decrementum dierum atque noctium maiores redduntur atque minores, et non sunt veluti horologiorum horae aequales, quae semel in anno vixque semel sunt 12. Sed omissis aequalibus horis, inaequales sunt nobis animadvertendae, quarum singulae continent 15 gradus signorum, ita ut sex signa, quae in quavis die contingunt percurrere horizontem, 12 planetales horas contineant, quarum prima sumitur ab oriente sole usque ad peractam duodecimam illius diei partem, quae ad eum planetam pertinet, qui talem diem denominat, cui succedit alter planeta secundum ordinem orbium; Veneri enim succedit Mercurius, Mercurio Luna, Lunae Saturnus, Saturno Iovis, Iovi Mars, Marti Sol, Soli Venus etc.

Caelestium observantia.

Etiamsi quandoque virtus naturalis proportionem physicam composita agat, opportuna tamen caelestium observatione multo magis et maiora praestat, tanquam etc. (Agrippa p. 250) --. In quibus 28 mansionibus latent multa secreta sapientiae antiquorum ad operanda mirabilia sub orbe lunae, quorum singulis sua attribuebant simulacra et imagines et signacula et praesidentes * * *; quorum unus modus est apud Teucrum Babylonicum, et nos attulimus eos fidelissime ad memoriae praxim applicando ex libro De umbris idearum.

De virtutibus et operabilibus in dictis 28 mansionibus.

Prima mansio eligitur ad itinera et discordiam etc. (v. le pagine 256-260 di Agrippa, capitolo che il Bruno ha sdoppiato staccando dalle descrizioni astronomiche delle mansioni gli effetti loro sulle umane vicende) --

TERTIVS TRACTATVS

XXVI. In applicatione activorum et passivorum considerandae sunt primo elementorum proprietates et naturae, considerando inquam ut pura et ut composita, ut corruptibilia magis atque minus, ut quae in omnibus omnia faciunt, ut quae per artem purificantur et ad simplicitatem reducuntur, ut quae in diversas species conficiendas componuntur, ut quae pura optime possunt impura utcunque composita per innumeros gradus, innumerabilia praestant, certis quippe ordinibus certae producuntur species, per ipsa omnes ligationes, solutiones, transmutationes, praedictiones, conciliationes bonorum et exterminia malorum. Eorum cognitio et sagacitas circa eadem [est] fundamentum est universae magiae.

De ignis potentia, nec non terrae, aquae et aëris.

Ignis activissimus omnium omnia penetrat etc. (Agrippa, p. 7). II Compositorum genera considerata sunt quomodo in quatuor sint distributa supposita etc. (p. 16) -- III Considerandum ordine quodam elementa ista ad caelos referri, sicut etc. (p. 18). IV Considerandae sunt virtutes, quae ab elementis proximis dependent etc. (p. 19). V Considerandae sunt pro viribus virtutes illae, quae ad aliquod elementorum vix referri possunt, ut pellere venenum, attrahere ferrum, evacuare cholera etc.; et virtutes illas quae cum minima materia plurimum possunt, quae ideo se protestantur etc. (p. 21). Nec est propositi nostri considerare unde et quomodo illae virtutes occultae infundantur; neque enim probamus quae fabulantur multi de stellarum radiis, de ideis et de rationibus animae mundi obloquuntur; sufficit scire quomodo diversae species et diversa eiusdem speciei individua diversis apparatus et dispositionibus diversos recipiant influxus. VI Considerandum est quemadmodum rerum virtutes investigari et experiiri solent atque possunt etc. VII Considerandum est de lite et amicitia rerum etc. (p. 33) -- Item quaedam insunt toti substantiae, quaedam certis subiectisque particulis et membris etc. (p. 39) VIII Considerandum est in rebus inferioribus, quibus superioribus subsint et exponantur; diversae enim diversis subsunt, ut diversa corporum membra diversa exercitia, diversi mores stellas atque signa respiciant diversa. Et inductione a peritis astronomis est suscipiendum, qui usus, quae artes, quae particulae, qui spiritus, qui sapes, qui lapides, quae plantae, quae animalia quibus planetis atque signis pertineant. Similiter de generationibus atque provinciis, regnis atque populis. IX Consideranda signacula et characteres rerum naturalium; fertur etc. (p. 59). X Considerandum de rebus naturalibus, quibus caelestium corporum et omnino superiorum omnium virtutes et influxus valentius allicere atque attrahere etc. (p. 62) -- Non enim sufficit res in facultate atque potentia habere virtutes aliquas, sed requiritur ut illae delitescant per aliquod corpus et accidens, sicut contusione in grano sinapis excitatur acuitas latens etc. XI Consideranda utilitas et opportunitas, quae est in commixtionibus rerum naturalium etc. (p. 63). XII Considerandum est omnia sublunaria caelesti quodam modo esse supra lunam etc. (p. 66-69) -- XIII Respiciendum est ad ea, quae facere dicuntur ad ligandum in amorem, odium etc. (p. 70) -- De veneficiis multa videmus prodire atque miranda, similiter de suffitibus seu suffumigationibus etc. (p. 76). XIV Advertendum est etiam pro generali suffituum consideratione quod quaedam referuntur ad Solem et Solaria etc. (p. 79) --

XXVII. Aliud genus suffituum. Referuntur praeterea ad Saturnum radices omnes odoriferae, ut costi et herbae thuris etc. De fumigiis 12 signorum. Habent 12 signa suos suffitus proprios, ut Aries myrrham etc. Septem electi suffitus atque potentissimi pro septem planetis. Recipit Hermes suffitum potentissimum etc. (p. 80) XV Collyriorum et unctionum et philtorum (p. 80 sq.) -- De alligationibus et suspensionibus. XVI Magis non contemnuntur alligationes et collo suspensiones etc. (p. 83). XVII Ad colores, in quibus etiam est sua observantia atque virtus etc. (p. 85). XVIII Universaliter respiciendum est ad lumen et tenebras etc. (p. 87) --

XVIII. De Annulis. XIX Annulorum quasdam leges non contemnit magica superstitio etc. (p. 84).

XXIX. XX Observandum fascinationis artificium etc. (p. 90).

Alberti generalis doctrina.

Omissis ipsis quae faciunt ad praxis aenigmata, colligenda sunt ex principe Alberto quae praecipue ac magis in hac scientia probantur, cuiusmodi sunt plura; quorum primum quod haec scientia est bona, autoritate philosophi volentis omnem scientiam esse de genere bonorum; quod si quae propter eam sunt iustae querelae, ipsae non a scientia proficiscuntur etc. (cf. Albert. p. 127 sq.) II Circa modum operandi, ut ipse dicit, bonus effectus bonum respiciat, malus vero malum planetam, hoc est horas atque dies eorum (p. 136). III De septem electis herbis septem planetarum influentiam habentibus etc. Quarum prima est Saturni, qui Asphodelus dicitur (p. 136). IV De lapidum virtutibus. Quorum primus est magnes etc. (p. 141) -- V De animalium virtutibus, quarum quasdam quasi per augmentum adducit etc. (p. 164) VI De temporibus et planetarum et astrorum dominio, de quibus supra. VII De effectibus ad quosque planetarum pertinentibus. Dicit enim esse sub Saturno vitam etc. (p. 167). VIII Quod ea quae videntur in characteribus, incantationibus, veneficiis et sermonibus et multa valde vilia, quae penitus videntur impossibilia nec sufficientem habent causam, non propterea contemnentur (p. 170). IX Quod in animis hominum est virtus immutandi res etc. (p. 171) -- Ex quibus est manifestum, quod non omnes qui huius artis theoriam callent atque rationem habent, usum commode habere possint, qualis esse apud idiotas et stultos consuevit, qui suae virtutis et efficaciae minorem aut nullam habent rationem. X Quod observandae sunt horae etc. (p. 13 sq.) XI Quod artificium characterum est habens efficaciam a mente quae grandi desiderio affectat etc. (p. 174). XII Quod sciendum est de rebus, quod per earum species atque formas omnes inclinent ad se ipsas etc. (p. 176). XIII Quod dictum est de appulsu et inclinatione omnis similis ad simile etc. (p. 178). XIV Quod omnis res est plena mirabilitate etc. (p. 180). XV Quod non est credendum puro astrologo totam mirabilitatem ad caelum referenti etc. (p. 181). XVI Quod mirabilitas secundum diversos modos exire potest a rebus, et per virtutes caelestes etc. (p. 183). XVII Quod notandum est de rebus cuiusnam sint qualitatis et dispositionis et proprietatis etc. (p. 184).

Haec sunt quae universam magiae rationem continent, quae homini prudenti atque sensato sola sufficiunt, nec placuit attulisse exempla et caetera particularia, in quibus alii occupantur, quandoquidem illa non habenti harum rerum rationem nihil deservire possunt et frustra tentantur. Porro haec ipsa intelligenti et in eorum consideratione profundanti, non solum talia et eadem, sed et similia et maiora et maxima sunt pervia. Si quis ergo existimet nos completam artem non attulisse, et omnia quae ex aliorum studiis ad complementum scientiae, solum supervacaneis praetermissis, non aggregasse, sciat illud esse defectum sui iudicii et mentis imbecillitatem, quia ad haec et alia percipienda minus a caelo factus est idoneus. Quod si qui libros maiores inscripsisse videntur, ipsum est quia extranea et ad rem minus facientia plurimum miscuere, fortasse ut artem minus perviam facerent, quod nos fecisse potuimus.

Giordano Bruno: De Vinculis in Genere

This HTML edition by Joseph H. Peterson, Copyright © 1997. All rights reserved.

This is Bruno's other great book on magic, dealing with "bonding in general." Couliano characterizes it as "one of those little-known works whose importance in the history of ideas far outstrips that of more famous ones." (E&M p. 89) It explains how the masses can be manipulated with psychological and magical bonds, and how one can escape these snares.

Bruno wrote this book around 1588, during a two-year stay in Helmstedt. There are actually two versions of the text included in the Noroff codex in Moscow. A shorter, earlier version precedes the longer version. For a translation of the longer version, see Cause, Principle and Unity, and Essays on Magic edited by Richard Blackwell and Robert de Lucca (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1998, pp. 143-176.)

DE VINCVLIS IN GENERE

Iordani Bruni Nolani

De vinculo spiritus

- naturali
- animal
- divino.

His absque medicus non est, divinator non est, operator non est, amator non est, philosophus non est etc. Per haec sunt omnes omnia.

Nihil absolute pulchrum quod vinciat, sed ad aliquid pulchrum; alioqui asini amarent pulchras mulieres, simiae abolerent filios. Similiter nihil absolute bonum quod alliciat, sed cum omnia seu universum et ens est ex contrariis, ita et bonum est ex contrariis; sunt enim alia quae consistunt igne, alia quae aqua etc.

Se si potesse `a te chiuder l'entrata, tant' il regno d'amor saria pi`u vago.

Honestum et iustum civile lege videtur esse, et non natura; sed opinio multum valet ad habitum, ut quasi naturale sit quod appetatur et vinciat appetitum, et e contra.

Evenit ut idem diversimode dispositum vinciat et non vinciat: ut in Venere intumescantibus vasis et inanitis, in turbato et tranquillo animo; in cibis etiam idem eidem est amarum et dulce, cum diversimode afficiantur. Et praegnantem vidi appetere cineres.

Vincere novit qui universi rationem habet et naturam particularis et particularis dispositiones, habitus et inclinationem.

Quant' il mondo senz' odio et senza morte.

Id quod absolute pulchrum et bonum et absolute vincit est universum, et hoc ideo nil perdit omnia continens. Et omnia esse desiderant, et non est quod fastidiat esse in universali et simpliciter, sed hoc vel illud esse.

Cum nullum particulare sit simpliciter pulchrum, nil simpliciter vincere potest. Est tamen appetitus simpliciter pulchri in omnibus, omnia enim appetunt esse absolute et ex omni parte pulchra, non simpliciter, quod hoc est impossibile particularibus; alia enim est pulchritudo unius speciei, alia alterius, alia unius generis, alia alius. Non tamen specie, quia tota pulchritudo est in tota specie. Unde licet omnis puella desideret esse ex omni parte pulchra, nulla tamen est. Unde bene dixit Charidemus mutilatum imperfectumque esse pulchrum quod corporea natura cernitur; et testatur Zeusis Helena de pluribus Crotoniatis virginibus < -- >

Item cum pulchritudo in quadam simmetria consistat, haec autem sit multiplex et innumerabilis numero ad multa supposita, non autem simplex, vinculum pulchritudinis non erit simpliciter, sed ad aliquid. Immo sicut diversae species, ita et diversa individua a diversis vinciuntur; alia enim simmetria est ad vinciendum Socratem, alia ad Platonem, alia ad multitudinem, alia ad paucos; alii masculos, alii faeminam, alii viraginem, alii mollem adamant.

Ideo stultus amor qui uni alligatur, quia conditiones boni et amabilis sunt dispersae; ideo plures possumus bene amare: sicut bonum cocom, bonum militem, bonum philosophum; ita mulierem bene incedentem, aliam bene loquentem, aliam bene, aliam una omnia amabili.

Ita nulla est absoluta iustitia nec sapientia quae animum vinciat, sicut nulla est mensura cibi vel potus quae omnibus sit adcommodata.

Quidquid dicimus de pulchro, idem de purpi per contrarium dici potest.

Quidlibet vincitur pulchro ad se et non pulchro ad aliud aliter et bono; et fallacia iudiciorum hinc dependet maxime. Videat ergo index.

Sunt quae vinciunt non sui sed alterius ratione, et aurum; nusquam enim per se.

Est vinculum cathena, ordo, daemon magnus, quo omnia vinciuntur.

Apprehensio utilis, quia bonum est similitudine vel spe vel specie vincit ratione corporea et incorporea.

Idem dicitur bonum alliciens, pulchrum, animi Vinculum. Hinc deus dicitur circulorum pulchritudinis seu vinculi centrum, a quo quattuor vinciuntur, ut ab ipso nequeant recedere ni velint adnihilari. Haec cum moveantur, moventur ideo circa ipsum in circulum: et ipsum non minus nequeunt destituere, quam suum quaeque circumferentia centrum. Sunt ergo 4^r circuli: mens, anima, natura, materia. Mens per se stabilis, anima per se mobilis, natura mobilis in alio non ab alio, materia mobilis in et ab alio. Deus est vinculum et pulchrum sibi et aliis. Ab hoc centro 4 illa procedentia in idem redire nituntur, et ideo circuli rationem subeunt.

Vinculum pulchritudinis dicitur actus seu radius boni, primo diffusus in mentem, secundo in animam, tertio in naturam, quarto in materiam. Hoc mentem rationum ordine decorat, animam rationum serie complet, naturam seminibus fulcit, materiam formis exornat. Ideo vinculum hoc est splendor divini nullus. Qui radius obscure est rerum corruptibilium subiecto, minus obscure in natura, clare in anima, clarissime in mente.

Vincula sunt morum concinnitas, corporis forma, vocum consonantia, et caetera quae profluunt et ab aedificiis, a statu, carminibus, orationibus. Haec Platoni pulchrum, Socrati excellens animi venustas, Timaeo animi tyrannis, Platoni naturae privilegium, Theophrasto tacita deceptio, Salomoni ignis absconditus, aquae furtivae. Theocrito eburneum detrimentum, Carneadi regnum sollicitum, et aliis aliter.

Vinculum hoc non est corpus, licet in corpore versetur; idem enim hodie formosum, cras casu aliquo foedum. Unde aliud formosum, aliud corpus, aliud vinculum.

Id autem est vinculum tum ad partes corporis concinnandas, ratione quadam incorporea, tum etiam ad aliquid ea ratione trahendum ad corpus.

Vinculum hoc non est moles nec in mole consistens, licet circa molem etiam versetur; quandoquidem non grandia modo, sed et brevia, formosa videantur, et saepe grandia deformia, parva formosa, et e contra; et saepe stante eadem quantitate casu quodam pulchritudo tollitur, eademque mutata pulchritudo perseverat.

Vinculum hoc est quaedam rei species, quae a re ad animam proficiscitur, non tamen recedit a re subiecta, sicut ignis qui suam speciem emittens et comunicans non attenuatur, sicut imago quae in subiecto primo, in speculo, in intermedio, in oculis.

Vinculum, quod a corpore proficiscitur, nullam habet corporis partem definitam; licet enim rapiunt dicendi suavitas, oculi, incessus, maxilla et caetera, haec tamen eodem numero si diversis tribuantur subiectis, non identidem similiterque vinciunt. Alia quoque ratione nullam habet definitam corporis partem, quia ex omni parte gratia procedit: unde Plato incorpoream et spiritalem animae pulchritudinem, licet post raptum universum corpus gratiosum reddit amantis.

Falsum esse videtur quod vinculum a certa membrorum omnium proportionem proficiscatur cum colorum suavitate; quod si esset verum, aiunt Platonici, solae res compositae vincirent, nunc autem puri colores, vox una, fulgor auri, argenti candor Ni citius labitur et senescit quam pulchritudo, nil tardius quam figura; non ergo idem pulchritudo et vinculum quod figura, immo et manente eadem pulchritudine et figura praeterit amor, ut accidit quibusdam post fruitionem rei amatae. Vinculum ergo est in quadam convenientia non tantum membrorum ad invicem, sed et in quadam rapientis et rapti condensatione, ut ita dicam. Quandoque enim etsi nil habeamus in una puella quod ratione arguamus, in alia vero plura, displicet tamen illa et ista placet. Color item per se non vincit; clarior enim in seniore despicitur, remissior in iuniore vincit.

Non color purus, ut omnino albus, omnino niger, sed mixtus; non vox simplex, ut acuta vel gravis, sed media; non una currente nota vel tono, sed pluribus.

Nodum istum difficile est invenire; ideo non facile est solvere.

Vinculum ligat spiritum maxime per visum, auditum, per imaginationem.

Vinculum quoddam gratum vincto, quoddam ingratum, sicut quo bubo trahit mustellam, lupus detinet etc.; incubus spiritum rationalem, daemon energumenum occupat etc., gallus leonem, mugil navim.

Vinculum non rapit animam nisi liget vinciatque; illam non vincit, nisi perveniat ad ipsam; non pervenit, nisi per aliqua rapiatur. Pervenit per cognitionem in genere, ligat per affectum in genere, trahit per delectationem in genere. Cognitio in genere ' dicimus, quia aliquando nescimus quo sensu rapiamur. Item expertus sum amare quod audivi, et absens et de non nota specie nescio quomodo deperibam. 'In genere' inquam, quia per omnes, per plures et per singulos sensus vincimur, et aliquando sensu indeterminato et non satis noto.

Plato ponit tria vehicula vinculi: visum, auditum et mentem. Vincit enim gratia per vocem, forma per visum, mores per mentem.

Plura vinciuntur affectu per haec tria, quae vinci consequenter cupiunt actu, per tactum in genere; unde visibile non vincit oculus, sed per oculus vincit, per aurem vincit audibile, per mentem ratio.

Quatuor motus sunt vinciendo, prime iniectio seu invectio, secundo ligatio seu vinculum, tertio attractio, quarto copulatio quae fruitia dicitur. Et haec ni fiat per omnes sensus, per quos vinculum vectum est, non erit perfecta. Ideo amans totus vellet migrare in amatum, lingua, ore, oculis etc.

[2v] Triplex amor triplexque raptus Platonis. Rapit enim ad vitam aut contemplativam aut activam seu moralem et voluptariam. Prima est a formae corporalis aspectu ad considerationem spiritalis et divinae erecta, secunda in sola videndi et conversandi oblectatione perseverat, tertia a visu ad tactus concupiscentiam descendit. Per primam ingeniosi, per ultimam hebetes, per mediam medii. Primum vinculum dicitur amor divinus, secundum humanus, tertium ferinus. Tripliciter illectant: intellectualiter, animaliter, corporee: primum est boni splendor <-->

Vinculum non in omni vinciente aequale, neque in omni vincto idem.

Vinculum hoc quia ad summum bonum visum, auditum atque mentem convertit, hinc veluti circulus quidam divinae lucis est a bono manans, in bono residens, per bonum se diffundens et ad bonum sempiternae refluens, estque velut unum rerum omnium principium vel principiorum potius unitivum.

Hinc primo mens decoratur idearum ordine, secundo animus rationum serie numerosisque discursibus, tertio naturas seminibus, quarto materiam formis. Omnia vivificans, leniens, mulciens, excitans. Omnia ordinat, procreat, regit, complet. Omnia aperit, purgat, illuminat, gratificat. Omnia movet, incendit, allicit.

Nil vincitur nisi aptissime praeparatum, quia fulgor ille non eodem modo rebus omnibus comunicatur.

Corporum praeparatio ad vincendum tribus constat: ordine, modo, specie; 1. ordo partium intervalla, 2. modus quantitatem, 3. species figuram, lineamenta et colores significat. Sicut in vocis vinculo 1. ordo consistit in ascensu a gravi ad acutum et descensu, 2. modus in debitis tertiis, quartis, quintis, sextis, tonis et semitonis progressionem, 3. species in canoro, claro, suavi. In omnibus proportionalia iis tribus ad vincendum disponunt, sive compositis, sive simplicibus; iis enim color placet etc. Sic animus disciplinis adcommodatur, ut per eas in eo divini vultus luceat imago.

Deus, angelus, animus nos non ligant ut corporea, quia non afficiunt, quia non pulsant per sese sensus, vel alio genere vinculi, quod manu metaphorica affectus intellectuque tur. Duplex ergo ad vincendum praeparatio, et reddit aequivoce significans vinculum.

Sic per omnes sensus cupimus, per omnes sensus vincimur.

Non simplicibus et absolutis, sed compositis et apposis vincimur. Vinculum enim est ex plurium concinnitate coariens gratia, cui contrarium est ingratum seu turpe. Deus non habet in se pulchritudinem, quia non habet ordinatam compositionem; non hanc, quia non habet partes. Est autem pulchritudinis et vinculi fons, author et actor. Dii similiter non sunt pulchri. Universum non est pulchrum, ut videri potest; ita enim est simplici quadam ratione constans suis similiter se habentibus sphaeris, stellis, astris, magnis animalibus; nisi quadam similitudine et analogica ratione; vel saltem in iis non est pulchritudo quae nos vinciat.

Vinculum sequitur rei sensum, sicut umbra corpus. Omnia ergo quae vinciunt, quoquo pacto sensum aliquam ingerunt, et quae vinciuntur, quoquo pacto sentiunt. Ferram magnetem sentit.

Sunt cantus quidam et harmoniae quae vinciunt homines, non autem feras; aliae aves, non autem homines. Quibusdam figuris et linearam coloribus rapiuntur homines, quibus non alia animantia; quibusdam fumigiis rapiuntur spiritus, quibus non homines. Aliud ergo nobis, aliud aliis est pulchrum; ideo diversa vinculorum genera.

Plura vinciunt hominas quam bruta, quia plures habet potentias, partes, circumstantias, fines, et consequenter plures appetitus.

Pulchrum non vincit sensum, sed per ipsum vincula connectenda iniicit; sensus enim sunt veluti ostia seu portae seu fenestrae.

Caeli astra, viridia prata, cantus etc. movent, alliciunt, inclinant, non rapiunt; at in iis proprie amor non dicitur, cum non sit cum appetitu Veneris, quae eius amor est. Atqui sunt horti Veneris, quibus patet ad Venerem accessus. Qui vincitur ad cibum famelicus, qui ad potum sitiens, qui ad Venerem amans, et hic secundum speciem sensibilem, et hic amor fertur cum feris, vel ad intelligibilem, et divinus dicitur. Primus amor est physicus seu naturalis, secundus est abstractus seu mathematicus, et est amor heremitaee masturbantis.

Vinculum non aequaliter ab omnibus, nec aequaliter in omnia, nec semper, sed dispositum disposita. Hinc vinculum non est quod vincit, sed quod vincere valet non prohibitum, non impeditum.

Vincitur maxime aliquid per hoc quod aliquid sui est in vinciente, vel per hoc quod per aliquid sui vinciens imperat illi. Hinc ungues et capilli vivorum sufficiunt ut in universum corpus habeat imperium, item et in spiritus; necromanti avocant manes per ossa mortuorum, similiter et per cognata iis. Hinc non temere antiquorum quidam maxime curabant sepulturas, alii rogos, et inter supplicia insepultum relinguere.

Tot genera vinculorum quot pulchri, quot boni; et haec sunt pro specierum numero. Ideo falluntur qui amant hominem solum pulchrum.

Non me vincit musica in puella, qui musicae cum pudicitia non convenit: vincit autem a puella. Nec versutia nec fortitudo corporis.

Vincit Venus decora voce, anhelitu odoreque suavi, carnis lenitate, osculi etc., quia laquei per omnes sensus iniecti arctius ligant. Sed sint sine superbia.

Iactu seminis vincula relaxantur, retentione vero intenduntur; taliter debet affectus qui vincere vult, qualiter qui vinciri debet. Propterea in conviviis et post convivia inspirare introducit in ossibus ignem Cupido. Vide. Continentia est principium vinculi, abstinentia praecurrit famem, haec melius cibum attrahit. Indignatio è santo sdegno.

Ab habitu interno, qui convictu delitescit, et externo, qui in corporis culta consistit, provenit vinculum. Movent haec, si transfuga quadam artis dissimulatione fiant; neque si qui satis belle loquitur et satis nimisque superstitiosula sapit, placet, neque

vestes cirotecas que qui nimis methodice ornat capillos, oculos, motus, gestas etc.

con i guanti piegati

placere potest magis quam displicere. Sicut de Mario ambitu.

Puella, cuius gratia praeparationem habet in animi concinnitate tantum, animum movet ad animalem fruitionem duntaxat; cuius vero gratia praeparationem habet in corporis forma, animum movet ad corporalem fruitionem; cuius gratia praeparationem habet in utroque, ad utramque fruitionem movet. Atqui sunt qui ita vinciuntur ab animo, ut et corpus ipsum, quod illius animi vas est, concipiscant; sunt qui corpus sine animo despiciant: talis perhibetur Socrates, cum dixit 'loquere, puer.'

Potens est corporalis pulchritudo, ut et mentem vinciat et adtollat; amor enim plures reddit poetas et heroas, sed illud non fit per vinculum nisi per accidens; causat enim illud concitationem quamdam.

Ars est artificis pulchritudo, et hac artifex vincit. Stupide enim videbit quis artificialium et naturalium pulchritudinem, qui una ingenium, quo sunt effecta, non contemplatur: iis caeli non enarrant gloriam Dei; ideo non magis Deum quam Dei effectus exosculantur.

Vinculum intellectuale per mentem anima rapit, naturale per sensum.

Helluones iactant continentiam quod
.....

Gratia Veneris perfectos, non mutilates, non aegrotos, non senes non bon....., non iuvenes senibus

Vinculum si aptum ad generationem vel illi simile consequatur, non sine actione vel passione Veneris affectu completur.

Ii quibus utitur natura et eam omnino dominam habent, ut bruta, ad masculam non vinciuntur Venerem: sed qui natura utuntur et.... ipsa suae voluptatis finis, forsè aliquando.

Alio vinculo exosculamur filios, alio patrem, alio sororem, alio uxorem, alio amicam, alio cinaedum, alio amicum.

A contrariis dispositionibus evenit ut hic vinciatur, amore, alius omnino solvatur et fastidiat illud idem. Unde patet non idem esse pulchrum et in eadem specie; simpatiam enim habet hic qua caret ille; ideo pulchrum est huic quod illi deforme; ideo qui vincere cupit videat quos possit et quomodo possit. Non ignoret autem causam huius esse satis occultam, item effectus esse inconstantes, quia hodie consonat quod cras dissonabit, imo et eadem hora.

Omnes a cubili et cibo vinciuntur et trahuntur, sed non ab eodem cubili atque cibo, neque eodem cibo vesci cupimus mane atque vesperi, aestate et hieme; fluit enim complexio, fluunt omnia; ideo cum quis vincere potest, quanto primo potest vinciat et stringat; amor enim sicut et occasio praeceps; ita vinciat primo, ut semper tentat.

Non eodem vincimur vinculo, quoniam nostra natura non est simplex nec semper easem. Est igitur sicut Thetis ad Peleum et Proteus etc. Cum ergo natura multifariam varia sit, alia atque alia idio..... individualique complexione afficietur; ideo Proteus

fluvius ab Hercule

serpens seu coluber aliter vincitur quam cum leo. Deus simplex a variatione a.....s est, ideo vincere semper gaudet. Caetera variatione gaudent, ideo varie aliter atque aliter vinciunt; aliter Acheloum virum, aliter anguem, secus taurum vinxit Hercules.

Quia est omnia gaudet omnibus ille omnia amor omnia vel nihil.

Qui vincitur a vinculis minus vincitur, qui a pluribus magis. Haec igitur est maxima ad solutionem viri a pluribus occupati. Amor perfectus non est plurium. Amor intensus superlacioni comparatur; supereminens autem semper est unum.

.....dus est qui a pluribus vincitur. Quia diversi sunt pulchritudinis gradus atque disiuncti. Hinc una ratione me urit hic, alia alius ratione. Quod si utraque ratio aggregaretur in uno, placeret unus ex duobus; si omnes gradus atque rationes aggregarentur in uno, unus ex omnibus placeret.

Placet invatque vincere, quia amari et honorari iuvat atque placet. Hinc assentatores adulatoreque vinciunt. Sed si sint cauti, ne ita agant ut assentationem detegant: magnificent modicas virtutes, attenuent vitia, excusent accusabilia, convertant in virtutes facinora. Avarum faciat providum et parsimo...

Quae vincit generosum et laudatum virum, vincto gaudet, et hoc gaudium est via qua ex eius vinculis ipsa vinciatur. Ultra modum enim vilis est quae laudatum et egregium virum amantem non redamet; alia ratione si ignobilia amet aliquis <-->

Multa sunt quae cum pulchra exstant, tanquam bona nos vinciunt, ut equus, navis, domus, statua, canis, avis, et ex iis turpia sunt mala. At homo pulcher non vincit ut bonus habeatur, bonus non ut pulcher exstimetur, sed hoc est per accidens, id est per malam educationem. Et quia pulchrae magis sollicitantur et per paupertatem etiam sunt minus pudicae. Contraria ratione aliae quandoque bonae oculi naturalis complexio melior temperantior est et virtutibus in mediocritate consistentibus aptior.

Vincimur maxime per visum; est enim sensuum activissimus, spiritualissimus, optimus. Atqui [4r] saepe multi rem non visam depereunt.

Is vere uni vincitur, qui in rebus negociisque aliis torpescit et in ipso sollicitatur; iocundior enim operatio alteram excludit, animus auribus intentus remittit oculos. Hinc vehementius gaudentes, tristes, aestuantes, non valde aliud agimus, imo statim cessamus ab opere; hoc est teneri, vinciri, abstrahi, trahi.

Voluptas hominum minus est determinata ad unum, unde rationalis dicitur, quam voluptas brutorum, quae naturalis appellatur; hinc equa pariter omnes equos vincere potest, mulier una viros omnes non ita: ut aiunt.

Pudor et fides propugnator vinculorum optimus; est autem pudor ignominiae metus. Quae bene vinculis obstat et vere afficitur pudore, rubet; quae vero timore vecordiaque se proripit a vinculis, pallet: hanc qui vincere cupit, additis animis superabit, non illam. Primam proprie dicimus verecundam, secundam vero proprie pudere dixerim; verecundia enim recti honestique rationem habet, pudor autem infamiae timorem prae se fert; pallent enim et qui timent verbera et mortem.

N Si fecit hoc, factus est hinc verecundus.

Si fecit illud, postea erubuit.

Si fecit aliud, pudorem concepit.

Ergo bonus est, quia est verecundus iuxta illud 'Verecundiam serva.'

Homini probo verecundia non competit propter sua delicta qui|..... veritus improbus fiat. Senioreem hominem nemo laudabit quia est verecundus; nil enim agere debeat pro quo verecundia emergere solet. Frustra ergo N semper est verecundus. Verecundiam enim servant pueri atque puellae.

Amor ut in amante est, passive dicitur et est vinculum, alio modo dicitur active, id est quod amare facit; et est quaedam divina vis in rebus, et hic est ille qui vincit. Et Orpheo atque Mercurio est Daemon magnus, antiquus ante mundum, quo chaos ornamentum appetebat eratque in sino illius. Quia autem in generatione operatur et nova facit et principiis dominatur, senectutem fugere et odisse dicitur, iuvenibus se miscere, duros habitus aufugit, mites mollesque inhabitat, iuvenis et tenellus habetur etc. Vide Polyantheam.

Hunc vincientem vel vinculum hoc nec pulchrum neque bonum appellat Socrates, quia pulchrum appetit atque bonum; eo igitur caret: ideoque noluit esse deorum aliquem. Item inquit ille amorem medium inter bonum et malum, turpe et pulchrum, mortale et immortale. Sed hic rhetorice et aequivoce sentit de appetitu et medio. Sumimus amorem vinculum secundum rationem comunem activo (et) passivo, qua omnia volunt perfici, uniri, copulari, ordinari, et natura agit perfectionem, unionem, copulam et ordinem.

Et sic nihil est sine amore divinum ne<que> perfectum. Imo amor ubique dicit perfectionem, et si in materia et chaos supponat (ut aiunt) imperfectionem, nunquam tamen significat imperfectionem, sed semper perfectionem et participationem luminis divinitatis. Si quodlibet imperfectum amat perfici, non per imperfectionem amat perfici, sed per perfectionis participationem, tanto magis vivaciter, quanto vehementius appetit; altius enim summi boni amore flagrat quod perfectius est quam quod minus perfectum.

Hoc vinculo superiora dicuntur providere inferioribus, inferiora converti ad superiora, et aequalia invicem associari. Ideo est numen et divinitas in omnibus supiective, ut universi perfectio.

Hic amor unus est et vinculum unum, qui facit omnia unum. Habetque in diversis diversas facies; [4v] aliter enim atque aliter alia vinciuntur atque alia. Hinc illae Cupidinis distinctiones et amoris. Vide amor. Poly. et Natal.

Hoc vinculo rapitur amans, ut in amatum transferri velit, vel totum concipere amatum et imbibere.

Est vinculum quo volumus habere quae absunt, et est vinculum quo nolumus amittere quae habemus primum est desiderium et appetitus, secundum est amoris species complacentia dicitur nobis.

Est pulchri amor quo pulchri fieri volumus, est et pulchri amor quo pulchro potiri concupiscimus: primo modo amamus id quo caremus, secundo et id quod habemus.

Duplex amoris vinculum dixit Eriximachus, alterum quo contraria in ipsius male concordant, velut in aegrotis corporibus humores, et hic malus amor dicitur; alterum quo bene, ut in magistratibus, orationibus, harmonia.

Contemplativi a formae corporalis aspectu divinis vinciuntur, voluptuosi a visu ad tangendi concupiscentiam descendunt, morales in conversandi oblectationem trahuntur primi, secundi hebetes, tertii medii: primi digni ethere, secundi vita, tertii sensu: primi .. pavent et fugiunt, secundi haerent, tertii appropriant.

Sanctimonia, zelus et religio ligant unde quidam sanctus doctor 'A..... ideo cavendae; quo enim sanctiores fuerint, eo magis alliciunt; et sub praetextu blandi piique sermonis ...miscet se viscus impiissimae libidinis, credo mihi.' Haec ille.

Vincit non solum bonum, sed opinio boni; vinculum tamen semper est cum quadam adcommodatione proportionequae.

Amoris, amicitiae, benevolentiae, placentiae, voluptatis, charitatis, compassionis, cupiditatis, cupidinis, avaritiae, libidinis, desiderii vinculum, nisi mutuum fuerit, facile evanescit. Unde illud proverbium 'sine amore perit amor.'

Catullus Lesbiae nuptae magis vinctus, quod maiore fruendi desiderio afficiebatur. 'Nitimur in vetitum' aliquid est pro univ^s complex^s

Vinculum fit ex prolifico semine quod ad actum suum rapitur, nititur atque rapit; ideo hoc emisso secundum partem; perit secundum partem vinculi vis.

Multiplex semen, multiplex Venus, multiplex amor, multiplex vinculum. Unde et scientiarum et morum concinnitatem in aliis ingenerare concupiscimus. Semen quo cum quis plenus est, desiderat emittere in alterius viri animam.

Alligator faemina faeminae, puer puero, mas mari, mas faeminae, homo supernis, aequalibus, infernis, naturalibus, artificialibus. Res rebus, sicut per incantationem cicada aurea etc.

Amabile et bonum pulchro fusius; ideo plura sunt vinculorum genera quam a pulchro; imo sunt et a malo et violente plura, quae principium sunt corruptionis. Pater vincitur filio etiam monstro.

Plures vincit phantasia et opinio, quam ratio, imo et intensius. Multi amant, et cur amant nesciunt, quia sine ratione amant: non tamen sine causa impellente, febricitantem vincit amor aquae.

Unde devinciuntur et invincibilia animalium. Arist. De animalibus, Agripp. Quae est propter cognationem quandam vel cognati vestigium.

Omnia sunt bona, non tamen ab omnibus vincimur. Non ergo omne bonum vincit, quod aliis aliud est bonum et| et spec..... differentia sunt bona: super hoc dulce non est dulce

Vincimur apprehensione voluptifici.

Si philautiam extinguamus, invincibiles reddimus reddimurque; philantia excitata vincimus concitamusque.

Voluptas vinculo rem vinculum; quaerenti enim 'cur voluptate caperis?' respondemus 'quia voluptate capior', 'quia placet.'

Non idem omnium bonum, non idem summum, non idem maximum, si contraria et diversa sunt genera, erit autem idem identitate entis, maxime aequivocum.

Vincimus confortando, si timidum prohibemus militare, impium deos colere, inhumanum nolumus suis servire commodis. Pro naturae inclinatione quemque rapimus. Qui cylindrum vult ducere, non ad capita et angulos, sed in rotundum inclinat.

Plus vincit cantus adulator quam verus amicus.

DE VINCVLIS IN GENERA.

Ut eum qui vincere debet necessarium est rerum quodammodo universalem rationem habere, ut hominem (qui epilogus quidam omnium est) valeat, alligare, quandoquidem, ut alibi diximus, in hac potissimum specie rerum omnium species maxime per numeros licet intueri, ut eorum alii referuntur ad pisces, alii ad aves, ad serpentes, alii ad reptilia, tum secundum genus, tum secundum eorum species. Singulis item horum accidit diversitas usus, consuetudinis, finis, inclinationis, complexionis, aetatis; atque ita ut de Proteo fingunt atque Acheloo, eandem licet subiectam materiam in varias formas atque figuras transmigrantem, ut continue ad vinciendum aliis atque aliis et nodorum utendum sit speciebus. Huc spectat quod consideratio de moribus hominum, nunc invenum, nunc senum, nunc mediorum, nobilium, divitum, potentium, fortunatorum, quibus adde mores invidorum, ambitiosorum, militum, mercatorum et id genus aliorum, quando et tales in reipub. administrationem plerisque in partibus assumuntur, vel talibus etiam opus sit mediis sit mediis instrumentis, quos propterea vincere sibi etiam oporteat. Nihil tandem esse videtur, quod a civili speculatione sub forma huiusce considerationis (quatenus vel vinciuntur vel vinciuntur vel vincula quaedam sunt vel horum circumstantiae) possit esse alienum. Quapropter adiecimus hanc considerationem, quae De vinculo in genere intitulatur.

DE VINCIENTE IN GENERE.

Artic. I. Vincientum species.

Vincientia per universum sunt Deus, Daemon, Animus, Animal, Natura, Sors et Fortuna, tandem Fatum. Hoc universaliter vinciens, quod uno non potest nomine designari, non ligat sub specie et sensu corporis; corpus enim per se sensum non pulsatur, sed per vim quandam in corpore existentem et a corpore prodeuntem. Manus ergo vinciens metaphorico nomine appellatur, quae multiplici ad vinciendum praeparatione deflectitur et inclinatur.

Effectus vincientis. Art. II.

Hic est quem vinciendo aiunt Platonici memtem idearum ordine decorare; animum rationum serie numerosisque discursibus implere; naturam variis foecundare seminibus; materiam innumerabilibus conditionibus informare; omnia vivificare, lenire, mulcere, excitare; omnia ordinare, procreare, regere, allicere, incendere; omnia movere, aperire, illuminare, purgare, gratificare, complere.

Vt arte vinciat. Art. III.

Vincit arte artifex, quandoquidem ars est artificis pulchritudo. Nimirum ut attonitus et stupidus videbit quispiam artificialium et naturalium pulchritudinem, qui una ingenium, quo universa sunt effecta, minime contemplatur et admiratur. Illi 'stellae non enarrant gloriam Dei'; item non magis Deum, quam Dei effectus (bruta nempe anima) exosculabitur etc.

Ut pluribus hominem vinciat. Artic. IV.

Ex his quae vinciunt plurima nimirum vinciunt homines quam bruta, plura item magis vegeti ingenii quam stupidiores, utpote qui pluribus abundant facultatibus atque potentiis, ad plures respiciunt partes, circumstantias atque fines, pluribus consequenter aguntur appetitibus.

Ut sensus est leno vincienti. Art. V.

Hominem stupidum rara et impetu naturali excitata vincit libido, paucis speciebus definitur cibus atque crassis. Hunc non eloquium mulcet, non veneres pelliciunt, non musica, non pictura, non caetera naturae lenocinia.

Quare uno non expleat vinculo. Art. VI.

Pluribus ideo vincior, plures ideo sentio vincientes, quia diversi sunt pulchritudinis gradus atque disiuncti. Hinc una me hic, alia me alii urunt et vinciunt ratione. Quod si omnis ratio in unum aggregaretur, forte pro omnibus et ex omnibus placeret unus. Id vero hactenus minime natura passa est, ut varia pulchritudinis, iocunditatis, bonitatis, contrariorum et diversorum ab his effectuum vincula spargeret, et iuxta partium materiae numeros distincte promeret atque seiunctim. Accidit vero ut quidam uno tantum obiecto teneatur interdum, vel propter sensus stupiditatem, qui ad reliquos ordines est caecus et remissus, vel propter vinculi unius vehementiam, quae sic unice affligat atque torqueat, ut inde aliorum sensus lentescat, obruatur, supprimatur. Hoc vero raro et in paucis accidit et est mirabile, ut in quibusdam, qui spe vitae aeternae et quadam vivacitate fidei vel credulitatis ita animo abrepti visi sunt et a corpore quodammodo distracti, et obiecto, cui phantasiae et opinionis virtute devincti erant vehementius astringente, horribiles cruciatus ne sentire quidem visi sunt, ut in Anaxarcho philosopho et Andrea Galilaeo, in Laurentio presbytero et aliis usque ad nostram aetatem pro religionis specie in principes et reges sicariis est manifestum; cum ratione vero in Cynico Diogene et Epicuro, quibus hac ratione animo rerum contemptu et specie opinionis secundum principia naturalia et ordines devincto, sensum voluptatum et dolorum omnium abigebant; ...que summum huius vitae pro conditione humanae speciei bonum se assequutos esse censebant, ubi animum extra dolorem, timorem, iram tristesque alios affectus positum in quadam heroica voluptate servarent, et rerum ignobilium quae sunt in hac vita, nempe temporanearum, contemptu Deorum se similem vitam in hoc etiam mortali corpore consequutos testabantur, itaque summum bonum et eximiam virtutem cum aliis ostendisse, tum ipsos putarunt se esse consequutos.

Quid genius conferat vincienti. Art. VII.

Sunt qui dicant vincientem genus superioritate alium vincere et ab alio non revinciri, comparis vero ingenii esse reciprocum vinculum et in quodam qualitatis ordine consistere. [88r] Atqui iuxta horum sententiam genium sequeretur continue mutari et alterari, sicut formae, complexiones et species alterantur, quia quem puer vincit, iuvenis non item vincit; quem vincebat puella, eadem matrona non vincit. Non ergo ad unum principium referendum est et simplex, quod aliquid compositum et in sua natura varium atque etiam ex contrariis consistens vinciatur.

Quem facilius vinciat. Art. VIII.

Homo potissimum vincitur, qui verius homo est, specie dignissimorum, qui longe placet amplius dignissima sperare quam possidere vilia: horum quippe possessione facile stomachamur; quaecunque non facile possidemus, ardentius deperimus.

Ut idem eodem contrariis alligat. Art. IX.

Confusa et quodammodo etiam contraria videntur esse vincientia ab eodem etiam vincientis genere, ubi contrarii vinculorum effectus et affectus inspiciuntur. Quem enim (verbi gratia) Cupidinis vincula invaserint, uno eodemque igne atque laquei sensu videbitur cogi ad exclamandum et tacendum, laetitiam tristitiam, spem et desperationem, timorem et audaciam, iram et mansuetudinem, fletum et risum; unde illud

Io che porto d'amor l'alto vessillo
Gelate ho speme e li desir cocenti,
A un tempo agghiaccio e tremo, ardo e sfavillo,
E muto colmo il ciel de strida ardenti.

Dal cuor scintille e da gli occhi acqua stilli,
E vivo e muoio, e fo risa e lamenti;
Ho vive l'acqui e l'incendio nò more,
Che han Theti a gli occhi e ha Vulcano al cuore.

Non uno vinculo vincit vinciens diversa. Art. X.

Nihil absolute pulchrum quod vinciat tanquam iocundum, nihil absolute bonum quod alliciat tanquam utile, nihil absolute magnum si finitum est. In pulchritudine enim respice ut simius simiae, equus equae placeat, ne Venus quidem aliac ab homine et heroum speciei. In bono respice ut ex contrariis sunt universa, ut aliis animantum bona sunt sub undis, aliis in arido; hiis in montibus, illis in campo; quibusdam in profundo, aliis in sublimi.

Qui vinciat. Art. XI.

Vincire ergo novit, qui universi rationem habet vel saltem rei particularis vinciendae naturam, dispositionem, inclinationem, habitum, usum, finem.

Non est unus qui omne vinciat particularis. Art. XII.

Id quod absolute pulchrum et bonum et magnum et verum absolute vincit affectum, intellectum et omne. Item nihil perdit, omnia continet, omnia desiderat, desideratur et persequitur a pluribus, quod diverso vinculorum genere viget; ideo pluribus artibus abundare ambimus, siquidem non est quod fastidiat esse in universali atque simpliciter, sed hoc et huiusmodi, illud et eiusmodi. Cum ergo nullum particulare atque absolute pulchrum, bonum, verum etc., non solum supra genus, sed neque in genere neque in specie aliqua nihil est quod simpliciter vincere per eosdem gradus possit, nihilominus tamen appetitus pulchri boni etc. est in omnibus; omnia enim appetunt esse absolute et ex omni parte pulchra, iuxta propriae speciei et generis conditionem saltem. Alia enim pulchritudo et bonitas est unius speciei, alia alterius; in alia quidem unum contrariorum, in alia alterum dominatur. Totam quoque pulchritudinem [88v] et bonitatem speciei unius non nisi in tota specie et per totam aeternitatem per omnia individua atque sigillatim est petendum. Hoc testatus est Zeuxis in pulchritudinw humana, qui Helenam de pluribus Crotoniatis virginibus depinxit. Quin imo si danri esset puellam ex omni parte pulchram seu ex toto, quî fieri potest, ut omnimodo et omnibus modis pulchrum afferre possit, quandoquidem innumerabiles sunt pulchritudinis corporalis in muliebri specie differentiae, e quibus non nisi unae in uno subiecto possunt reperiri? Pulchritudo enim, sive in quadam symmetria consistat sive in alio quodam quod incorporeum corporea in natura cernitur ipsum, multiplex est et innumerabilibus proveniens ordinibus; ideo quemadmodum lapidis asperitas non cum cuiuslibet lapidis asperitate quadrat, concurrat, cohaeret, sed ubi respondentes sunt magis sinus atque cavitates, ita non quaelibet species in quolibet animo sedebit. Diversa igitur individua a diversis vinciuntur obiectis; etsi quippe idem sit quod vinciat Socratem atque Platonem, aliter tamen hunc vinciet atque illum; alia multitudinem, alia paucos movent; alia mares et viriles, alia foeminas et muliebres.

Varia vincientis instrumenta. Art. XIII.

Dispersit, distinxit et quodammodo disseminavit natura pulchritudinis, bonitatis, veritatis et dignitatis obiecta; ideo plures pluribus rationibus et pro diverso fine vincere possunt. Vincit fitque amabilis bonus agricola, alia ratione coquus, alia miles, alia musicus, alia pictor, philosophus, puer, puella haec quod bene incedat, illa quod melius loquatur. Ex his nemo est qui solus habeat omnia atque omnimode; sed qui ad plurima secundum species atque modos inveniatur habilis atque felix, ille vinciet plures, pluribus dominabitur et per plures de omnibus in sua specie triumphabit.

Vincientis commoda Art. XIV.

Ut diversa sunt tempora, diversae occasiones, et diversi subeunt affectus, neque una eademque mensura; ita neque est aliquid unum atque simplex et eiusdem quantitatis et qualitatis, quod omnibus placere aequè possit, aequè omnes explere, quinimo vel singulos, vel diversis temporibus unum, sicut nec idem cibus nec eadem cibi mensura atque qualitas. Idem iudicium est de omnibus, quibus vincitur appetitus.

Vincientum differentiae. Art. XV.

Et sunt quae vinciunt secundum se, et sunt quae vinciunt per aliquid sui quod est vel pars vel quantitas, et sunt quae vinciunt alterius ratione cui adsint, subministrent, vel ad quod disponant, sicut et formosum aedificium ex informibus partibus consurgit.

Vincientis varia facultas. Art. XVI.

Multa sunt quae, cum pulchra existant, tanquam bona tamen nos vinciunt, ut equus, navis, domus, statua, canis et avis. Homo vero pulcher non vincit ut bonus habeatur, bonus etiam non vincit ut pulcher existimetur; accidente enim quodam fit, ut cum pulchritudine sit facinus et error. Da quippe pulchram et pauperem: magis sollicitatur, facilius donis allicitur. Divarsa diversorum, contraria contrariorum et similium similis est ratio.

Vincientis sedes. Art. XVII.

Putant nonnulli parum distinguentes, ut Platonici, illud quod vincit esse rei speciem, quae a re [89r] ad animam proficiscitur, a re subiecta tamen non recedit, sicut ignis qui communicans suam speciem non attenuatur, sicut imago quae in subiecto primo, inde in speculo, in intermedio et in oculis. Atqui profundius considerantes invenimus, esse quidem in corpore et quodam sensibili vinculi consistentiam, sed, sicut anima, cuius conditionem animae virtus consequitur, nullam habet definitam in corpore partem. Etsi quippe vulnus amoris sit ab oculis vel ab ore vel a colore, non tamen in illis simpliciter vel ab illis inveniri vel provenire videbitur, quando oculi per se seorsimque conspecti non habent eandem vim, quam a collatione cum reliquis partibus faciei. Simile indicium est de ore, de naso, simile de colore, qualis etiam in pyxide pictoris non placebit. Indefinita ergo et incircumscriptibilis omnino est ratio pulchritudinis, et a simili ratio iocundi atque boni. Proinde non tota vinculi ratio in re subiecta perspicienda est, sed etiam, secundum alteram non minus praecipuam partem, in eo quod vincitur; nihilo enim mutata cibi qualitate atque substantia, nunc post refectionem reiicitur, qui paulo ante avidè sumebatur. Cupidinis vincula, quae ante coitum intensa erant, modico seminis iactu sunt remissa et ignes temperati, obiecto pulchro nihilominus eodem permanente. Non tota igitur vinculi ratio ad illud est referenda.

Praeparationes vincientis. Artic. XVIII.

Vinciens tribus dicitur praeparari ad ligandum: ordine, modo et specie. Ordo partium dat intervalla, modus definit quantitatem, species figuris, lineamentis et coloribus significatur. Sicut in vocis vinculo ordo consistit in ascensu et descensu per grave, acutum et media; modus in debitis tertiis, quartis, quintis, sextis etc., tonis et semitonis progressionem; species in canoritate, suavitate, claritate. Proportionalia sunt tribus hisce in omnibus sive compositis sive simplicibus, ubi praeparatio est ad vincendum.

Diversitas praeparationum. Artic. XIX.

Pro vinculis alia est praeparatio ex signis et vestigiis animi concinnitatem indicantibus tantum, et per ipsam movetur animus ad animalem tantummodo fruitionem persequendam, ut illi adhaereat et uniatur, gratia vero praeparationem habens in corporis et huiusmodi nempe membrorum dispositione, vel quae est ex habilibus, qui circa corpus sunt, animum corporali appiscendae fruitioni alligat; ubi vero praeparatio fuerit in utroque, ad utramque vehementius fruitionem impellet, seu ab utroque attrahet principio. Porro sunt qui ita ab animo vinciuntur, ut corpus ipsum, quod illius vas est, etiam concupiscant. Pauci item animo magis incumbunt, ut quamlibet etiam corporalem speciem absque animi praeparatione etiam despiciant, ut fama est de Socrate, qui venustum puellum effari primo praecipiebat, antequam de suo erga illum amore definiret.

Vincientis conditio. Art. XX.

Magnificat assentatores modicas virtutes, attenuant vitia, excusant mendas, referunt in virtutes facinora, et caute ita agunt ne propriam detegant assentationis artem. Itaque non admodum astutos sibi devinciunt, per hoc quod cuicumque amari et honorari maxime placet atque iuvat, nec non vincere quenquam posse praedominantis cuiusdam est virtutis.

Ut vinciens vincitur. Art. XXI.

Gaudium et gloria quaedam est vincientis, eaque maxima atque tanto vehementior, quanto generosius, laudabilius et praestantius est quod vincitur; eo in gaudio eaque in gloria est sita vinculi vis, qua et vinciens ipse a vincto revinciatur. Victores laudando suos victos victoriam suam efferunt, et interdum seque etiam nedum alios decipiunt, et in cupidine et aliis civilibus vinculorum effectibus. Ultra modum vile oportet esse ingenium, quod laudatum et egregium amantem, seu alia ratione sibi ex animo devinctum, ingrato non vicissim persequatur animo.

Vincientis distinctio. Art. XXII.

Est vincientis species qua digni, pulchri et boni fieri volumus, et est species qua bono, pulchro et digno potiri concupiscimus. Primum vincientis genus est ab obiecto quo caremus, secundum ab eo quod habemus magis. Ex his vincit non solum bonum, sed et opinio boni; ubique tamen vinculum cum quadam proportionem et accommodationem semper est. Plures quoque vincit phantasia et opinio, quam ratio; quin immo intensius illa quam ista. Multi quippe, quia sine ratione amant, quamvis non sine causa ament impellente, vinciuntur quidem, sed unde vincantur ignorant.

Vincientis caecitas. Art. XXIII.

Occulta etiam maxima ex parte etiam sapientibus vinculorum est ratio; quid enim magni est referre rationem analogiae, similitudinis, congeneitatis et id genus vocum sine sensu, quando hominem videmus nihil odisse magis quam alterum hominem, eumque consortem atque simillimum, interdum quoque nihil amare magis, idque ex ignota causa? Quae enim generalis affertur ratio, nulla est omnino, ut solutio quaedam est et apathia inter ea quae eiusdem generis et speciei, ut foeminam et foeminam, marem et foeminam; quibus addo conditiones viri, senis, pueri. Quid dices de amore earum, quorum solummodo est auditus, qui devotionis nomine vulgo describitur? An non homo supernis et immaterialibus, imo imaginariis et non repertis summopere devincitur? Mitto speciem virtutis vinculorum referre per species, potissimum vero eam, quae est per incantationem. Nec est quod dicit quisquam vinculi vim esse a bono magis, quam vincere possit boni opinio; quin etiam ab evidenti magis, quam ab occulta causa. Et diximus supra ut diversae sunt bonorum differentiae atque species.

Vincientis industria. Art. XXIV.

Quemadmodum ignorantes plus a cauto vincimur adlatore, quam ab amico vero, ita artificiose formantur et confortantur vincula et vincientis efficacia, si timidum ille prohibeat militare, vesane impium deos colere, inhumanum propriis inservire commoditatibus, et illuc quo res inclinant magis afflare, quemadmodum qui cylindrum sibi vult arripere, non per capita et angulos, sed per suam rotundam superficiem obvertit.

Arma vincientis. Art. XXV.

Vincientis arma triplicia sunt. Prima in ipso, et haec sunt duplicia: essentialia seu naturalia, nempe quae sunt ex natura speciei; et accidentalia seu adiuncta, nempe quae naturam speciei consequuntur, cuiusmodi sunt sagacitas, sapientia et ars. Quaedam [90r] sunt circa ipsum, ut sors, fortuna, casus, occursum et incursionem facientia; quaedam super ipsum, ut fatum, natura et favor divûm.

Vincientis vices. Art. XXVI.

Proportionale est in omni vinciendi actu, quod in cibo et coitu continue experimur. Trahimur enim et vincimur horum desiderio et amore, sed non eorundem semper, eodem modo, eademque mensura, iisdemque temporis vicissitudinibus; cum tempore enim fluit et praecipitatur complexio, et omnia quae complexionem consequantur. Ideo provide et praematurato consilio vinciendi tempus praecognoscendum est, velocissime praesens praesenti utendum, ut vincere potens quamprimum vinciat et stringat.

Vincientis oculi. Art. XXVII.

Ut subtilia sunt vincula, ut pene insensibile est quod vincitur atque profundum, quod leviter tanquam a superficie liceat examinare, quod item per momenta transformabile, non aliter ad vincientem se habens, quam Thetis ad Pelei concubitus evitantdos, respicere debet mutationis ordinem et potentiam subsequentis formae sub praecedente. Quamvis enim materia ad innumerabiles indefinita sit formas, a praesenti tamen forma non aequaliter distat ab omnibus, sed ex his una tantummodo est potissime succedens, alia vero plurium mediorum interiectione, alia pauciorum, quaedam vero omnium elongata consistit. Itaque sicut formam chyli immediate consequitur forma sanguinis, ita indignationis vinculo succedunt irae, irae vero vinculis succurrunt vincula tristitiae, ut facile bilis flava transit in atram. Dispositione igitur perspecta et praesenti qualitate subiectum afficiente, Thetidi isti, antequam in certam migraverit formam, Peleo praeconcepata et praeparata sunt vincula, non ignorant aliter colubrum, aliter leonem, aliter aprum esse vinciendum.

Vincientis lenocinia. Art. XXVIII.

Non ligat vincibile vinciens, sicut neque munitissimam arcem expugnat dux facile, nisi domestico aliquo proditore vel alio quocunque pacto consentiente vel succumbente vel utcunque tractabili ministro fiat aditus; sicut in specie non vincit Venus neque arcem expugnat facile, ubi inania sunt vasa, turbatus spiritus, urens anxia, sed produnt arcem intumescencia vasa, tranquillius animus. mens quieta, corpus otiosum, quorum custodum et vigilum vicibus observatis repente audendum, vi ruedum, viribus omnibus agendum, non cessandum. Haud aliter in aliis vinciendi actibus observandum.

Vincientis scala. Art. XXIX.

Vinciens non unit sibi animam, nisi raptam; non rapit, nisi vinctam; non vincit, nisi illi se copulaverit; non copulatur, nisi ad eam pervenerit; non pervenit, nisi per motum; non movetur, nisi per appulum; non appellit, nisi postquam inclinaverit vel declinaverit ad illam; non inclinat, nisi desideraverit et appetierit; non appetit, nisi cognoverit; non cognovit, nisi oculis et auribus vel interni sensus obtutibus obiectum specie vel simulachro praesens adfuerit. Pervenire igitur facit vincula per cognitionem in genere, nectit vincula per affectum in genere: cognitionem dico in genere, quia nescitur interdum quo sensu rapiatur; affectum dice in genere, quia nec iste facile interdum definitur.

[90v]

Portae per quas vinciens adoritur. Art. XXX.

Tres sunt portae per quas audet animarum venator ligare: visus, auditus et mens seu imaginatio. Quod si contingat per omnes illum intrare portas, potentissime vincit arctissimeque obligat. Per portam auditus ingreditur armatus voce et sermone filio vocis; per portam visus ingreditur armatus forma, gestu et motu figuraque convenienti; per portam imaginationis, mentis, rationis ingreditur per mores et artes. Inde facta primum invectione, secundo copulatione, tertio ligatione, quarto fiet attractio. Per omnes sensus occurrit vinctum vincienti, adeo usque perfecta obligatione facta, ut hoc in totum illud immigret vel immigrare concupiscat, ubi de concupiscentiae vinculo agitur; sunt quippe etiam ingrata vincula proportionalia his, de quibus in his quae de vinculo naturali proferemus, qualibus bufo trahit mustelam spiritus quadam vi occulta, gallus voce rumpit leonem, mugil tactu sistit navim, energumenus phantasia ebibit daemonem, humor melancholicus et ventosus ut magnes se habet ad incubum.

DE VINCIBILIBVS IN GENERE.

Species vincibilis. Articulus I.

Circa Deum seu naturam universalem seu bonum universum seu puchrum absolute, quod est centrum magni mundi, quatuor sunt convertibilia, ita ut ab ipso, ni velint adnihilari, negueant recedere, nec magis ipsum nequeant destituere, quam proprium quaeque circumferentia centrum; quatuor (inquam) in circulum mobilia circa proprium vincientem, ita ut in eodem ordine perpetuo consistent. Platonicis sunt mens, anima, natura, materia; mens per se stabilis, anima per se mobilis, natura partim stabilis partim mobilis, materia ex toto mobilis et ex toto stabilis.

Vincibilis conditio. Artic. II.

Nihil vincitur nisi aptissime praeparatum, quia fulgor ille non eodem rebus omnibus communicatur modo.

Vincibilis forma. Artic. III.

Omnia quae vinciuntur aliquo pacto sentiunt, in cuius sensus substantia inspicere est certam cognitionis et certam appetitus speciem; non aliter magnes secundum genus attrahit et impedit. Vincire ergo volens debet aliquo modo sensum ingerere in illud quod est vincibile; ita quippe vinculum sequitur rei sensum, sicut umbra corpus.

Vincibilium comparatio. Art. IV.

Considera ut homines plus vinciuntur quam bestiae, et homines bestiales atque stupidi ad heroica vincula minime sunt apti, quam hi qui clariorem animam sunt adepti. Quod vero ad naturalia vincula attinet, his magis subiicitur vulgus quam philosophus, unde et sapientes astris dominari est in proverbio. Quod vero attinat ad vincula medii generis, habet generatio helluonum ut continentiam iactet, generatio vero libidinosorum sobrietatem.

Vincibilium distinctio. Art. V.

Ex eo quod proxime dictum est, considerare licat ut intensio unius vinculi reddat alia vinculi specie minus vincibile seu remissius. Idcirco Germanus minus sollicitatur ad Venerem, Italus minus ad crapulam; Hispanus magis pronus est ad amorem, Gallus ad iram.

Vincibilis semen seu fomes. Art. VI.

Vincitur maxime aliquid, quando aliquid sui est in vinciente, vel ideo quia per aliquid sui vinciens imperat illi. Hinc necromantici (ut uno in genere demonstrem) per ungues et capillos vivorum, quin imo et per vestium partes et vestigia, in universum corpus exercere confidunt imperium; per ossa item et quascunque mortuorum partes manes evocant. Unde non temere sepulturas maxime curabant, rogos praeposuerunt et insepultum relinquere inter fera suplicia computabant. Rhetores arte benevolentiam captant, ideo ut aliquid sui auditores et iudex habeat in ipso.

Vincibilis tempus. Art. VII.

Pro aetatis atque temporis varietate varie unum idemque fit vincibile, et varia sunt ad unum idemque vinculum non uno modo disposita, neque ex eodem pariter composita redduntur. Hinc adverte ut qui iunior extitarit et facilis, vir est constantior et prudentior, senex suspiciosior magis et morosus, decrepitus contemnit et fastidit.

Vincibilium differentia. Art. VIII.

Unde vincere volenti animadvertendum est, ut vincibilium quaedam magis natura, quaedam [91v] magis indico seu prudentia, quaedam magis usu et consuetudine agantur; ut solers primos per vincula ex naturalibus comparata, secundos ex rationibus et demonstrationibus, signis et argumentis, tertios ex propinquis et necessariis obligat et astringat.

Vincibilis aversio Artic. IX.

Quoniam magis uni obiecto vincitur animus, quo magis ab aliis abstrahitur et relaxatur, ideo vincibile ad unum definire volenti operae precium est, ut eum in negotiis aliisque rebus torpentem, vel magis ab earum sollicitudine abductum reddat; iocundior quippe operatio iocundam alteram excludit, animus auribus intentus remittit oculos, attentius respiciens obsurdescit, vehementius gaudentes ob unam causam vel tristes non valde aliud agimus, desidiosi vel cessamus vel retardamur ab opere; hoc est abstrahi, trahi, tenari, vinciri. Hinc rhetor per risum, per invidiam et alios affectus solvit ab amore, vincit odio vel contemptui vel indignationi.

Vincibilium numerus. Art. X.

Contemplativi a sensibilium specierum specierum aspectu divinis vinciuntur, voluptuosi per visum ad tangendi copiam descendunt, ethici in conversandi oblectationem trahuntur; primi heroici habentur, secundi naturales, tertii rationales; primi altiores, secundi inferiores, tertii medii; primi dicuntur aethere digni, secundi vita, tertii sensu; primi ascendunt ad Deum, secundi haerent corporibus, tertii ab altero extremorum recedunt, alteri appropinquant.

Vincibilis. motus. Art. XI.

In rebus compositis et variabilibus, et omnino in omnibus quae novitatem naturae et dispositionis subeant, cuiusmodi est anima et spiritus, qui vices varias per corpora et corporum motiones assumunt (quamvis utraque substantia in sua simplicitate constantissima sit et aeterna, ex privatione habet appetitum, ex appetitu appulsum, ex appulsu motum, ex motu solutionem). Inde nullum vinculum est aeternum, sed vicissitudines sunt carceris et libertatis, vinculi et solutionis a vinculo, vel potius demigratio ab una ad aliam vinculi speciem. Idque ut naturale est et aeternam rerum conditionem antecedit, concomitatur atque consequitur, ita natura varietate et motu vincit, et ars naturae aemulatrix vincula multiplicat, variat, diversificat, ordinat et successiva quadam serie componit. Status quoque usque adeo a rebus abhorret, ut interdum etiam in vetitum nitamur magis et eius desiderio amplius afficiamur. A vinculis enim solvi ita naturale est appetere, sicut et paulo ante ipsis alligari ultronea et spontanea quadam inclinatione potuimus.

Vincibilis indefinitio. Art. XII.

Quanto ex pluribus constat vincibile, tanto minus ad certa definitum est vincula. Unde voluptas hominum minus determinata est ad unum tum tempus tum individuum tum sexum, quam brutorum; equam pariter forte omnes equi vincere possunt, mulierem vero frequenter omnes viri non ita. Hic gradus et haec indefinitio, sicut est ab homine ab brutum, ita est a vero homine ad brutalem, a magis sensato, qui etiam magis afficitur, ad magis quod dicitur in uno vinculi genere, ad omnia vinculorum genera atque species referendum.

[92r]

Vincibilitatis fundamentum. Art. XIII.

Ratio prima qua unumquoque vincibile est, partim est ex eo quod in eo esse quod est sibi praesens appetit servari, partim quod secundum ipsum et in ipso maxime perfici. Hoc est philautia in genere. Ergo si quis philautiam posset in subiecto extinguere, maximopere potens ad quomodolibet vinciendum et exolvendum redderetur. Philautia item accensa, facilius naturalium sibi vinculorum generibus astringuntur omnia.

Vincibilium relatio. Art. XIV.

Contemplari animalium amicitiam et inimicitiam, sympathiam et antipathiam, cogitationem et diversitatem, et circumstantias horum; et subeat in humana specie particularia et individua sigillatim, singulas et per universum omnes aliorum animalium primo, deinde omnium rerum aliarum species ordine quodam et analogia referre, ut quam tibi vinculorum diversitate opus sit atque commodo coniicias.

Vincibilium materiae diversitas. Art. XV.

Etsi vincibile omne compositum sit quodammodo, aliud tamen simplex dicitur, aliud multiplex seu compactum, aliud simplicius, aliud permixtum magis. Hinc est quod alia pure vinciuntur alia impure, et vincula alia pura sunt alia impura, ut voluptates et dolores alii puri sunt alii impuri alii commixti, ut Epicuro voluptas Veneris impura indicatur, quia dolorem et inexplebile desiderium (quo corpus totum in totum immigrare contendit in frustra) concomitatur, et tristis eam consequitur lassitudo. Si quae vero essent, in quibus principia nunquam deficiunt, cuiusmodi fortasse sunt astra et magna mundi animalia seu numina, quibus defatigatio {non} accidit, et in quibus effluxio et influxio substantiae aequalis est et eadem, felicissime ipsa sibi in se ipsis sunt devincta.

Qui ergo civiter vincere concupiat, diversitatem compositionum seu complexionum rimetur oportet, et aliter de heroicis, aliter de ordinariis, aliter de magis brutis ingeniis consulat, definiat atque statuatur.

Vincibilium gradus. Art. XVI.

Quemadmodum ad naturales affectus, minus vinciuntur pueri, ratione qua natura in illis incumbit in augmentum, et maiore alteratione exagitur, et nutrimentum totum ad augmentum et constitutionem individui convertitur. Item ad XIV annum incipiunt bene vinciri; quamvis enim aetas adhuc ad incrementum tendat, auctio tamen non est aequae velox atque tanta quanta in pueris. Viri autem in consistente aetate, ut maiorem habent seminis genitalis vim, inde magis vinciri posse videntur. Porro iuvenes et adolescentes ea de causa salaciores esse videntur, et quia novitate delectationis longe magis ardent, et quia meatus per quos transit semen sunt angustiores et humiditas cum suaviori resistentia scaturit, unde fit ut venereo pruritu, qui ex tali conflictu enascitur, delectentur et resolvantur magis. In senioribus vero, in quibus vires sunt semimortuae et organa et meatus effoeti et semen non ita exuperat, vincula sunt difficiliora. Proportionaliter se habet omnino in aliis affectibus, qui cum Venere analogiam, oppositionem et consequentiam quandam agnoscunt.

Vincibilium temperamenta. Art. XVII.

Ad indignationem, tristitiam, voluptatem et amorem ex merito temperaturae melancholici vinciuntur magis; ex hoc enim quod magis sunt apprehensivi, et fortius voluptatem imaginantur. [92v] Unde contemplationi et speculationi etiam sunt aptiores, affectuum in universitate magis et vehementius fluctuant et agitantur. Hinc quod ad Venerem attinet, magis propriam voluptatem finem constituunt, quam speciei propagationem. Istis affines sunt cholericici, quibus minus pruriunt sanguinei. Prae reliquis minus libidinosi sunt phlegmatici, sed magis helluones. Stat tamen quod ad obsequium naturae singuli suas habent partes; vinciuntur enim melancholici maiori imaginationis vi, sanguinei maiori spermatizandi facilitate et caliditatis temperie, phlegmatici maiori humoris abundantia, cholericici fortiore et acutiore calidi spiritus prurigne et stimulo.

Vincibilium signa. Art. XVIII.

Habet in hac consideratione suas etiam physiognomia partes. Tibias enim habentes graciles et nervosas, et hircini, qui ad Satyros referuntur, nasum habentes concavum et obrotundum, suspiriosi et remissi vultus intentius amant, et licentiam per venereas species magis affectant. Idem sunt placabiles facile, nec ullos affectus habent diuturnos.

Vincibilium duratio. Art. XIX.

Senes ad vincula sunt tum duriore, tum ineptiores; iuvenes instabiliores et aptiores; medii vero apte, stabiliter et arte vinciuntur.

Vincibilium reactio. Art. XX.

Mutua gratia parit mutua vincula ; vincula sunt in scommatibus, in histrionia, in facetia; per haec interdum alioqui turpis et deformis arte vincit eos qui erga huiusmodi sunt affecti. Adde quod experti sumus in opinione memerositatis et salacitatis; parta enim imaginatione, puero vel puellae fascinationem iniecit; unde illud.

Me pulchra fateor carere forma;
Porro me mavult, quam Deus priores,
Si qua non fatui est puella fundi.

Proportionaliter vincula sunt, quibus turpes vinciunt ex opinione animositatis, strenuitatis, item eloquentiae, solertiae et aliorum huiusmodi, ut ex uno genere virtutis etiam per aliud genus affectus vincere possint. Non est rara experientia, qua ex opinione virtutis vel actu facundiae turpiores ad Venerem vinciunt viragines.

Vincibilium heterogeneitas. Art. XXI.

Adde quod habeat species, quod a diversa specie vinciatur, per amorem, odium, admirationem, pietatem, compotentiam, et id genus alia, ut pro passere Lesbia, Corinna pro catella, Cyparissus pro cerva, delphin pro Arione vincti celebrantur. In summa, in omni specie semina sunt illecebris ad reliquas. Sileo de sympathia inter hominem et leonem, praetereo quod novi de consuetudine inter draconem et puerum mira.

Vincibilium mutatio. Art. XXII.

Vincibile ab una vinculi specie ad contrariam etiam non difficile est mutare, quemadmodum et mutabile est vinciens; sive secundum rem sive secundum opinionem, nihil interest. Cui enim opinione doctrinae olim viciebar, mox maiori luce ablata ea opinione vincula contemptus et indignationis successerunt. Vincita specie urentis aetatis et pulchritudinis, quam etiam morum et ingenii vincula non confortant, tempore relaxantur et delentur.

Vincibilium causa et oblectum. Art. XXIII.

Latens est quod ad amorem et odium seu despectum citra rationis actum obvincit, et futile [93r] est Adrastiae commentum, [qui] rationem amoris, qui ab aspectu pulchri suppositi exoritur, esse animae quandam recordationem divinae pulchritudinis, quam perceperat priusquam corporis contubernio reciperetur. Quod si verum esset, quid est quod repente ad indignationem obiecto nihilo secundum eam speciem mutato animum convertit? Cur diversi animi diversis magis rapiuntur obiectis? Cur quod uni est summe pulchrum, non minus vegeto ingenio fit etiam turpe? Vincibilium ergo conditio non leviter neque modica fiet observatione pervia.

Vincibilium definitio. Art. XXIV.

Ad casum, fortunam et indefinitum quiddam retulit Theocritus amorem et alios affectus, quibus particularia vinciantur; sed castigatius sensisset existimando et dicendo 'occultum et determinatum' illud, quod 'indefinitum' appellavit quia non apertum; a determinata nempe complexionis ratione, quam vel natura largita est, vel usus et consuetudo invexit.

Vincibilium sensus. Art. XXV.

Achaei non ad rationem seu cognitionis speciem, sed ad fortunam referebant, quod aliquid amore vel odio vel aliis affectibus vinciretur; unde in eadem ara Amorem atque Fortunam colebant. Cui iudicio adstipulanur Platonici quidam, ideo dicentes animalia muta non semper amore vinciri, quia ratione carent et prudentia. Sed isti nimis crasse sentiunt de natura cognitionis et intellectus, qui cum spiritu universi implet omnia et ex omnibus pro suppositi ratione enitescit. Nobis vero tum amor tum omnis affectus valde practica est cognitio; quin etiam discursus, ratiocinatio et argumentatio, qua potidsimum homines vinciuntur, nequaquam inter primarias cognitionis species numeratur. Credat ergo vincere volens rationem neque plures neque praecipuas ad ligandum partes obtinere, bene autem cognitio secundum genus.

Vincibilis fuga. Art. XXVI.

Alii alius se generis vinculis alligat interdum, ut ab uno vinculi genere diffugiat. Hinc hoc est quod vincere volens observare debeat, ut per media eorum, quibus vincitur vincibile, operatur, vinculis nempe quibus ille tenetur obsecundando. Hinc Nympha venatorem amore, sollicitudine et occupatione circa feras abductum, donis sui generis ad Venerem pellexit, cornu nempe cuius voce ferae fugientes sistebantur. Miles etiam armorum virtute et incantatione aliis abduceretur affectibus. Devinciunt ergo a Venere venatio, ieiunium, ebrietas, gymnicae exercitates, et per universum variae sollicitudines et otia, abstinentiae item variae atque luxus etc. Sicut in hoc vinculorum genere, ita in reliquis suo modo iudicandum.

Vincibilis substantia. Art. XXVII.

Duae Vincibilitatis sunt causae, et eadem sunt de essentia vincibilis, quatenus vincibile est: cognitio secundum genus, et appetitus secundum genus. Da quod nullo modo appetat, dabis quod nullo modo spiritualiter vinciatur. Adde quod sine cognitione et affectu, neque est quod aliquis vinciat civiliter neque magice. De reliquis non loquor vinculorum modis, quia parum videntibus, qui sunt plures, inconvenientiora dicere viderer.

Vincibilis perfectio. Art. XXVIII.

Perfecte vincitur quod per omnes facultatas atque partes obligatur. Ipsarum ergo numerus vincienti debet esse exploratus, ut ad perfectionem usque obligare volens per plura irretiat vincibile vel per omnia. Illi non debent esse dubia neque impervia animi et spiritus diversa iuxta diversas potentias alimenta atque illecebrae.

Vincibilium obligatio. Art. XXIX.

Non est possibile vincere quenquam sibi, cui vinciens ipsum non siet etiam obligatum; haerent enim et inseruntur vincula vincto, vinciens vincibile alteri non obligatur quidem nisi per accidens, vinciens vero vincibile sibi non potest esse nisi et obligatum. Hanc vero felicitatem habet vinciens supra vincto, qua vinculis dominus est et qua interdum non pari patiatur et afficiatur ratione. Huic doctrinae proportionale est, quod leno vincit et non vincitur, amico vero amica non vincitur in actu nisi etiam amicus amicae actu vinciatur. Ex spiritu vero occulta est vinculi ratio interdum, qua res amata amanti vincitur, quem non cognoscit interdum, nedum non amat. Pro eadem vero specie et in eodem ordine Eros sine Antero conqueritur et infortunatur. Civiliter vero nemo vincit nisi in eodem vel propinque vinculi genere si non ei, saltem cum eo, quem vincere concupiscit, vinciatur; non enim (ut clarius loquar) rhetor affectus movet sine affectu.

Vincibilis veritas. Art. XXX.

Vincibila, ut vera vinciatur, non tantum vera requirit vincula, nempe quae ex fundamanto huiusmodi sunt, quantum apparentia, id est quae ex opinione; potest enim imaginatio sine veritate vera vincere, et per imaginationem vincibile vere obligare. Etsi enim nullus sit infernus, opinio et imaginatio inferni sine veritatis fundamento vere et verum facit infernum; habet enim sua species phantastica veritatem, unde sequitur quod et vere agat, et vere atque potentissime per eam vincibile obstringatur, et cum aeternitate opinionis et fidei aeternus sit inferni cruciatus, usque adeo ut et animus exutus corpore easdem tamen retinet species, iisdem nihilominus, quinimo etiam potentius interdum propter indisciplinam vel obiectionem vel imbibitam speciem per secula infelix perseveret. Quod vulgo philosophantes hoc non capiant at ignorantissima illa doctrina illulsissime reprobent, non magni facimus, utpote qui pueri non minus eorum rationibus abundavimus et inexperti, quam iisdem ipsi abundare possint periti atque senes; non minus tamen ideo ipsis in hoc sensu adultis condonamus, quam nobis iudicemus condonandum fuisse pueris.

[94r]

DE VINCVLO CVPIDINIS ET QVODAMMODO IN GENERE.

Diximus in his quae De naturali magia quemadmodum vincula omnia tum ad amoris vinculum referantur, tum ab amoris vinculo pedeant, tum in amoris vinculo consistant. Per triginta quippe nodi species inducenti facile manifestum erit, ut amor omnium affectuum extet fundamentum. Qui enim nihil amat, non est cur timeat, speret, gloriatur, superbiat, audeat, contemnat, accuset, excuset, humilietur, aemuletur, irascatur et aliis eiusce generis modis afficiatur. Late igitur patet materia et late funditur consideratio seu speculatio, cui ansam tribuimus sub titulo vinculi Cupidinis; at contemplatio haec a civili instituto non idcirco longius recedere existimanda, quia amplior est mirifice quam ad civile institutum.

Vinculi definitio. Articulus Primus.

Vinculum pulchritudinis apud Pythagoricos at Platonicos dicitur fulgor, radius at actus quidam vel umbra et simulacrum illius saltem atque vestigium: primo diffusum in mentem quam rerum ordine decoret, secundo in animam quam rerum serie compleat, tertio (in) naturam quam seminibus distinguat at suffulciat, quarto in materiam quam formis exornet. Hic radius clarissime est in menta, clare in anima, obscure in natura, obscurissime in rerum naturalium subiecto, aiunt. Ipsum non est in mole neque moles consistens, [neque moles] licet etiam circa molem versetur et per universum magnitudinem, quandoquidem non grandia modo sed et brevia formosa videntur, in eadam item specie grandia deformia sunt et parva formosa et econtra, et saepe eadem quantitate stante casu quodam pulchritudo tollitur, eademque mutata pulchritudo perseverat. Placet venustissimus infans et puellus, sed non vincit nisi a certa aetate adolescens. Habet ergo aliquid moles; hoc enim verum est etiam nihilo forma, figura et complexione rei variata. Inde inducito ad civiles vincendi species, per media quantitatis in quibus consistit forma et efficacia vinculi: referas, inquam, ad gestum, verba, vestes, consuetudines, risus et affectuum alia signa.

Vinculi origo. Art. II.

Platonicorum quidam vinculum a certa membrorum proportione proficisci definiunt cum colorum quadam suavitate concurrente. Ad plura vero respicientibus, saltem ad hoc quod non solum res compositae et membrorum varietate consistentes vinciunt, sed interdum purus color, pura vox; nihil item citius labitur et senescit quam pulchritudo, nihil vere tardius alteratur quam figura et forma quae ex membrorum compositione exterius enitescit; vinculum igitur pulchritudinis in alio respiciendum esse videtur, quem in figura et membrorum proportionem, quinimo eadam pulchritudine permanente etiam atque figura, interdum post rei amatae fruitionem praeterit amor. Quocirca praesertim in quadam rapiantis et rapti condispositione vinculi ratio consistit. Interdum quippe [94v] rationaliter in puellae pulchritudine, civiliter in hominis conversatione, oratione, habitu et actione per universum, cum nihil habeamus quod ratione argui possit, non placent tamen; in uno vero plura vel singula cum displiceant, placebit tamen nihilominus ille. Stupidius vero est quod coloris de vinculo referunt, non distinguentes inter colorem et inter id quod circa colorem est; quî enim color per se vincit, quando clarior in seniore displicet et despicitur, remissior vero in iuniore ligat atque rapit? Sic civiliter consularis et gravis oratio ab adolescente profecta, quantavis eniteat arte, arrogantiae specie maturiora iudicia ad indignationem concitat; venusta vero, blanda atque florida ex ore senioris contemptum parit, atque risum interdum exuscitat et irrisionis materiam subministrat; ita ut in cultu corporis, verborum et operis aliud est quod matronam, aliud quod virginem, aliud quod puellam, aliud quod puerum, quod virum, quod seniore decet, aliud item quod militem, aliud quod togatum.

Vinculi indefinito. Art. III.

Non tam difficile est (credo) vincere et solvere, quam vinculum invenire, in his (inquam) propositis, in quibus magis ad casum, quam ad naturam et artem vincula referantur. Vinculum nempe, quod a corpore proficiscitur, nullam habet corporis definitam partem; sunt enim oculi, genae et es, quibus se vinciri sentit amans, quae tamen vel eodem numero diversis tributa subiectis tantum abest interdum ut similiter vinciant, ut etiam Cupidinis vincula dissolvant vel arceant. Quid quod quem corporea specie interdum deperimus, novimus ex more vel sermone vincula Cupidinis cessasse? Ita suo modo in civilibus vinculis considerabis.

Vinculi compositio. Artic. IV.

Cupidinis inferioris vinculum est quod compositis et apposis vincimur, simplicibus vero et absolutis nihilo capimur. Et sunt qui haec usque adeo contemnant etiam; iisdem Deus pulchritudinem in se habere non existimabitur, quia cum simplex quaedam natura sit, in compositionis ordinatione minime praefulgeat. Stat tamen ex fide ipsum pulchritudinis omnis atque vinculi authorem esse atque perfectorem. Non distinguunt vero propter ingenii imbecillitatem inter simpliciter pulchrum et ad nos pulchrum, sicut et civiliter non sapit, qui inter pulchrum ad homines omnes et rationem, et homines istos et consuetudinem, usus et occasionem non distinguit, perperam vincere concupiscens.

Vinculorum numerus. Art. V.

Vincula sunt confuse seu consistenter corporis forma, corporis habitus, corporis motus, vocum et sermonis consonantia, morum concinnitas et fortuna et sympathiae occursus, quibus non solum homines hominibus et ferae feris, sed etiam hominibus ferae vinciuntur. Huc spectat quod ex naturali caractere puer viso serpente, agnus viso lupo, nulla [95r] experientia vel noticia praevia, mortaliter exhorrescit, viso autem bove vel ove colludit et congaudet. Sunt fumigia, quibus homines et spiritus rapiuntur varii, varia. Novi homines qui odorem moschi mire exhorrebant et omnes qui per universum sunt suaves, ut etiam caderent prae spiritus turbatione; inter alios unum, qui digitis perfrictos cimices naribus supponendo mirifice delectabatur. Sic varus varia, quin etiam contrariis non solum contraria, sed etiam diversa, vinciuntur. Et civiliter non eadem orationis species atque cultus corporis ornatus et morum concinnitas vel facilitas Germano probatur atque Italo, uni et alteri Germano, ut ab universitate Italus recedens Germanum habeat ingenium, Germanus Italicum. Hinc difficultas est et maior prudentia requiritur in vinciendo civiliter, praesertim ubi non ad multitudinem, sed ad individuum vincula iaciuntur; facilius quippe est vincere multos quam unum, et uno iaculo in multitudinem avium proiecto etiam casu plures potent aucupis iactus traicere, quam aptiore collineatione e pluribus unam.

Vinculorum portae. Art. VI.

Ostia per quae vincula iaciuntur sunt sensus, maxime vero omnium visus atque dignissime; reliqui vero pro obiectorum et potentiarum varietate proprius, sicut ex carnis lenitate vincitur tactus, vocis symphonia auditus, suavi anhelitu olfactus, morum concinnitate animus, demonstrationum claritate intellectus. Per diversas fenestras diversa ingrediuntur vincula, quorum quaedam plus in uno, quaedam plus in alio praepollent; unde alii uno, alii altero magis studio delectantur; quippe etiam vinculum non aequaliter ab omnibus nec aequaliter in omnia perducitur.

Vinculorum, genera. Art. VII.

Vinculorum totidem intelligimus esse genera atque differentias, quot pulchri sunt genera atque differentiae; istae vero differentiae non pauciores esse videntur, quam rerum sint praecipuarum, nempe secundum speciem. Adde quod in singulis speciebus diversa particularia diversimode atque diversis vinciuntur. Vincitur ad cibum famelicus, ad potum sitiens, ad Venerem semine plenus, ad speciem sensibilem hic, ad intelligibilem ille, ad naturalem unus, ad artificialem alius, vincitur abstractis mathematicus, concretis practicus, absente specie masturbans eremita, praesente familiaris, diversis tamen secundum omne genus diversa, quin etiam non undique eadem vincula procedentia eandem secum virtutem referunt. Vincit enim musica pueri et adolescentis, puellae vero non ita neque viri; robur in viro magnificando vincit, in foemina vero minime; puella simplicitate et honestate vincit. Solvit vero a vinculis si ita afficiatur adultus, et amplius atque amplius displicet.

Vinculorum modus. Art. VIII.

Vinciunt magis civiliter rhetores et aulici et utlibet consuetudinem habentes, ubi transfuga quadam artis dissimulatione operantur; neque enim qui satis belle loquitur nimisque superstitiosule sapit, ille placebit; displicent nimis methodice et geometricae vestes appositae, capilli intorti, oculi et gestus et motus ad normam omnem exacti; multum enim abest ut eiusmodi etiam non [95v] displiceat. Ita civiliter in oratione, quam vulgo nimis affectatam et elaboratam indicarent. Hoc enim ad inertiam potius referendum est et ingenii mentisque inopiam; non exigua quippe artis pars est artem dissimulando arte uti. Non ergo belle sapit qui ubique et per omnia belle sapit, sicut neque annulatus est belle qui omnes digitos annulis. confertos habet atque gemmis, nec belle torquatus qui onustus monilium varietate et multitudine progreditur. Huc spectat maxime considerare quod lucis fulgor lucis fulgorem extinguit, et lux non nisi in tenebris lucet, fulget, enitescit, placet. Ornamentum etiam nullum est, ubi cum eo quod est ornandum et informe non cohaeret. Itaque ars a natura non absolvitur, cultus a simplicitate non recedit.

Vinculi descriptio. Art. IX.

Vinculum Platoni est secundum genus pulchritudo seu conformitas, Socrati excellens animi venustas, Timaeo animae tyrannis, Plotino naturae privilegium, Teophrasto tacita deceptio, Salomoni ignis absconditus et aquae furtivae, Theocrito eburneum detrimentum, Carneadi regnum sollicitum, mihi tristitia hilaris, hilaritas tristes. Analogiam habent descriptiones aliae affectuum et vinculorum species ad praesentem affectum atque vinculum, per ea quae in praefatione partis huius adduximus.

Vinculorum distributio. Art. X.

Ad actum perfectum perfecta vinciuntur, nobilem nobilia vel nobilitata; ad imperfectum vero et defectum vinciuntur ea in quibus aliqua est imperfectio atque defectus. Ideo dictum est in superioribus aliquid vincendi debere esse in vinciente. Puella omnino casta, in qua fomitis semina nulla consistent, ad libidinem nulla arte et nullo astro vincitur, si non tangatur, si non attingatur, sine (inquam) participatione eius ad manus vincientis, et sine aliqua profusione a manu vincientis ad ipsam. De immatura nihil loquar; in omnibus enim actibus semine quodam opus est, semina vero omnia non ubique proliferant. Aegrotum, senem, frigidum, mutilum, quis non frustra irretire conabitur, econtra vero se habentem quis non implicare? In civilibus vinculis proportionale omnino facile est iudicium.

Vinculorum gradus. Art. XI.

Res in universo ita sunt ordinatae, ut in una quadam coordinatione consistent, ita ut continuo quodam quasi fluxu ab omnibus progressio fieri possit ad omnia. Horum vero alia aliis immediate cohaerent, sicut ad naturalem propagationem eiusdem speciei individua, et in his familiaria sunt vincula cognata et facillima. Alia vero mediis quibusdam subordinantur, et in his media omnia pertransire oportet et penetrare quodammodo, ut a vinciente in vincibile vincula protendantur. Itaque numina, per rerum elargitionem et mediorum quorundam impertibilium favorem, inferiora et infima tandem sibi devinciunt influendo. Vicissim vero obsecundatione quadam [96r] naturali vel rationali, quodam cultu inferiora tollantur, ut superiora et eminus posita sibi pro congruo arbitrio revinciant. Utque variae sunt rerum species eorum atque differentiae, ita eorum varia sunt tempora loca, media, via, organa et officium. Hoc in omni genere vinculorum et vincibilium perspicere facillimum est et inducere.

Vinculi magnitudo. Art. XII.

Divina vis quaedam est in rebus omnibus, amor ipse pater, fons et Amphitrites est vinculorum. Ideo non perperam Orpheus et Mercurius ipsum magnum Daemona appellant, quippe et tota rerum substantia, constitutio et (ut ita dicam) hypostasis vinculum quoddam est. Maximam ergo et principem vinculi doctrinam assequemur, ubi ad ordinem universi oculos convertemus. Hoc vinculo superiora provident inferioribus, inferiora convertuntur ad superiora, paria invicem associantur, universi tandem perfectio est secundum formae rationem.

Vinculi principalis effectus. Ar. XIII.

Amor unus, vinculum unum, facit omnia unum, diversas habet in diversis facies, ut idem aliter alia atque alia vinciat. Hinc Cupido idem dicitur superior et inferior, novissimus et antiquissimus, caecus et perspicacissimus, qui facit omnia pro viribus vel in se ipsis consistere ne a se recedant, ad speciei perennitatem. Ad particularium vero vicissitudinem facit, ut singula quodammodo a se ipsis recedant, ubi in amatum transferri concupiscit amans omne; per se ipsa quoque dissolvantur, aperiantur, dehiscant, ubi totum amans concipere concupit amatum et imbibere. Itaque est vinculum, quo res volunt esse ubi sunt et non amittere quae habent, interea quoque volunt esse ubique et habere quae absunt; unde ex complacentia quadam circa possessa, desiderio et appetitu circa distantia et possessibilia, et amore circa omnia, quia particulari et finito bono atque vero non expletur particularis appetitus et intellectus, qui ad universum bonum et universum verum respiciunt obiecta. Hinc est ut ab eodem vinculo finita potentia in quadam definita materia simul et stringi et dispergi, detrahi atque dissipari se experiatur. Hanc conditionem vinculi secundum genus in vinculis secundum specierum singulas observato.

Vinculi qualitas. Art XIV.

Vinculum neque pulchrum est neque bonum; est enim quo pulchrum atque bonum persequuntur omnia atque singula, et connectit illud quod accipit cum eo quod accipitur, illud quod dat cum eo cui datur, vincibile cum vinciente, appetibile cum appetente. Hoc vero quod appetit pulchrum atque bonum, quatenus appetit, caret; ideo pulchrum neque bonum eatentis est. Inde male concludit in proposito materiae Peripateticorum aliquis, materiam turpem esse atque malam, quia appetendo bonum et pulchrum eodem carere se contestatur. Circumspectius dixit Aristoteles 'sicut turpe', 'sicut malum', non autem simpliciter huiusmodi. In rei autem veritate neque turpe, neque pulchrum, neque malum est neque bonum, quod ad bonitatem, malitiam, turpitudinem et pulchritudinem tendit et aequae fertur ut materia. Si materia esset malum, contra eius naturam esset appetere bonum; itidem natura turpe. Item si esset secundum similitudinem, [96v] similiter se haberet atque contrarium, quod alterum contrarium non appetit, sed excludit et abhorret. Profundius vero philosophantes intelligunt, quod nos alibi declaravimus, ut materia ipsa inchoationem habeat omnium formarum in sinu suo, ita ut ex eo omnia promat et emittat, non puram illam exclusionem, ita ut quasi omnia peregrina concipiat ab externo; extra quipp materiae gremium nulla forma est, sed in eo tum omnes latent, et ex eo tum omnes educuntur. Civiliter ergo et secundum omnes rationes de vinculo consideranti perspicuum esse debet, ut in omni materia seu materiae parte, in omni individuo seu particulari, tum omnia sublateant et subcontineantur semina, tum consequenter omnium vinculorum applicationes solerti quodam artificio compleri posse; et docuimus in uno de triginta sigillis, ut generalis ista transformatio fiat et applicatio.

Vinculi generalitas seu universitas. Art. XV.

Ex hoc quod proxime dictum est sequitur amorem quo amamus, appetitum quo appetunt omnia, tum medium esse inter bonum et malum, turpe et pulchrum, tum (non ideo non turpe, non pulchrum) secundum certam communicationem et participationem bonum et pulchrum. Exsumitur enim amoris vinculum secundum rationem communem activo et passivo, qua omnia, sive agant sive patiantur sive utrumque faciant, ordinari, copulari, uniri et perfici cupiunt, quatenus natura quaedam ordinem, copulam, unionem et perfectiorem operatur, atque sine hoc vinculo nihil est, sicut sine natura nihil est. Non propterea igitur amor imperfectionem significat, ubi in materia et Chaos ante rerum perfectionem contemplatur; totum quippe quod in Chaos et bruta ilia quam excogitaverunt materia dicitur esse amor, totum dicitur simul esse perfectio; quantum vero dicitur non esse, imperfectio et inordinatio, intelligitur non esse amor. Stat ergo, ut amor ubique perfectum, et vinculum hoc ubique perfectionem contestetur. Ubi quippe imperfectum amat perfici, hoc quod amat perfici habet quidem per imperfectionem, sed non ab imperfectione, sed certe a perfectionis participatione quadam et lumine divinitatis et eminentioris cuiusdam naturae obiecto, tanto magis vivaciter quanto vehementius appetit. Altius quippe summi amore boni flagrat quod perfectius est, quam quod imperfectum. Perfectissimum ergo est illud principium, quod fieri vult omnia et quod non ad particularem formam fertur et particularem perfectionem, sed ad universam formam et ad universam perfectionem. Eiusmodi est materia per universum, extra quam nulla est forma, in cuius potentia, appetita et dispositione omnes sunt formae, et quae in partibus suis vicissitudine quadam omnes recipit formas, quarum simul vel duas recipere non posset. Et divinum ergo quoddam est materia, sicut et divinum quoddam existimatur esse forma, quae aut nihil est aut materiae quiddam est. Extra et sine materia nihil, sicut posse facere et posse fieri tandem unum et idem sunt, et individuo uno consistunt fundamento, quia simul datur et tollitur potens facere omnia cum potente fieri omnia; atque una potentia absoluta atque simpliciter (quicquid [97r] sit potentia in particulari et compositorum et accidentaria, quae sensus et mentem Peripateticorum fascinavit, cum asseclis quibusdam cucullatis), quemadmodum pluribus in his quae De infinite et universo diximus et in dialogis De principio et uno exactius, non stultam concludentes Davidis de Dinantho et Avicbronis in libro Fontis vitae sententiam ab Arabibus citatam, qui ausi sunt materiam etiam 'Deum' appellare.

Vinculorum comparatio. Art. XVI.

Vinculum omnium potissimum est Veneris et secundum genus amoris, ad cuius aequalitatem et unitatem odii vinculum primo atque potissimum refertur. Quantum quippe unum oppositorum et contrariorum secundum genus amamus, tantum alterum censequenter odimus atque spernimus. Duo hi affectus, et tandem unus ille affectus, qui est amor, omnibus dominatur (in cuius substantia includitur odium), super omnes dominatur et eos erigit, dirigit, regulat et moderatur. Hoc vinculo caetera solvuntur vincula, ut animalia vinculo Veneris constricta foeminina alias foeminas, masculina alios mares rivales non compatiantur; cibos, potus et interdum vitam ipsam negligunt, ne victa quidem absistunt, sed a fortioribus contrita eo magis insectantur, non imbres, non frigora pertimescunt. Quo argumento Aristippus corpoream voluptatem potissimumque Veneream summum bonum statuit, sed illi ante oculos homo plus animalis pro virtute propriae complexionis obiiciebatur. Hoc tamen verum est quod solertior et sagacior irretitor ex his, quae ligandus vel vincendus amat et odit, ad aliorum affectuum vincula sibi viam sternit; vinculum quippe vinculorum amor est.

Vinculorum tempus et locus. Art. XVII.

Sicut non ubique neque semper, quamvis optima iaciantur semina, rerum propagatio consequitur, ita neque irretientia vincula perpetuo et ubique, sed apto tempore et subiectorum congrua dispositione virtutem concipiunt effectus.

Vinculi distinctio. Art. XVIII.

Vinculum pure naturale et pure voluntarium (iuxta rationem qua vulgus distinguit inter naturam et voluntatem) non datur. Voluntas enim cum intellectus participatione et intelligentia non voluntatis termino ubique viget, praeterquam ubi nihil est, ut in aliis ostendimus locis; unde sequitur multos multa frustra disputare. In nobis secundum rationem tres sunt differentiae vinculorum (licet in una naturae radice fundentur omnia): naturale, rationale et voluntarium. Unde ex parte unam vinculi differentiam per aliam vinculi differentiam moderari nequimus. Hinc prudentum leges non prohibent amare, sed praeter rationem amare; stultorum vero sycophantiae sine ratione (rationi) rationis terminos praescribunt, naturae legem damnant; quin et corruptissimi corruptam eam vocant, quo non supra naturam tollantur heroës, sed contra naturam et infra omnem dignitatem deprimantur bestiae.

Vinculi progressio et scala. Art. XVIII.

Vinculi Cupidinisque complexio ita Platonice completur. Primo pulchri seu boni et id genus species in sensus externos fertur, secundo in eorum centrum, qui sensus est communis, retrahitur tertio in imaginationem, quarto in memoriam. Inde anima ingenio quodam [97v] appetit, ut primo moveatur convertatur, rapiatur, secundo conversa et rapta pulchri vel boni vel veri radio illustratur, tertio illustrata et illuminata appetitu sensitivo accenditur, quarto accensa amato adhaerere concupiscit, quinto adhaerens ipsi etiam immiscetur et incorporatur, sexto incorporata iuxta pristinam formam deperditur et se ipsam quodammodo destituit et aliena qualitate afficitur, septimo in ipsum qualitatis subiectum in quod transiit et ita affecta fuit transformatur. Conversionem ad motum Cupidinis praeparationem appellant, conversionem Cupidinis ortum, illustrationem Cupidinis pabulum, accensionem Cupidinis accrementum, adhaerentiam Cupidinis impetum, incorporationem Cupidinis dominium, transformationem Cupidinis triumphum seu perfectionem.

Fulcra scalae vinculorum. Art. XIX.

Habes quo haec scala per singulos gradus innitatur. Ortus Cupidinis fit primo ex corporeis alimento, delitiis, luxibus, secundo ex anima seu spiritus illecebris et lascivis vel meliori nomine dignis meditationibus, quibus pulchrum gratia coniunctum occurrat; Cupidinis pabulum, quod ortum non facit interire, pulchri cognitio est; Cupidinis accrementum est super pulchro cognito meditatio, mora; Cupidinis impetus in eo versatur quod animus ab una amati parte ad omnes prolabitur et diffundatur, ut ex toto accendi possit; dominium Cupidinis in eo nititur quod amantis animus relicto suo corpore it et operatur in alieno; Cupidinis transformatio est tibi sibi mortuus aliena vivit vita, unde non tanquam in alieno, sed tanquam in proprio deinceps ibi consistat domicilio. Hoc est quod aiunt Iovem in taurum, Apollinem in pastorem, Saturnum in equum, et Deos alios in alias migrasse formas, quod animus ex una forma et vinculi specie in aliam affectuum motione seu turbatione transforatur.

Vinculorum conditio. Art. XX.

Sunt quaedam exteriora quac vinciunt, sicut dona, obsequia, honores, officia; sed vere vinciunt, quando non eam ferunt speciem, qua quasi pro emenda redamatione offerantur; mercaturae enim species, utilitatis et ignobilitatis species est et in vilipendium cedit.

Vinculorum proprietas. Art. XXI.

Propria haec sunt vincula et potentissima, quae sunt per approximationem contrarii, iuxta eam speciem quae nunc magis exemplo quam definitione seu nomine (quod ignotum est) explicari potest. Superbum animum vincit humilis et honorificus; eos enim amat superbus, a quo magnifieri se videt, tantoque magis quanto a maiore; maius quippe est a magnis quam a parvis magnifieri, imo et ab istis aestimari contemnere etiam solemus interdum. Vinciens circumspecte speciem qua superbus superbit tuetur. Alii enim, id est milites, in robore et strenuitate corporis primas habere volunt; ideo si primas iisdem in rerum potentia et sagacitate non tribuant, facile ferunt. Qui vero de rerum cognitione gloriantur philosophi, facillime ferunt si pectoris pro strenuitate non magnifiant. Idem iudicium est pro aliorum iniiectione vinculorum.

[98r]

Vinculorum gratia. Art. XXII.

Gratitudinis speciem concupiscere faciunt vincula. Oritur quippe (ut in uno vinculorum genere inducam) inter amantes querela, ubi mutuo alterum alteri debere praesumunt; iudicat amans debitum amatae, ut animam illi ablatam restituat, ubi in proprio corpore mortuus in alieno vivit; si amans amatae minus blanditur, queritur haec quasi eam ille curet minus; queritur amans versus amatam, si * * * [abbiamo aggiunto i segni di lacuna]

To the Most Honorable Lord, Most Illustrious Prince, Hermannus of Wyda, Prince Elector, Duke of Westphalia, and Augaria, Lord and Arch-prelate of Colonia, and Paderbornia, by his most gracious Master, Henry

Cornelius Agrippa of Nettes-heym wisheth health.

Behold now (most illustrious Prince, and most honorable Prelate!) the rest of the books of Occult Philosophy, or Magick, which I promised Your Worthiness that I would put forth when I published the first of them: but the suddain, and almost unexpected death of holy Margaret of Austria my Princess coming upon it, hindred me then from the endavoring to put it forth. Then the wickedness of some Pulpit-sycophants, and of some School-Sophisters incessantly raging against me for a declamation I put forth concerning the Vanity of things, and the excellency of the word of God, and contending against me continually with bitter hatred, envy, malice, and calumnies, hindered me from putting of it forth; whereof some very proudly, with a full mouth, and loud voice aspersed me with impiety in the Temple amongst a promiscuous people. Others with corner-whisperings from house to house, street by street, did fill the ears of the ignorant with my infamy: others in publicke, and private assemblies did instigate Prelates, Princes, and Caesar himself against me. Hence I began to be at a stand, whether I should put forth the rest of the book or no, whilst I did doubt that I should by this means expose my self to greater calumnies, and as it were cast my self out of the smoke into the fire, a certain rude fear seised [seized] upon me, least by putting them forth I should seem more offensive then officious to you, and expose your highness to the envy of malicious Carpers, and tongues of detractors. Whilst these things troubled me with a various desparation, the quickness of your understanding, exact discretion, uprightness of Judgement, Religion without superstition, and other most known vertues in you, your authority, and integrity beyond exception, which can easily check, and bridle the tongues of slanderers, removed my doubting, and inforced me to set upon that again more boldly, which I had almost left off by reaon of despaire. Therefore (most Illustrious Prince) take in good part this second book of Occult Philosophy, in which we shew the mysteries of the Celestiall Magick, all things being opened, and manifested, which experienced antiquity makes relation of, and which came to my knowledge, that the secrets of Celestiall Magick (hitherto neglected, and not fully apprehended by men of latter times) may with your protection be by me, after the shewing of natural vertues, proposed to them that are studious, and curious of these secrets: by which let him that shall be profited and receive benefit, give you the thanks, who have been the occasion of this Edition, and setting of it at liberty to be seen abroad.

Farewell.

The Second Book of Occult Philosophy, or Magick; written by Henry Cornelius Agrippa.

BOOK II.

Chapter i. Of the necessity of Mathematicall learning, and of the many wonderfull works which are done by Mathematicall Arts only.

The Doctrines of Mathematicks are so necessary to, and have such an affinity with Magick, that they that do profess it without them, are quite out of the way, and labour in vain, and shall in no wise obtain their desired effect. For whatsoever things are, and are done in these inferior naturall vertues, are all done, and governed by number, weight, measure, harmony, motion, and light. And all things which we see in these inferiours, have root, and foundation in them: yet nevertheless without naturall vertues, of Mathematicall Doctrines only works like to naturals can be produced, as Plato saith, a thing not paataking of truth or divinity, but certain Images kin to them, as bodies going, or speaking, which yet want the Animall faculty, such as were those which amongst the Ancients were called Dedalus his Images, and αὐτοματά, of which Aristotle makes mention, viz. the threefooted Images of Vulcan, and Dedalus, moving themselves, which Homer saith came out of their own accord to exercise, and which we read, moved themselves at the feast of Hiarba the Philosophicall Exerciser: As also that golden Statues performed the offices of Cup bearers, and Carvers to the guests. Also we read of the Statues of Mercury, which did speak, and the wooden Dove of Arthita, which did fly, and the miracles of Boethius, which Cassiodorus made mention of, viz. Diomedes in Brass, sounding a Trumpet, and a brazen Snake hissing, and pictures of birds singing most sweetly. Of this kind are those miracles of Images which proceed from Geometry, and Opticks, of which we made some mention in the first book, where we spoke of the Element of Aire, So there are made glasses, some Concave, others of the form of a Columne, making the representations of things in the Aire seem like shadows at a distance: of which sort Apoilonius, and Vitellius in their Books De Perspectiva, and Speculis, taught the making, and the use. And we read that Magnus Pompeius brought a certain glass amongst the spoils from the East, to Rome, in which were seen Armies of Armed men. And there are made certain transparent glasses, which being dipped in some certain juices of Hearbs [herbs], and irradiated with an artificiall light, fill the whole Aire round about with visions. And I know how to make reciprocally glasses, in which the Sun shining, all things which were illustrated by the raies [rays] thereof are apparently seen many miles off. Hence a Magician, expert in naturall Philosophy, and Mathematicks, and knowing the middle sciences consisting of both these, Arithmatick, Musick, Geometry, Opticks, Astronomie [astronomy], and such sciences that are of weights, measures, propertions, articles, and joynts, knowing also Mechanicall Arts resulting from these, may without any wonder, if he excell other men in Art, and wit, do many wonderfull things, which the most prudent, and wise men may much admire. Are there not some reliques extant of the Ancients works, viz. Hercules, and Alexanders pillars, the gate of Caspia made of brass, and shut with Iron beams, that it could by no Wit or Art, be broken? And the Pyramis of Julius Caesar erected at Rome neer the hill Vaticanus, and Mountains built by Art in the middle of the Sea, and Towers, and heaps of Stones, such as I saw in England put together by an incredible Art. And we read in faithfull Historians, that in former times Rocks have been cut off, and Vallies [valleys] made, and Mountains made into a Plain, Rocks have been digged through, Promontories have been opened in the Sea, the bowels of the Earth made hollow, Rivers divided, Seas joyned to Seas, the Seas restrained, the bottome of the Sea been searched, Pools exhausted, Fens dried up, new Islands made, and again restored to the continent, all which, although they my seem to be against nature, yet we read have been done, and we see some reliques of them remaining till this day, which the vulgar say were the works of the divell [Devil], seeing the Arts, and Artificers thereof have been dead out of all memory, neither are there any that care to understand, or search into them. Therefore they seeing any wonderfull sight, do impute it to the divell, as his work, or think it is a miracle, which indeed is a work of naturall, or Mathematicall Philosophy. As if anyone should be ignorant of the vertue of the Loadstone, and should see heavy Iron drawn upwards, or hanged in the Aire (as we read the Iron Image of Mercury did long since at Treveris hang up in the middle of the Temple by Loadstones, this verse attesting the same.

The Iron white rod-bearer flies i'th' Aire.

The like to which we read was done concerning the image of the Sun at Rome, in the Temple of Serapis) would not such an ignorant man, I say, presently say it is the work of the divell? But if he shall know the vertue of the Loadstone to the Iron, and shall make triall of it, he presently ceaseth to wonder, and doth no more scruple it to be the work of nature. But here it is convenient that you know, that as by naturall vertues we collect naturall vertues, so by abstracted, mathematicall, and celestiall, we receive celestiall vertues, as motion, life, sense, speech, southsaying [soothsaying], and divination, even in matter less disposed, as that which is not made by nature, but only by art. And so images that speak, and foretell things to come, are said to be made, as William of Paris relates of a brazen head made under the rising of Saturn, which they say spake with a mans voice. But he that will choose a disposed matter, and most fit to receive, and a most powerfull agent, shall undoubtedly produce more powerfull effects. For it is a generall opinion of the Pythagoreans, that as Mathematicall things are more formall then Naturall, so also they are more efficacious: as they have less dependence in their being, so also in their operation. But amongst all Mathematicall things, numbers, as they have more of form in them, so also are more efficacious, to which not only Heathen Philosophers, but also Hebrew, and Christian Divines do attribute vertue, and efficacy, as well to effect what is good, as what is bad.

Chapter ii. Of Numbers, and of their power, and vertue.

Severinus Boethius saith, that all things which were first made by the nature of things in its first Age, seem to be formed by the proportion of numbers, for this was the principall pattern in the mind of the Creator. Hence is borrowed the number of the Elements, hence the courses of times, hence the motion of the Stars, and the revolution of the heaven, and the state of all things subsist by the uniting together of numbers. Numbers therefore are endowed with great and sublime vertues. For it is no wonder, seeing there are so many, and so great occult vertues in naturall things, although of manifest operations, that there should be in numbers much greater, and more occult, and also more wonderfull, and efficacious, for as much as they are more formall, more perfect, and naturally in the celestialls, not mixt with separated substances; and lastly, having the greatest, and most simple commixtion with the Idea's in the mind of God, from which they receive their proper, and most efficacious vertues: wherefore also they are of more force, and conduce most to the obtaining of spirituall, and divine gifts, as in naturall things, elementary qualities are powerfull in the transmuting of any elementary thing. Again, all things that are, and are made, subsist by, and receive their vertue from numbers. For time consists of number, and all motion, and action, and all things which are subject to time, and motion.

Harmony also, and voices have their power by, and consist of numbers, and their proportions, and the proportions arising from numbers, do by lines, and points make Characters, and figures: And these are proper to Magicall operations, the middle which is betwixt both being appropriated by declining to the extreame, as in the use of letters. And lastly, all species of naturall things, and of those things which are above nature, are joyned together by certain numbers: which Pythagoras seeing, saith, that number is that by which all things consist, and distributes each vertue to each number. And Proclus saith, Number hath alwaies a being: Yet there is one in voyce, another in the proportion of them, another in the soul, and reason, and another in divine things. But Themistius, and Boethius, and Averrois the Babilonian [Babylonian], together with Plato, do so extoll numbers, that they think no man can be a true Philosopher without them. Now they speak of a rationall, and formall number, not of a materiall, sensible, or vocall, the number of Merchants buying, and selling, of which the Pythagoreans, and Platonists, and our Austin [Augustine] make no reckoning, but apply it to the proportion resulting from it, which number they call naturall, rationall, and formall, from which great mysteries flow, as well in naturall, as divine, and heavenly things. By it is there a way made for the searching out, and understanding of all things knowable. By it the next access to naturall prophesying is had: and the Abbot Joachim proceeded no other way in his Prophecies, but by formall numbers.

Chapter iii. How great vertues Numbers have, as well in Naturall things, as in Supernaturall.

That there lyes [lies] wonderfull efficacy, and vertue in numbers, as well to good as to bad, not only most eminent Philosophers do unanimously teach, but also Catholike [Catholic] Doctors, and especially Hierom, Austin [Augustine], Origen, Ambrose, Gregory of Nazianzen, Athanasius, Basilius, Hilarius, Rubanus, Bede, and many more confirm. Hence Hilarius in his Commentaries upon the Psalms, testifies that the seventy Elders, according to the efficacy of numbers, brought the Psalms into order. Rabanus also, a famous Doctor, composed an excellent book of the vertues of numbers: But now how great vertues numbers have in nature, is manifest in the hearb [herb] which is called Cinquefoil, i.e. five leaved Grass; for this resists poysons [poisons] by vertue of the number of five; also drives away divells [devils], conduceth to expiation; and one leafe of it taken twice in a day in wine, cures the Feaver [fever] of one day: three the tertian Feaver: foure the quartane. In like manner four grains of the seed of Turnisole being drunk, cures the quartane, but three the tertian. In like manner Vervin is said to cure Feavers, being drunk in wine, if in tertians it be cut from the third joynt [joint], in quartans from the fourth. A Serpent, if he be once struck with a Spear, dieth, if twice, recovers strength. These and many such as these are read, and testified in divers Authors. We must know now whence these are done, which certainly have a cause, which is a various proportion of various numbers amongst themselves. There is also a wonderfull experiment of the number of seven, that every seventh male, born without a female coming betwixt, hath power to cure the Kings evill by his touch alone, or word. Also every seventh daughter that is born, is said wonderfully to help forward the birth of children: neither is the naturall number here considered, but the formall consideration that is in the number. And let that which we spake before, be alwaies kept in mind, viz. that these powers are not in vocall, or numbers of merchants buying, and selling, but in rationall, formall, and naturall; These are distinct mysteries of God, and nature. But he that knows how to joyn [join] together the vocall numbers, and naturall with divine, and order them into the same harmony, shall be able to work and know wonderfull things by numbers; the Pythagorians profess that they can prognosticate many things by the numbers of names, in which truly, unless there did ly [lie] a great mysterie [mystery], John had not said in the Revelation, He which hath understanding, let him compute the number of the name of the beast, which is the number of a man, and this is the most famous manner of computing amongst the Hebrews, and Cabalists, as we shall shew afterwards. But this you must know, that simple numbers signifie Divine things: numbers of ten; Celestiall numbers of an hundred; terrestriall numbers of a thousand; those things that shall be in a future age. Besides, seeing the parts of the mind are according to an Arithmetically Mediocrity, by reason of the identity, or equality of excess, coupled together. But the body, whose parts differ in their greatness, is according to a Geometricall mediocrity, compounded: But an animall consists of both, viz. soul and body, according to that mediocrity, which is sutable [suitable] to harmony: Hence it is that numbers do work very much upon the soul, figures upon the body, and harmony upon the whole animall.

Chapter iv. Of unity, and the Scale thereof.

Now let us treat particularly of numbers themselves: and because number is nothing els [else] but a repetition of Unity, let us first consider Unity it self. For Unity doth most simply go through every number, and is the common measure, fountain, and originall of all numbers, contains every number joyned [joined] together in it self intirely, the beginner of every multitude, alwayes the same, and unchangable: whence also being multiplyed into it self, produceth nothing but it self: it is indivisible, void of all parts: But if it seem at any time to be divided, it is not cut, but indeed Multiplied into Unities: yet none of these Unities is greater or lesser then the whole Unity, as a part is less than the whole: It is not therefore Multiplied into parts, but into it self: Therefore some called it concord, some piety, and some friendship, which is so knit, that it cannot be cut into parts. But Martianus, according to the opinion of Aristotle saith, it is named Cupid, because it is made one alone, and will alwaies bewail it self, and beyond it self it hath nothing, but being void of all haughtiness, or coupling, turns its proper heats into it self. It is therefore the one beginning, and end of all things, neither hath it any beginning, or end it self: Nothing is before one, nothing is after one, and beyond it is nothing, and all things which are, desire that one, because all things proceeded from one, and that all things may be the same, it is necessary that they partake of that one: And as all things proceeded of one into many things, so all things endeavour to return to that one, from which they proceeded; it is necessary that they should put off multitude. One therefore is referred to the high God, who seeing he is one, and innumerable, yet creates innumerable things of himself, and contains them within himself. There is therefore one God, one world of the one God, one Sun of the one world, also one Phoenix in the World, one King [queen] amongst Bees, one Leader amongst Flocks of Catel [cattle], one Ruler amongst heards [herds] of Beasts, & Cranes follow one, and many other Animalls honour Unity; Amongst the Members of the body there is one Principal by which all the rest are guided, whether it be the head, or (as some will) the heart. There is one Element overcoming, and penetrating all things, viz. Fire. There is one thing created of God, the subject of all wondring [wondering], which is on Earth, or in Heaven, it is actually Animal, Vegetable, and Minerall, every where found, known by few, called by none by its proper name, but covered with figures, and Riddles, without which neither Alchymie [alchemy], nor Naturall Magick, can attain to their compleat end, or perfection. From one man, Adam, all men proceed, from that one all become mortall, from that one Jesus Christ they are regenerated: and as saith Paul, one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God, and Father of all, one mediator betwixt God and man, one most high Creator, who is over all, by all, and in us all. For there is one Father, God, from whence all, and we in him: one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom all, and we by him: one God Holy Ghost, into whom all, and we into him.

The Scale of Unity

In the exemplary world.	é Iod	One Divine essence, the fountain of all vertues, and power, whose name is expressed with one most simple Letter.
In the intellectuall world.	The soul of the world.	One supreme Intelligence, the first Creature, The fountain of lives.
In the Celestial world.	The Sun.	One King of Stars, fountain of life.
In the Elemental world.	The Philosophers Stone.	One subject, and instrument of all vertues, naturall, and supernaturall.
In the lesser world.	The Heart.	One first living, and last dying.
In the infernall world.	Lucifer.	One Prince of Rebellion, of Angels, and darkness.

Chapter v. Of the Number of Two, and the Scale thereof.

The first Number is of two, because it is the first Multitude, it can be measured by no number besides unity alone, the common measure of all Numbers: It is not compounded of Numbers, but of one unity only; neither is it called a number uncompounded, but more properly not compounded: The Number of three is called the first Number uncompounded: But the Number of two is the first branch of unity, and the first procreation: Hence it is called generation, and Juno, and an imaginable Corporation, the proof of the first motion, the first form of parity: the number of the first equality, extremity, and distance betwixt, and therefore of peculiar equity, and the proper act thereof, because it consists of two equally poysed: and it is called the Number of Science, and Memory, and of light, and the number of man, who is called another, and the lesser World: it is also called the number of charity, and mutuall love, of marriage, and society, as it is said by the Lord, Two shall be one flesh. And Solomon saith: It is better that two be together then one, for they have a benefit by their mutuall society: If one shall fall, he shall be supported by the other. Wo [woe] to him that is alone, because when he falls he hath not another to help him: and if two sleep together, they shall warm one the other; how shall one be hot alone? And if any prevaile against him, two resist him. And it is called the number of Wedlock and Sex; for there are two sexes, Masculine, and Feminine: and two Dovess bring forth two Eggs, out of the first of which is hatched the Male, out of the second the Female. It is also called the midle [middle], that is capable, that is good, and bad, partaking, and the beginning of division, of Multitude, and distinction, and signifies matter. This is also sometimes the number of discord, and confusion, of misfortune, and uncleanness, whence Saint Hierom against Jovianus saith, that therefore it was not spoken in the second day of the creation of the world, and God said, That it was good, because the number of two is evill. Hence also it was, that God commanded that all unclean Animals should go into the Ark by couples: because as I said, the number of two, is a number of uncleanness, and it is most unhappy in their Soothsayings, especially if those things, from whence the Soothsaying is taken, be Saturnall, or Martiall, for these two are accounted by the Astrologers unfortunate. It is also reported, that the number of two doth cause apparitions of Ghosts, and fearfull Goblins, and bring mischiefs of evill spirits to them that travell by night. Pythagoras (as Eusebius reports) said, that Unity was God, and a good intellect; and that Duality was a Divell [devil], and an evill intellect, in which is a materiall multitude: wherefore the Pythagoreans say, that two is not a number, but a certain confusion of unities. And Plutarke [Plutarch] writes, that the Pythagorians [Pythagoreans] called unity Apollo, and two, strife, and boldness; and three, Justice, which is the highest perfection, and is not without many mysteries. Hence there were two Tables of the Law in Sina, two Cherubins looking to the Propitiatory in Moses, two Olives dropping oyle [oil], in Zachariah, two natures in Christ, Divine, and Humane; Hence Moses saw two appearances of God, viz. his face, and back-parts, also two Testaments, two commands of Love, two first dignities, two first people, two kinds of Spirits, good and bad, two intellectuall creatures, an Angell, and soul, two great lights, two Solstitia [solstices], two equinoctials [equinoxes], two poles, two Elements, producing a living soul, viz. Earth, and Water.

Chapter vi. Of the Number of three, and the Scale thereof.

The number of three is an uncompounded number, a holy number, a number of perfection, a most powerfull number. For there are three persons in God, there are three Theologicall vertues in Religion. Hence it is that this number conduceth to the Ceremonies of God, and Religion, that by the solemnity of which, prayers, and sacrifices are thrice repeated. Whence Virgil sings, Odd numbers to the God delightfull are.

And the Pythagorians use it in their sanctifications, and purifications, whence in Virgil,

The same did cleanse, and wash with Water pure Thrice his companions -----

And it is most fit in bindings, or ligations, hence that of Virgil,

*----- I walk around
First with these threads, which three, and severall are,
'Bout th' Altar thrice I shall thy image bear.*

And a little after;

*Knots, Amaryllis, tye, of colours three,
Then say, these bonds I knit, for Venus be.*

And we read of Medea.

*She spake three words, which caus'd sweet sleep at will,
The troubled Sea, the raging Waves stand still.*

And in Pliny it was the cusome in every medicine to spit with three deprecations, and hence to be cured. The number of thee is perfected with three Augmentations, long, broad, and deep, beyond which there is no progression of dimension, whence the first number is called square. Hence it is said that to a body that hath three measures, and to a square number, nothing can be added. Wherefore Aristotle in the beginning of his speeches concerning Heaven, calls it as it were a Law, according to which all things are disposed. For Corporeall, and spirituall things consist of three things, viz. beginning, middle, and end. By three (as Tresmegistus [Trismegistus] saith) the world is perfected: Hemarmene {so the L}, necessity, and order (i.e.) concurrence of causes, which many call fate, and the execution of them to the fruit, or increase, and a due distribution of the increase. The whole measure of time is concluded in three, viz. Past, present, to come; All magnitude is contained in three; line, superficies, and body, every body consists of three Intervals, length, bredth [breadth], thickness. Harmony contains three consents in time, Diapason, Hemiolion, Diatessaron. There are three kinds of souls, Vegetative, sensitive, and intellectuall. And as saith the Prophet, God orders the world by number, weight, and measure, and the number of three is deputed to the Ideall forms thereof, as the number two is to the procreating matter, and unity to God the maker of it. Magicians do constitute three Princes of the world, Oromasis, Mitris, Araminis [i.e. Ohrmazd (Av. Ahura Mazda), Mithra, and Ahriman (Av. Anghra Mainyu). In Zoroastrian theology, these are the names for God, the highest angel, and the Devil respectively.] (i.e.) God, the Mind, and the Spirit. By the three square or solid, the three numbers of nine of things produced are distributed, viz. of the supercelestiall into nine orders of Intelligencies: of Celestiall into nine Orbs: of inferiours into nine kinds of generable, and corruptible things. Lastly in this ternall Orb, viz. twenty seven, all Musical proportions are included, as Plato, and Proclus, do at large discourse. And the number of three hath in a harmony of five, the grace of the first voyce. Also in Intelligencies there are three Hierarchies of Angelicall spirits. There are three powers of Intellectuall creatures, memory, mind, and will. There are three orders of the blessed, viz. of Martyrs, Confessors, and Innocents. There are three quaternions of Celestiall Signs, viz. Of fixt [fixed], moveable, and common, as also of houses, viz. centers, succeeding, and falling. There are also three faces, and heads in every Sign, and three Lords of each triplicity. There are three fortunes amongst the Planets. Three graces amongst the Goddesses. Three Ladies of destiny amongst the infernall crew. Three Judges. Three furies. Three-headed Cerberus. We read also of a thrice double Hecate. Three moneths [L: ora = mouths] of the virgin Diana. Three persons in the supersubstantiall Divinity. Three times, of Nature, Law, and Grace. Three Theologicall vertues, Faith, Hope, and Charity. Jonas was three days in the Whales belly; and so many was Christ in the grave.

In the infernal world.	Alecto. Minos. Wicked.	Megara. Acacus. Apostates.	Ctesiphone. Rhadamantus. Infidels.	Three infernall furies. Three infernall Judges. Three degrees of the damned.

Chapter vii. Of the Number of Four, and the Scale thereof.

The Pythagorians call the Number of four Tetractis, and prefer it before all the vertues of Numbers, because it is the foundation, and root of all other numbers; whence also all foundations, as well in artificiall things, as naturall, and divine, are four square, as we shall shew afterwards: and it signifies solidity, which also is demonstrated by a four square figure. For the number four is the first four square plain, which consists of two proportions, whereof the first is of one to two, the latter of two to four, and it proceeds by a double procession and proportion, viz. of one to one, and of two to two, beginning at a unity, and ending at a quaternity: which proportions differ in this, that according to Arithmatick [arithmetic], they are unequall to one the other: but according to Geometry are equall. Therefore a four square is ascribed to God the Father, and also contains the mysterie [mystery] of the whole Trinity: for by its single proportion, viz. by the first of one to one, the unity of the paternall substance is signified, from which proceeds one Son, equall to him; by the next procession, also simple, viz. of two to two, is signified by the second procession the Holy Ghost from both, that the Son be equall to the Father by the first procession; and the Holy Ghost be equall to both by the second procession. Hence that superexcellent, and great name of the divine Trinity of God is written with four letters, viz. Yod, He, and Vau; He, where it is the aspiration He, signifies the proceeding of the spirit from both: for He being duplicated, terminates both syllables, and the whole name, but is pronounced Jova, as some will, whence that Jovis of the heathen, which the Ancients did picture with four ears, whence the number four is the fountain, and head of the whole divinity. And the Pythagorians [Pythagoreans] call it the perpetuall fountain of nature: for there are four degrees in the Scale of nature, viz. to be, to live, to be sensible, to understand. There are four motions in nature, viz. ascendent, descendent, going forward, circular. There are four Corners in the heaven, viz. rising, falling, the middle [middle] of the heaven, and the bottome of it. There are four Elements under Heaven, viz. Fire, Aire, Water, and Earth; according to these there are four triplicities in Heaven: There are four first qualities under the Heaven, viz. Cold, Heat, Driness [dryness], and Moystness [moistness], from these are the four Humours, Blood, Flegm [phlegm], Choller [choler], Melancholy. Also the year is divided into four parts, which are Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter; also the wind is divided into Eastern, Western, Northern, and Southern. There are also four rivers of Paradise, and so many infernall. Also the number four makes up all knowledge: first it fills up every simple progress of numbers with four termes, viz. with one, two, three, and four, constituting the number ten. It fills up every difference of numbers, the first even, and containing the first odd in it. It hath in Musick Diatessaron, the grace of the fourth voice. Also it conteins the instrument of four strings, and a Pythagorean Diagram, whereby are found out first of all musicall tunes, and all harmony of Musick. For Double, Treble, fourtimes double, one and halfe, one and a third part, a concord of all, a double concord of all, of five, of four, and all consonancy is limited within the bounds of the number four. It doth also contain the whole of Mathematicks in four terms, viz. point, line, superficies, and profundity. It comprehends all natute in four terms, viz. substance, quality, quantity, and motion. Also all naturall Phylosophy [philosophy], in which are the seminary vertues of nature, the naturall springing, the growing form, and the compositum. Also Metaphysick is comprehended in four bounds, viz. being, essence, vertue, and action. Morall Phylosophy is comprehended with four vertues, viz. prudence, justice, fortitude, temperence. It hath also the power of justice: hence a fourfold law: of providence from God; fatall, from the soul of the world: of nature from Heaven: of prudence, from man. There are also four judiciary powers in all things being, viz. the intellect, discipline, opinion, and sense. It hath also great power in all mysteries. Hence the Pythagoreans did ratifie [ratify] the number four with an oath, as if it were the cheifest [chiefest] ground whereon their faith was grounded, and their belief might be confirmed. Hence it was called the Pythagorians oath, which is expressed in these verses.

*I with pure minde by th' number four do swear
That's holy, and the fountain of nature
Eternall, parent of the mind -----*

Also there are four rivers of Paradise; four Gospels received from four Evangelists throughout the whole Church. The Hebrews received the cheifest [chiefest] name of God written with four letters. Also the Egyptians, Arabians, Persians, Magicians, Mahumitans, Grecians, Tuscans, Latines, write the name of God with only four letters, viz. thus, Theut, Alla, Sire, Orsi, Abdi, θεοζ [theos], Esar, Deus. Hence the Lacedemonians were wont to paint Jupiter with four wings. Hence also in Orpheus his divinity, it is said that Neptunes Chariots are drawn with four horses. There are also four kinds of divine furies, proceeding from severall deities, viz. from the Muses, Dionysius, Apollo, and Venus. Also the Prophet Ezekiel saw four beasts by the river Chobar, and four Cherubims in four wheels. Also in Daniel, four great beasts did ascend from the Sea, and four winds did fight. And in the Revelations four beasts were full of eyes, before, and behind: standing round about the Throne of God, and four Angels, to whom was given power to hurt the Earth, and the Sea, did stand upon the four corners of the Earth, holding the four winds, that they should not blow upon the Earth, nor upon the Sea, nor upon any Tree.

Chapter viii. Of the Number Five, and the Scale thereof.

The number five is of no small force, for it consists of the first even, and the first odd, as of a Female, and Male; For an odd number is the Male, and the even the Female. Whence Arithmeticians call that the Father, and this the Mother. Therefore the number five is of no small perfection, or vertue, which proceeds from the mixtion of these numbers: It is also the just middle [middle] of the universal number, viz. ten. For if you divide the number ten, there will be nine and one, or eight and two, or seven and three, or six and four, and every collection makes the number ten, and the exact middle [middle] always is the number five, and its equidistant; and therefore it is called by the Pythagoreans the number of Wedlock, as also of justice, because it divides the number ten in an even Scale. There be five senses in man, sight, hearing, smelling, tasting, and feeling: five powers in the soul, Vegetative, Sensitive, Concupiscible, Irascible, Rationall: five fingers on the hand: five wandering Planets in the heavens, according to which there are five-fold terms in every sign. In Elements there are five kinds of mixt [mixed] bodies, viz. Stones, Metals, Plants, Plant-Animals, Animals, and so many kinds of Animals, as men, four-footed beasts, creeping, swimming, flying. And there are five kinds by which all things are made of God, viz. Essence, the same, another, sense, motion. The Swallow brings forth but five young, which she feeds with equity, beginning with the eldest, and so the rest, according to their age. Also this number hath great power in expiations: For in holy things it drives away Devils [devils]. In natural things, it expels poisons [poisons]. It is also called the number of fortunateness, and favour, and it is the Seale of the Holy Ghost, and a bond that binds all things, and the number of the cross, yea eminent with the principall wounds of Christ, whereof he vouchsafed to keep the scars in his glorified body. The heathen Philosophers did dedicate it as sacred to Mercury, esteeming the vertue of it to be so much more excellent then the number four, by how much a living thing is more excellent then a thing without life. For in this number the Father Noah found favour with God, and was preserved in the flood [flood] of waters. In the vertue of this number Abraham, being an hundred years old, begat a Son of Sarah, being ninety years old, and a barren Woman, and past child bearing, and grew up to be a great people. Hence in time of grace the name of divine omnipotency is called upon with five letters. For in time of nature the name of God was called upon with three letters. éâû

Sadai: in time of the Law, the ineffable name of God was expressed with four letters äâäé instead of which the Hebrews express éôäâ Adonai: in time of grace the ineffable name of God was with five letters äâûäé Ihesu, which is called upon with no less mysterie then that of three letters âûé.

Chapter ix. Of the Number six, and the Scale thereof.

Six is the number of perfection, because it is the most perfect in nature, in the whole course of numbers, from one to ten, and it alone is so perfect, that in the collection of its parts it results the same, neither wanting, nor abounding. For if the parts thereof, viz. the middle [middle], the third, and sixth [sixth] part, which are three, two, one, be gathered together, they perfectly fill up the whole body of six, which perfection all the other numbers want: Hence by the Pythagorians it is said to be altogether applied to generation, and Marriage, and is called the Scale of the world. For the world is made of the number six, neither doth it abound, or is defective. Hence that is, because the world was finished by God the sixth day. For the sixth day God saw all the things which he had made, and they were very good. Therefore the heaven, and the earth, and all the Host thereof were finished. It is also called the number of man, because the sixth day man was created: and it is also the number of our redemption, for the sixth day Christ suffered for our redemption: whence there is a great affinity betwixt the number six and the Cross, labour, and servitude: hence it is commanded in the Law, that in six days the work is to be done, six days Manna is to be gathered, six years the ground was to be sown, and that the Hebrew servant should serve his Master six years; six days the glory of the Lord appeared upon Mount Sina [Sinai], covering it with a cloud: the Cherubins had six wings, 6 circles in the Firmament, Artick, Antartick, two Tropicks, Equinoctiall, & Eclipticall, six wandring [wandering] Planets, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercury, the Moon, running through the latitude of the Zodiack, on both sides the Eclyptick [ecliptic]. There are six substantificall qualities in the Elements, viz. Sharpness, Thinness, Motion, and the contrary to these, Dulness, Thickness, Rest. There are six differences of position, Upwards, Downwards, Before, Behind, on the right side, one the left side. There are six naturall offices, without which nothing can be, viz. Magnitude, Colour, Figure, Intervall, Standing, Motion. Also a solid Figure of any four square thing hath six superficies. There are six Tones of all harmony, viz. 5. Tones, & 2. half tones, which make one tone, which is the sixth.

Chapter x. Of the Number Seaven, and the Scale thereof.

The number seaven [seven] is of various, and manifold power, for it consists of one, and six, or of two, and five, or of three and four, and it hath a Unity, as it were the coupling together of two threes: whence if we consider the severall parts thereof, and the joyning together of them, without doubt we shall confess that it is as well by the joyning together of the parts thereof, as by its fullness apart, most full of all Majesty. And the Pythagorians call it the Vehiculum of mans life, which it doth not receive from its parts so, as it perfects by its proper right of its whole, for it contains body, and soul, for the body consists of four Elements, and is endowed with four qualities: Also the number three respects the soul, by reason of its threefold power, viz. rationally, irascible, and concupiscible. The number seaven therefore, because it consists of three, and four, joyns the soul to the body, and the vertue of this number relates to the generation of men, and it causeth man to be received, formed, brought forth, nourished, live, and indeed altogether to subsist. For when the genitall seed is received in the womb of the woman, if it remain there seaven hours after the effusion of it, it is certain that it will abide there for good: Then the first seaven daye it is coagulated, and is fit to receive the shape of a man: then it produceth mature infants, which are called infants of the seaventh moneth [month], i.e. because they are born the seaventh moneth. After the birth, the seaventh hour tryes whether it will live or no: for that which shall bear the breath of the aire after that hour is conceived will live. After seaven dayes it casts off the reliques of the Navell.

After twice seaven dayes its sight begins to move after the light: in the third seaventh it turns its eyes, and whole face freely. After seaven moneths it breeds teeth: After the second seaventh moneth it sits without fear of falling: After the third seaventh moneth it begins to speak: After the fourth seaventh moneth it stands strongly, and walks: after the fifth seaventh moneth it begins to refrain sucking its Nurse: After seaven years its first teeth fall, and new are bred, fitter for harder meat, and its speech is perfected: After the second seaventh year boys wax ripe, and then is a beginning of generation: At the third seaventh year they grow to be men in stature, and begin to be hairy, and become able, and strong for generation: At the fourth seaventh year they begin to barnish, and cease to grow taller: In the fifth seaventh year they attain to the perfection of their strength: The sixth seaven year they keep their strength; The seaventh seaventh year they attain to their utmost discretion, and wisdom, and the perfect age of men. But when they come to the tenth seaventh year, where the number seaven is taken for a compleat number, then they come to the common term of life, the Prophet saying, Our age is seaventy years. The utmost hight [height] of mans body is seaven feet. There are also seaven degrees in the body, which compleat the dimension of its altitude from the bottome to the top, viz. marrow, bone, nerve, vein, artery, flesh, skin. There are seaven, which by the Greeks are called black members, the Tongue, the Heart, the Lungs, the Liver, the Spleen, and two Kidnies [kidneys]. There are also seaven principal parts of the body, the head, the breast, the hands, the feet, and the privy members. It is manifest concerning breath, and meat, that without drawing of the breath the life doth not endure above seaven hours: and they that are starved with famine, live not above seaven dayes. The Veins also, and arteries (as Physicians say) are moved by the seaventh number. Also judgements in diseases are made with greater manifestation upon the seaventh dayes, which Physitians [physicians] call critically, i.e. judicially. Also of seaven portions God Creates the soul, as divine Plato witnesseth in Timeus [Timaeus]. The soul also receives the body by seaven degrees. All difference of voices proceeds to the seaventh degree, after which there is the same revolution. Again, there are seaven modulations of the voyces, Ditonus, Semiditonus, Diutessaron, Diapente with a tone [lat: semitone], Diapente with a half time [lat: semitone], and diapason. There is also in Celestials a most potent power of the number seven. For seeing there are four corners of the Heaven Diametrically looking one towards the other, which indeed is accounted a most full, and powerfull aspect, and consists of the number seven. For it is made from the seventh Sign, and makes a Cross, the most powerfull figure of all, of which we shall speak in its due place. But this you must not be ignorant of, that the number seven hath a great Communion with the Cross. By the same radiation, and number the solstice is distant from Winter, and the Winter equinoctium from the Summer, all which are done by seven Signs. There are also seven Circles in the Heaven, according to the longitudes of the Axel-tree. There are seven Stars about the Articke [Arctic] Pole, greater, and lesser, called Charls-Wain, also seven Stars called the Pleiades, and seven Planets, according to those seven dayes, constituting a week. The Moon is the seventh of the Planets & next to us observing this number more then the rest, this number dispensing the motion, and light thereof. For in twenty eight dayes it runs round the Compass of the whole Zodiack, which number of dayes, the number seven, with its seven terms, viz. from one to seven, doth make, and fill up, as much as the several numbers, by adding to the Antecedents, and makes four times seven dayes, in which the Moon runs through, and about all the longitude, and latitude of the Zodiack by measuring, and measuring again: with the like seven of dayes it dispenseth its light, by changing it; For the first seven dayes unto the middle as it were of the divided world, it increaseth; the second seven dayes it fills [fills] its whole Orb with light; the third by decreasing is again contracted into a divided Orb; but after the fourth seven dayes, it is renewed with the last diminuation of its light, and by the same seven of dayes it disposeth the increase, and decrease of the Sea, for in the first seven of the increase of the Moon, it is by little lessened; in the second by degrees increased: but the third is like the first, and the fourth doth the sure as the second. It is also applyed to Saturn, which ascending from the lower, is the seventh Planet, which betokens rest, to which the seventh day is ascribed, which signifies the seven thousandth, wherein (as John witnesseth) the Dragon, which is the Divell [Devil], and Satan, being bound, men shall be quiet, and lead a peaceable life. Moreover the Phythagorians [Pythagoreans] call seven the number of Virginitie, because the first is that which is neither generated, or generates, neither can it be divided into two equall parts, so as to be generated of another number repeated, or being doubled to bring forth any other number of it self, which is contained within the bounds of the number ten, which is manifestly the first bound of numbers, and therefore they dedicate the number seven to Pallas. It hath also in Religion most potent signs of its esteem, and it is called the number of an oath. Hence amongst the Hebrews to swear is called Septenare (i.e.) to protest by seven. So Abraham, when he made a covenant with Abimelech, appointed seven Ewe Lambs for a testimony. It is also called the number of blessedness, or of rest, whence that, viz. in soul, and body. The seventh day the Creator rested from his work, wherefore this day was by Moses called the Sabbath (i.e.) the day of rest; hence it was that Christ rested the seventh day in the grave. Also this number hath a great communion with the Cross, as is above shewed, as also with Christ. For in Christ is all our blessedness, rest, and felicity; besides, it is most convenient in purifications. whence Apuleius saith, and I put myself forthwith into the bath of the Sea, to be purified, and put my head seven times under the Waves. And the Leprous person that was to be cleansed, was sprinkled seven times with the blood of a Sparrow; and Elisha the Prophet, as it is written in the Second Book of the Kings, saith unto the Leprous person; Go, and wash thy self seven times in Jordan, and thy flesh shall be made whole, and thou shalt be cleansed, and it follows a little after, And he washed himself seven times in Jordan, according to the Prophets saying, and he was cleansed. Also it is a number of repentance, and remission: Hence was ordeined the seaventh years repentance for every sin, according to the opinion of the wise man, saying, And upon every sinner seaven fold: Also the seaventh year there were granted remissions, and after full seaven years there was giving a full remission, as is read in Leviticus. And Christ with seaven petitions finished his speech of our satisfaction: hence also it is called the number of liberty, because the seaventh year the Hebrew servant did challenge liberty for himself. It is also most sutable to divine praises. Whence the Prophet saith, Seaven times a day do I praise thee, because of thy righteous judgements. It is moreover called the number of revenge, as saith the Scripture, and Cain shall be revenged seaven fold. And the Psalmist saith, Render unto our Neighbours seaven fold into their bosome, their reproach. Hence there are seaven wickednesses, as saith Solomon, and seaven wicked spirits taken, are read of in the Gospel. It signifies also the time of the present circle, because it is finished in the space of seaven days. Also it is consecrated to the Holy Ghost, which the Prophet Isaiah describes to be seaven fold, according to his gifts, viz. the spirit of wisdom, and understanding, the spirit of counsell, and strength, the spirit of knowledge, and holiness, and the spirit of the fear of the Lord, which we read in Zachariah to be the seaven eyes of God. There are also seaven Angells, spirits standing in the presence of God, as is read in Tobias, and in the Revelation; seaven Kamps did burn before the Throne of God, and seaven golden Candlesticks, and in the midle thereof was one like to the son of man, and he had in his right hand seaven Stars. Also there were seaven spirits before the Throne of God, and seaven Angells stood before the Throne, and there were given to them seaven Trumpets. And he saw a Lamb having seaven horns, and seaven eyes, and he saw the book sealed with seaven Seales, and when the seaventh seal was opened, there was made silence in heaven. Now by all what hath been said, it is apparent that the number seaven, amongst the other numbers, may deservedly be said to be most full of all efficacy. Moreover, the number seaven hath great conformity with the number twelve; For as three, and four make seaven, so thrice four make twelve, which are the numbers of the celestially Planets, and signs, resulting from the same root, and by the number four of the nature of inferiour things. There is in sacred writ a very great observance of this number, before all others, and many, and very great are the mysteries thereof; many we have decreed to reckon up here, repeating them out of holy writ, by which it will easily appear, that the number seaven doth signifie a certain fulness of sacred mysteries. For we read in Genesis, that the seaventh was the day of the rest of the Lord; & Enoch, a pious, holy man, was the seaventh from Adam, and that there was another seaventh man from Adam, a wicked man, by name Lamech, that had two wives; and that the sin of Cain should be abolished the seaventh generation: As it is written, Cain shall be punished seaven fold: and he that shall slay Cain, shall be revenged seaven fold, to which the Master of the History collects, that there were seaven sins of Cain. Also of all clean beasts seaven, and seaven were brought into the Ark, as also of Fowles:

O thrice, and four times blessed!

And after seaven days the Lord rained upon the Earth, and upon the seaventh day the fountains of the deep were broken up, and the waters covered the Earth. Also Abraham gave to Abimelech seaven Ewe Lambs: and Jacob served seaven years for Leah, and seaven more for Rachael: and seaven dayes the people of Israel bewailed the death of Jacob. Moreover, we read in the same place, of seaven Kine, and seaven Ears of Corn, seaven years of plenty, and seaven years of scarcity. And in Exodus, the Sabbath of Sabbaths, the holy rest to the Lord, is commanded to be on the seaventh day. Also on the seaventh day Moses ceased to pray. On the seaventh day there shall be a solemnity of the Lord, the seaventh year the servant shall go out free: seaven dayes let the Calf, and the Lamb be with its damm; the seaventh year let the ground that hath been sown six years, be at rest: the seaventh day shall be a holy Sabbath, and a rest: the seaventh day, because it is the Sabbath, shall be called holy. In Leviticus the seaventh day also shall be more observed, and be more holy: and the first day of the seaventh moneth shall be a Sabbath of memoriall. Seaven dayes shall the sacrifices be offered to the Lord, seaven dayes shall the holy dayes of the Lord be celebrated, seaven dayes in a year everlastingly in the generations. In the seaventh moneth you shall celebrate feasts, and shall dwell in Tabernacles seaven dayes: seaven times he shall sprinkle himself before the Lord, that hath dipped his finger in blood: he that is cleansed from the Leprosy, shall dip seaven times in the blood of a sparrow: seaven days shall she be washed with running water, that is menstruous: seaven times he shall dip his finger in the blood of a bullock: seaven times I will smite you for your sins: In Deuteronomy seaven people possessed the Land of promise. There is also read of a seaventh year of remission, and seaven Candles set up on the South side of the Candlesticks. And in Numbers it is read, that the sons of Israel offered up seaven Ewe Lambs without spot, and that seaven dayes they did eat unleavened bread, and that sin was expiated with seaven Lambs, & a Goat, and that the seaventh day was celebrated, and holy, and the first day of the seaventh moneth was observed, and kept holy, and the seaventh moneth of the feast of Tabernacles, & sseven Calves were offered on the seaventh day, and Baalam erected seaven Altars; seaven dayes Mary the sister of Aaron went forth leprous out of the Camp, seaven dayes he that touched a dead carkass [carcass] was unclean. And in Joshua seaven priests carried the Ark of the Covenant before the Host, and seaven dayes they went round the Cities, and seaven trumpets were carried by the seaven Priests, and on the seaventh day the seaven Priests sounded the Trumpets. And in the book of Judges, Abessa reigned [reigned] in Israel seaven years, Sampson kept his nuptials seaven dayes, and the seaventh day he put forth a Riddle to his wife, he was bound with seaven green [i.e. fresh] withs [nerviceis = sinews i.e. bowstrings, cf. Judges 16:8], seaven locks of his head were shaved off, seaven years were the children of Israel oppressed by the King of Maden [Madian] And in the books of the Kings, Elias prayed seaven times, and at the seaventh time, behold a little cloud! seaven dayes the children of Israel pitched over against the Syrians, and in the seaventh day the battell [battle] was joyned: seaven years famine was threatened to David for the peoples murmuring; and seaven times the child sneezed [sneezed], that was raised [resuscitated] by Elisha, [cf. II Kings 4:35] and seaven men were crucified together in the dayes of the first harvest. Naaman was made clean with seaven washings by Elisha, the seaventh moneth Golias was slain. And in Hester we read, that the King of Persia had three Eunuchs: and in Tobias seaven men were coupled [copulati] with Sara the daughter of Raguel: And in Daniel Nebucadnezzars Furnace was heated seaven times hotter then it was used to be, and seaven Lions were in the den, and the seaventh day came Nebucadnezzar. In the book of Job there is made mention of seaven sons of Job, and seaven dayes and nights Jobs friends sate with him on the Earth; and in the same place, In seaven troubles no evill shall touch thee. In Ezra we read of Artaxerxes his seaven counsellors: and in the same place the trumpet sounded: the seaventh moneth of the feast of tabernacles were in Ezraes time, whilst the children of Israel were in the Cities: and on the first day of the seaventh moneth Esdras read the Law to the people. And in the Psalmes David praised the Lord seaven times in a day: silver is tryed seaven times; and he renders to our neighbours seaven fold into their bosomes. And Solomon saith, that wisdom hath hewen her self seaven Pillars; seaven men that can render a reason, seaven abominations which the Lord abhors, seaven abominations in the heart of an enemy, seaven overseers, seaven eyes beholding. Isaiah numbers up seaven gifts of the Holy Ghost, and seaven women shall take hold on a man. And in Jeremiah, she that hath born seaven, languisheth, she hath given up the ghost. In Ezekiel, the Prophet continued sad for seaven dayes. In Zechariah seaven lamps, and seaven pipes to those seaven lamps, and seaven eyes running to and fro throughout the whole Earth, and seaven eyes upon one stone, and the fast of the seaventh day is turned into joy. And in Micah, seaven shepherds are raised against the Assyrians. Also in the Gospel we read of seaven blessednesses, and seaven vertues, to which seaven vices are opposed; seaven petitions of the Lords prayer, seaven words of Christ upon the cross, seaven words of the blessed Virgin Mary, seaven loaves distributed by the Lord, seaven baskets of fragments, seaven brothers having one wife, seaven disciples of the Lord that were fishers, seaven water pots in Cana of Galile [Galilee], seaven woes which the Lord threatens to the Hypocrites, seaven divels [devils] cast out of the unclean woman, and seaven wickeder divells [devils] taken in after that which was cast out. Also seaven years Christ was fled into Egypt; and the seaventh hour the Fevour [fever] left the Governors son. And in the Canonically Epistles, James describes seaven degrees of wisdom, and Peter seaven degrees of Vertues. And in the Acts are reckoned seaven Deacons, and seaven disciples chosen by the Apostles. Also in the Revelations there are many mysteries of this number: for there we read of seaven Candlesticks, seaven Stars, seaven Crowns, seaven Churches, seaven Spirits before the Throne, seaven Rivers of Egypt, seaven Seales, seaven Markes, seaven Horns, seaven Eyes, seaven Spirits of God, seaven Angels with seaven Trumpets, seaven horns of the Dragon, seaven heads of the Dragon, who had seaven Diadems: also seaven plagues, and seaven Vials, which were given to one of the seaven Angells, seaven heads of the scarlet Beast, seaven Mountains, and seaven Kings sitting upon them, and seaven thunders uttered their voyces. Moreover this number hath much power, as in natural, so in sacred, Ceremoniall, and also in other things: therefore the seaven days are related hither, also the seaven Planets, the seaven, Stars called Pleiades, the seaven Ages of the World, the seaven changes of man, the seaven liberall Arts, and so many mechanick, and so many forbidden, seaven Colours, seaven Metalls, seaven holes in the head of a man, seaven pair of nerves, seaven Mountains in the City of Rome, seaven Romane Kings, seaven Civill Wars, seaven wise men in the time of Jeremiah the Prophet, and seaven wise men of Greece. Also Rome did burn seaven days by Nero. By seaven Kings were slain ten thousand Martyrs. There were seaven sleepers, seaven principall Churches of Rome, and so many Monasteries did Gregory build: So many sons Saint Felicity brought forth: there were seaven Electors of the Empire appointed, and seaven solemn Acts in crowning the Emperour; the Laws in the Testament require seaven witnesses, there are seaven civill punishments, and seaven canonically, and seaven canonically hours, the priest makes seaven obeysances in the Mass; seaven Sacraments, and seaven orders of the Clergy, and a boy of seaven years may be ordained by the lesser, and may obtain a benefice sine Cura. There are seaven penitentiall Psalmes, and seaven commands of the second table, and seaven hours were Adam, and Eve in Paradise, and there were seaven men foretold by an Angell before they were born, viz. Ismael, Isaack, Sampson, Jeremiah, John Baptist, James the brother of the Lord, and Christ Jesus. Lastly, this number is most potent of all, as in good, so evill; of this Livy, the most ancient Poet sang,

*The seaventh light is come, and then all things
T'absolve the father of all light begins,
The seaventh's of all things originall,
The first seaventh, seaventh seaven we call
Perfect, with wandering Stars the heaven's volv'd,
And with as many circles is round roll'd.*

Chapter xi. Of the number Eight, and the Scale thereof.

The Pythagoreans call eight the number of justice, and fulness: first, because it is first of all divided into numbers equally even, viz. into four, and that division is by the same reason made into twice two, viz. by twice two twice; and by reason of this equality of division, it took to it self the name of justice, but the other received the name, viz. of fulness, by reason of the contexture of the corporeall solidity, since the first makes a solid body. Hence that custome of Orpheus, swearing by eight dieties [deities], if at any time he would beseech divine justice, whose names are these. Fire, Water, Earth, the Heaven, Moon, Sun, Phanes, the Night. There are also only eight visible Spheres of the heavens: also by it the property of corporeall nature is signified, which Orpheus comprehends in eight of his Sea songs. This is also called the covenant of circumcision, which was commanded to be done by the Jewes the eight day.

There were also in the old Law eight ornaments of the Priest, viz. a breast-plate, a coat, a girdle, a myter [miter], a robe, an Ephod, a girdle of the Ephod, a golden plate; hither\ belongs the number to eternity, and the end of the world, because it follows the number seven, which is the mysterie [mystery] of time: hence also the number of blessedness; for Christ teacheth so many degrees of blessednesses, as you may see in Matthew: It is also called the number of safety, and conservation, for there were so many souls of the sons of Jesse, from which David was the eighth. Also Zacharias, the father of John, received his speech the eighth day. They say this number was dedicated to Dionysius, because he was born the eighth moneth, in everlasting memory whereof, Naxos the Iland [island] was dedicated to him, which obtained this prerogative, that only the women of Naxos should safely bring forth in the eighth moneth, and their children should live, whereas the children of the eighth moneth in other Nations dy [die], and their mothers then bringing forth are in manifest danger.

	The Censure, or Retraction...

To the Most Renowned and Illustrious Prince, Hermannus of Wyda, Prince Elector, Duke of Westphalia, and Angaria, Lord Arch-Bishop of Colonia, and Paderborne, his most gracious Lord, Henry Cornelius Agrippa of Nettes-heim.

It is a very excellent opinion of the Ancient Magicians (most Illustrious Prince) that we ought to labour in nothing more in this life, then that we degenerate not from the Excellency of the mind, by which we come nearest to God and put on the Divine nature: least at any time our mind waxing dull by vain idleness should decline to the frailty of our earthly body and vices of the flesh: so we should loose it, as it were cast down by the dark precipice of perverse lusts. Wherefore we ought so to order our mind, that it by itself being mindfull of its own dignity and excellency, should alwayes both Think, do and operate something worthy of it self; But the knowledge of the Divine science, doth only and very powerfully perform this for us. When we by the remembrance of its majesty being alwaies busied in Divine studies do every moment contemplate Divine things, by a sage and diligent inquisition, and by all the degrees of the creatures ascending even to the Archetype himself, do draw from him the infallible vertue of all things, which those that neglect, trusting only to naturall and worlfly things, are wovt often to be confounded by divers errors & fallacies, and very oft to be deceived by evill spirits; But the understanding of Divine things, purgeth the mind from errors, and rendreth it Divine, giveth infallible power to our works, and driveth far the deceith and obstacles of all evil spirits, and together subjects them to our commands; Yea it compels even good Angels and all the powers of the world unto our service viz. the virtue of our works being drawn from the Archetype himself, To whom when we ascend all creatures necessarily obey us, and all the quire [choir] of heaven do follow us: For (as Homer saith) none of the gods durst remain in their seats, Jove being moved; and then presently he ruleth (as saith Aristophanes) by one of the gods, whose right it is to execute his commands, who then out of his duty doth manage our petitions according to our desire. Seeing therefore (most Illustrious Prince) you have a Divine and immortall soul given you, which seeing the goodness of the Divine providence, a well disposed fate, and the bounty of nature have in such manner gifted, that by the acuteness of your understanding, and perfectness of senses you are able to view, search, contemplate, discern and pierce thorow the pleasant theaters of naturall things, the sublime house of the heavens, and the most difficult passages of Divine things: I being bound to you by the band of these your great vertues am so far a debtor as to communicate without envy by the true account of all opinions, Those mysterues of Divine and Ceremoniall Magick which I have truly learned, and not to hide the knowledge of those things, whatsoever concerning these matters the Isiaci those old Priests of the Egyptians, and Caldeans [Chaldaeans], the ancient prophets of the Babylonians, the Cabalists, the Divine Magicians of the Hebrews, also the Orpheans, Pythagoreans and Platonists, the profoundest Philosophers of Greece, further what the Bragmanni [Brahmans] of the Indians, the Gymnosophists of Ethiopia, and the uncorrupted Theologians of our Religion have delivered, and by what force of words, power of Seals, by what charms of Benedictions and imprecations, and by what vertue of observations they in old times wrought so stupendious and wonderfull prodigies, imitating to you in this third book of Occult Philosophy and exposing to the light those things which have been buried in the dust of antiquity and involved in the obscurity of oblivion, as in Cymmerian darkness even to this day. We present therefore now to you, a compleat and perfect work in these three books of Occult Philosophy or Magick, Which we have perfected with diligent care, and bvery great labor and pains both of mind and body; and though it be untrimmed in respect of words, yet its most elaborate truly in respect of the matter: Wherefore I desire this one favor, that you would not expect the grace of an Oration, or the elegancy of speech in these books, which we long since wrote in our youth when our speech was as yet rough, and our language rude; and now we have respect, not to the stile of an Oration, but only to the series or order of sentences; We have studyed the less elegancy of speech, abundance of matter succeeding in the place thereof; and we suppose we have sufficiently satisfied our duty, if we shall to the utmost of our power perform those things we have promised to declare concerning the secrets of Magick, and have freed our conscience from a due debt. But seeing without doubt, many scoffing Sophisters will conspire against me, especially of those who boast themselves to be allyed to God, and fully replenished with Divinity, and presum to censure the leaves of the Sibilles [Sybils], and will undertake to judge and condemn to the fire these our works even before they have read or rightly understood any thing of them (because such lettice agrees not with their lips, and such sweet oyntment [ointment] with their nose and also by reason of that sparke of hatred long since conceived against me, and scarce containing it self under the ashes.) Therefore (most Illustrious Prince and wise Prelate) we further submit this work ascribed by me to the merits of your vertue, and now made yours, to your censure, and commend it to your protection, That, if the base and perfidious Sophisters would defame it, by the grosse madness of their envy and malice, you would by the prespicacy of your discretion and candor of judgement, happily protect and defend it.

Farewell and prosper.

The third and last Book of Magick, or Occult Philosophy; written by Henry Cornelius Agrippa.

Book III.

Chapter i. Of the necessity, power, and profit of Religion.

Ow it is time to turn our pen to higher matters, and to that part of Magick which teacheth us to know and perfectly understand the rules of Religion, and how we ought to obtain the truth by Divine Religion, and how rightly to prepare our mind and spirit, by which only we can comprehend the truth; for it is a common opinion of the Magicians, that unless the mind and spirit be in good case, the body cannot be in good health: But then a man to be truly sound when body and soul are so coupled, and agree together, that the firmness of the mind and spirit be not inferior to the powers of the body; But a firm and stout mind (saith Hermes) can we not otherwise obtain, than by integrity of life, by piety, and last of all, by Divine Religion: for holy Religion purgeth the mind, and maketh it Divine, it helpeth nature, and strengtheneth naturall powers, as a Physitian [physician] helpeth the health of the body, and a Husbandman the strength of the earth. Whosoever therefore, Religion being laid aside, do consider only in naturall things, are wont very oft to be deceived by evill spirits; but from the knowledge of Religion, the contempt and cure of vices ariseth, and a safeguard against evil spirits; To conclude, nothing is more pleasant and acceptable to God than a man perfectly pious, and truly Religious, who so far excelleth other men, as he himself is distant from the Immortall gods. Therefore we ought, being first purged, to offer and commend our selves to divine piety and Religion; and then our senses being asleep, with a quiet mind to expect that Divine Ambrosian Nectar (Nectar I say, which Zachary the prophet calleth Wine making maids merry) praising and adoring that supercelestiiall Bacchus, the chiefest ruler of the gods and priests, the author of regeneration, whom the old poets sang was twice born, from whom rivers most Divine flow into our hearts.

Chapter ii. Of concealing of those things which are secret in Religion.

Whosoever therefore thou art that now desireth to study thisd science, keep silence and constantly conceal within the secret closets of your Religious breast, so holy a determination; for (as Mercury saith) to publish to the knowledge of many a speech throughly filled with so great majesty of the Deity, is a sign of an irreligious spirit; and Divine Plato commanded, that holy and secret mysteries should not be divulged to the people; Pythagoras also and Porphyrius consecrated their followers to a Religious silence; Orpheus also, which a certain terrible authority of Religion did exact an oath of silence, and from those he did initiate to the Ceremonies of holy things: Whence in the verses concerning the holy word he sings,

*You, that Admirers are of vertue, stay,
Consider well what I to you shall say.
But you, that sacred laws contemn, prophane?
Away from hence, return no more again.
But thou O Museus whose mind is high,
Observe my words, and read them with thine eye,
And them within thy sacred breast repone,
And in thy journey, think of God alone*

*The Author of all things, that cannot dye,
Of whom we shall not treat ---*

So in Virgil we read of the Sybill

*The goddess comes, hence, hence, all ye prophane,
The Prophet cries, and from her grove refrain.*

Hence also in celebrating the holy mysteries of Ceres Eleusine, they only were admitted to be initiated, the cryer proclaiming the prophane vulgar to depart; and in Esdras we read this precept concerning the Cabalisticall secret of the Hebrews, declared in these verses, Thou shalt deliver those books to the wise men of the people, whose hearts thou knowest can comprehend them, and keep those secrets. Therefore the Religious volumes of the Egyptians & those belonging to the secrets of their ceremonies, were made of consecrated paper; in these they did write down letters [letters] which might not easily be known, which they call holy. Macrobius Marcellinus and others say, they were called Hieroglyphics, least perchance the writings of this kind should be known to the prophane, which also Apuleius testifies in these words, saying, The sacrifice being ended, from a secret retyred closet he bringeth forth certain books noted with obscure letters, affording compendious words of the conceived speech, partly by the figures of beasts of this kind, partly by figures full of knots, and crooked in the manner of a wheel & set thick, twining about like vine tendrels, the reading thereby being defended from the curiosity of the prophane; Therefore we shall be worthy scholars of this science, if we be silent and hide those things which are secret in religion, for the promise of silence (as saith Tertullian) is due to Religion; but they which do otherwise are in very great danger, whence Apuleius saith concerning secrets of holy Writ; I would tell it you, if it were lawfull to tell it; you should know it; if it were lawfull to hear it; but both ears and tongue would contract the same guilt of rash curiosity. So we read Theodorus the tragick poet, when he would have referred somethings of the mysteries of the Jews Scripture to a certain fable, was deprived of sight. Theopompus also who began to translate somethings out of the Divine law into the Greek tongue, was presently troubled in mind and spirit, whence afterward earnestly desiring God, wherefore this had happened to him, received an answer in a dream, because he had basely polluted Divine things, by setting them forth in publike [public]. One Numenius also being very curious of hidden things, incurred the displeasure of the Divine powers, because he interpreted the holy mysteries of the goddesse Eleusina and published them for he dreamed that the goddesses of Eleusis stood in a whores habit before the Brothell house, which when he wondred at, they wrathfully answered, that they were by him violently drawn from their modestly and prostituted everywhere to all commers, by which he was admonished, that the Ceremonies of the gods ought not to be divulged. Therefore it hath alwaies been the great care of the Ancients to wrap up the mysteries of God and nature, and hide them with diverse Aenigmaes [enigmas], which law the Indians, Brachmans [Brahmans], Æthiopians, Persians, and Egyptians also observed; hence Mercurius, Orpheus, and all the ancient Poets and Philosophers, Pythagoras, Socrates, Plato Aristoxenus, Ammonius, kept them inviolably. Hence Plotinus and Origenes and the other disciples of Ammonius (as Porphiry relates in his book of the education and Discipline of Plotinus) sware, never to set forth the Decrees of their master. And because Plotinus, brake his oath made to Ammonius, and published his mysteries, for the punishment of his transgression, he was consumed (as they say) by the Horrible disease of Lice. Crist also himself, while he lived on earth, spoke after that manner and fashion that only the more intimate disciples should understand the mystery of the word of God, but the other should perceive the parables only: commanding moreover that holy things should not be given to Dogs, nor pearles cast to Swine: Therefore the Prophet saith, I have hid thy words in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. Therefore it is not fit that those secrets which are amongst a few wise men, and communicated by mouth only, should be publikly written. Wherefor you will pardon me, If I pass over in silence many and the chieftest secret mysteries of Ceremonial Magick. I suppose I shal do enough, if I open those things which are necessary to be known, and you by the reading of this book go not away altogether empty of these mysteries; but on that condition let these things be communicated to you, on which Dionysius bound Timothy, that they which perceive these Secrets, would not expose them to the unworthy, but gather them together amongst wise men, and keep them with that reverence that is due to them. Furthermore I would also warne you in the beginning, that even as the divine powers detest publike things and profane, and love secrecy: So every Magical experiment fleeth the publike, seeks to be hid, is strengthened by silence, but is destroyed by publicationm neither doth any compleate effect follow after; all these things suffer losse, when they are poured into prating and incredulous minds; therefore it behoveth a Magicall operator, if he would get fruit from this art, to be secret, and to manifest to none, neither his work nor place, not time, neither his desire nor will, unless either to a master, or partner, or companion, who also ought to be faithfull, believing, silent, and dignified by nature and education: Seeing that even the prating of a companion, his incredulity and unworthiness hindreth and disturbeth the effect in every operation.

Chapter iii. What dignification is required, that one may be a true Magician and a worker of miracles.

About the beginning of the first book of this work, we have spoken what manner of person a Magician ought to be; but now we will declare a msyticall and secret matter, necessary for every one who desireth to practize [practise] this art, which is both the beginning, perfection and key of all Magicall operations, and it is the dignifying of men to this so sublime vertue and power; for this faculty requireth in man a wonderfull dignification, for that the understanding which is in us the highest faculty of the soul, is the only worker of wonders, which when it is overwhelmed by too much commerce with the flesh, and busied about the sensible soul of the body, is not worthy of the command of Divine substances; therefore many prosecute this art in vain; Therefore it is meet that we who endeavor to attain to so great a height should especially meditate of two things; first how we should leave carnall affections, fraile sense, and materiall passions. Secondly, by what way and means we may ascend to an intellect pure & conjoynd with the powers of the gods, without which we shall never happily ascend to the scrutiny of secret things, and to the power of wonderfull workings, or miracles; for in these dignification consists wholly, which, nature, desert, and a certain religious art do make up; naturall dignity is the best disposition of the body and its Organs, not obscuring the soul with any grossness, and being without al distemper, and this proceedeth from the situation, motion, light, and influence of the Celestiall bodies and spirits which are conversant in the generation of every one, as are those whose ninth house is fortunate by Saturn, Sol, and Mercury; Mars also in the ninth house commandeth the spirits; but concerning these things we have largely treated in the books of the Stars: But who so is not such a one, it is necessary that he recompense the defect of nature by education, and the best ordering and prosperous use of natural things untill he become commpleat in all intrinsecall and extrinsecall perfections. Hence so great care is taken in the law of Moses concerning the priest, that he be not polluted by a dead carcase or by a woman a widow, or menstruous, that he be free from leprosie, flux of blood, burstness, and be perfect in all his members, not blind, nor lame, nor crook-backed, or with an illfavoured nose. And Apuleius saith in his Apology, that the youth to be initiated to divination by magick spels [magic spells], ought to be chosen, sound without sickness, ingenious, comely, perfect in his members, of a quick spirit, eloquent in speech, that in him the divine power might be conversant as in the good houses; That the mind of the youth having quickly attained experience, may be restored to its divinity. But the meritorious dignity is perfected by two things; namely learning and practice. The end of learning is to know the truth; it is meet therefore, as is spoken in the beginning of the first book, that he be learned and skilful in those three faculties; then all impediments being removed, wholly to apply his soul to contemplation & to convert it self into it self; for there is even in our own selves the apprehension and power of all things; but we are prohibited, so as that we little enjoy these things, by passions opposing us even from our birth, and vain imaginations and immoderate affections, which being expelled, the divine knowledge and power presently takes place; but the Religious operation obtains no less efficacy which oftentimes of it self alone is sufficiently powerfull for us to obtain this deifying vertue, so great is the vertue of holy duties rightly exhibited and performed, that though they be not understood, yet piously and perfectly observed, and with a firm faith believed, they have no less efficacy then to adorn us with a divine power; But what dignity is acquired by the art of Religion, is perfected by certain Religious Ceremonies, expiations, consecrations, and holy rites, proceeding from him whose spirit the publike Religion hath consecrated, who hath power of imposition of hands, and of initiating with Sacramentall poer, by which the Character of the divine vertue and power os stampd on us which they call the divine consent, by which a man supported with the divine nature, and made as it were a companion of the Angels beareth the ingrafted power of God; & this rite is referred to the Ecclesiastical mysteries: If therefore now thou shalt be a man perfect in the sacred understanding of Religion, and piously and most constantly meditatest on it, and without doubting believest, and art such an one on whom the authority of holy rites and nature hath conferred dignity above others, and one, whom the divine powers contemn not, thou shalt be able by praying, consecrating, sacrificeing, invoking, to attract spiritual and Celestial powers, and to imprint them on those things thou pleasest, and by it to vivifie every magicall work; But whosoever beyond the authority of his office, without the merit of Sanctity and Learning, beyond the dignity of nature and education, shall presume to work any thing in Magick, shall work in vain, and deceive both himself and those that believe on him, and with danger incur the displeasure of the Divine powers.

Chapter iv. Of the two helps of Ceremoniall Magick, Religion and Superstition.

There are two things, which rule every operation of Ceremoniall Magick, namely Religion and Superstition. This Religion is a continuall contemplation of Divine things, and by good works an uniting one self with God and the Divine powers, by which in a reverent family, a service, and a sanctification of worship worthy of them is performed, and also the Ceremonies of Divine worship are rightly exercised;

Religion therefore is a certain discipline of externall holy things and Ceremonies by the which as it were by certain signs we are admonished of internall and spirituall things, which is so deeply implanted in us by nature, that we more differ from other creatures by this then Rationality; whosoever therefore neglects Religion (as we have spoken before) and confides only in the strength of naturall things, are very often deceived by the evil spirits; therefore they who are more religiously and holily instructed, neither set a tree nor plant their vinyard, nor undertake any mean work without divine invocation, as the Doctor of the Nations commands the Colossians, saying, whatsoever you shall do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ giving thanks to him, and to God the Father by him. Therefore to superadde the powers of Religion to Physical and Mathematicall vertues is so far from a fault, that not to joyn them, is an hainous sin. Hence in libro senatorum saith Rabbi Hemina, he that enjoyeth any of the creatures without Divine benediction, is supposed both by God and the Church to have used it as taken by theft and robbery, of whom it is written by Salomon [Solomon], he that takes away any things violently from father and mother, is a destroyer; But God is our father, and the Church our mother, as it is written, Is not he thy father who possesseth thee? and elsewhere, Hear my son the discipline of thy father, and despise not the law of thy mother; nothing more displeaseth God, then to be neglected and contemned; nothing pleaseth him more, then to be renowned and adored. Hence he hath permitted no creature of the world to be without Religion. All do worship God, play (as Proclus saith) frame hymnes [hymns] to the leaders of their order; but some things truly after a naturall, others after a sensible, othere a rationall, others an intellectuall manner, and all things in their manner, according to the song of the three children, bless the Lord: But the rites and Ceremonies of Religion, in respect of the diversity of times and places, are diverse. Every Religion hath something of good, because it is directed to God his creator; and although God allows the Christian Religion only, yet other worships which are undertaken for his sake, he doth not altogether reject, and leaveth them not unrewarded, if not with an eternal, yet with a temporal reward, or at least doth punish them less; but he hateth, thundreth against and utterly destroys prophane persons and altogether irreligious as his enemies; for their impoety is greater then he others who follow a false and erroneous Religion: For there is no Religion (saith Lactantius so erroneous, which hath not somewhat of wisdom in it, by which they may obtain pardon, who have kept the chieftest duty of man, if not indeed, yet in intention: But no man can of himself attain to the true Religion, unless he be taught it of God. All worship therefore, which is different from the true Religion, is superstition; In like manner also that which giveth Divine worship, either to whom it ought not, or in that manner which it ought not. Therefore we must especially take heed least at any time, by some perverse worship of superstition, we be envious to the Almighty God, and to the holy powers under him; for this would be not only wicked, but an act most unworthy of Philosophers; superstition therefore altogether it be far different from the true Religion, yet it is not all and wholly rejected, because in many things it is even tolerated, and observed by the chief rulers of Religion; But I call that superstition especially, which is a certain resemblance of Religion, which for as much as it imitates whatsoever is in Religion, as miracles, Sacraments, rites, observations and such like, from whence it gets no small power, and also obtains no less strength by the credulity of the operator; for how much a constant credulity can do, we have spoken in the first book, and is manifestly known to the vulgar. Therefore superstition requireth credulity, as Religion faith, seeing constant credulity can do so great things, as even to work miracles in opinions and false operations; whosoever therefore in his Religion, though false, yet beleeveth most strongly that it is true, and elevates his spirit by reason of this his credulity, untill it be assimilated to those spirits who are the chief leaders of that Religion, may work those things which nature and reason discern not; but incredulity and diffidence doth weaken every work not only in superstition, but also in true Religion, and enervates the desired effect even of the most strong experiments. But how superstition imitateth Religion, these examples declare; namely when worms and locusts are excommunicated, that they hurt not the fruits; when bells and Images are baptised and such like; but because the old Magicians and those who were the authors of this art amongst the ancients, have been Caldeans [Chaldaeans], Egyptians, Assyrians, Persians and Arabians, all whose Religion was perverse and polluted idolatry, we must very much take heed, least we should permit their errors to war against the grounds of the Catholick Religion; for this were blasphemous, and subject to the curse; and I also should be a blasphemer, if I should not admonish you of these thigs, in this science; wheresoever therefore you shall finde these things written by us, know that those things are only related out of other Authors, and not put down by us for truth, but for a probable conjecture which is allyed to truth and an Instruction for imitation in those things which are true; Therefore we ought from their Errors to collect the Truth, which work truly requireth a profound Understanding, perfect Piety, and painfull and laborious Diligence, and also Wisdom which knoweth out of every Evill to extract Good, and to fit oblique things unto the right use of those things which it governeth, as concerning this Augustine gives us an Example of a Carpenter to whom Oblique and Complicate things are no less necessary and convenient then the Straight.

Chapter v. Of the three Guides of Religion, which bring us to the path of Truth.

There are three Guides which bring us even to the paths of truth and which rule all our Religion, in which it wholly consisteth, namely Love, Hope and Fayth [faith]: for Love is the chariot of the Soul, the most excellent of all things, descending from the Intelligences above even to the most inferior things It congregates and converts our mind into the Divine beauty, preserves us also in all our works, gives us Events according to our wishes, administreth power to our supplications: as we read in Homer, Apollo heard Chrysons prayers because he was his very great friend: and some read of Mary Magdalene in the Gospell, many sins were forgiven her, because she loved much; But hope immoveably hanging on those things it desireth, when it is certain and not wavering, nourisheth the mind and perfecteth it; But Faith the superior vertue of all not grounded on humane fictions, but Divine revelations wholly, peirceth [pierceth] all things through the whole world, for seeing it descends from above from the first light, and remains nearest [nearest] to it, is far more noble and excellent than the arts, sciences and beliefes arising from inferior things: this being darted into our intellect by reflexion [reflection] from the first light. To conclude, by faith man is made somewhat the same with the superior powers and enjoyeth the same power with them: Hence Proclus saith. As belief which is a credulity, is below science: so belief which is a true faith, is supersubstantially above all science and understanding conjoyning us immediately to God; for Faith is the root of all miracles, by which alone (as the Platonists testifie) we approach to God, and obtain the Divine power and protection. So we read that Daniel escaped the mouths of the Lyons [lions], because he believed on his God. So to the woman with the bloody issue saith Christ, thy Faith hath made thee whole; and of the blind man desiring sight, he required faith, saying, Do ye believe, that I can open your eyes? so Pallas in Homer comforteth Achilles with these words, I am come to pacifie your wrath, if you will believe. Therefore Linus the Poet sings all things are to be beleaved [believed], because all things are easie [easy] to God; nothing is impossible to him, therefore nothing incredible; therefore we believing those things which belong to Religion, do obtain the vertue of them; but when we shall faile in our Faith, we shall do nothing worthy admiration, but of punishment; As we have an example of this in Luke, in these words, Therefore certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call, over them which had evil spirits in the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, we adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth; and the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who art thou? and the man in whom the evil spirit was, leapt [leaped] on them, and over came [overcame] them, so that they fled out of the house naked and wounded.

Chapter vi. How by these guides the soul of man ascendeth up into the Divine nature, and is made a worker of Miracles.

Therefore Our mind being pure and divine, inflamed with a religious love, adorned with hope, directed by faith, placed in the hight [height] and top of the humane soul, doth attract the truth, and sudainly comprehend it, & beholdeth all the stations, grounds, causes and sciences of things both natural and immortal in the divine truth it self as it were in a certain glass of Eternity. Hence it comes to pass that we, though Natural, know those things which are above nature, and understand all things below, and as it were by divine Oracles receive the knowledg [knowledge] not only of those things which are, but also of those that are past and to come, presently, and many years hence; Moreover not only in Sciences, Arts and Oracles the Understanding challengeth to it self this divine vertue, but also receiveth this miraculous power in certain things by command to be changed. Hence it comes to pass that though we are framed a natural body, yet we sometimes prædominate [predominate] over nature, and cause such wonderfull, sodain and difficult operations, as that evil spirits obey us, the stars are disordered, the heavenly powers compelled, the Elements made obedient; so devout men and those elevated by these Theologicall vertues, command the Elements, drive away Fogs, raise the winds, cause rain, cure diseases, raise the dead, all which things to have been done amongst diverse Nations, Poets and Historians do sing and relate: and that these things may be done, all the famousest Philosophers, and Theologians do confirme; so the prophets, Apostles, and the rest, were famous by the wonderfull power of God; therefore we must know, that as by the influx of the first agent, is produced oftentimes something without the cooperation of the middle causes, so also by the work of Religion alone, may something be done without the application of naturall and Celestiall vertues; but no man can work by pure Religion alone, unless he be made totally intellectuall: But whosoever, without the mixture of other powers, worketh by Religion alone, if he shall persevere long in the work, is swallowed up by the Divine power and cannot live long: But whosoever shall attempt this and not be purified, doth bring upon himself judgement, and is delivered to the evil spirit, to be devoured.

Chapter vii. That the knowledge of the true God is necessary for a Magician, and what the old Magicians and Philosophers have thought concerning God.

Seeing that the being and operation of all things, depend on the most high God, Creator of all things, from thence also on the other divine powers, to whom also is granted a power of fashioning and creating, not principally indeed, but instrumentally by vertue of the first Creator (for the beginning of every thing is the first cause, but what is produced by the second causes, is much more produced by the first, which is the producer of the second causes: which therefore we call secondary gods) It is necessary therefore that every Magitian [magician] know that very God, which is the first cause, and Creator of all things; And also the other gods, or divine powers (which we call the second causes) and not to be ignorant, with what adoration, reverence, holy rites conformable to the condition of every one, they are to be worshipped: Whosoever therefore invokes the gods, and doth not confer on them their due honour, nor, rightly distribute to them what belongs to them, shall neither enjoy their presence, nor any successful effect from them. As in Harmony, if one string be broken, the whole musick jars, and sometimes incurs the hazard of punishment, as it is written of the Assyrians, whom Salmanasar planted in Samaria, because they knew not the customes of the God of the Land, the Lord did send Lyons amongst them, who slew them, because they were ignorant of the rights of the god of the Land. Now therefore let us see, what the old Magicians and Philosophers thought concerning God; for we read that Nicocreonte, a tyrant of Cyprus, long since asking, who was the greatest God, the Serapian Oracle answered him, That he was to be accounted the greatest God, whose head was the Heavens, the Seas his Belly, the Earth his feet, his ears placed in the sky, his eyes the light of the glorious Sun; not much unlike to this, Orpheus sang in these verses,

*The Heaven's Joves Royall Palace, he's King,
Fountain vertue and God of every thing;
He is Omnipotent, and in his breast
Earth, water, fire and aire do take their rest.
Both night and day, true wisdom with sweet Love,
Are all contain'd in this vast bulk of Jove.
His neck and glorious head if you would see,
Behold the Heavens high, and majesty;
The glorious rayes of Stars do represent
His golden locks, and's heads adornment.*

And elsewhere,

*Bright Phebus [Phoebus] and the Moon, are the two eyes
Of this great Jove by which all things he spies;
His head which predicts All, is plac'd i'th skie [sky],
From which no noise can whisper secretly.
It pierceth all; his body vast extends,
Both far and wide, and knows no bounds nor ends.
The spacious Air's his breast, his wings the wind,
By which he flies far swifter then the mind.
His belly is our mother earth, who swels [swells]
Into huge mountains, whom the Ocean fills [fills]*

*And circles; hls feet are the rocks and stones
Which of this Globe are the foundations.
This Jove, under the earth conceals all things,
And from the depth into the light them brings.*

Therefore they thought the whole world to be Jupiter, and truly he hath produced the soul of this world, which containeth the world in it self. Hence Sophocles saith, in truth there is but one onely God, who hath made this heaven and this spacious earth; and Euripides saith, Behold the most high, who every where embraceth in his Arms, the immensurable heaven and earth; believe that he is Jupiter, account him God; and Ennius the Poet sings,

Behold this bright sublime shining, whom all Call Jove----- -----

Therefore the whole world is Jupiter, as Porphyry saith, a creature made of all creatures, and a God constituted of all gods; but Jupiter is, so far as we can understand, from whence all things are produced, creating all things by his wisdom. Hence Orpheus sings concerning the Holy Word;

*There is one God, who all things hath created,
Preserves, and over all is elevated.
He only by our mind is comprehended,
And to poor mortals He ne'r ill intended.
Besides whom, there no other is ---*

And a little after,

He himself is the beginning, middle and end, as the ancient Prophets have taught us, to whom God long since delivered these things in two tables; and he calleth him in the same verse the only great Creator, and immortall. Zoroastes [Zoroaster] likewise in his sacred History of the Persians defineth God thus, God is the first of all those things which suffer neither decay nor corruption, unbegot, never dying, without parts, and most like himself, The author and promoter of all good things, the father of all, most bountifull and wise, the sacred light of justice, the absolute perfection of nature, the contriver, and wisdom [wisdom] thereof. Apuleius also describ[s] [describes] him to be a King, the cause, foundation and original, beginning of all nature, the supreme begetter of spirits, eternal, the preserver of living creatures, a Father with propagation, not to be comprehended by time, place or any other circumstance, and therefore imaginable to a few, utterable to none; from hence therefore Euripides commanded the highest God to be cal'd Jupiter, through whose head Orpheus sang all things came into this light, but the other powers he supposeth to be subservient, viz. which are without God, and separated from him, and are by the Philosophers called the Ministers or Angels of God, and separated intelligences; therefore they say Religious worship to be due to this most high Jupiter and to him only, but to the other Divine powers not to be due unless for his sake.

Chapter viii. What the Ancient Philosophers have thought concerning the Divine Trinity.

Austine [Augustine] and Porphyry testifie, that the Platonists held three persons in God, the first of which, they call the father of the world; the second they call the Son and the first mind, and so he is named by Macrobius. The third, the spirit or soul of the world, which Virgil also from Plato's opinion calleth a spirit, when he sings,

*Within the Spirit nourisheth, the mind'
Diffus'd through th' whole doth in its kind
The lump both act, and agitate ---*

Plotinus and Philo deliver, that the Son of God, viz. the first mind or Divine intellect floweth from God the Father, even as a word from the speaker or as light from light; from hence it is that he is called both the word and speech, and splendour of God the Father; for the Divine mind by it self, with one only and uninterrupted act understandeth the chiefest good without any vicissitude, or mediate knowledge; he generateth in himself an Issue and Son, who is the full Intelligence, compleat image of himself, and the perfect pattern of the world, whom our John and Mercurius name the word or speech; Plato the Son of God the Father; Orpheus, Pallas born from Jupiters brain, that is, wisdom: This is the most absolute image of God the Father, yet by a certain relation, or some intrinsecall absolute thing, as it were begot and distinguished from the Father, who saith in Ecclesiasticus, I have proceeded from the mouth of the most high, I am the first begot before all creatures: Iamblichus testifieth this Son to be One and the same God with the Father in Essence, namely calling God, both the Father and Son of himself. Also Mercurius Trismegistus in Asclepius mentioneth the Son of God in diverse places; for he saith my God and Father begat a Mind a work diverss from himself; And elsewhere, unity begets unity, and reflecteth his flagrant love on himself; and in Pimander (where he seemeth to prophesie of the Covenant of grace to come, and of the mystery of regeneration) saith, the author of Regeneration is the Son of God, the man by the will of the one only God, and also that God is most replenished with the fruitfulness of both sexes. In like manner the Indian philosophers affirm, the World to be an Animal, partly Masculine, and partly Feminine; and Orpheus also calleth Nature or the Jove of this world, both the male and female thereof, and that the gods partake of both Sexes. Hence it is, that in his Hymnes he thus salutes Minerva, You are indeed both man and woman; and Apuleius in his book of the world, out of the Divinity of Orpheus produceth this verse of Jupiter, Jove is both male and female, immortall.

And Virgil speaking of Venus saith,

I descend, and the God guiding -----

And elsewhere, understanding Juno or Alecto, he saith

Neither was God absent from her praying.

And Tibullus sings,

I who prophaned have the Deities Of Venus great -----

And it is reported that the people of Cacenia wonderfully adored the God Moon. From this compleat intelligence of supream fecundity his love is produced, binding the intelligence with the mind. And by so much the more, by how much it is infinitely more intimate to it self, than other off springs to their parents. This is the third person, viz. the holy spirit. Iamblichus also brings the oracles of the Chaldeans placing a fatherly power in God, and an Emanation of the intellect from the Father, and a fiery love proceeding from Father and Son, and the same to be God. Hence we read in Plutarch, that the Gentiles described God to be an intellectuall and fiery spirit, having no form, but transformilig himself into whatsoever he pleaseth, equalizing himself to all things; and we read in Deuteronomy, Our God is a consuming fire; of whom also Zoroastes [Zoroaster] saith, all things were begot of fire alone; so also Heraclitus the Ephesian teacheth; Hence Divine Plato hath placed Gods habitation in fire, namely understanding, the unspeakable splendour of God in himself, and love about himself; and we read in Homer, The Heavens to be the Kingdom of Jupiter, when he sings,

Jove darkning clouds and reigning in the skie,

And the same elsewhere.

*The lot of Jove the Heaven is i'th' aire,
He sits -----*

But Aether is derived according to the Greek Grammer, from Aetho, which signifies to Burn, and Aer spiritus quasi Aethaer, that is, a burning spirit; And therefore Orpheus calleth the Heaven Pyripnon, that is a fiery breathing place; therefore the Father, Son, and the aimable spirit, which is also fiery, are by the Divines called three Persons; Whom Orpheus also in his adjurations invocateth with these words, Heaven I admire thee, thou wise work of the great God; I adjure thee, O thou word of the Father, which he first spake when he established the whole world by his wisdom. Hesiode [Hesiod] also confesseth the same things under the names of Jupiter Minerva and Bule in his Theogony, declaring the twofold birth of Jupiter in these words: The first daughter called Tritonia with gray eyes, having equal power with the Father, and prudent Bule, that is counsel, which Orpheus in the forenamed verses pronounceth plurally, because of his twofold Emanation, for he proceedeth both from Jupiter and Minerva. And Austin [Augustine] himself in his fourth Book De Civit Dei doth testify that Porphyry the Platonist placed three Persons in God; the first he cals the father of the universe, the second, the first mind, and Macrobius the Son, the third the soul of the world, which Virgil according to Plato's opinion, calleth a spirit, saying, the spirit within maintains. Therefore it is God, as Paul saith, from whom, in whom, by whom are all things: for from the father as from a fountain flow all things, but in the Son as in a pool all things are placed in their Ideas, and by the Holy Ghost are all things manifested, and every thing distributed to his proper degrees.

Chapter ix. What the true and most Orthodox faith is concerning God and the most holy Trinity.

The Catholik [Catholic] Doctors and faithfull people of God, have decreed, that we ought thus to believe and profess that there is one only true God, increate, infinite, omnipotent, eternal Father, Son and Holy Ghost, three persons, coeternall and coequall, of one most simple Essence, substance and nature. This is the Catholike faith, this is the Orthodox Religion, this is the Christian truth, that we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity, neither confounding the persons, nor dividing the substance. The Father begat the Son from all eternity and gave him his substance, and nevertheless retained it himself. The Son also by being begot, received the substance of the Father, but assumed not the proper Person of the Father; for the Father translated it not into the Son; for they are both of one and the same substance, but of diverse persons. This Son also although he be coeternall with the Father, and begot of the substance of the Father before the world, yet notwithstanding was born into the world out of the substance of a Virgin, and his name was called Jesus, perfect God, perfect man, of a reasonable soul and humane flesh, who in all things was man, sin excepted. Therefore it is necessary, that we beleeeve [believe], that our Lord Jesus Christ the Son of God, is God and man, one person, two natures; God begot before the world without a mother, man born into the world; without a father, from a pure Virgin, both before and after his birth; he suffered on the Cross, and dyed [died], but on the Cross restored life, and destroyed death by his death; he was buried and descended into hell, but brought forth the souls of the Fathers from hell, and rose again by his own power; the third day he ascended into the Heavens, & sent his spirit the Comforter, & shall come to Judge the quick [=living] and the dead; and at his coming all men shall rise again in their flesh, and shall give an account of their works; this is the true faith, concerning which if any man doubt, and not firmly believe, he is far from the hope of eternall life and salvation.

Chapter x. Of Divine emanations, which the Hebrews call Numerations, others attributes; The gentiles gods and Deities; and of the ten Sephiroths and ten most sacred names of God which rule them, and the interpretation of them.

God himself, though he be Trinity in persons, yet is but one only simple Essence; notwithstanding we doubt not but that there are in him many Divine powers, which as beams flow from him, which the Philosophers of the Gentiles cal gods, the Hebrew masters numerations, we name Attributes; as wisdom which Orpheus call Pallas; understanding, which he Mercury; The conception of the Form, which he Saturn; The Productive power, which he Neptune; the secret nature of things, which he Iuno [Juno]; Love, which he Venus; pure life, which he the Sun, or Apollo. The matter of the whole world, he calleth Pan; the soul, as it ingendereth things below, contemplateth things above, and retracteth it self into it self, he honoured with three names, viz. Maris, Neptune and Ocean, and more of this kind, of which he sings elsewhere,

*Pluto and Jupiter, and Phebus, are one;
But why do we speak twice? Gods one alone.*

And of the same Valerius Soranus sang,

*Omnipotent Jove the God and King of Kings,
The Father of the gods, One, yet all things.*

Therefore the most prudent Theologians of the Gentiles did worship the One God, under diverse names and powers, yea diverse sexes; whom, as Pliny saith, Fraile and weak mortality hath digested unto more, being mindfull of his one frailty, that every man might worship that portion which he especially wanteth; so those who had need of faith invocated Jupiter; they that wanted providence, Apollo; wisdom, Minerva; and so as they wanted other things, they invocated other powers. Hence arose that great variety of Dieties [deities], by reason of the many and diverse distribution of graces; but God is one, from whom all things. Therefore Apuleius in his book De mundo to Faustin saith, Whereas there is but one God and one power, yet he is named by diverse names, for the multitude of species, by whose variety he is made of many shapes; and Marcus Varro in his book of the worship of God, saith, As all souls are reduced to the one soul of the world or universe, so are all the gods referred to Jupiter, who is the same God, worshipped under diverse names. Therefore it is meet to know the sensible proprieties, and perfectly to intellectualize them by the way of more secret Analogy; whosoever understandeth truly the Hymnes of Orpheus and the old Magicians, shall find that they differ not from the Cabalisticall secrets and Orthodox traditions; for whom Orpheus calls Curets and unpolluted gods, Dionysius names Powers; the Cabalists appropriate them to the numeration Pahad, that is to the Divine fear: so that which is EnSoph in the Cabala, Orpheus calleth Might; and Typhon is the same with Orpheus, as Zamael in the Cabala; but the Mecubales of the Hebrews, the most learned in Divine things, have received the ten principal names of God, as certain Divine powers, or as it were members of God, which by ten numerations which they call Sephiroth as it were vestiments, Instruments or examplars of the Archetype, have an influence on all things created, through the high things, even to the lowest, yet by a certain order; for first and immediately they have influence on the nine orders of Angels, and quire of blessed souls, and by them into the Celestiall Spheres, Planets and men, by the which Sephiroth every thing then receiveth power and vertue; The first of these is the name Eheia, the name of the Divine Essence; his numeration is called Cether [Kether], which is interpreted a Crown or Diadem, and signifieth the most simple Essence of the Divinity, and it is called that which the eye seeth not, and is attributed to God the Father, and hath his influence by the order of Seraphinus, or as the Hebrews call them Haioth Hacadosch, that is creatures of holiness, and then by the primum mobile, bestows the gift of being to all things, filling the whole Universe both through the circumference and center, whose particular intelligence is called Meratiron [Metatron], that is, the prince of faces, whose duty it is to bring others to the face of the prince; and by him the Lord spake to Moses. The second name is Iod or Tetragrammaton joyned with Iod; his numeration is Hochma, that is wisdom, and signifieth the Divinity full of Ideas, and the first begotten; and is attributed to the Son, and hath his influence by the order of Cherubins, or that the Hebrews call

Orphanim, that is, forms or wheels; and from thence into the starry Heaven, where he fabricateth so many figures as he hath Ideas in himself, and distinguisheth the very Chaos of the creatures, by a particular Intelligence called Raziell, who was the ruler of Adam. The third name is called Tetragrammaton Elohim; his numeration is named Prina, viz. providence and understanding, and signifies remission, quietness, the Jubilee, penitential conversion, a great Trumpet, redemption of the world, and the life of the world to come; it is attributed to the Holy Spirit, and hath his influence by the order of the thrones, or which the Hebrews call Aralim, that is great Angels mighty and strong, and from thence by the sphere of Saturn administereth form to the unsettled matter, whose particular intelligence is Zaphchiel, the ruler of Noah, and another intelligence named Iophiel the ruler of Sem; and these are three supream and highest numerations as it were seats of the Divine persons, by whose commands all things are made, but are executed by the other seven, which are therefore called the numerations framing. Therefore the fourth name is El whose numeration is Hesed, which is Clemence or goodness, and signifieth grace, mercy, piety, magnificence, the scepter and right hand, and hath his influx by the order of the Dominations, which the Hebrews call Hasmalim, and so through the sphere of Iupiter [Jupiter] fashioning the Images of bodyes [bodies], bestowing clemency and pacifying justice on all; his particular intelligence is Zadkiell the ruler of Abraham: The fifth name is Elohim Gibor, that is, the mighty God, punishing the sins of the wicked; and his numeration is called Geburach, which is to say, power, gravity, fortitude, security, judgement, punishing by slaughter and war: and it is applyed [applied] to the Tribunall of God, The girdle, the sword and left hand of God; it is also called Pachad, which is fear, and hath his influence throw [through] the order of powers which the Hebrews call Seraphim, and from thence through the sphere of Mars, to whom belongs fortitude, war, affliction, it draweth forth the Elements; and his particular intelligence is Camael, the ruler of Samson; The sixt [sixth] name is Eloha, or a name of four letters, joyned [joined] with Vaudahat, his numeration is Tiphereth, that is apparel, beauty, glory, pleasure, and signifieth the tree of life, and hath his influence through the order of vertues [virtues], which the Hebrews call Malachim, that is Angels into the spere [sphere] of the Sun, giving brightness and life to it, and from thence producing mettals [metals]; his particular intelligence is Raphael, who was the Ruler of Isaac and Toby the younger, and the Angel Peliel, ruler of Iacob [Jacob]. The seventh name is Tetragrammaton Sabaoth, or Adonai Sabaoth, that is the God of hosts; and his numeration is Nezah [Netzach], that is triumph and victory; the right Columnne is applyed to it, and it signifies the eternity and justice of a revenging God; it hath his influence through the order of principalities, whom the Hebrews call Elohim, that is Gods, into the sphere of Venus, gives zeal and love of righteousness, and produceth vegetables; his Intelligence is Haniel and the Angel Cerviel, the ruler of David; The eighth is called also Elohim Sabaoth, which is also interpreted the God of Hoasts [Hosts], not of war and justice, but of piety and agreement; for this name signifieth both, and precedeth his Army; the numeration of this is called Hod, which is interpreted both praise, confession, honor and famousness. The left column is attributed to it; it hath his influence through the order of the Archangels, which the Hebrews call Ben Elohim, that is the sons of God, into the sphere of Mercury, and gives elegancy and consonancy of speech and produceth living creatures; his intelligence is Michael, who was the ruler of Salomon [Solomon]; The ninth name is called Sadai, that is Omnipotent, satisfying all, and Elhai, which is the living God; his numeration is Iesod, that is foundation, and signifieth a good understanding, a Covenant, redemption and rest, and hath his influence through the order of Angels, whom the Hebrews name Cherubim, into the sphere of the Moon, causing the increase and decrease of all things, and taketh care of the genui, and keepers of men, and distributeth them; his intelligence is Gabriel, who was the keeper of Joseph, Joshua and Daniel; The tenth name is Adonai Melech, that is Lord and King; his numeration is Malchuth, that is Kingdom and Empire, & signifieth a Church, Temple of God, and a Gate, and hath his influence through the order of Animastick, viz. of blessed souls, which by the Hebrews is called Issim, that is Nobles, Lords and Princes; they are inferior to the Hierarchies, and have their influence on the sons of men, and give knowledge and the wonderfull understanding of things, also industry and prophesie [prophesy]; and the soul of Messiah is president amongst them, or (as others say) the intelligence Metatron [Metatron] which is called the first Creature, or the soul of the world, and was the ruler of Moses.

Chapter xi. Of the Divine names, and their power and vertue [virtue].

God himself though he be only one in Essence, yet hath diverse names, which expound not his diverse Essences or Deities, but certain properties flowing from him, by which names he doth pour down, as it were by certain Conduits on us and all his creatures many benefits and diverse gifts; ten of these Names we have above described, which also Hierom reckoneth up to Marcella. Dionysius reckoneth up forty five names of God and Christ. The Mecubales of the Hebrews from a certain text of Exodus, derive seventy-two names, both of the Angels and of God, which they call the name of seventy two letters, and Schemhamphores, that is, the expository; but others proceeding further, out of all places of the Scripture do infer so many names of God as the number of those names is: but what they signifie is altogether unknown to us: From these therefore, besides those which we have reckoned up before, is the name of the Divine Essence, Eheia äéää, which Plato translates Ων, from hence they call God TO ON, others O UN that is the being. Hu àää is another name revealed to Esay, signifying the Abyesse of the Godhead, which the Greeks translate ΤΑΥΤΟΝ, the Latins, himself the same. Esch ùà is another name received from Moses which soundeth Fire, and the name of God Na àð is to be invocated in perturbations and troubles. There is also the name Iah äé and the name Elion ïäéìò and the name Macom í÷âî, the name Caphu âôë, the name Innon ïðâé & the name Emeth [=aemeth] úîà which is interpreted Truth, and is the seal of God; and there are two other names Zur øää and Aben ïää both of them signifie a solid work, and one of them express the Father with the Son; and many more names have we placed above in the scale of numbers; and many names of God and the Angels are extracted out of the holy Scriptures by the Cabalisticall calculation, Notarian and Gimetrician [Gematria] arts, where many words retracted by certain of their letters make up one name, or one name dispersed by each of its letters signifieth or rendreth more. Somtimes they are gathered from the heads of words, as the name Agla àîää from this verse of the Holy Scripture

îâòì øáéì éďãà äúà

that is the mighty God for ever; in like manner the name Iaia àéàé from this verse

äääé ãçà äääé åďéäì that is God our God is one God; in like manner the name Iava àääé from this verse

øää éäéå øää éäé

that is let there be light, & there was light; in like maner the name Ararita àúéøàøà from this verse

ãçà éúøéîú åãääéé ùàø åúåãçà ùàø ãçà that is one principle of his unity, one beginning of his Individuality his vicissitude is one thing; and this name Hacaba äá÷ä is extracted from this verse

àää ùåã÷ä êåøá

the holy and the blessed one; in like manner this name Jesu àùé is found in the heads of these two verses, viz.

åì åääåù àéáé that is, untill the Messiah shall come, and the other verse

úéå åîù ïåďé

that is, his name abides till the end, Thus also is the name Amen îîà extracted from this verse

îîàď êîî éďãà

that is the Lord the faithfull King; sometimes these names are extracted from the end of words, as the same name Amen, from this verse íéòùøä ïë àì, that is, the wicked not so, but the letters are transposed; so by the finall letters of this verse äî âîù äî èì,

that is, to me what? or what is his name? is found the name Tetragrammaton, in all these a letter is put for a word, and a letter extracted from a word, either from the beginning, end, or where you please; and sometimes these names are extracted from all the letters, one by one, even as those seventy two names of God are extracted from those three verses of Exodus beginning from these three words,

èéâ àáéâ òñéâ

the first and last verses being written from the right to the left, but the middle contrarywise from the left to the right, as we shall shew hereafter; and so sometimes a word is extracted from a word, or a name from a name, by the transposition of letters, as Messia äéùî from Ismah çîùé and Michael àèéî from éëàîî Malachi. But sometimes by changing of the Alphabeth, which the Cabalists call Ziruph óâøéö so from the name Tetragrammaton äâäé are drawn forth öôöî Maz Paz âæâë Kuzu sometimes also by reason of the equality of numbers, names are changed, as Metatron [Metatron] îâøèèî for Sadai éâù for both of them make three hundred and fourteen, so Iiai éàéé and El àà are equall in number, for both make thirty one. And these are the hidden secrets concerning which it is most difficult to judge, and to deliver a perfect science; neither can they be understood and taught in any other language except the Hebrew; but seeing the names of God (as Plato saith in Cratylus) are highly esteemed of the Barbarians, who had them from God, without the which we can by no means perceive the true words and names by which God is called, therefore concerning these we can say no more, but those things which God out of his goodness hath revealed to us; for they are the mysteries and conveyances of Gods omnipotency, not from men, nor yet from Angels, but instituted and firmly established by the most high God, after a certain manner, with an immovable number and figure of Characters, and breath [breathe] forth the harmony of the Godhead, being consecrated by the Divine assistance; therefore the creatures above fear them, those below tremble at them, the Angels reverence, the devils are affrighted, every creature doth honor, and every Religion adore them; the religious observation whereof, and devout invocation with fear and trembling doth yeeld us great vertue, and even deifies the union, and gives a power to work wonderfull things above nature: Therefore wee may not for any reason whatsoever, change them; therefore Origen commandeth that they be kept without corruption in their own Characters; and Zoroastes [Zoroaster] also forbiddeth the changing of barbarous and old words; for as Plato saith in Cratylus, All Divine words or names, have proceeded either from the gods first, or from antiquity, whose beginning is hardly known, or from the Barbarians: Iamblicus in like manner adviseth, that they may not be translated out of their own language into another; for, saith he, they keep not the same force being translated into another tongue: Therefore these names of God are the most fit and powerfull means of reconciling and uniting man with God, as we read in Exodus, in every place in which mention is made of my name, I will be with thee, and bless thee; and in the book of Numbers, the Lord saith, I will put my name upon the sons of Israel and I will bless them: Therefore Divine Plato in Cratylus & in Philebus commandeth to reverence the names of God more than the Images or statues of the gods: for there is a more expresse Image and power of God, reserved in the faculty of the mind, especially if it be inspired from above, than in the works of mens hands; Therefore sacred words have not their power in Magicall operations, from themselves, as they are words, but from the occult Divine powers working by them in the minds of those who by faith adhere to them; by which words the secret power of God as if were through Conduite pipes, is transmitted into them, who have ears purged by faith, and by most pure conversation and invocation of the divine names are made the habitation of God, and capable of these divine influences; whosoever therefore useth rightly these words or names of God with that purity of mind, in that manner and order, as they were delivered, shall both obtain and do many wonderfull things, as we read of Medea.

*Most pleasant sleep she causd, words thrice she spake,
The Seas appeasd, and soon their fury brake.*

Which the Ancient Doctors of the Hebrews have especially observed, who were wont to do many wonderfull things by words; the Pythagorians [Pythagoreans] also have shewed, how to cure very wonderfully the diseases both of body and mind, with certain words; we read also, that Orpheus, being one of the Argonauts diverted a most fierce storm by certain words; in like manner that Apollonius, by certain words whispered, raised up a dead maide at Rome; and Philostratus reporteth that some did by certain words call up Achilles Ghost; and Pausanias relates, that in Lydia in the Cities of Hiero-Cesarea and Hypepis, were two temples consecrated to the Goddess whom they called Persica, in both of which when divine service was ended, a certain Magitian [magician], after he had laid dry wood upon the Altar, and in his native language had sang Hymnes, and pronounced certain barbarous words, out of a book which he held in his hand, presently the dry wood, no fire being put to it, was seen to be kindled, and burn most clearly. Also Serenus Samonicus delivereth amongst the precepts of Physick, that if this name Abracadabra be written, as is here expressed, viz. diminishing letter after letter backward, from the last to the first, it will cure the Hemitritean Fever or any other, if the sheet of paper or parchment be hanged about the neck, and the disease will by little and little decline and pass away.

But Rabbi Hama in his book of speculation delivereth a sacred seal more efficacious against any diseases of man, or any griefes whatsoever, in whose foreside are the four squared names of God, so subordinated to one another in a square, that from the highest to the lowest those most holy names or seales of the Godhead do arise, whose intention is inscribed in the circumferentiall circle, but on the backside is inscribed the seven lettered name Araritha, and his interpretation is written about, viz. the verse from which it is extracted, even as you see it here described.

The former part.

The hinder part.

But all must be done in most pure gold, or Virgin Parchment, pure, clean and unspotted, also with Inke made for this purpose, of the smoak [smoke] of consecrated wax lights, or incense, and holy water; The actor must be purified and cleansed by sacrifice, and have an infallible hope, a constant faith, and his mind lifted up to the most high God, if he would surely obtain this Divine power. In like manner against the affrightments and mischief of evil spirits and men, and what dangers soever, either of journey, waters, enemies, arms, in the manner as is above said, these Characters on the one side ååååå and these on the backside äáøîö which are the beginnings and ends of the five first verses of Genesis, and representation of the creation of the world; and by this Ligature they say that a man shall be free from all mischiefs, if so be that he firmly beleeveth [believeth] in God the creator of all things.

In the fore part.

In the hinder part.

Neither let any distrust or wonder, that sacred words, applyed outwardly can do very much, seeing by them the Almighty God made the heavens and the earth; and further, by experience it is found, as saith Rab Costa Ben Luca, that many things not having Physicall vertues do very much, As for example, the finger of an abortive child hanged on the neck of a woman hindereth conception, so long as it remaineth there; Moreover that in diverse sacred words and names of God, there is great and Divine power, which worketh miracles, Zoroastes [Zoroaster], Orpheus, Iamblicus, Synesius, Alchindus, and all the famous Philosophers testifie; and Artephius both a Magician and Philosopher, hath written a peculiar book concerning the vertue of words and Characters. Origen not inferior to the famousest Philosophers, doth maintain against Celsus, that there doth ly [lie] hid wonderfull vertue in certain Divine names, and in the book of Judges the Lord saith, my name which is Pele àlô, signifieth with us, a worker of miracles. or causing wonders; but the true name of God is known neither to men nor to Angels, but to God alone, neither shall it be manifested (as the holy Scriptures testifie) before the Will of God be fulfilled; Notwithstanding God hath other names amongst the Angels, others amongst us men; for there is no name of God amongst us (as Moses the Egyptian saith) which is not taken from his works, and signifieth with participation, besides the name Tetragrammaton, which is holy, signifying the substance of the Creator in a pure signification, in which no other thing is partaker with God the Creator; therefore it is called the separated name, which is written and not read, neither is it expressed by us, but named, and signifieth the second supernall Idiome, which is of God, and perhaps of Angels. In like manner the Angels have their name amongst themselves, and in their Idiome, which Paul calleth the tongue of Angels, concerning which we have very little knowledge with us, but all their other names are taken from their offices and operations, which have not so great efficacy, and therefore the Magicians call them by their true names, namely the heavenly ones, which are contained in the holy Bible.

Chapter xii. Of the influence of the divine names through all the middle causes into these inferior things.

The most high Creator and first cause, although he ruleth and disposeth all things, yet distributeth the care of execution to diverse Ministers, both good and bad, which John in the Revelations calls assisting, and destroying Angels: of which the prophet sings elsewhere; The Angel of the Lord remains in the presence of them that fear him, that he may preserve them: and elsewhere he describes immissions by evill Angels. Now whatsoever God doth by Angels, as by ministers, the same doth he by heavens, Stars, but as it were by instruments, that after this manner all things might work together to serve him, that as every part of Heaven, and every Star doth discern every corner or place of the earth, and time, species and Individuall: so it is fit that the Angelical vertue of that part and Star should be applied to them, viz. place, time, and species. Whence Austin [Augustine] in his book of questions, saith, Every visible thing in this world, hath an Angelicall power appointed for it: Hence Origen on the book of Numbers saith, the world hath need of Angels, that may rule the Armies of the earth, Kingdoms, provinces, men, beasts, the nativity, and progress of living creatures, shrubs, plants, and other things, giving them that vertue which is said to be in them, from an occult propriety; much more need is there of Angels that may rule holy works, vertues and men, as they who alwaies see the face of the most high father, and can guide men in the right path, and also even the least thing to this place, as fit members of this world in which God as the chief president, dwelleth, most sweetly disposing all things, not being contained, or circumscribed, but containing all things, as John in the Revelations describeth the heavenly City, whose twelve gates are guarded with twelve Angels, infusing on them what they receive from the Divine name, twelve times revolved; and in the foundations of that City the names of the twelve Apostles, and the Lamb; for as in the Law, in the stones of the Ephod and foundations of the Holy City described by Ezekiel, were written the names of the tribes of Israel, and the name of four letters did predominate over them; so in the Gospel, the names of the Apostles are written in the stones of the foundation of the heavenly City, which stones stand for the tribes of Israel in the Church, over which the name of the Lamb hath influence, that is, the name of Jesus, in which is all the vertue of the four lettered name; seeing that Jehovah the Father hath given him all things: Therefore the Heavens receive from the Angels, that which they dart down; but the Angels from the great name of God and Jesu, the vertue whereof is first in God, afterward diffused into these twelve and seven Angels, by whom it is extended into the twelve signs, and into the seven planets, and consequently into all the other Ministers and instruments of God, pourtrailing even infinitely. Hence Christ saith, Whatsoever you shall ask the Father in my name, he will give you; and after his resurrection saith, In my name they shall cast out devils, and do as followeth; so that the name of four letters is no further necessary, the whole vertue thereof being translated into the name of Jesus, in which only miracles are done; neither is there any other (as Peter saith) under heaven given unto men, by which they can be saved, but that; but let us not think, that by naming Jesus prophanely [profanely], as the name of a certain man, we can do miracles by vertue of it: but we must invoke it in the holy Spirit, with a pure mind and a fervent spirit, that we may obtain those things which are promised us in him; especially knowledge going before, without which there is no hearing of us, according to that of the Prophet, I will hear him because he hath known my name; Hence at this time no favour can be drawn from the heavens, unless the authority, favor and consent of the name Jesu intervene; Hence the Hebrews and Cabalists most skilfull [skillful] in the Divine names, can work nothing after Christ by those old names, as their fathers have done long since; and now it is by experience confirmed, that no devil nor power of Hell, which vex and trouble men, can resist this name, but will they, nill they, bow the knee and obey, when the name Jesu by a due pronounciation is proposed to them to be worshipped, and they fear not only the name but also the Cross, the seal thereof; and not only the knees of earthly, heavenly, and hellish creatures are bowed, but also Insensible things do reverence it, and all tremble at his beck, when from a faithfull heart and a true mouth the name Jesus is pronounced, and pure hands imprint the salutiferous sign of the Cross: neither truly doth Christ say in vain to his Disciples, In my name they shall cast out Devils, &c. unless there were a certain vertue expressed in that name over divels [devils] and sick folk, serpents, and persons, and tongues, and so forth, seeing the power which this name hath, is both from the vertue of God the institutor, and also from the vertue of him who is expressed by this name, and from a power implanted in the very word. Hence is it that seeing every creature feareth and reverenceth the name of him who hath made it, sometimes even wicked and ungodly men, if so be they believe the invocation of Divine names of this kind, do bind devils, and operate certain other great things.

Chapter xiii. Of the members of God, and of their influence on our members.

We read in diverse places of the holy Scripture, of diverse members of God, and ornaments; but by the members of God, are understood manifold powers, most simply abiding in God himself, distinguished amongst themselves by the sacred names of God; but the garments of God and Ornaments, are as it were certain wayes and relations, or Emanations, or conduit pipes, by the which he diffuseth himself; the hemmes of which as oft as our mind shall touch, so often the Divine power of some member goeth forth, even as Jesus cryed [cried] out, concerning the woman with the bloody Issue, Some body hath touched me, for I perceiveth vertue to go forth from me. These members therefore in God are like to ours; but the Ideas and exemplars of our members, to the which if we rightly conform our members, then being translated into the same Image, we are made the true sons of God, and like to God, doing and working the works of God: therefore concerning the members of God, many things are drawn forth out of the Scriptures; for we read of his head in the Canticles; Thy head as Carmel, and the locks of thy head as the purple of a King; but this Carmel signifieth not the mountain in the Sea coast of Syria, but a little creature, which ingendreth [engendereth] the purple. Also of his eyes, eyelids and ears, we read in the Psalmes, the eyes of the Lord on the Just, and his ears to their prayers, his eyes look towards the poor, and his eyelids enquire [inquire] after the sons of men: also of his mouth, tast [taste], throat, lips, and teeth, we read in Esay, Thou hast not enquired at my mouth; and in the Canticles, Thy throat as the best wine for my beloved, that goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak; there are also Nostrils, by the which (as we often find in the Law) he smelleth the sacrifices for a sweet odour: he hath shoulders, armes, hands, and fingers, of the which we read in Esay; the government is laid upon his shoulders; to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? and the Kingly Prophet singeth, thy hands O Lord have made me and fashioned me, and I will behold the heavens, the work of thy fingers; he hath also a right and left hand; hence the Psalmist saith, The Lord saith to my Lord, sit at my right hand: and of the left we read, in the Gospel, on which the damned shall be placed at the last day: further we read of the heart, breast, back, and back parts of God; as in the book of Kings, that God found David a man according to his own heart; we read also in the Gospel his breast upon which the Disciple sleeping conceived divine mysteries; and the Psalmist describeth his back, in the paleness of gold; and he himself saith in Jeremiah, I will shew my back and not my face in the day of their perdition, and he saith to Moses, Thou shalt see my back parts; of his feet the Psalmist also saith, Darkness under his feet, and in Genesis he is said to walk to the South. In like manner also we read of the garments, and ornaments of God, as with the Psalmist, the Lord hath reigned, he hath put on beauty, cloathed [clothed] with light as with a garment; and elsewhere, Thou hast put on comeliness and beauty; The Abyesse as a garment and his cloathing; and in Ezekiel, the Lord speaketh, saying, I spread my garment over thee and covered thy nakedness; moreover also we read of the rod, Staffe, Sword and Buckler of God, as in the Psalmist, Thy rod and thy staffe, they have comforted me; his truth hath compassed thee about as with a shield; and in Deuteronomy we read of the sword of his glory; and very many of this sort the sacred word declares to us; from which members and Divine ornaments, there is no doubt, but that our members and all things about us, and all our works, are both ruled, directed, preserved, governed, and also censured, as the prophet saith, He hath put my foot upon a rock, and directed my goings; and elsewhere he saith, Blessed be the Lord my God, who teacheth my hand to war, and my fingers to fight; and of his mouth he saith, the Lord hath put a new song into my mouth; and elsewhere our Saviour saith, I will give you a mouth and wisdom; and of the hair he saith, an hair of your head shall not perish; and in another place, the hairs of your head are numbred [numbered]; for the Almighty God seeing he would have us to be his Images and like to himself, hath framed members, limbs, and figures after many ways laid open in us, according to the similitude of his hidden vertues, as it were signs keeping the same order and proportion to them: whence the Mecubals of the Hebrews say, that if a man capable of the Divine influence do make any member of his body clean and free from filthiness, then it becometh Habitale and proper seat of the secret limb of God, and of the vertue to the which the same name is ascribed: so that if that member want any thing, the name being invocated, whence it dependeth, it is presently heard effectually, according to that, I will hear him, because he hath known my name; and these are the great and hidden mysteries, concerning which it is not lawfull to publish more.

Chapter xiiii. Of the Gods of the gentiles, and souls of the Celestiall bodies, and what places were consecrated in times past, and to what Deities.

The Philosophers have maintained, as we have shewed before, that the Heavens and Stars are Divine Animals, and their souls intellectuall, participating of the Divine mind; and they averre, that some separated substances are superior, others inferior to them, as it were governing and serving, which they call intelligences and Angels; moreover Plato himself affirmed, that Celestiall souls' are not confined to their bodies, as our souls to our bodies, but to be, where they will, and also that they rejoyce [rejoice] in the vision of God, and without any labor or pains do rule and move their bodies, and together in moving them do easily govern these inferior things; therefore they often called the souls of this kind, Gods, and appointed Divine honors for them, and dedicated prayers and sacrifices to them, and did worship them with Divine worship, and these are the gods to the which all people are attributed, concerning which Moses commanded in Deuteronomy, saying, least perchance your eyes being lifted up to Heaven, thou shouldest see the Sun, the Moon, and all the Stars of Heaven, and being turned back shouldest adore and worship them, to which all the Nations are subjected, which are under the Heaven; but the Lord Jehovah hath taken and brought you forth from the furnace of Egypt, that thou shouldest be an Hereditary people to himself; and in the same book chap. 17 he calleth the Sun, Moon, & Stars Gods; and the Doctors of the Hebrews upon that place of Genesis where it is said, that Abraham gave gifts to the sons of the concubines, viz. Shemoth, Steltoma, that is strange names, but left Isaac heir of all that he possessed, say, that the sons of the concubines were not in the blessing of Abraham, given to Jehovah the most high creator, but to strange gods and deities, but that Isaac and his seed were given to the omnipotent Jehovah, and in no part to any strange Deities; therefore they are upbraided in Deuteronomy, because they served strange gods and worshipped them they knew not, and to whom they were not given; and also Joshua Nave, after that the people were brought into the land of promise, their enemies overcome, and the lots of the possessions of Israel distributed, gave the people leave to choose that God whom they would worship, saying, leave is given you this day to choose whom you will especially serve, whether the gods which your fathers served in Mesopotamia, or the gods of the Amorites, whose land you inhabite; but the people answered, we will serve the Lord Jehovah, and he shall be our God; Joshua said to them, ye cannot do it, for the Lord Jehovah is holy, strong, and jealous; but the people persevering to serve Jehovah; he saith to them, ye are witnesses your selves, that ye have chosen for your selves the Lord, to serve him; take away therefore strange gods out of the midst of you, and incline your hearts to the Lord God of Israel and he erected a great stone saying, this stone shalbe for a witness, least perhaps afterwards ye will deny and lye [lie] to the Lord your God; therefore the other gods, to which the other Nations were given, were the Sun, Moon, twelve Signs, and other Celestial bodies, and Divine fabricks, yet not as they were bodies, but as the soul adhereth to them, and the whole Militia of Heaven, which Jeremy cals the queen of Heaven, that is the power by which the Heaven is governed, viz. the soul of the world, of which Jeremy saith, The sons gather sticks, and part thereof maketh a fire, and the women mingle oyl [oil], that they might make a cake for the Queen of heaven, neither was the worship of Doulia, to this Queen and other Celestiall souls prohibited them, but of Latria only, which they that gave, are reproved of the Lord; but the name of these souls or Gods, we have declared; but to what Regions, People, and Cities they were ascribed as proper and tutelar gods; Origen, Tertullian, Apuleius, Diodorus, and very many other historians, partly relate to us: Therefore all people worshipped their gods with their proper ceremonies; The Beotians, Amphiarus; The Africans, Mopsus; the Egyptians, Osiris and Isis; the Ethiopians, who inhabite Mero, Jupiter and Bacchus; The Arabians; Bacchus and Venus; the Scythians, Minerva; the Naucradians, Serapis; the Syrians, Atargates; the Arabians, Diaphares; the Africans, Celestus; the Nornians, Tibelenus: In Italy also by the free Cities consecration, Delventius, was the God of the Crustumensians, Viridianus of the Narvensians, Aucharia of the Æsculans, Narsia of the Volsians, Valentia of the Otriculans, Nortia of the Sutrinians, Curis of the Phaliscians; these especially were famous. The Latians did adore with the highest worship, Mars; the Egyptians, Isis; the Moors, Iuba; the Macedonians, Cabrius; the Carthaginians, Uranus; the Latines, Faunus; the Romans, Quirinus; the Sabines, Sangus; the Athenians, Minerva; Samos, Juno; Paphos, Venus; Lemnos, Vulcan; Naxos, Bacchus; Delphos, Apollo; and as Ovid singeth in his Fasti, Athens do Pallas; Crete, Dian' implore.

 The island Lemnos Vulcan doth adore.
 The Spartans, Juno ----

The Carthaginians and Leucadians did worship Saturn; Crete, Pyreus, Homole, Ida, Elis and Lybia [Libia], Jupiter, where was his Oracle: Epirus, Latium, Gnidus, Lycia, Pisa, Macedonia, Mars; The Thermodonians, Scythians, and Thracia, the Sun; the Scythians did worship only one God, sacrificing an horse to him; the same also the Heliopolitans, and Assyrians did worship; and under the name of Apollo, the Rhodians, Hyperboreans and Milesians; and the mountains Parnassus, Phaselus, Cynthus, Soracte, were holy to him, and the Islands Delos, Claros, Tenedos and Mallois, a place in the Isle Lesbos, and the Grynean Grove or Town, besides the Cities, Patara, Chrysa, Tarapnas, Cyrrha, Delphos, Arrephina, Entrosi, Tegyra; Also Thebes, the Island Naxos, Nise a City of Arabia, Callichoros a river of Paphlagonia, were consecrated to him under the name of Bacchus and Dionysus; also Parnassus, and Cytheros mountains of Boetia, in which every second year [year] by course, the feasts Bacchanalia were kept; also the Thamaritans a people neighbors to the Hircanians did worship Bacchus with their own Ceremonies. The Assyrians first of all introduced the worship of Venus; then the Paphians in Cyprus, and Phenicians [Phoenicians], and Cythereans, whom (as Ageus reports) the Athenians followed: amongst the Lacedomonians, Venus Armatha was worshipped; at Delphos, Venus Epitybia; she was also adored of the Coans; and in Amathus an island of the Aegean Sea, and in Memphi [Memphis] a City of Egypt, and in Gnido and Sicilia, and the Idalian Grove, and the City Hypepa, and Erice a mountain of Sicilia, and in Calidonia, Cyrene and Samos; and no Deity of the old Gods (Aristotle being witness) is reported to have been worshipped with greater ceremonies, and in more places; the French did especially worship Mercury, calling him Teutates; so also the Arcadians, Hormopolites, Egyptians and Memphites. The Scythians about mount Taurus, did worship the Moon under the name of Diana; and in Ephesus, she had a most stately Temple; and in Mycena after the death of Thoantes, King of Taurica, her Image being stollen away by Iphigenia and Orestes, she was worshipped nigh Aricia. The Rite of Ceremonies being changed, she was worshipped likewise by the Magnesians, a people of Thessalia, and in Pisa, a City of Achaia, and in Tybur, and the Aventinum a Roman hill, and in Perga a City of Pamphila, and in Agras in the Kingdom of Attica; and the Catenian people are reported to have worshipped the Moon under the Masculine sexe; there were also other places consecrated to other Deities, as to Pallas, who is called Minerva, were consecrated Athens, the mountains Pyreus, Aracynthus, the River Tritones, and Alcomeneum a city of Boetia, and Neo one of the Islands of the Cyclades; The holy places of Ceres are, Eleusis, Attica, Enna, and Catana, Cities of Sicilia, and Mount Aetna; The chief worship to Vulcan was in the Island of Lemnos, and in Imbres, an Island of Thracia and Therasia, an Island consecrated to Vulcan, and also Sicilia. Vesta was the goddess of the Trojans, whom runaway Aeneas carried into Italy, and to her are given the Phrygians, Idea, and Dindymus, mountains of Phrygia, and Reatum a City of Umbria; also the mountain Berecynthus, and Pessinuntium, a City of Phrygia; The Cities Carthage, Prosenna, Arhos, and Mycena, worshipped Juno; also the Island Samos, and the people of Phaliscia, Orchestus a City of Boetia, and Tenatus a Promontory of Laconia, were consecrated to Neptune, and the Trezenian Nation and City were under the protection of Neptune: of this sort therefore were the gods of the Nations, which did rule and govern them, which Moses himself in Deuteronomy calleth Gods of the earth, to the which all Nations were attributed, not signifying others then the heavenly Stars, and their souls.

Chapter xv. What our Theologians think concerning the Celestial souls.

That the heavens and the heavenly bodies are animated with certain Divine souls, is not only the opinion of Poets, and Philosophers, but also the assertion of the sacred Scriptures, and of the Catholicks; for Ecclesiastes also describeth the soul of heaven, and Jerom upon same same expresly confesseth it: In like manner Origen in his book of Principles, seemeth to think that Celestiall bodies are animated, because they are said to receive commands from God, which is only agreeable to a reasonable nature; for it is written, I have enjoyned a command on all the Stars; Moreover Job seemeth to have fully granted, that the Stars are not free from the stain of sin; for there we read, the Stars also are not clean in his sight; which cannot verily be referred to the brightness of their bodies; moreover that the Celestiall bodies are animated, even Eusebius the Pamphilian thought, and also Austin [Augustine] in his Enchiridion; but of the latter writers Albertus Magnus in his book of four co-equals, and Thomas Aquinas in his book of Spiritual Creatures, and John Scot upon the second of the sentences; to these the most learned Cardinall Nich. Cusanus may be added; Moreover Aureolus himself in a strong disputation doth convince these things; who moreover thinketh it not strange, that the Heavenly bodies are worshipped with the worship of Doulia, and that their suffrages and helps are implored; to whom also Thomas himself consenteth, unless the occasion of Idolatry should hinder this rite; moreover Plotinus maintaineth that they know our wishes, and hear them; but if any one would contradict these, and account them sacrilegious tenents [tenets], let him hear Austin [Augustine] in his Enchiridion, and in his book of Retractions, and Thomas in the second book against the Gentiles, and in his Quodlibets, and Scotus upon the sentences, and Gulielmus Parisiensis in his sum of the universe, who unanimously answer, that to say the heavenly bodies are animated or inanimated, nothing belongeth to the Catholick faith. Therefore although it seemeth to many ridiculous, that the souls themselves be placed in the spheres and Stars, and as it were the Gods of the Nations, every one doth govern his Regions, Cities, Tribes, People, Nations and Tongues, yet it will not seem strange to those who rightly understand it.

Chapter xvi. Of Intelligences and spirits, and of the threefold kind of them, and of their diverse names, and of Infernall and subterraneall spirits.

Now consequently we must discourse of Intelligences, spirits and Angels. An Intelligence is an intelligible substance, free from all gross and putrifying mass of a body, immortall, insensible, assisting all, having Influence over all; and the nature of all intelligences, spirits and Angels is the same. But I call Angels here, not those whom we usually call Devils, but spirits so called from the propriety of the word, as it were, knowing, understanding and wise. But of these according to the tradition of the Magicians, there are three kinds, the first of which they call supercelestiall, and minds altogether separated from a body, and as it were intellectuall spheres, worshipping the one only God, as it were their most firm and stable unity or center; wherefore they even call them gods, by reason of a certain participation of the divinity; for they are always full of God, and overwhelmed with the Divine Nectar. These are only about God, and rule not the bodies of the world, neither are they fitted for the government of inferior things, but infuse the light received from God unto the inferior orders, and distribute every ones duty to all of them; The Celestial intelligences do next follow these in the second order, which they call worldly Angels viz. being appointed besides the Divine worship for the spheres of the world, and for the government of every heaven & Star, whence they are divided into so many orders, as there are heavens in the world, & as there are Stars in the Heavens, and they called those Saturnine, who rule the Heaven of Saturn & Saturn himself; others Joviall, who rule the heaven of Jupiter and Jupiter himself, and in like maner they name diverse Angels, as well for the name, as the vertue of the other Stars; and because the old Astrologers did maintain maintain fifty five motions, therefore they invented so many Intelligences or Angels; they placed also in the Starry heaven, Angels, who might rule the signs, triplicities, decans, quinaries, degrees and Stars; for although the school of the Peripateticks assigne one onely intelligence to each of the Orbs of the Stars: yet seeing every Star and small part of the heaven hath its proper and different power and influence, it is necessary that it also have his ruling intelligence, which may confer power and operate; therefore they have established twelve Princes of the Angels, which rule the twelve signs of the Zodiack, and thirty six which may rule the so many Decans, and seventy two, which may rule the so many Quinaries of heaven, and the tongues of men and the Nations, and four which may rule the triplicities and Elements, and seven governors of the whole world, according to the seven planets, and they have given to all of them names, and seals, which they call Characters, and used them in their invocations, incantations, and carvings, deccribing them in the instruments of their operations, images, plates, glasses, rings, papers, wax lights and such like; and if at any time they did operate for the Sun, they did invoke by the name of the Sun, and by the names of Solare Angels, and so of the rest. Thirdly they established Angels as Ministers for the disposing of those things which are below, which Origen calleth certain invisible powers to the which those things which are on earth, are committed to be disposed of. For sometimes they being visible to none do direct our journies [journeys] and all our businesses, are oft present at battels [battles], and by secret helps do give the desired successes to their friends, for they are said, that at their pleasures they can procure prosperity, and inflict adversity. In like manner they distribute these into more orders, so as some are fiery, some watery, some aerial, some terrestrial; which four species of Angels are computed according to the four powers of the Celestiall souls, viz. the mind, reason, imagination, and the vivifying and moving nature; Hence the fiery follow the mind of the Celestiall souls, whence they concur to the contemplation of more sublime things, but the Aeriall follow the reason, and favor the rationall faculty, and after a certain manner separate it from the sensitive and vegetative; therefore it serveth for an active life, as the fiery for a contemplative, but the watery following the imagination, serve for a voluptuous life; The earthly following nature, favour vegetable nature; moreover they distinguish also this kind of Angels into Saturnine and Joviall, according to the names of the Stars, and the Heavens; further some are Orientall, some Occidentall, some Meridional, some Septentrionall; Moreover there is no part of the world destitute of the proper assistance of these Angels, not because they are there alone, but because they reign there especially, for they are everywhere, although some especially operate and have their influence in this place, some elsewhere; neither truly are these things to be understood, as though they were subject to the influences of the Stars, but as they have correspondence with the Heaven above the world, from whence especially all things are directed, and to the which all things ought to be conformable; whence as these Angels are appointed for diverse Stars, so also for diverse places and times, not that they are limited by time or place, neither by the bodies which they are appointed to govern, but because the order of wisdom hath so decreed, therefore they favor more, and patronize those bodies, places, times, stars; so they have called some Diurnall, some Nocturnall, other Meridionall; in like manner some are called Woodmen, some Mountaineers, some Fieldmen, some Domesticks. Hence the gods of the Woods, Country gods, Satyrs, familiars, Fairies of the fountains, Fairies of the Woods, Nymphs of the Sea, the Naiades, Neriades, Dryades, Pierides, Hamadryades, Potumides, Hinnides, Agapte, Pales, Pareades, Dodonæ, Feniliæ, Lavernæ, Pareæ, Muses, Aonides, Castalides, Heliconides, Pegasides, Meonides, Phebiades, Camenæ, the Graces, the Genii, Hobgoblins, and such like; whence they call them vulgar superiors, some the demi-gods [demigods] and goddesses; some of these are so familiar and acquainted with men, that they are even affected with humane perturbations, by whose instruction Plato thinketh that men do oftentimes wonderfull things, even as by the instruction of men, some beasts which are most nigh unto us, as Apes, Dogs, Elephants, do often strange things above their species; and they who have written the Chronicles of the Danes and Norwegians, do testifie, that spirits of diverse kinds in those regions are subject to mens commands; moreover some of these to be corporeall and mortall, whose bodies are begotten and dy [die], yet to be long lived is the opinion of the Egyptians and Platonists, and especially approved by Proclus. Plutarch also and Demetrius the Philosopher, and Aemilianus the Rhetoritian affirm the same; Therefore of these spirits of the third kind, as the opinion of the Platonists is; they report that there are so many Legions, as there are Stars in the Heaven, and so many spirits in every Legion, as in heaven it self Stars, but there are (as Athanasius delivereth) who think, that the true number of the good spirits, is according to the number of men ninety nine parts, according to the parable of the hundred sheep; others think only nine parts, according to the parable of the ten groats; others suppose the number of the Angels equal with men, because it is written, He hath appointed the bounds of the people according to the number of the Angels of God; and concerning their number many have written many things, but the latter Theologians following the master of the dentences, Austin [Augustine] and Gregory easily resolve themselves, saying, that the number of the good Angels transcendeth humane capacity; to the which on the contrary, innumerable unclean spirits do correspond, there being so many in the inferior world, as pure spirits in the superior, and some Divines affirm that they have received this by revelations; under these they place a kind of spirits, subterrany or obscure, which the Platonists call Angels that failed, revengers of wickedness, and ungodliness, according to the decree of the Divine justice, and they call them evill Angels and wicked spirits, because they oft annoy and hurt even of their own accords; of these also they reckon more legions, and in like manner distinguishing them according to the names of the Stars and Elements, and parts of the world, they do place over them Kings, Princes and Rulers and the names of them; of these, four most mischievous Kings do rule over the other [others], according to the four parts of the world; under these many more Princes of Legions govern, and also many of private offices. Hence the Gorgones, Statenocæ, the furies. Hence Tisiphone, Alecto, Megæra, Cerberus: They of this kind of spirits, Porphyry saith, inhabite a place nigh to the earth, yea within the earth it self; there is no mischief, which they dare not commit; they have altogether a violent and hurtfull custome, therefore they very much plot and endeavor violent and sudden mischiefs; and when they make incursions, sometimes they are wont to lie hide [hid], but sometimes to offer open violence, and are very much delighted in all things done wickedly and contentiously.

Chapter xvii. Of these according to the opinion of the Theologians.

But our Theologians, together with Dionysius, maintain the three distinctions of Angels; every one of which they divide into three orders, they call these Hierarchies, those quires, whom Proclus also distinguisheth by the number nine. They place therefore in the superior Hierarchies, Seraphim, Cherubim, and Thrones, as it were supercelestiall Angels contemplating the order of the Divine providence; the first in the goodness of God; the second in the Essence of God, as the form; the third in the wisdom. In the middle Hierarchy they place the Dominations, Vertues, and Powers, as it were wordly Angels concurring to the government of the world; the first of these command that which the other execute; the second are Ministers to the Heavens and sometimes conspire to the working of miracles; the third drive away those things which seem to be able to disturbe the Divine Law; but in the inferior Hierarchy they place the Principalities, Archangels, [and Angels,] whom also Iamblicus reckoneth up, these as ministering spirits descend to take care of inferior things; the first of these take care of publike [public] things, princes and magistrates, provinces and kingdoms, every one those that belong to themselves; when we read in Daniel, But the prince of the Kingdom of Persia withstood me twenty one dayes; and Jesus the son of Syrach testifieth, that for every Nation a ruling Angel is appointed; which also Moses by his song in Deuteronomy seemeth to shew forth, saying, when the most High divided the Nations, he appointed them bounds according to the number of the Angels of God. The second are present at sacred duties, and direct the Divine worship about every man, and offer up the prayers and sacrifices of men before the gods. The third dispose every smaller matter, and to each thing each one is a preserver. There are also of these, who afford vertue to the least plants and stones and to all inferior things; to whom many things are common with God, many with men, and they are mediating Ministers; But Athanasius, besides Thrones, Cherubins, and Seraphins, who are next to God, and magnify him uncessantly with hymns and continuall praises, praying for our salvation, nameth the other orders, which by a common name he calleth the militia of heaven. The first of these is the Doctrinall order, of the which he was, who spake to Daniel, saying, Come, that I may teach thee what shall come to thy people in the last dayes: Then there is the tutelar order, of the which we read also in Daniel. Behold, Michael one of the Princes cometh to my help; and there, In that time shall rise up Michael a great Prince, who standeth for the sons of thy people; of this order was that Raphael also, who carryed forth and brought back Tobiah the younger; after this is the Procuratory Order, of the which mention is made in Job, where we read, if the Angel shall speak for him, he will intreat the Lord, and the Lord will be pleased with him; and of the same order is expounded also that which is written in the sixteenth Chapter of Ecclesiasticus, about the end. The works of the Lord have been made by his appointment from the beginning, and he hath distributed their portions from the time they have been made, he hath adorned their works for ever, they have not hungred [hungered], nor been wearied, and have not desisted from their works, none of them shall oppress his neighbor even for ever. The Ministeriall order followeth, of the which Paul to the Hebrews saith, Are they not all Ministring spirits, sent forth for them who shall be heirs of salvation? After these is the Auxiliary order, of the which we read in Esay, The Angels of the Lord went forth and slew in the tent of the Assyrians 185. thousands. The Receptory order of souls followeth this, of which we read in Luke, the soul of Lazarus was carryed by Angels into the bosom of Abraham, and there we are taught, that we should make to our selves friends of the unrighteous Mammon, that we may be received into eternall Tabernacles. Moreover, there is the order of the Assistants, of the which we reade in Zachary. These are the two sons of the Oyl [oil] of splendor, who assist the ruler of the whole earth, but the Theologians of the Hebrews do otherwise number and call these orders; for in the highest place are those which they call ùã÷ä úåéä [Haioth Hacadosh] that is, creatures of sanctity, or by the which God äéää giveth the gift of being. In the second place succeed Ophanim íéðôää that is forms or wheels, by the which God äääé distinguisheth the Chaos: In the third place are Aralim íéìàøä great, strong, and mighty Angels, by the which Jehova [L: Tetragrammaton] Elohim pronounced or Jehova [L: Tetragrammaton] joyned with He äääéä administreth form to the liquid matter: In the fourth place are Hasmalim íëîùä by which El là God framed the effigies of bodies. The fifth order is Seraphim íéôøù by the which God Elohim Gibor øáéâ íéälà draweth forth the elements. The sixt [sixth] is Malachim íéëàî that is of Angels, by the which God Eloha äålà, produceth metals. The seventh Elohim íéälà that is the gods by the which God Jehovah Sabaoth úåàáö äääé produceth vegetables; The eighth Beni Elohim íéälà éïá that is the sons of God, by the which God Elohim Sabaoth úåàáö íéälà procreateth Animals; The ninth & lowest Cherubim íéáåøë by the which God Sadai éãù createth mankind; under these is the order Animasticus called Issim íéùéà that is nobles, strong men, or blessed, by the which God Adonai éðãà bestoweth prophecie.

Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa: his Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy

This HTML edition by Joseph H. Peterson, Copyright © 2000. All rights reserved.

Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa (1486-1535) is the most influential writer of Renaissance esoterica. His de occulta philosophia appeared in three books. Written from 1509 to 1510 (he would have been 23 at the time), it circulated widely in manuscript form, and was eventually printed in 1533. It is a "systematic exposition of ... Ficinian spiritual magic and Trithemian demonic magic (and) ... treatised in practical magic" (I. P. Coulano in Hidden Truths 1987, p. 114).

The so-called Fourth Book appeared in Latin some thirty years after Agrippa's death. Johann Weyer, a student of Agrippa's, denounced this work to be spurious (cf. Praestigiis Daemonum, 1563) and that evaluation has rarely been questioned. An exception to this is Stephen Skinner in his 1978 introduction to the facsimile edition published by Askin Publishers.

This book quotes from and expands on certain themes in Agrippa's Third Book of occult philosophy, to create a more concise and practical synopsis of the techniques for summoning spirits.

In our Books of Occult Philosophy, we have not so compendiously, as copiously, declared the principles, grounds, and reasons of Magick it self, and after what maner the experimants thereof are to be chosen, elected, and compounded, to produce many wonderful effects; but because in those books they are treated of, rather Theoretically [theoretically], then Practically; and some also are not handled compleatly and fully, and others very figuratively, and as it were Enigmatically and obscure Riddles, as being those which we have attained unto with great study, diligence, and very curious searching and exploration, and are heretofore set forth in a more rude and unfashioned maner. Therefore in this book, which we have composed and made as it were a Complement and Key of our other books of Occult Philosophy, and of all Magical Operations, we will give unto thee the documents of holy and undefiled verity, and Inexpugnable and Unresistable Magical Discipline, and the most pleasant and delectable experiments of the sacred Deities. So that as by the reading of our other books of Occult Philosophy, thou maist earnestly cover the knowledge of these things; even so with reading this book, thou shalt truely triumph. Wherefore let silence hide these things within the secret closets of thy religious breast, and conceal them with constant Taciturnity.

[Of the names of spirits.]

Cf. [Occul. Phil. III, xxvii where the referenced table is given.]

This therefore is to be known, That the names of the intelligent presidents of every one of the Planets are constituted after this maner: that is to say, By collecting together the letters out of the figure of the world, from the rising of the body of the Planet, according to the succession of the Signes through the several degrees; and out of the several degrees, from the aspects of the Planet himself, the calculation being made from the degree of the ascendant. In the like maner are constituted the names of the Princes of the evil spirits; they are taken under all the Planets of the presidents in a retrograde order, the projection being made contrart to the succession of the signes, from the beginning of the seventh House. Now the name of the supreme & highest intelligence, which many do suppose to be the soul of the world, is collected out of the four Cardinal points of the figure of the world, after the maner already delivered: & by the opposite and contrary way, is known the name of the great Dæmon, or evil spirit, upon the four cadent Angles. In the like maner shalt thou understand the names of the great presidential spirits ruling in the Air, from the four Angles of the succedant Houses: so that as to obtain the names of the good spirits, the calculation is to be made according to the succession of the signes, beginning from the degree of the ascendant; and to attain to the names of the evil spirits, by working the contrary way.

You must also observe, that the names of the evil spirits are extracted, aswel from the names of the good spirits, as of the evil: so not withstanding, that if we enter the table with the name of a good spirit of the second order, the name of the evil spirit shall be extracted from the order of the Princes and Governours; but if we enter the table with the name of a good spirit of the third order, or with the name of an evil spirit a Governour, after what maner soever they are extracted, whether by this table, or from a celestial figure, the names which do proceed from hence, shall be the names of the evil spirits, the Ministers of the inferiour order.

It is further to be noted, That as often as we enter this table with the good spirits of the second order, the names extracted are of the second order: and if under them we extract the name of an evil spirit, he is of the superiour order of the Governours. The same order is, if we enter with the name of an evil spirit of the superiour order. If therefore we enter this table with the names of the spirits of the third order, or with the names of the ministring spirits, aswel of the good spirits, as of the evil, the names extracted shall be the names of the ministring spirits of the inferiour order.

But many Magicians, men of no small Authority, will have the tables of this kinde to be extended with Latine letters: so that by the same tables also, out of the name of any office or effect, might be found out the name of any spirit, aswel good as evil, by the same maner which is above delivered, by taking the name of the office or of the effect, in the columnne of letters, in their own line, under their own star. And of this practice Trismegistus is a great Author, who delivered this kinde of calculation in Egyptian letters: not improperly also may they be referred to other letters of other tongues, for the reasons assigned to the signes; for truly he only is extant of all men, who have treated concerning the attaining to the names of spirits.

Therefore the force, secrete and power, in what maner the sacred names of spirits are truly and rightly found out, consisteth in the disposing of vowels, which do not make the name of a spirit, and wherewith is constituted the true name, and right word. Now this art is thus perfected and brought to pass: first, we are to take heed of the placing the vowels of the letters, which are found by the calculation of the celestial figure, to finde the names of the spirits of the second order, Presidents and Governours. And this in the good spirits, is thus brought to effect, by considering the stars which do constitute and make the letters, and by placing them according to their order: first, let the degree of the eleventh House be subtracted from the degree of that star which is first in order; and that which remaineth thereof, let it be projected from the degree of the ascendent, and where that number endeth, there is a part of the vowel of the first letter: begin therefore to calculate the vowels of these letters, according to their number and order; and the vowel which falleth in the place of the star, which is the first in order, the same vowel is attributed to the first letter. Then afterwards thou shalt finde the part of the second letter, by subtracting the degree of a star which is the second in order from the first star; and that which remaineth, cast from the ascendant. And this is the part from which thou shalt begin the calculation of the vowels; and that vowel which falleth upon the second star, the same is the vowel of the second letter. And so consequently maist thou search out the vowels of the following letters alwaies, by subtracting the degree of the following star, from the degree of the star next preceding and going before. And so also all calculations and numerations in the names of the good spirits, ought to be made according to the succession of the signes. And in calculating the names of the evil spirits, where in the names of the good spirits is taken the degree of the eleventh House, in these ought to be taken the degree of the twelfth House. And all numerations and calculations may be made with the succession of the signes, by taking the beginning from the degree of the tenth House.

But in all extractions by tables, the vowels are placed after another maner. In the first place therefore is taken the certain number of letters making the name it self, and is thus numbred from the beginning of the columnne of the first letter, or whereupon the name is extracted; and the letter on which this number falleth, is referred to the first letter of the name, extracted by taking the distance of the one from the other, according to the order of the Alphabet. But the number of that distance is projected from the beginning of his comunne; and where it endeth, there is part of the first vowel: from thence therefore thou shalt calculate the vowels themselves, in their own number and order, in the same columnne; and the vowel which shall fall upon the first letter of a name, the same shall be attributed to that name. Now thou shalt finde the following vowels, by taking the distance from the precedent vowel to the following: and so consequently according to the succession of the Alphabet. And the number of that distance is to be numbered from the beginning of his own columnne; and where he shall cease, there is the part of the vowel sought after. From thence therefore must you calculate the vowels, as we have abovesaid; and those vowels which shall fall upon their own letters, are to be attributed unto them: if therefore any vowel shall happen to fall upon a vowel, the former must give place to the letter: and this you are to understand only of the good spirits. In the evil also you may proceed in the same way; except only, that you make the numerations after a contrary and backward order, contrary to the succession of the Alphabet, and contrary to the order of the columnes (that is to say) in ascending.

The name of good Angels, and of every man, which we have taught how to finde out, in our third book of Occult Philosophy, according to that maner, is of no little Authority, nor of a mean foundation. But now we will give unto thee some other ways, illustrated with no vain reasons. One whereof is, by taking in the figure of the nativity, the five places of Hylech: which being noted, the characters of the letters are projected in their order and number from the beginning of Aries; and those letters which fall upon the degrees of the said places, according to their order and dignity disposed and aspected, do make the name of an Angel. There is also another way, wherein they do take Almutel, which is the ruling and governing stars over the aforesaid five places; and the projection is to be made from the degree of the ascendant; which is done by gathering together the letters falling upon Almutel: which being placed in order, according to their dignity, do make the name of an Angel. There is furthermore another way used, and very much had in observation from the Egyptians, by making their calculation from the degree of the ascendant, and by gathering together the letters according to the Almutel of the eleventh House; which House they call a good Dæmon: which being placed according to their dignities, the names of the Angels are constituted. Now the names of the evil Angels are known after the like maner, except only that the projections must be performed contrary to the course and order of the succession of the signes, so that whereas in seeking the names of good spirits, we are to calculate from the beginning of Aries; contrariwise, in attaining the names of the evil, we ought to account from the beginning of Libra. And whereas in the good spirits we number from the degree of the ascendant; contrarily, in the evil, we must calculate from the degree of the seventh House. But according to the Egyptians, the name of an Angel is collected according to the Almutel of the twelfth House, which they call an evil spirit.

[The manner of making characters.]

Now all those rites, which are elsewhere already by us delivered in our third book of Occult Philosophy, may be made by the characters of any language. In all which (as we have abovesaid) there is a mystical and divine number, order and figure; from whence it cometh to pass, that the same spirit may be called by divers names. But others are discovered from the name of the spirit himself, of the good or evil, by tables formed to this purpose.

Now these celestial characters do consist of lines and heads: the heads are six, according to the six magnitudes of the stars, whereunto the planets also are reduced. The first magnitude holdeth a Star, with the Sun, or a Cross. The second with Jupiter a circular point. The third holdeth with Saturn, a semicircle, a triangle, either crooked, round, or acute. The fourth with Mars, a little stroke penetrating the line, either square, straight, or oblique. The fifth with Venus and Mercury, a little stroke or point with a tail, ascending or descending. The sixth with the Moon, a point made black. All which you may see in the ensuing table. The heads then being posited according to the site of the Stars in the figure of Heaven, then the lines are to be drawn out, according to the congruency or agreement of their natures. And this you are to understand of the fixed Stars. But in the erecting of the Planets, the lines are drawn out, the heads being posited according to their course and nature amongst themselves.

Stars. Heads. Lines joyned to the Heads.

	Stars.	Heads.	Lines joyned to the Heads.

II. 24
III. ②
III. ③
V. ④
VI. ⑤

When therefore a character is to be found of any celestial Image ascending in any degree or face of a signe, which do consist of Stars of the same magnitude and nature; then the number of these Stars being posited according to their place and order, the lines are drawn after the similitude of the Image signified, as copiously as the same can be done.

But the Characters which are extracted according to the name of a spirit, are composed by the table following, by giving to every letter that name which agreeth unto him, out of the table; which although it may appear easie to those that apprehend it, yet there is herein no small difficulty; To wit, when the letter of a name falleth upon the line of letters or figures, that we may know which figure or which letter is to be taken. And this may be thus known: for if a letter falleth upon the line of letters, consider of what number this letter may be in the order of the name; as the second, or the third; then how many letters that name containeth; as five or seven; and multiply these numbers one after another by themselves, and treble the product: then cast the whole (being added together) from the beginning of the letters, according to the succession of the Alphabet: and the letter upon which that number shall happen to fall, ought to be placed for the character of that spirit. But if any letter of a name fall on the line of figures, it is thus to be wrought. Take the number how many this letter is in order of the name, and let it be multiplied by that number of which this letter is in the order of the Alphabet; and being added together, divide it by nine, and the remainder sheweth the figure or number to be placed in the character: and this may be put either in a Geometrical or Arithmetical figure of number; which notwithstanding ought not to exceed the number of nine, or nine Angles.

But the Characters which are understood by the revelation of Spirits, take their vertue from thence; because they are, as it were, certain hidden seals, making the harmony of some divinity: either they are signes of a Covenant entred into, and of promised and plighted faith, or of obedience. And those Characters cannot by any other means be searched out.

[The appearance of spirits]

Moreover, besides these Characters, there are certain familiar Figures & Images of evil Spirits, under which forms they are wont to appear, and yield obedience to them that invoke them. And all these Characters or Images may be seen by the table following, according to the course of the letters constituting the names of Spirits themselves: so that if in any letter there is found more then the name of one Spirit, his Image holdeth the pre-eminence, the others imparting their own order; so that they which are the first orders, to them is attributed the head, the upper part of the body, according to their own figure: those which are the lowest, do possess the thighs and feet; so also the middle letters do attribute like to themselves the middle parts of the body, or give the parts that fit. But if there happens any contrariety, that letter which is the stronger in the number shall bear rule: and if they are equal, they all impart equal things. Furthermore, if any name shall obtain any notable Character or Instrument out of the Table, he shall likewise have the same character in the Image.

We may also attain to the knowledge of the dignities of the evil Spirits, by the same Tables of Characters and Images: for upon what spirit soever there falleth any excellent signe or instrument out of the Table of Characters, he possesseth that dignity; if a Crest or Plume, a Dukedome; if a Horn, a County; if without these there be a Scepter, Sword, or forked Instrument, it sheweth Rule and Authority. Likewise out of the Table of Images you shall finde them which bear the chief Kingly dignity: from the Crown judge dignity; and from the Instruments, Rule and Authority. Lastly, they which bear an humane shape and figure, have greater dignity then those which appear under the Forms and Images of Beasts; they also who ride, do excel them which appear on foot. And thus according to all their commixtures, you may judge the dignity and excellency of Spirits, one before another. Moreover, you must understand, that the Spirits of the inferiour order, of what dignity soever they be, are alwaies subject to the Spirits of the superiour order: so also, that it is not incongruent for their Kings and Dukes to be Subject and Minister to the presidents of the superiour order.

[Concerning Pentacles and Sigils.]

But we now come to speak of the holy and sacred Pentacles and Sigils. Now these pentacles, are as it were certain holy signes preserving us from evil chances and events, and helping and assisting us to binde, exterminate, and drive away evil spirits, and alluring the good spirits, and reconciling them unto us. And these pentacles do consist either of Characters of the good spirits of the superiour order, or of sacred pictures of holy letters or revelations, with apt and fit versicles, which are composed either of Geometrical figures and holy names of God, according to the course and maner of many of them; or they are compounded of all of them, or very many of them mixt. And the Characters which are useful for us to constitute and make the pentacles, they are the Characters of the good Spirits, especially and chiefly of the good spirits of the first and second order, and sometimes also of the third order. And this kinde of Characters are especially to be names holy; and then those Characters which we have above called holy. What Character soever therefore of this kinde is to be instituted, we must draw about him a double circle, wherein we must write the name of his Angel: and if we will adde some divine name congruent with his Spirit and Office, it will be of the greater force and efficacy. And if we will draw about him any angular figure, according to the maner og his numbers, that also shall be lawful to be done. But the holy pictures which do make the pentacles, are they which everywhere are delivered unto us in the Prophets and sacred Writings, as well of the old as of the new Testament. Even as the figure of the Serpent hanging on the cross, and such-like; whereof very many may be found out of the visions of the Prophets, as of Esaias, Daniel, Esdras and others, and also out of the revelation of the Apocalypse. And we have spoken of them in our third book of Occult Philosophy, where we have made mention of holy things. Therefore when any picture is posited of any of these holy Images, let the circle be drawn round about it on each side thereof, wherein let there be written some divine name, that is apt and conformed to the effect of that figure, or else there may be written about it some versicle taken out of part of the body of holy Scripture, which may desire to ascertain or deprecate the desired effect. As, if a pentacle were to be made to gain victory or revenge against ones enemies, aswel visible as invisible, The figure may be taken out of the second book of the Maccabees: that is to say, a hand holding a golden Sword drawn, about which let there be written the versicle there contained; To wit, Take the holy Sword, the gift of God, wherewith thou shalt slay thee

the adversaries of my people Israel. (2Mac15.16: Accipe sanctum gladium munus a Deo quo deicies adversarios populi mei Israhel.) Or also there may be written about it a versicle of the fifth Psalm: In this is the strength of thy arm: before thy face there is death; or some other such-like versicle. But if you will write any divine name about the figure, then let some name be taken that signifies Fear, a Sword, Wrath, the Revenge of God, or some such-like name congruent and agreeing with the effect desired. And if there shall be written any Angular figure, let him be taken according to the reason and rule of the numbers, as we have taught in our second book of Occult Philosophy, where we have treated of the numbers, and of the like operations. And of this sort there are two pentacles of sublime vertue and great power, very useful and necessary to be used in the consecration of experiments and Spirits: one whereof is that in the first chapter of Apocalypse; To wit, a figure of the Majesty of God sitting upon a Throne, having in his mouth a two-edged Sword, as there it is written, about which let there be written, I am Alpha & Omega, the beginning and the end, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty. I am the first and the last, who am living, and was dead, and behold I live for ever and ever; and I have the keys of death and hell. (ego sum primus & novissimus, vivus & sui mortuus: & ecce sum vivens in secula seculorum; & habeo claves mortis & inferni.) Then there shall be written about it these three versicles.

Manda Deus virtuti tuæ, &c. [Ps67.29]

*Give commandment, O God, to thy strength.
Confirm, Oh God, thy work in us.*

Let them be as dust before the face of the winde. And let the Angel of the Lord scatter them. Let all their wayes be darkness and uncertain. And let the Angel of the Lord persecute them.

Moreover, let there be written about it the ten general names, which are, El, Elohim, Elohe, Zebaoth, Elion, Escerchie, Adonay, Jah, Tetragrammaton, Saday.

There is another pentacle, the figure whereof is like unto a Lambe slain, having seven eyes, and seven horns, and under his feet a book sealed with seven seals, as it is said in the 5. chap. of the Apocalypse. Whereabout let there be written this versicle: Behold the Lion hath overcome of the Tribe of Judah, the root of David. I will open the book, and unloose the seven seals thereof. And one other versicle: I saw Satan like lightning fall down from heaven. Behold, I have given you power to tread upon the Serpents and Scorpions, and over all the power of your enemies, and nothing shall be able to hurt you. And let there be also written about it the ten general names, as aforesaid.

But those Pentacles which are thus made of figures and names, let them keep this order: for when any figure is posited, conformable to any number, to produce any certain effect or vertue, there must be written thereupon, in all the several Angles, some Divine name, obtaining the force and efficacie of the thing desired: yet so nevertheless, that the name which is of this sort do consist of just so many letters, as the Figure may constitute a number; or of so many letters of a name, as joyned together amongst themselves, may make the number of a Figure; or by any number which may be divided without any superfluity or diminution. Now such a name being found, whether it be onely one name or more, or divers names, it is to be written in all the several Angles in the Figure: but in the middle of the Figure let the revolution of the name be whole and totally placed, or at least principally.

Oftentimes also we constitute Pentacles, by making the revolution of some kinde of name, in a square Table, and by drawing about it a single or double Circle, and by writing therein some holy Versicle competent and befitting this name, or from which that name is extracted. And this is the way of making the Pentacles, according to their several distinct forms and fashions, which we may as we please either multiply or commix together by course among themselves, to work the greater efficacie, and extension and enlargement of force and vertue.

As, if a deprecation should be made for the overthrow and destruction of ones enemies, then we are to minde and call to remembrance how God destroyed the whole face of the earth in the deluge of waters; and the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrha, by raining down fire and brimstone; likewise, how God overthrew Pharaoh and his host in the Red-Sea: and to call to minde if any other malediction or curse be found in holy Writ. And thus in things of the like sort. So likewise in deprecating and praying against perils and dangers of waters, we ought to call to remembrance the saving of Noah in the deluge of waters, the passing of the children of Israel thorow the Red-sea; and also we are to minde how Christ walked upon the waters, and saved the ship in danger to be cast away with the tempest; and how he commanded the windes and the waves, and they obeyed him; and also, that he drew Peter out of the water, being in danger of drowning: and the like. And lastly, with these we invoke and call upon some certain holy names of God, God; to wit, such as are significative to accomplish our desire, and accommodated to the desired effect: as, if it be to overthrow enemies, we are to invoke and call upon the names of wrath, revenge, fear, justice, and fortitude of God: and if we would avoid and escape any evil or danger, we then call upon the names of mercy, defence, salvation, fortitude, goodness, and such-like names of God. When also we pray unto God that he would grant unto us our desires, we are likewise to intermix therewith the name of some good spirit, whether one onely, or more, whose office it is to execute our desires: and sometimes also we require some evil spirit to restrain or compel, whose name likewise we intermingle; and that rightly especially, if it be to execute any evil work; as revenge, punishment, or destruction.

Furthermore, if there be any Versicle in the Psalms, or in any other part of holy Scripture, that shall seem congruent and agreeable to our desire, the same is to be mingled with our prayers. Now after Prayer hath been made unto God, it is expedient afterwards to make an Oration to that executioner whom in our precedent prayer unto God we have desired should administer unto us, whether one or more, or whether he be an Angel, or Star, or Soul, or any of the noble Angels. But this kinde of Oration ought to be composed according to the Rules which we have delivered in the second book of Occult Philosophy, where we have treated of the manner of the composition of Inchantments.

[Of bonds]

You may know further, that these kinde of bonds have a threeforl difference: for the first bond is, when we conjure by Natural things: the second is compounded of Religious mysteries, by Sacraments, Miracles, and things of this sort: and the third is constituted by Divine names, and holy Sigils. And by these kinde of bonds, we may binde not onely spirits, but also all other creatures whatsoever; as animals, tempests,* [In marg: Incendia*; Envie and Malice.] burnings, floods of water, and the force and power of Arms. Oftentimes also we use these bonds aforesaid, not onely by Conjuration, but sometimes also using the means of Deprecation and Benediction. Moreover, it conduceth much to this purpose, to joyn some sentence of holy Scripture, if any shall be found convenient hereunto: as, in the Conjuration of Serpents, by commemorating the curse of the Serpent in the earthly Paradise, and the setting up of the Serpent in the wilderness; and further adding that Versicle, Thou shalt walk upon the Asp and the Basilisk (Super aspidem & basiliscum ambulabis), &c. [Ps90.13] Superstition also is of much prevalency herein, by the translation of some Sacramental Rites, to binde that which we intend to hinder; as, the Rites of Excommunication, of Sepulchres, Funerals, Buryings, and the like.

[Consecration of ritual implements]

And now we come to treat of the Consecrations which, men ought to make upon all instruments and things necessary to be used in this Art: and the vertue of this Consecration most chiefly consists in two things; to wit, in the power of the person consecrating, and by the vertue of the prayer by which the Consecration is made. For in the person consecrating, there is required holiness of Life, and power of sanctifying: both which are acquired by Dignification and Initiation. And that the person himself should with a firm and undoubted faith believe the vertue, power, and efficacie hereof. And then in the Prayer it self by which this Consecration is made, there is required the like holiness; which either solely consisteth in the prayer it self, as, if it be by divine inspiration ordained to this purpose, such as we have in many places of the holy Bible; or that it be hereunto instituted through the power of the Holy Spirit, in the ordination of the Church. Otherwise there is in the Prayer a Sanctimony, which is not onely by it self, but by the commemoration of holy things; as, the commemoration of holy Scriptures, Histories, Works, Miracles, Effects, Graces, Promises, Sacraments and Sacramental things, and the like. Which things, by a certain similitude, do seem properly or improperly to appertain to the thing consecrated.

There is used also the invocation of some Divine names, with the consignation of holy Seals, amd things of the like sort, which do conduce to sanctification and expiation; such as are the Sprinkling with Holy-Water, Unctions with holy Oyl [oil], and odoriferous Suffumigations appertaining to holy Worship. And therefore in every Consecration there is chiefly used the Benediction and Consecration of Water, Oyl, Fire, and Fumigations, used everywhere with holy Wax-lights or Lamps burning: for without Lights no Sacrament is rightly performed. This therefore is to be known, and firmly observed, That if any Consecration be to be made of things profane, in which there is any pollution of defilement, then an exorcising and expiation of those things ought to procede the consecration. Which things being so made pure, are more apt to receive the influences of the Divine vertues. We are also to observe, that in the end of every Consecration, after that the prayer is rightly performed, the person consecrating ought to bless the thing consecrated, by breathing out some words, with divine vertue and power of the present Consecration, with the commemoration of his vertue and authority, that it may be the more doely performed, and with an earnest and intentive minde. And therefore we will here lay down some examples hereof, whereby the way to the whole perfection hereof may the more easily be made to appear unto you.

So then, in the consecration of water, we ought to commemorate how that God hath placed the firmament in the midst of the waters, and in what maner that God placed the fountain of waters in the earthly Paradise, from whence sprang four holy rivers, which watered the whole earth. Likewise we are to call to remembrance in what manner God made the water to be the instrument of executing his justice in the destruction of the Gyants in the general deluge over all the earth, and in the overthrow of the host of Pharaoh in the Red-sea; also, how God led his own people thorow the midst of the Sea on dry ground, and through the midst of the river of Jordan; and likewise how marvelously he drew forth water out of the stony rock in the wilderness; and how at the prayer of Samson, he caused a fountain of running water to flow out of the cheek-tooth of the jaw-bone of an ass: [Judges 15.15] and likewise, how God hath made waters the instrument of his mercy, and of salvation, for the expiation of Original sin" also, how Christ was baptized in Jordan, and hath hereby sanctified and cleansed the waters. Moreover, certain divine names are to be invocated, which are conformable hereunto; as, that God is a living fountain, living water, the fountain of mercy; and names of the like kinde.

And likewise in the consecration of fire, we are to commemorate how that God hath created the fire to be an instrument to execute his justice, for punishment, vengeance, and for the expiation of sins: also, when God shall come to judge the world, he will command a conflagration of fire to go before him. And we are to call to remembrance in what manner [sic] God appeared to Moses in the burning bush; and also, how he went before the children of Israel in a pillar of fire; and that nothing can be duely offered, sacrificed, or sanctified, without fire; and how that God instituted fire to be kept continually burning in the Tabernacle of the Covenant; and how miraculously he re-kindled the same, being extinct, and preserved it elsewhere from going out, being hidden under the waters: and things of this sort. Likewise the Names of God are to be called upon which are consonant hereunto; as, it is read in the Law and the Prophets, that God is a consuming fire: and if there be any of the Divine names which signifies fire, or such-like names; as, the glory of God, the light of God, the splendor and brightness of God.

And likewise in the consecration of Oyl [oil] and Perfumes, we are to call to remembrance such holy things as are pertinent to this purpose, which we read in Exodus of the holy anoynting oyl, and divine names significant hereunto, such as is the name Christ, which signifies anoynted: and what mysteries there are hereof; as that in the Revelation [11.4], of the two Olive-trees distilling holy oyl into the lamps that burn before the face of God: and the like.

And the blessing of the lights, wax, and lamps, is taken from the fire, and the altar which containeth the substance of the flame: and what other such similitudes as are in mysteries; as that of the seven candlesticks and lamps burning before the face of God.

These therefore are the Consecrations which first of all are necessary to be used in every kinde of devotion, and ought to procede it, and without which nothing in holy Rites can be duely performed.

In the next place now we shall shew unto you the consecration of Places, Instruments, and such-like things.

Therefore when you would consecrate any Place or Circle, you ought to take the prayer of Solomon used in the dedication of the Temple [2-Chron. 6.14]: and moreover, you must bless the place with the sprinkling of Holy-water, and with Fumigations; by commemorating in the benediction holy mysteries; such as these are: The sanctification of the throne of God, of mount Sinai, of the Tabernacle of the Covenant, of the Holy of holies (Sanctum sanctorum), of the temple of Jerusalem. Also, the sanctification of mount Golgotha, by the crucifying of Christ; the sanctification of the Temple of Christ; of mount Tabor, by the transfiguration and ascension of Christ: and the like. And by invoking divine names which are significant hereunto; such as the Place of God, the Throne of God, the Chayr of God, the Tabernacle of God, the Altar of God, the Habitation of God, and such-like divine names of this sort, which are to be written about the Circle or place to be consecrated.

And in the consecrations of instruments, and of all other things whatsoever that are serviceable to this Art, you shall proceed after the same manner, by sprinkling the same with Holy-water, perfuming the same with holy Fumigations, anoynting [anointing] it with holy Oyl [oil], sealing it with some holy Sigil, and blessing it with prayer; and by commemorating holy things out of the sacred Scriptures, Religion, and Divine names which shall be found agreeable to the thing that is to be consecrated: as for examples sake, in consecrating a sword, we are to call to remembrance that in the Gospel, He that hath two coats, &c. (Qui habet duas tunicas) [Matt. 10.10.] and that place in the second of the Macchabees, That a sword was divinely and miraculously sent to Judas Macchabeus. And if there be any thing of the like in the Prophets; as that place, Take unto you two-edged Swords, &c. (Accipe vobis gladios bis acutos.)

In like maner you shall consecrate experiments and books, and whatsoever of the like nature, as is contained in writings, pictures, and the like, by sprinkling, perfuming, anointing, sealing, and blessing with holy commemorations, and calling to remembrance and sanctifications of mysteries; As, the sanctifying of the Tables of the ten Commandments, which were delivered to Moses by God in Mount Sinai; The sanctification of the Testaments of God, the Old and New; The sanctification of the Law, and of the Prophets, and Scriptures, which are promulgated by the holy Ghost. Moreover, there is to be commemorated such divine names as are fit and convenient hereunto; as these are: The Testament of God, The book of God, The book of life, The knowledge of God, The wisdom of God; and the like. And with such kinde of Rites is the personal consecration performed.

There is furthermore, besides these, another Rite of consecration, of wonderful power, and much efficacy; And this is out of the kindes of superstitions: That is to say, when the Rite of consecration or collection of any Sacrament in the Church is transferred to that thing which we would consecrate.

It is to be known also, that Vowes, Oblations, and Sacrifice, have the power of consecration, aswel real as personal; and they are as it were certain covenants and conventions between those names with which they are made, and us who make them, strongly cleaving to our desire and wished effect: As, when we dedicate, offer, and sacrifice, with certain names or things; as, Fumigations, Unctions, Rings, Images, Looking-glasses; and things less material, as Deities, Sigils, Pentacles, Inchantments [enchantments], Orations, Pictures, and Scriptures: of which we have largely spoken in our third book of Occult Philosophy.

[Liber Spirituum: a Book of Spirits.]

There is extant amongst those Magicians (who do most use the ministry of evil spirits) a certain Rite of invoking spirits by a Book to be consecrated before to that purpose; which is properly called, A book of Spirits (Liber Spirituum); whereof we shall now speak a few words. For this Book is to be consecrated, a book of evil spirits, ceremoniously to be composed, in their name and order: whereunto they binde with a certain holy Oath, the ready and present obedience of the spirits therein written.

Now this book is to be made of most pure and clean paper, that hath never been used before; which many do call Virgin-paper. And this book must be inscribed after this maner: that is to say, Let there be placed on the left side the image of the spirit, and on the right side his character, with the Oasth above it, containing the name of the spirit, and his dignity and place, with his office and power. Yet very many do compose this book otherwise, omitting the characters or image: but it is more efficacious not to neglect any thing which conduceth to it.

Moreover, there is to be observed the circumstances of places, times, hours, according to the Stars which these spirits are under, and are seen to agree unto, their site, rite, and order being applied.

Which book being so written, and well bound, is to be adorned, garnished, and kept secure, with Registers and Seals, lest it should happen after the consecration to open in some place not intended [sic], and indanger [endanger] the operator. Furthermore, this book ought to be kept as reverently as may be: for irreverence of minde causeth it to lose its vertue, with pollution and profanation.

Now this sacred book being this composed according to the maner already delivered, we are then to proceed to the consecration thereof after a twofold way: one whereof is, That all and singular the spirits who are written in the book, be called to the Circle, according to the Rites and Order which we have before taught; and the book that is to be consecrated, let there be placed without the Circle in a triangle. And in the first place, let there be read in the presence of the spirits all the Oathes which are written in that book; and then the book to be consecrated being placed without the Circle in a triangle there drawn, let all the spirits be compelled to impose their hands where their images and characters are drawn, and to confirm and consecrate the same with a special and common Oath. Which being done, let the book be taken and shut, and preserved as we have before spoken, and let the spirits be licensed to depart, according to due rite and order.

There is another maner of consecrating a book of spirits, which is more easie, and of much efficacie to produce every effect, except that in opening this book the spirits do not always come visible. And this way is thus: Let there be made a book of spirits as we have before <before> [sic] set forth; but in the end thereof let there be written Invocations and Bonds, and strong Conjurations, wherewith every spirit may be bound. Then this book must be bound between two Tables or Lamens, and in the inside thereof let there be drawn the holy Pentacles of the Divine Majestie, which we have before set forth and described out of the Apocalypse: then let the first of them be placed in the beginning of the book, and the second at the end of the same. This book being perfected after this maner, let it be brought in a clear and fair time, to a Circle prepared in a cros way, according to the Art which we have before delivered; and there in the first place the book being opened, let it be consecrated to the rites and ways which we have before declared concerning Consecration. Which being done, let all the spirits be called which are written in the book, in their own order and place, by conjuring them thrice by the bonds described in the book, that they come unto that place within the space of three days, to assure their obedience, and confirm the same, to the book so to be consecrated. Then let the book be wrapped up in clean linen, and buried in the middle of the Circle, and there fast stopped up: and then the Circle being destroyed, after the spirits are licensed, depart before the rising of the sun: and on the third day, about the middle of the night, return, and new make the Circle, and with bended knees make prayer and giving thanks unto God, and let a precious perfume be made, and open the hole, and take out the book; and so let it be kept, not opening the same. Then you shall license the spirits in their order, and destroying the Circle, depart before the sun rise. And this is the last rite and maner of consecrating, profitable to whatsoever writings and experiments, which do direct to spirits, placing the same between two holy Lamens or Pentacles, as before is shewn.

But the Operator, when he would work by the book thus consecrated, let him do it in a fair and clear season, when the spirits are least troubled; and let him place himself towards the region of the spirits. Then let him open the book under a due Register; let him invoke the spirits by their Oath there described and confirmed, and by the name of their character and image, to that purpose which you desire: and, if there be need, conjure them by the bonds placed in the end of the book. And having attained your desired effect, then you shall license the spirits to depart.

[Concerning the invocation of good and evil spirits]

And now we shall come to speak concerning the invocation of spirits, as well of the good spirits as of the bad.

The good spirits may be invocated of us, divers ways, and in sundry manners do offer themselves unto us. For they do openly speak to those that watch, and do offer themselves to our sight, or do inform us in dreams by oracle of those things which are desired. Whosoever therefore would call any good spirit, to speak or appear in sight, it behoveth them especially to observe two things: one whereof os about the disposition of the invocant; the other about those things which are outwardly to be adhibited to the invocation, for the conformity of the spirits to be called. It behoveth therefore that the invocant himself be religiously disposed for many days to such a mystery. In the first place therefore, he ought to be confessed and contrite, both inwardly and outwardly, and rightly expiated, by daily washing himself with holy water. Moreover, the invocant ought to conserve himself all these days, chaste, abstinent, and to separate himself as much as may be done, from all perturbation of minde, and from all maner of forraign and secular business. Also, he shall observe fastings all these days, as much as shall seem convenient to him to be done. Also, let him daily between sun-rising and sun-setting, being clothed with a holy linen garment, seven times call upon God, and make a deprecation to the Angels to be called according to the rule which we have before taught. Now the number of days of fasting and preparation, is commonly the time of a whole Lunation. There is also another number observed amongst the Caballists, which is fourty days.

[Preparation of the place of working and other things to be arranged]

Now concerning those things which do appertain to this Rite of Invocation, the first is, That a place be chosen, clean, pure, close, quiet, free from all maner of noise, and not subject to any strangers sight. This place must first be exorcised and consecrated: and let there be a table or altar placed therein, covered with clean white linen, and set towards the east: and on each side thereof, let there be set two consecrated wax-lights burning, the flame whereof ought not to go out all these days. In the middle of the altar, let there be placed Lamens, or the holy paper which we have before described, covered with pure fine linen; which is not to be opened until the end of these days of the Consecration. You shall also have in readiness a precious perfume, and pure anointing oyl; and let them be both kept consecrated. There must also a Censer be set on the head of the altar, wherein you shall kindle the holy fire, and make a perfume every day that you shall pray. You shall also have a long garment of white linen, close before and behinde, which may cover the whole body and the feet, and girt about you with a girdle. You shall also have a veil of pure clean linen, and in the fore-part thereof let there be fixed golden or gilded Lamens, with the inscription of the name Tetragrammaton; all which things are to be sanctified and consecrated in order. But you must not enter into the holy place, unless it be first washed, and arayed with a holy garment; and then you shall enter into it with your feet naked. And when you enter therein, you shall sprinkle it with holy water: then you shall make a perfume upon the altar, and afterwards with bended knees pray before the altar as we have directed.

But in the end of these days, on the last day, you shall fast more strictly: and fasting on the day following, at the rising of the sun, you may enter into the holy place, using the ceremonies before spoken of, first by sprinkling your self, then with making a perfume, you shall signe your self with holy oyl in the forehead, and anoint your eyes; using prayer in all these Consecrations. Then you shall open the holy Lamen, and pray before the altar upon your knees, as abovesaid: and then an invocation being made to the Angels, they will appear unto you, which you desire; which you shall entertain with a benign and chaste communication, and license them to depart.

[The holy table and lamen]

Now the Lamen which is to be used to invoke any good spirit, you shall make after this maner; either in metal conformable, or in new wax, mixt with species and colours conformable: or it may be made in clean paper, with convenient colours: and the outward form or figure thereof may be square, circular, or triangular, or of the like sort, according to the rule of the numbers: in which there must be written the divine names, as well the general names as the special. And in the centre of the Lamen, let there be drawn a character of six corners (Hexagonus); in the middle whereof, let there be written the name and character of the Star, or of the Spirit his governour, to whom the good spirit that is to be called is subject. And about this character, let there be placed so many characters of five corners (Pentagonus), as the spirits we would call together at once. And if we shall call onely one spirit, nevertheless there shall be made four Pentagones, wherein the name of the spirit or spirits, with their characters, is to be written. Now this table ought to be composed when the Moon in increasing, on those days and hours which then agree to the Spirit. And if we take a fortunate star herewith, it will be the better. Which Table being made in this manner, it is to be consecrated according to the rules above delivered.

And this is the way of making the general Table, serving for the invocation of all good spirits whatsoever. Nevertheless we may make special Tables congruent to every spirit, by the rule which we have above spoken of concerning holy Pentacles.

[Another Rite more easie to perform for calling forth spirits]

And now we will declare unto you Another Rite more easie to perform this thing: that is to say, Let the man that is to receive any Oracle from the good spirits, be chaste, pure, and confes'd. Then a place being prepared pure and clean, and covered everywhere with white linen, on the Lords day in the new of the moon let him enter into that place, clothed with clean white garments; and let him exorcize the place, and bless it, and make a Circle therein with a sanctified cole [coal]; and let there be written in the uttermost part of the Circle the names of the Angels, and in the inner part thereof let there be written the mighty names of God: and let him place within the Circle, at the four angles of the world, the Censers for the perfumes. Then let him enter the place fasting, and washed, and let him begin to pray towards the east this whole Psalm: Beati immaculati in via, &c. Blessed are the undefiled in the way, &c. ([Psalm 119 \[Vulgate: 118\]](#)) by perfuming; and in the end they will daign to discover and reveal that which he desireth: and that let him do for six days, continuing washed and fasting. And on the seventh day, which is the Sabbath, let him, being washed and fasting, enter the Circle, and perfume it, and anoint himself with holy anointing oyl, by anointing his forehead, and upon both his eyes, and in the palms of his hands, and upon his feet. Then upon his knees let him say the Psalm aforesaid, with Divine and Angelical names. Which being done, let him arise, and let him begin to walk about in a circuit within the said Circle from the east to the west, until he is wearied with a dizziness of his brain: let him fall down in the Circle, and there he may rest; and forthwith he shall be wrapt up in an ecstasie [ecstasy], and a spirit will appear unto him, which will inform him of all things. We must observe also, that in the Circle there ought to be four holy candles burning at the four parts of the world, which ought not to want light for the space of a whole week. And the maner of fasting must be such, that he abstain from all things having a life of Sense, and from those things which do proceed from them: and let him onely drink pure running water: neither let him take any food till the going down of the sun. And let the perfume and the holy anointing oyl [oil] be made, as is set forth in Exodus and the other holy books of the Bible. It is also to be observed, that always as often as he enters into the Circle, he have upon his forehead a golden Lamen, upon which there must be written the name Tetragrammaton, as we have before spoken.

[Oracles and dreams]

But natural things, and their commixtures, do also belong unto us, and are conducing to receive Oracles from any spirit by a dream: which are either Perfumes, Unctions, and Meats or Drinks: which you may understand in our first book of Occult Philosophy.

But he that is willing always and readily to receive the Oracles of a Dream, let him make unto himself a Ring of the Sun or of Saturn for this purpose. There is also an Image to be made, of excellent efficacie and power to work this effect; which being put under his head when he goeth to sleep, doth effectually give true dreams of what things soever the minde hath before determined or consulted on. The Tables of Numbers do likewise confer to receive an Oracle, being duly formed under their own Constellations. And these things thou mayst know in the third book of Occult Philosophy.

Holy Tables and Papers do also serve to this effect, being specially composed and consecrated: such as is the Almadel of Solomon, and the Table of the Revolution of the name Tetragrammaton. And those things which are of this kinde, and written unto these things, out of divers figures, numbers, holy pictures, with the inscriptions of the holy names of God and of Angels; the composition whereof is taken out of divers places of the holy Scriptures, Psalms, and Versicles, and other certain promises of the divine Revelation and Prophecies.

To the same effect do conduce holy prayers and imprecations, as well unto God, as to the holy Angels and Heroes: the imprecations of which prayers are to be composed as we have before shewn, according to some religious similitude of Miracles, Graces, and the like, making mention of those things which we intend to do: as, out of the Old Testament, of the dream of Jacob, Joseph, Pharaoh, Daniel, and Nebuchadnezzar: if out of the New Testament, of the dream of Joseph the husband of the blessed virgin Mary; of the dream of the three Wise-men; of John the Evangelist sleeping upon the brest of our Lord: and whatsoever of the like kinde can be found in Religion, Miracles, and Revelations; as, the revelation of the Cross to Helen, the revelations of Constantine and Charles the Great, the revelations of Bridget, Cyril, Methodius, Mechtild, Joachim, Merhir, and such-like. According to which, let the deprecations be composed, if when he goeth to sleep it be with a firm intention: and the rest well disposing themselves, let them pray devoutly, and without doubt they will afford a powerful effect.

Now he that knoweth how to compose those things which we have now spoken of, he shall receive the most true Oracles of dreams. And this he shall do; observe those things which in the second book of Occult Philosophy are directed concerning this thing. He that is desirous therefore to receive an Oracle, let him abstain from supper and from drink, and be otherwise well disposed, his brain being free from turbulent vapours; let him also have his bed-chamber fair and clean, exorcised and consecrated if he will; then let him perfume the same with some convenient fumigation; and let him anoint his temples with some unguent efficacious hereunto, and put a ring upon his finger, of the things above spoken of: let him take either some image, or holy table, or holy paper, and place the same under his head: then having made a devout prayer, let him go unto his bed, and meditating upon that thing which he desireth to know, let him so sleep; for so shall he receive a most certain and undoubted oracle by a dream, when the Moon goeth through that signe which was in the ninth House of his nativity, and also when she goeth through the signe of the ninth House of the Revolution of his nativity; and when she is in the ninth signe from the sign of perfection. And this is the way and means whereby we may obtain all Sciences and Arts whatsoever, suddenly and perfectly, with a true Illumination of our understanding; although all inferiour familiar Spirits whatsoever do conduce to this effect; and sometimes also evil Spirits sensibly informing us Intrinsically or Extrinsecally.

[Calling forth evil spirits to a magic circle]

But if we would call any evil Spirit to the Circle, it first behoveth us to consider, and to know his nature, to which of the Planets it agreeth, and what Offices are distributed to him from that Planet; which being known, let there be sought out a place fit and proper for his invocation, according to the nature of the Planet, and the quality of the Offices of the said Spirit, as near as the same may be done: as, if their power be over the Sea, Rivers or Flouds, then let the place be chosen in the Shore; and so of the rest. Then let there be chosen a convenient time, both for the quality of the Air, serene, clear, quiet, and fitting for the Spirits to assume bodies; as also of the quality and nature of the Planet, and of the Spirit, as to wit, on his day, or the time wherein he ruleth: he may be fortunate or infortunate, sometimes of the day, and sometimes of the night, as the Stars and Spirits do require. These things being considered, let there be a Circle framed in the place elected, aswell for the defence of the Invocant, as for the confirmation of the Spirit. And in the Circle it self there are to be written the divine general names, and those things which do yeild defence unto us; and with them, thjose divine names which do rule this Planet, and the Offices of the Spirit himself; there shall also be written therein, the names of the good Spirits which bear rule, and are able to binde and constrain that Spirit which we intend to call. And if we will any more fortifie and strengthen our Circle, we may adde Characters and Pentacles agreeing to the work; then also if we will, we may either within or without the Circle, frame an angular figure, with the inscription of such convenient numbers, as are congruent amongst themselves to our work; which are also to be known, according to maner of numbers and figures: of which in the second book of Occult Philosophy it is sufficiently spoken. Further, He is to be provided of lights, perfumes, unguents and medicines, compounded according to the nature of the Planet and Spirit; which do partly agree with the Spirit, by reason of their natural and coelestial vertue; and partly are exhibited to the Spirit for religious and superstitious worship. Then he must be furnished with holy and consecrated things, necessary aswel for the defence of the Invocant, and his fellows, as also serving for bonds to binde and constrain the Spirits; such as are either holy Papers, Lamens, Pictures, Pentacles, Swords, Scepters, Garments of convenient matter and colour, and things of the like sort. Then when all these things are provided, and the Master and his fellows being in the Circle, in the first place let him consecrate the Circle, and all those things which he useth; which being performed with a convenient gesture and countenance, let him begin to pray with a loud voice, after this manner. First let him make an Oration unto God, and then let him intreat the good Spirits: and if he will read any Prayers, Psalms, or Gospel for his defence, they ought to take the first place. After these Prayers and Orations are said, then let him begin to invoke the Spirit which he desireth, when a gentle and loving Inchantment, to all the coasts of the World, with the commemoration of his own Authority and power. And then let him rest a little, looking about him; to see if any Spirit do appear; which if he delay, then let him repeat his invocation, as abovesaid, until he hath done it three times; and if the Spirit be pertinacious, obstinate, and will not appear, then let him begin to conjure with divine power; so also that the conjurations and all his commemorations do agree with the Nature and Offices of the Spirit himself, amd reiterate the same three times, from stronger to stronger, using Objurgations, Contumeries, Cursings, & Punishments, and suspension from his Office and power, and the like.

And after all the courses are finished, then cease a little; and if any Spirit shall appear, let the Invocant turn himself towards the Spirit, and courteously receive him, and earnestly intreating him, let him first require his name, and if he be called by any other name; and then proceeding further, let him ask him whatsoever he will: and if in any thing the Spirit shall shew himself obstinate or lying, let him be bound by convenient conjurations: and if you doubt of any lye, make without the Circle with the consecrated Sword, the figure of a triangle or * Pentagone (in marg: * A Character with five corners.), and compel the Spirit to enter into it; and if thou receivest any promise which thou wouldst have to be confirmed with an Oath, let him stretch the sword out of the Circle, and swear the Spirit, by laying his hand upon the Sword.

[Giving the spirit license to depart]

Then having obtained of the Spirit that which you desire, or are otherwise contented, license him to depart with courteous words, giving command unto him, that he do no hurt: and if he will not depart, compel him by powerful conjurations; and if need require, expel him by Exorcismes, and by making contrary fumigations. And when he is departed, go not out of the Circle, but make a stay, making prayer, and giving of thanks unto God and the good Angels, and also praying for your defence and conservation: and then all those things being orderly performed, you may depart.

[If they be obstinate]

But if your hope be frustrated, and no Spirits will appear, yet for this do not despair; but leaving the Circle, return again at other times, doing as before. And if you shall judge that you have erred in any thing, then that you shall amend, by adding or diminishing; for the constancy of Reiteration doth often increase your authority and power, and striketh terror into the Spirits, and humbleth them to obey.

And therefore some use to make a Gate in the Circle, whereby they may go in and out, which they open and shut as they please, and fortifie it with holy Names and Pentacles.

This also, we are to take notice of, That when no Spirits will appear, but the Master being wearied hath determined to cease and give over; let him not therefore depart without licensing the Spirits: for they that do neglect this, are very greatly in danger, except they are fortified with some sublime defence.

Oftentimes also the Spirits do come, although they appear not visible, (for to cause terror to him that calls them) either in the things which he useth, or in the operation it self. But this kinde of licensing is not given simply, but by a kinde of dispensation with suspension, until in the following terms they shall render themselves obedient. Also without a Circle these Spirits may be called to appear, according to the way which is above delivered about the consecration of a book.

But when we do intend to execute any effect by evil Spirits, when an Apparition is not needful; then that is to be done, by making and forming that thing which is to be unto us as an instrument, or subject of the experiment it self; as, whether it be an Image, or a Ring, or a Writing, or any Character, Candle, or Sacrifice, or any thing of the like sort; then the name of the Spirit is to be written therein, with his Character, according to the exigency of the experiment, either by writing it with some blood, or otherwise using a perfume agreeable to the Spirit. Oftentimes also making Prayers and Orations to God and the good Angels before we invoke the evil Spirit, conjuring him by the divine power.

[Other kinds of spirits]

There is another kinde of Spirits, which we have spoken of in our third book of Occult Philosophy, not so hurtful, and neerer unto men; so also, that they are effected with humane passions, and do joy in the conversation of men, and freely do inhabit with them: and others do dwell in the Woods and Desarts [deserts]: & others delight in the company of divers domestique Animals and wilde Beasts; and othersome do inhabit about Fountains and Meadows. Whosoever therefore would call up these kinde of Spirits, in the place where they abide, it ought to be done with odoriferous perfumes, and with sweet sounds and instruments of Musick, specially composed for the business, with using of Songs, Inchantments and pleasant Verses, with praises and promises.

But those which are obstinate to yield to these things, are to be compelled with Threatnings, Comminations, Cursings, Delusions, Contumelies, and especially by threatning them to expel them from those places where they are conversant.

Further, if need be, thou maist betake thee to use Exorcismes; but the chieftest thing that ought to be observed, is, constancy of minde, and boldness, free, amd alienated from fear.

Lastly, when you would invoke these kinde of Spirits, you ought to prepare a Table in the place of invocation, covered with clean linen; whereupon you shall set new bread, and running water or milk in new earthen vessals, and new knives. And you shall make a fire, whereupon a perfume shall be made. But let the Invocant go unto the head of the Table, and round about it let there be seats placed for the Spirits, as you please; and the Spirits being called, you shall invite them to drink and eat. But if perchance you shall fear and evil Spirit, then draw a Circle about it, and let that part of the Table at which the Invocant sits, be within the Circle, and the rest of the Table without the Circle.

[Necromancy, or raising up spirits of the dead.]

In our third book of Occult Philosophy, we have taught how and by what means the Soul is joyned to the Body; and, what hapeneth to the Soul after death.

Thou maist know further, That those Souls do still love their relinquished Bodies after death, as it were a certain affinity alluring them; as are the Souls of noxious men, which have violently relinquished their Bodies, and Souls wanting a due burial, which do still wander in a liquid and turbulent Spirit about their dead carkasses; for these Souls by the known means by which heretofore they were conjoynd to their Bodies, by the like vapors, liquors, and favours, are easily drawn unto them.

From hence it is, that the Souls of the dead are not to be called up without blood, or by the application of some part of their relict Body.

In raising up these shadows, we are to perfume with new Blood, with the Bones of the dead, and with Flesh, Egges, Milk, Honey and Oile, and such-like things, which do attribute to the Souls a means apt to receive their Bodies.

It is also to be understood, That those who are desirous to raise up any Souls of the dead, they ought to do it in those places, wherein these kinde of Souls are most known to be conversant, or for some alliance alluring those souls into their forsaken Body; or for some kinde of affection in times past, impressed in them in their life, drawing the said Soul to certain places, things, or persons; or for the forcible nature of some place fitted and prepared for to purge or punish these Souls. Which places for thr most part are to be known by the experience of visions, mighty incursions, and apparitions, and such-like prodigies seen.

Therefore the places most befitting for these things, are Church-yards. And better then them, are those places wherein there is the execution of criminal judgements. And better then these, are those places, in which of late yeers there have been some publike slaughters of men. Furthermore, that place is better then there, where some dead carkass, that came by a violent death, is not yet expiated, nor ritely buried, and was lately buried; for the expiation of those places, is also a holy Rite duly to be adhibited to the burial of the bodies, and oftentimes prohibiteth the souls to come unto their bodies, and expelleth them far off unto the places of judgment.

And from hence it is, That the Souls of the dead are not easily to be raised up, except it be the Souls of them whom we know to be evil, or to have perished by a violent death, and whose bodies do want a right and due burial.

Now although we have spoken concerning such places of this kinde, it will not be safe or commodious to go unto them; but it behoveth us to take to what place soever is to be chosen, some principal part of the body that is relict, and therewith to make a perfume in due maner, and to perform other competent Rites.

It is also to be known, That because the Souls are certain spiritual lights, therefore artificial lights, especially if they be framed out of certain competent things, compounded according to a true rule, with congruent inscriptions of Names and Seals, do very much avail to the raising up of departed Souls.

Moreover, these things which now are spoken of, are not alwaies sufficient to raise up Souls, because of an extranatural portion of understanding and reason, which is above, and known onely to the Heaven and Destinies, and their power.

We ought therefore to allure the said Souls, by supernatural and coelestial powers duely administred, even by those things which do move the very harmony of the Soul, aswel imaginative, as rational and intellectual; as are Voices, Songs, Sound, Inchantments: and Religious things; as Prayers, Conjurations, Exorcismes, and other holy Rites, which may very commodiously be administred hereunto.

A. W. Greenup: Sefer ha-Levanah -- The Book of the Moon

You will need a Hebrew font installed to read some of this book.

This HTML edition by Joseph H. Peterson, Copyright © 2001. All rights reserved.

This book is extremely rare. The only copy of it I could find is in the Cambridge University Library. Since its original publication, it has come to light that the manuscript which forms the basis for the book, BL Oriental manuscript 6360, is in fact part of a larger work which had become separated. The rest of the original text is continued in Oriental MS. 14759. The two manuscripts together comprise a complete copy of Sefer Mafteah Shelomoh ('The Book of the Key of Solomon'). This is one of only three known Hebrew manuscripts of this infamous magical text known in Latin as Clavicula Salomonis.

Numerous manuscripts of the Key of Solomon exist in French, Latin, Italian, and English, purporting to be translated from the Hebrew, but the Hebrew original was thought to be lost long ago.

A second manuscript of Mafteah Shelomoh was discovered in the library of Samuel H. Gollancz, and a detailed description of it was published by his son Hermann Gollancz in 1903. He later published a facsimile edition of the manuscript (London, 1914). Gollancz' manuscript had been copied in Amsterdam in Sephardic (Italo-Spanish) cursive script.

The Or. 6360+14759 text is much easier to read than Gollancz' manuscript. According to Claudia Rohrbacher-Sticker ^[1] the manuscript probably dates to the seventeenth or eighteenth century, although Greenup believed it to date from the sixteenth century. Dr. Rohrbacher-Sticker also describes the text as supporting the view of Gershom Sholem and others that it is "a late Jewish adaptation of a 'Latin (or rather Italian) Clavicula text of the renaissance period'." She adds the opinion that it was probably translated into Hebrew by the scribe himself, which would make it the ancestor of Gollancz' manuscript.

There is a third manuscript of Mafteah Shelomoh in the Bibliotheca Rosenthaliana in Amsterdam.

THE BOOK OF THE MOON

Edited, for the first time,

BY

A. W. GREENUP.

LONDON.

1912.

This pamphlet is printed for private circulation only. My interest in its contents is due to the perusal of Dr. Gaster's article on "Charms and Amulets" (ERE. iii. 451 ff.) The MS. is described with some fulness by the Rev. G. Margoliouth (to whom I am indebted for many kindnesses) in his recently-printed Catalogue of MSS. of Kabbalah in the British Museum.

INTRODUCTION.

The MS. from which this work is printed is numbered Or. 6360 in the British Museum collection. It is of paper, 11 7/8 X 7 5/8, and consists of 15 leaves. The writing is Oriental Rabbinic of the 16th century. The contents of the MS. are (1) fol. 1a -6b ספר חלבים [Sefer ha-Levanah ('Book of the Moon')] (2) fol. 7a-11b ... ספר חלבים ספר חלבים (3) fol. 12a-15b A fragment of ספר חלבים [Mafteah Shelomoh ('The Key of Solomon')].

On the title page is the drawing of an astrologer, compasses in hand, with one foot placed on the Zodiacal sphere, within which are named the planets and the earth. Above the head are eight stars, whilst on the left hand top corner is a representation of the moon and on the right of the sun. The MS. was bought by the Museum Trustees from Raffallovich and Lipkin in 1902, and, as far as the first two works are concerned, is probably unique.

Title page.

The contents of the סֵפֶר הַלְּבָנָה [Sefer ha-Levanah] may be summed up thus:--

(1)

Introduction in which the book is introduced by some one under the name of הַרְמֵס [HRMS]. [\[1\]](#) He says that all the books of astrology which he is acquainted with are perplexing, but that the one which commends itself to him as the best and clearest is the סֵפֶר הַלְּבָנָה [Sefer ha-Levanah] the first part of which follows. It is not to be transmitted to any one and is rightly considered a 'hidden' book.

(2)

Twenty-eight directions for preparing íéîö [TzLMIM ('Images')] in accordance with the various positions of the moon. As might be expected in a work of this kind there are many corruptions of Arabic names.

(3)

Twelve directions as to the íéîñ [SMIM ('drugs' or 'potions')] to be used for good and evil íéîö [TzLMIM ('Images')].

(4)

On the names of the hours of the night and their íéîö [TzLMIM ('Images')].

(5)

Three short paragraphs headed úåìæîä éðô. The first explaining that every ìæî [MZL (constellation, planet, destiny, fate)] can be divided into three equal portions; the second giving the signs of the zodiac; and the third beginning çîåö íéðô [PNIM TzVMCh].

(6)

On the íéîö [TzLMIM ('Images')] of the hours of the day.

In this last section occurs a mystical alphabet, evidently drawn from the Latin, and this would suggest that the whole work is a translation from some ancient Latin astrological treatise, "full of the most extraordinary medley of Greek, Babylonian, Egyptian, and other ancient traditions" (Encycl. of Religion and Ethics, iii. 454).

The mystical alphabet occurs also in the úåìæîä úåìòô øôñ [SFR POLVTh HMZLVTh] which may possibly be the second section of the äðáìä øôñ [Sefer ha-Levanah] referred to by ñîøä [HRMS] in the preface.

Iamblichus (c. A.D. 250-325) is among the most important of the so-called Neoplatonic philosophers, second only to Plotinus. He was a student of Plotinus' disciple Porphyry. His influential treatise Theurgia, or On the Mysteries of Egypt deals with a 'higher magic' which operates through the agency of the gods. Agrippa refers frequently to Iamblichus in his Occulta Philosophia. Iamblichus also had a strong influence on other Renaissance occultists like Ficino, Pico della Mirandola, and Giordano Bruno. Iamblichus is also explicitly mentioned in the Grimorium Verum.

Compare with excerpts translated by Georg Luck in Arcana Mundi (Baltimore and London, The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1985). Since Luck numbers the text differently, I have noted his numbers in square brackets.

In addition to incorporating the errata, I have edited the spelling in a few places to make it less misleading to modern readers. Thus,

Chapter 1. Letter of Porphyry to Anebo

Porphyry to the Prophet Anebo. [\[1\]](#) Greeting.

I will begin this friendly correspondence with thee with a view to learning what is believed in respect to the gods and good dæmons and likewise the various philosophic speculations in regard to them. Very many things have been set forth concerning these subjects by the (Grecian) philosophers, but the for the most part have derived the substance of their belief from conjecture.

1. The Gods and their peculiarities

In the first place, therefore, it is to be taken for granted that there are gods. I ask then: what are the peculiarities of the superior races, by which they are differentiated from each other? Are we to suppose the cause of the distinction to be their energies or their passive motions, or things consequent: or is it a classification established by difference of bodies -- the gods being distinguished by aetherial bodies, the dæmons by aërial bodies, and souls by bodies pertaining to the earth?

As the gods dwell in heaven only, I ask therefore, why are invocations at the Theurgic Rites directed to them as being of the Earth and Underworld? How is it that although possessing power unlimited, undivided, and unrestricted, some of them are mentioned as being of the water and of the atmosphere, and that others are allotted by definite limitations to different places and to distinct parts of bodies? If they are actually separated by circumscribed limitations of parts, and according to diversities of places and subject-bodies, how will there be any union of them one to another?

How can the Theosophers [2] consider them as impressionable? For it is said that on this account phallic images are set up and that immodest language is used at the Rites? [3] Certainly if they are impassive and unimpressionable the invocations of the gods, announcing favorable inclinations, propitiations of their anger and expiatory sacrifices, and still further what are called "necessities of the gods," will be utterly useless. For that which is impassive is not to be charmed or forced [4] or constrained by necessity.

Why, then, are many things performed to them in the Sacred Rites, as to impressionable beings? The invocations are made as to gods that are impressionable beings: so that it is implied that not the dæmons only are impressionable, but the gods likewise, as was declared in Homer:

"Even the gods themselves are yielding."

Suppose, then, we say, as certain individuals have affirmed, that the gods are pure mental essences and that the dæmons are psychic beings participating of mind. [5] The fact remains, nevertheless, that the pure mental essences are not to be charmed or mingled with things of sense, and that the supplications which are offered are entirely foreign to this purity of mental substance. [6] But on the other hand the things that are offered are offered as to sensitive and psychic natures.

Are gods, then, separated from dæmons by the distinction of bodied and unbodied? If, however, only the gods are incorporeal, how shall the Sun, the Moon, and the visible luminaries in the sky be accounted as gods?

How is it that some of them are givers of good and others bring evil?

What is the bond of union that connects the divinities in the sky that have bodies with the gods that are unbodied?

The gods that are visible (in the sky) being included in the same category with the invisible, what distinguishes the dæmons from the visible, and likewise the invisible, gods?

2. The superior races and their manifestations

In what does a dæmon differ from a hero or half-god or from a soul? [7] It is it in essence, in power, or in energy? [8]

What is the token (at the Sacred Rites) of the presence of a god or an angel, or an archangel, or a dæmon, or of some archon, or a soul? For it is a common thing with the gods and dæmons alike, and with all the superior races, to speak boastfully and to project an unreal image into view. [9] Hence the race of the gods is thus made to seem to be in no respect superior to that of the dæmons.

It is also acknowledged that ignorance and delusion in respect to the gods is irreligiousness and impurity, and that the superior knowledge in respect to them is holy and helpful: the former being the darkness of ignorance in regard to the things revered and beautiful, and the latter the light of knowledge. The former condition will cause human beings to be beset with every form of evil through ignorance and recklessness, [10] but the latter is the source of everything beneficial.

3. Oracles and Divination

What is it that takes place in divination? For example, when we are asleep, we often come, through dreams, to a perception of things that are about to occur. We are not in an ecstasy full of commotion, for the body lies at rest, yet we do not ourselves apprehend these things as clearly as when we are awake.

In like manner many also come to a perception of the future through enthusiastic rapture and a divine impulse, when at the same time so thoroughly awake as to have the senses in full activity. Nevertheless, they by no means follow the matter closely, or at least they do not attend to it as closely as when in their ordinary condition. So, also, certain others of these ecstasies become entheist or inspired when they hear cymbals, drums, or some choral chant; as for example, those who are engaged in the Korybantic Rites, those who are possessed at the Sabazian festivals, and those who are celebrating the Rites of the Divine Mother. Others, also, are inspired when drinking water, like the priest of the Klarian Apollo at Kolophon; others when sitting over cavities in the earth, like the women who deliver oracles at Delphi; others when affected by vapor from the water, like the prophetesses at Branchidæ; and others when standing in indented marks like those who have been filled from an imperceptible inflowing of the divine plerome. Others who understand themselves in other respects become inspired through the Fancy: some taking darkness as accessory, others employing certain potions, and others depending on singing and magic figures. Some are affected by means of water, others by gazing on a wall, others by the hypethral air, and others by the sun or in some other of the heavenly luminaries. Some have likewise established the technique of searching the future by means of entrails, birds, and stars.

What, I ask, is the nature of divination, and what is its peculiar character? The diviners all say that they arrive at the foreknowledge of the future through gods or dæmons, and that it is not possible for others to have any inkling of it only those who have command over the things to be. I dispute, therefore, whether the divine power is brought down to such subserviency to human beings as, for instance, not to hold aloof from any who are diviners with barley-meal.

In regard, however, to the origins of the oracular art, it is to be doubted whether a god, or angel, or dæmon, or some other such being, is present at the Manifestations, [\[11\]](#) or at the divinations, or at any other of the Sacred Performances, as having been drawn thither through you by the necessities created by the invocations.

Some are of opinion that the soul itself both utters and imagines these things, and that there are similar conditions of it which have been produced from little sparks; others, that there is a certain mingled form of substance produced from our own soul and from the divine in breathing; others, that the soul, through such activities, generates from itself a faculty of Imagination in regard to the future, or else that the emanations from the realm of matter bring dæmons into existence through their inherent forces, especially when the emanations are derived from animals.

These conjectures are put forth for the following statements:

1. That during sleep, when we are not engaged with anything, we sometimes chance to obtain perception of the future.
2. That likewise, an evidence that a condition of the Soul is a principal source of the art of divining is shown by the facts that the senses are held in check, fumes and invocations being employed for the purpose; and that by no means everybody, but only the more artless and young persons, are suitable for the purpose.
3. That likewise, ecstasy or alienation of mind is a chief origin of the divining art; also the mania which occurs in diseases, mental aberration, abstinence from wine, suffusions of the body. fancies set in motion by morbid conditions or equivocal states of mind, such as may occur during abstinence and ecstasy, or apparitions got up by technical magic. [\[12\]](#)
4. That both the realm of Nature, Art, and the feeling in things of common throughout the universe, as of the parts in one animal, contain foreshadowings of certain things with reference to others. Moreover, there are bodies so constituted as to be a forewarning from some to others. Examples of this kind are manifest by the things done, namely: that they who make the invocations (at the Rites) carry stones and herbs, tie sacred knots and unloose them, open places that are locked, and change the purposes of individuals by whom they are entertained, so that from being paltry they are made worthy. They also who are able to reproduce the mystic figures are not to be held in low esteem. For they watch the course of the heavenly bodies, and tell from the position and relation of one with another whether the oracular announcements of the ruling planet will be false or true, or whether the rites which have been performed will be to no purpose, or will be expressive or archaic, although no god or dæmon is drawn down to them.

There are some, however, who suppose there is likewise, the subject-race of a tricky nature, artful, and assuming all shapes, turning many ways, that personates gods and dæmons and souls of the dead like actors on the stage; and that through these everything that seems to be good or bad is possible. They are led to form this judgment because these subject-spirits are not able to contribute anything really beneficial as relates to the soul, nor even to perceive such things; but on the other hand, they ill treat, deride, and often impede those who are returning to virtue.

They are likewise full of conceit, and take delight in vapors and sacrifices.

5. Because the begging priest with open mouth attempts in many ways to raise our expectations. [\[13\]](#)

4. The invocation of the Theurgic powers

It perplexes me greatly to form a conception how they who are invoked as superior beings are likewise commanded like inferiors; also that they require the worshipper to be just, although when entreated, they themselves consent to perform unjust acts. They will not hearken to the person who is invoking them if he is not pure from sexual contamination, yet they themselves do not hesitate to lead chance individuals into unlawful sexual relations.

5. Sacrifices and Prayers.

(I am likewise in doubt in regard to the sacrifices, what utility or power they possess in the world and with the gods, and for what reason they are performed, appropriate for the beings thus honored and advantageously for the persons who present the gifts. [\[14\]](#))

The gods also require that the interpreters of the oracles observe strict abstinence from animal substances, in order that they may not be made impure by the fumes from the bodies; yet they themselves are allured most of all by the fumes of the sacrifices of animals.

6. Conditions for successful results

It is also required that the Beholder [\[15\]](#) must be pure from the contact of anything dead, and yet the rites employed to bring the gods hither, many of them, are made effective through dead animals.

What, then, is more preposterous than these things -- that a human being, inferior in dignity, should make use of threats, not to a dæmon or soul of some dead person, but to the Sun-King himself, or to the Moon, or some one of the divine ones in the sky, himself uttering falsehood in order that they may be caused to speak the truth? For the declaration that he will assail the sky, that he will reveal to view the Arcana of Isis, that he will expose to public gaze the ineffable symbol in the innermost sanctuary, that he will stop the Baris; that, like Typhon, he will scatter the limbs of Osiris, or do something of a similar character, what is it but an extravagant absurdity, threatening what he neither knows how nor is able to perform? What dejection of spirit does it not produce in those who, like children, destitute of intelligence, are dismayed by groundless fear and terrified by these false alarms?

And yet Chairemon, the Scribe of the Temple, records these things as current discourse among the Egyptian priests. [\[16\]](#) It is also said that these threats, and others of like tenor, are very violent.

7. Sacred names and symbolic expressions

The Prayers also: What do they mean when they speak of the one coming forth to light from the slime, sitting on the Lotus-blossom, sailing in a boat, changing forms according to the season, and assuming a shape according to the Signs of the Zodiac? For so this is said to be seen at the Autopsias; and they unwittingly attribute to the divinity a peculiar incident of their own imagination. If, however, these expressions are uttered figuratively, and are symbolic representations of his forces, let them tell the interpretation of the symbols. For it is plain that if they denote the condition of the Sun, as in eclipses, they would be seen by every one who looked toward it intently.

Why, also, are terms preferred that are unintelligible, and of those that are unintelligible why are foreign ones preferred instead of those of our own language? For if the one who hears gives attention to the signification it is enough that the concept remains the same, whatever the term may be. For the divinity that is invoked is possibly not Egyptian in race; and if he is Egyptian, he is far from making use of Egyptian speech, or indeed of any human language at all. Either these are all artful contrivances of jugglers, and disguises having their origin in the passive conditions induced about us through being attributed to the divine agency, or we have left unnoticed conceptions of the divine nature that are contrary to what it is.

8. The First Cause

I desire you further to declare plainly to me what the Egyptian Theosophers believe the First Cause to be; whether Mind, or above mind; and whether one alone, or subsisting with another or with several others; whether unbodied or embodied, whether the very same as the Creator of the Universe (Demiurgos) or prior to the Creator; also whether they likewise have knowledge respecting Primal Matter; [\[17\]](#) or of what nature the first bodies were; and whether the Primal Matter was unoriginated, or was generated. For Chairemon and the others hold that there is not anything else prior to the worlds which we behold. At the beginning of their discourses they adopt the divinities of the Egyptians, but no other gods, except those called Planets, those that make up the Zodiac and such as rise with these, and likewise those divided into decans, those which indicate nativities, and those which are called the Mighty Leaders. The names of these are preserved in the Almanacs, together with their routine of changes, their risings and settings, and their signifying of future events. For these men perceived that the things which were said respecting the Sun-God as the Demiurgos, or Creator of the Universe, and concerning Osiris and Isis, and all the Sacred Legends, may be interpreted as relating to the stars, their phases, occultations, and revolutions in their orbits, or else to the increase and decrease of the Moon, the course of the Sun, the vault of the sky as seen by night or by day, or the river Nile, and, in short, they explain everything as relating to natural objects, and nothing as having reference to incorporeal and living essences. [\[18\]](#)

More of them likewise attribute to motion of the stars whatever may relate to us. They bind everything, I know not how, in the indissoluble bonds of necessity, which they term Fate, or allotment; and they also connect everything with those gods whom they worship in temples and with carved images and other objects, as being the only unbinders of Fate.

9. Nativities and Guardian Dæmons

The next thing to be learned relates to the peculiar dæmon or guardian spirit -- how the Lord of the House [\[19\]](#) assigns it, according to what purpose or what quality of emanation or life or power conies from it to us, whether it really exists or does not exist, and whether it is impossible or possible actually to find the Lord of the House. Certainly, if it is possible, then the person has learned the scheme of his nativity; knowing his own guardian dæmon, is liberated from fate, is truly favored by divinity. Nevertheless, the rules for casting nativities are countless, and beyond comprehension. Moreover, it is impossible for expertness in astral observations to amount to an actual knowing, for there is great disagreement in relation to it, and Chairemon, as well as many others, have spoken against it. Hence the assumption of a Lord of the House (or Lords of the House, if there are more than one) pertaining to a nativity is almost confessed by astrologers themselves to be beyond absolute proving; and yet it is from this assumption, they say, that the ascertaining of the person's own personal dæmon is possible.

But further, I wish to be informed whether our personal dæmon presides over some specific one of the regions within us. For it seems to be believed by some persons that there are dæmons allotted to specific departments of the body -- one over the health, one over the figure, and another over the bodily habits, forming a bond of union among them; and that one is placed as superior over all of them in common. And further, they suppose that there is one dæmon guardian of the body, another of the soul, and another of the superior mind; [\[20\]](#) also that some dæmons are good and others bad.

I am in doubt, however, whether our particular dæmon may not be a special part of the soul; and hence he who has a mind imbued with good sense would be the truly favored one.

I observe, moreover, that there is a twofold worship of the personal dæmon; also, that some perform it as to two and others as to three, but nevertheless he is invoked by all with a common form of invocation.

10. Eudæmonia, or the True Success

I question, however, whether there may not be some other secret path to true success which is afar from (the Rites of) the gods. I doubt whether it is really necessary to pay any regard to the opinions of individuals in regard to the divine endowment of divination and Theurgy, and whether the Soul does not now and then form grand conceptions. On the contrary, also, there are other methods for obtaining premonitions of what will take place. Perhaps, also, they who exercise the divine art of divining may indeed foresee, and yet they are not really successful: for they may foresee future events and not know how to make use of the foresight properly for themselves. I desire from you, therefore, to show me the path to success and in what the essence of it consists. For among us (philosophers) there is much wrangling, as though good might be derived from human reasonings by comparison of views.

If, however, this part of the inquiry, the intimate association with the superior race is passed over by those who devised it, wisdom will be taught by them to trivial purpose, such as calling the Divine Mind to take part about the finding of a fugitive slave, or a purchase of land, or, if it should so happen, a marriage or a matter of trade. Suppose, however, that this subject of intimate communion with the Superior race is not passed over, and those who are thus in communication tell things that are remarkably true about different matters, but nothing important or trustworthy in relation to the true success -- employing themselves diligently with matters that are difficult, but of no use to human beings -- then there were neither gods nor good dæmons present, but on the contrary, a dæmon of that kind called "Vagabond," or it was all an invention of men or an air-castle of a mortal nature.

Notes:

Porphyry, it is well known, was a distinguished scholar, and the foremost writer in the later Platonic School. He was a native of Tyre, and his name Molech, or King, was rendered by Longinus into Porphurios, denoting the royal purple, as a proper equivalent. He was a disciple of Plotinus, who had broadened the field of philosophic study till it included the "Wisdom of the East." In personal habits he followed the Pythagorean discipline. He was a severe critic of the Gnostic beliefs then current, and he evidently included with them also the new Christian faith. His mysticism was spiritual and contemplative, and he regarded the ceremonial rites of the Egyptian theurgy with distrust. He favored Mithraism, which prevailed in Asia, while Iamblichus belonged rather to the cult of Serapis, which was the State religion of Egypt.

Of Anebo we know little. He is addressed as an Egyptian priest, and his name is that of Anabu or Anubis, the Egyptian psychopompos and patron of sacred literature. He was a "prophet" hen niter or servant of divinity, and expounder of the oracles: and Porphyry himself an "epoptes" or initiated person, asks him accordingly to explain the Egyptian theosophic doctrines respecting the divine beings, rites and religious faith.

The Theosophers were regarded as learned in the arcane knowledge, and especially in Theurgy. Iamblichus appears to have adopted these Rites and usages from the Egyptian worship, including with them a philosophic groundwork from the Platonic doctrines.

3.

The use of images and emblems of a sacred character to typify divine power and energy is universal. Somewhat of the divine was supposed to inhere in them. The "images" and asheras or "groves" mentioned in the Bible were of this character. So was the "idol in a grove," made by Queen Maachah, as well as the simulacrum which, as Herodotus states, the Egyptian women carried at the festivals.

4.

Compare Gospel according to Matthew, XI, 12. "From the days of John the Baptist till now, the kingdom of heaven is forced, and they who are violent seize it."

5.

Xenokrates, who was a disciple of Plato, himself taught these doctrines. He considered the heavens as divine and that the substance of the divine nature was mind pure and absolute. He also described the stars as "visible divinities." The dæmons were depicted as of a psychic nature, subordinate to that of the gods, and therefore subject to emotion and perturbation like human beings, while at the same time sharing in a degree in the power and intelligence of the gods.

6.

Greek, the mind or "rational soul," the essence or principle of intelligence which transcends the understanding or reasoning faculty, and is capable of knowing truth intuitively and instinctively from being itself of divine origin.

7.

Here Porphyry has given an ancient classification of spiritual beings into four orders, the gods, dæmons or guardians, the heroes or half-gods, and souls. There were other distinctions in the Eastern countries, and we find Abammon, the Teacher, adding to these the archangels, angels, and archons of both the higher and lower nature. These were named in several of the Gnostic categories that were extant at that period. "We have no conflict with blood and flesh," says the Christian apostle, "but with archonates, authorities, the world-rulers of this dark region, and spiritual forces of evil in the upper heavens."

8.

By "essence" is signified the underlying principle of being; by "power" the intermediate agency; and by "energy" the operative faculty which enables actual results.

9.

This inquiry in regard to the apparitions which the candidates beheld at the initiation is made plainer by Proclus: "In the most sacred stages of the Perfective Rites," says he, "before the gods come into view, there appear intrusive figures of dæmons of the Underworld, to draw away the attention of the candidate from the spotless Good to the gross and material." It may be pertinent to add that in the several Grottoes or Halls of Initiation there was machinery ingeniously constructed for the purpose of representing divine and other personages. See The Epicurean, by Thomas Moore, and The Great Dionysiak Myth, by Robert Brown, Jr., VI, 2, 3.

10.

"I do not see any sin in the world," says George Sand, "But I see a great deal of ignorance."

11.

Greek, epiphany -- an apparition or manifestation, such as was exhibited in mystic and theurgic rites.

12.

Goeteia (goetia), or "black magic."

13.

The agurtes or begging priest generally belonged to the worship of Rhea or Cybele, the Mother. He is frequently depicted in a most unfavorable light. Apuleius speaks of a company of these emasculate priests in the eighth book of the Metamorphoses. They are also described in the Republic of Plato: "Agurtæ and Mantics frequent the houses of the rich and persuade them that they possess a power granted by the gods to expiate, by sacrifices and chants any unjust act that has been committed and that they induce the gods by blandishments and magic rites to help them. They collected money in this way, and they also followed the selling of nostrums and telling of fortunes."

14.

This paragraph is taken from Part V, Chapter I, and is not found in the text of the Letter as we have it. It is quoted there as belonging in this place. In the original Greek text the preceding paragraph appears in unbroken connection with the one which follows, and in dividing them we find it necessary to add a clause, to introduce the subject.

15.

Greek, an epopt, seer, or beholder; a person admitted to the higher degree of initiation. "The Perfective Rite leads the way as the muesis or mystic initiation," says Proclus, "and after that is the epopteia or beholding." Theôn describes it as three degrees -- "the Purification, Initiation, and Beholding of the Divine Vision." Mr. Robert Brown, Jr., explains the last of these very fully. "This is the Autopsia or Personal Inspection, the Crown of Mysteries, the Epopteia or Divine Beholding, and he becomes an Epoptes or Contemplator." (Great Dionysiak Myth, VI, 2, 3.)

As the Autoptic Visions are the principal topic in this work, the term "Beholder" is adopted uniformly for several words of the same import.

As the term "Egyptian" is applied only in this work to individuals of sacerdotal rank, the designation of "priest" is added. The Hierogrammateus, or Scribe of the Temple, was a priest of the lower class, and his duty was to keep the records, teach students the religious observances, and take care that they were duly obedient. The prophets were superior to the Scribes. The Temples of Egypt, like those of Babylonia, were seminaries for instruction, and all departments of Science and philosophy were included in their teachings as being Sacred Learning.

17.

Greek, hulé; a term first adopted by Aristotle to signify the objective, negative or passive element upon which the Creative energy operates. Plato named it the "receptacle," as containing the creative energy and making it effective.

18.

Plutarch comments somewhat severely upon this mode of interpretation. In his treatise On Isis and Osiris he remarks that some individuals do not scruple to say that Osiris is the Sun, Isis no other than the Moon, and that Typhon is fire, or drouth, or the Ocean. But he adds in rebuttal: "No one can rationally imagine that these objects can be gods in themselves; for nothing can be a god that is either without soul, or under the power of natural objects." He also remarks that "there is an excellent saying among philosophers, that they who have not learned the true sense of words will also mistake in the things that are meant."

19.

Greek, oikoresmotys: Hebrew, Baal Zebul. In astrology a "house" is a twelfth part of the sky as marked out for the purpose of horoscopes. Every sign of the Zodiac thus had a "house," which a planet or planetary genius was considered as occupying, and thence ruling the days and events of the month to which it belonged.

Part I. The Gods and their peculiarities

Chapter 2. Reply of Abammon the Teacher to The Letter of Porphyry to Anebo.

Introduction

Hermes [1], the patron of literature, was rightly considered of old to be a god common to all the priests [2] and the one presiding over the genuine learning relating to the gods, one and the same among all. Hence our predecessors were wont to ascribe to him their discoveries in wisdom and to name all their respective works Books of Hermes.

If, therefore, we participate in this god [3], of the measure which has fallen to us and become possible to us, thou dost well to propose these questions in regard to the Divine Sciences to the priests as to friends for an accurate solution. Having good reason therefore for considering the letter sent by thee to Anebo, my pupil, as having been written to myself, I will answer thee truly in regard to the matters about which thou hast enquired. For it would not be becoming that Pythagoras, Plato, Demokritos, Eudoxos, and many others of the old Greeks, should have obtained competent instruction from the temple-scribes of their own time [4], but that thou who art contemporary with us, and having the same disposition as they, should be turned away by those now living and recognized as public teachers.

Accordingly, I myself engage thus in the present discussion. Thou, if thou dost so choose, art at liberty to consider the person who is now writing to thee as the same individual to whom thou hast sent thy letter. If, however, it shall seem to thee more proper, then regard the individual who is discoursing with thee in writing to be one or some other prophet of the Egyptians, for this is not a matter worth differing about. Or, as I think still a better way, let it pass unnoticed whether the person speaking is of inferior or superior rank, and direct the attention solely to the things that are uttered, thus arousing the understanding to eagerness simply as to whether that which is said be true or false.

In the first place, let us take the subjects separately in order to ascertain the scope and quality of the problems which are now proposed for discussion. Next let us examine in detail the theories respecting divine matters from which thy doubts were conceived, and make a statement of them, as to the sources of knowledge by which they are to be investigated.

Some which are badly jumbled together require to be taken apart; while others have relation to the Divine Cause through which everything exists, and so are readily apprehended. Others which we might put forward according to a certain plan of exhibiting contradictory views, draw out the judgment in both directions; and there are likewise some which demand from us to explain the whole of the Initiatory Rites.

Such being the facts, our answers are to be taken from many places and from different sources of knowledge. Some of these introduce fundamental principles from the traditions which the sages of the Chaldaeans delivered; others derive support from the doctrines which the Prophets of the Egyptian temples teach; and some of them follow closely the speculations of the Philosophers and elicit the conclusions which belong to them. And now there are some of these which involve an unbecoming dispute from diverse notions that are not worthy of a word; and others that have their origin from prejudices common to human beings. All these, therefore, are to be disposed of in various ways by themselves, and are in many ways connected with one another.

Hence, on account of all these things, there is some discussion necessary for the directing of them properly.

PLAN OF THE DISCUSSION

We will, therefore, set forth to thee the hereditary opinions of the Assyrian Sages [5] in regard to the True Knowledge, and will show thee in plain terms our own. Some things in the Gnosis will be brought into the discussion from the innumerable arcane writings, and the rest will be from the works upon the entire range of Divine Matters, which the old compilers have collected into a book of limited dimensions.

If, however, thou wouldst propose some philosophic question, we will determine it for thee according to the ancient Tablets of Hermes [6], which Plato and Pythagoras, having studied thoroughly beforehand, combined together in Philosophy.

But questions that are foreign to the subject, or that are disputatious and exhibit a contentious disposition of mind, we shall tone down gently and aptly, or else show their impropriety. So far also as they go in the line of common ways of thinking we shall try to discuss them in a familiar manner. Those, likewise, which require the experiences of the Divine Dramas [7] for an intelligent understanding we will, as far as it is possible, explain by words alone [8]; but those which are likewise full of intellectual speculation will be shown to be effective for purifying (from the earthly contamination).

It is possible, however, to tell the signs of this which are worthy to be noted, and from these both thou and those who are like thee in mind can be brought near to the very essence of things that have real being [9].

So far, however, as they may be actually known through words, none of these matters will be left without a perfect demonstration, and in reference to everything we shall give thee carefully the proper explanation. Those which relate to divine matters we will answer as theologists; and those which pertain to Theurgy we will explain theurgically. Those of a philosophic character we will search out with thee as philosophers, and such as extend to the Primary Causes we will bring forth into light following the argument together according to first principles. Such, however, as pertain to morals or final results we will determine properly according to ethical form; and other questions, in like manner, we will treat according to their proper place in the arrangement.

We will now proceed to thy questions.

TWO FORMS OF KNOWING

Thou beginnest accordingly by saying: "In the first place, it is to be taken for granted that there are gods." Speaking in this way is not right. For the inborn knowledge in respect to the gods is coexistent with our very being, and is superior to all judging and deciding beforehand. Indeed, it is preexistent both to argument and demonstration, and is united interiorly from the beginning to its own divine cause and is coexistent with the inherent longing and impulse of the soul to the Good [\[10\]](#).

If, however, we must speak truly, the conjoining to the divine nature is not knowing, for this is kept separate after a manner by an otherness. [\[11\]](#)

Prior to this knowing, however, which is as of one individual having knowledge of another, the intimate union as in a single concept is self-originated and indistinguishable. Hence we ought to concede the point as though possibly it might not be granted, not to assume it as a matter of uncertainty'. for it always existed simply in energy. Nor is it proper to put it to proof in this way as though we had authority to judge and reject ; for we are ourselves encompassed in it, or rather we are filled by it, and the very selfhood which we are we possess in this knowing of the gods [\[12\]](#).

I have, moreover, the same thing to say to thee in regard to the Superior races which come next in order after the gods. I mean the dæmons, heroes, and uncontaminate souls [\[13\]](#).

For it is always necessary to bear in mind respecting these subordinate races that they have one defined form of essence; also that we put aside from our conception of them the indefiniteness and instability which are incident to the human constitution and renounce the tendency to incline to the other side which arises from attempts to counterbalance the opposition of the arguments. For such a thing is foreign to the principles of reason and life, but is derived from secondary sources, such even as belong to the power and contrariness of the realm of generated existence. It is necessary, however, to treat of them as being of a uniform nature.

Let it be admitted, then, that with the companions of the gods [\[14\]](#) in the eternal region there is the innate perception of them.

Therefore, even as they have their being always after the same manner, so also the human soul is conjoined to them by Knowledge according to the same principles; never by any conjecture, opinion or reasoning which have their beginning in Time pursuing the essence which is beyond all these, but by pure and faultless intuitions which it received out of eternity from the gods being conjoined with them in these principles.

Nevertheless, thou seemest to consider the knowing of divine beings to be the same as the knowing of other matters, and likewise that a point may be taken for granted from opposing arguments, as is usual in debates. But there is no such similarity. For the perceiving of them is absolutely distinct from everything of antithetic character. It is not made valid by being now conceded or by coming into existence, but on the other hand it is a single concept, and coexisted with the soul from eternity.

I say such things to thee, therefore, in regard to the first principle in us, at which it is necessary for those to begin who would both speak and hear anything whatever concerning the superior races or about ourselves.

PECULIARITIES OF THE SUPERIOR RACES

Then follows thy question: "What are the peculiarities of the Superior races by which they are differentiated from each other?" If by peculiarities" thou meanest differences as of species under the same genus, which are distinguished by opposite characteristics, as rational and irrational under the head of animal, we by no means admit the existence of such differences in beings that neither have one common essence [\[15\]](#) nor characteristics diverse from one another, nor have received an organization from a common source which is undefined and yet defines the peculiarity.

If, however, thou supposest the peculiarity to be a certain simple condition limited in itself, as in primary and secondary races, which differ in their entire essence and in the whole genus, thy notion of the peculiarities is reasonable. For these peculiarities of beings that always exist will all be in some manner set apart, separate and simple.

The questioning, however, is going forward to little purpose, for it behooves us, first of all, to ascertain what the peculiarities are in regard to essence, then in regard to power, and so, after that, what they are in regard to energy. But as thou hast now put the question in reference to certain peculiarities which distinguish them, thou speakest only of the peculiarities of energies. Hence thou askest the difference in them in respect to the last things as mentioned, but art passing over unnoticed, without questioning, the first, and, as relating to the elements of variableness, the most important of them.

Moreover, there is something added in the same place in regard to "active or passive motions." This is a classification not at all proper as relates to the superior races; for in none of them is there the contrast of active and passive, but certain of their energies are to be contemplated as unconditioned, unrestrained, and without relation to anything opposing. Hence we do not admit in regard to them that there are such motions as active and passive in respect to the soul. For we do not concede self-motion from moving and being set in motion; but we suppose that there is a certain unique self-originating motion which is its very own, and not an aptitude derived from an outside source taking from it action in itself and a passive condition by itself. Who, then, may admit in respect to the races superior to the soul that they are to be distinguished by the peculiarities of active and passive motions? [\[16\]](#)

Further, therefore, that expression which is added, "or things consequent," is inconsistent with their nature. For in the case of those of composite nature, and of those that exist together with others or in others, or that are encompassed by others, some are conceived of as leading and others as following, some as being themselves essences and others as contingent upon essences. For there is an arrangement of them in regular order, and there intervenes unfriendliness and disagreement between them. But in regard to the superior races, they are all to be considered as self-subsisting. The perfect ones take rank as chiefs, and are separate by themselves, and neither have their substance from others or in others. Thus there is nothing about them that is "consequent." In no respect, therefore, is their peculiarity characterized from these.

And now there occurs at the end of the question the natural distinction. The question is whether the essences are to be known by energies, physical motions, and things consequent. Everything, however, is to the contrary. For as the energies and motions made up the actual substance of the essence, they would themselves likewise be dominant in regard to their difference. If, however, the essences generate the energies, being themselves previously separate, then they impart to the motions, energies, and things consequent, that which constitutes the differences. This mode, therefore, is contrary to what is supposed in the present bunt to find the peculiarity.

In short, however, whether thou imaginest that there is one race of gods and one of dæmons, and in like manner of heroes (or half-gods), and after the same course of things, of unbodied souls, or whether thou supposest that there are many races in each category, thou demandest that the distinguishing of them shall be according to peculiarities. For if thou supposest each race to be a unit, the whole arrangement of divine orders according to the more perfect classification [\[17\]](#) is overturned; however, they are defined by these according to race, as it may seem satisfactory, and there is not among them one common definition in relation to essence except that those that are prior are distinguished from the inferior races, it is not possible to find out their common boundaries. And even though it should be possible, this very thing takes away their peculiarities. Hence the object which is sought is not to be found in this way. He, however, will be able to define their peculiarities who reasons upon the analogous sameness in the higher orders; as, for example, with the many races among the gods, and again with those among the dæmons and half-gods, and lastly with souls. hence it has been demonstrated by us through this argument what is the right course of the present investigation, its limitation, and how it is possible for it to be made.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE SUPERIOR ORDERS

Let us next proceed with the answers, one after another, to the questions which have been asked. There is then the Good: both that which is beyond essence and that which exists through essence. I am speaking of that essence which is the 'most ancient and most to be revered, and which, as to is incorporeal. [\[18\]](#) It is a special peculiarity of the gods, and is characteristic of all the races that are included with them; and hence, not being divided from this, but existing in like manner the same in them all, it preserves their peculiar distribution and arrangement.

SOULS

But with souls that are ruling over bodies, that are occupied with the care of them, and that are placed in order apart by themselves in the eternal regions, before the transition to generated existence, there is not present either the essence of the Good, or the Cause (or Supreme Principle) of the Good which is prior to essence; but there comes from it a certain participation and habit of good, as we perceive that a sharing of beauty and virtue is very different from what we observe with human beings. For this is equivocal, and becomes manifest in complex natures as sole thing acquired. But the principle of goodness is established unchangeable and perpetual in the Souls. It never at any time goes away from itself, nor is it taken away by anything else.

DÆMONS AND HEROES OR HALF-GODS

Such then being the case with the divine races, the first and the last (the gods and souls), let us consider the two races intermediate between these two extremes, namely: 1. That of heroes or half-gods, which not only ranks higher than the order of souls in power and virtue, moral beauty and greatness, and excels it in every good quality which is incident in souls, but is also closely joined to them by the kindred relationship of a similar form of life. 2. The other, the race of dæmons, which is closely allied to the gods, yet is in a certain sense inferior to them, following as though it was not first in rank but accompanying in subservience to the good pleasure of the gods. This race causes the otherwise invisible goodness of the gods to become visible in operation, becoming itself both assimilated to it, and accomplishing perfect works that are like it. For then what was before unutterable in it is made capable of being uttered, what was without form is caused to shire forth in visible figures, whatever of it was beyond all reasoning is brought forth into plain words, and having already received the connate participation of beautiful gifts it bestows the same ungrudgingly, and transfers them to the races that rank after itself.

Thus these intermediate races complete the common bond of gods and souls and render the connection between them indissoluble. They not only bind these together in one continuous series, from those on high to the very last, but they make the union of them all incapable of being separated and to be a most perfect blending and an equal intermingling of them all. They likewise, after a manner, cause an outgoing influence to go forth equally from the superior to the inferior races and a reciprocal one from subordinate races to those ranking above them. They also establish order among the more imperfect races, and likewise due proportions of the gift coming down from the better ones and of the reception which takes place; and having themselves received from above from the gods the causes or motives of all these, they make everything agreeable and suited in every respect to all.

Thou must not think, therefore, that this classification is a peculiarity of powers or of energies or of essence; nor art thou taking them separately, to inspect them one by one. Nevertheless, by extending the inquiry through all of them thou wilt complete the answer to what was asked in relation to the peculiarities of gods, dæmons and half-gods, and of those that are included in the category of souls.

Let us proceed again, by another line of argument. Everything, whatever it may be, and of whatever quality, that is united, that is firmly established in itself by unalterable law and is a cause among the indivisible essences -- that is immovable, and so is to be considered as the cause of all motion -- that is superior to all things and has nothing whatever in common with them -- that is to be generally considered as wholly unmingled and separate, not only in being but in power and energy -- every such thing should be ascribed to the gods as being worthy of them. But that which is already divided into a great member, that which can give itself to other objects, that which both receives from others the limitation within itself and is sufficient for the distribution among imperfect ones to make these complete, that nevertheless participates in the primary and life-giving motion [19] and has communion with all things self-existent and coming into existence, that receives a commingling of substances from them all and imparts a radiating influence from itself to all, and that extends these peculiar properties through all the powers, essences and energies in itself-all this, speaking what is true, we shall ascribe to souls, as being implanted in them.

THE INTERMEDIATE RACES

What shall we say, then, in regard to the intermediate races? I think from what has been said already that they are sufficiently manifest to every one; for they make complete the indivisible connection between the extreme races. [20] Nevertheless, it is necessary to continue the explanation. I assume, accordingly, the race of dæmons to be a multitude in one, to be commingled in an unmingled manner, and to accept the lower races as associated with a distinct concept of the most excellent. But on the other hand, I describe the race of heroes or demi-gods as being placed over more common distribution and multitude, and likewise over action and commingling, and matters akin to these. It also receives gifts from above, transcendent, and as though concealed within -- I mean union, purity of nature, stable condition, and undivided identity and superiority over others. For each of these intermediate races is next to one of the extreme races beyond -- one to the first and the other to the last. It follows as a natural result that by a continued series of kindred relations the dæmonian race, beginning from the highest in rank, proceeds to the lower races, and that the other, having primarily a connection with the last of them all, should in some way have communication with those that are superior.

Hence there may be perceived the complete joining to gather into one of the first and last races (the gods and souls) through the intermediates (the dæmons and half-gods), and the entire sameness of nature, alike equally in substance, and also alike in power and energy. [21] Whereas, therefore, we have made the classification of the four races in these two ways perfectly complete, we think it sufficient in regard to the others that for the sake of brevity, and because that which remains -- the comprehending of the intermediate tribes -- is in a measure already plain, we exhibit only the peculiarities of the extreme races. Hence we shall pass over the intermediate tribes as being already well known, and make a sketch of the others in some way in very few words.

Notes:

1.

Hermes is here the same as the Egyptian divinity, Thoth or Tahuti, the god of learning and medicine. He was regarded as the Scribe or recorder who registered the actions of the dead and living, so that they "were judged out of those things which were written in the books." He was also the revealer of the divine will to men. His name Tahuti signifies "thrice great" or "very great," or Trismegistos, Greek.

The priests in Egypt consisted of many orders, including those who performed the Rites, the learned profession which included prophets, philosophers, poets, authors, physicians, artists, master mechanics, and also embalmers of the dead.

3.

This form of expression extends through this entire book. Though hardly familiar to us, it was formerly common in philosophic writings. The gods being spiritual essences, it was very properly considered that their worshipers would participate in their substance as we partake of the air that we inhale. In this way their powers and virtues were supposed to be imparted to the recipients. This treatise accordingly mentions the gifts received by the persons initiated at the telestic or Theurgic Rites, as a participating of the gods. The fact that they represent or personify qualities rather than individualities makes this mode of speaking eminently proper.

4.

In archaic periods, the worship and literature of every people was exclusive. Every repast being accompanied by religious ceremonies, the Egyptians would not eat with foreigners. Ashmes II broke through this restriction and made treaties of friendship and commerce with several Grecian and Ionian States. By his command, and at the instance of Polykrates of Samos, a tyrant-king, Pythagoras was admitted to instruction at the temples, and formally initiated into the sacerdotal caste. After the Persian conquest others resorted to Egypt for similar purposes; among them Plato, Demokritos, Archimedes, Chrysippos, Euripides.

5.

It is evident that there was a Gnosis, or Sacred Doctrine common to the religions of the principal countries, and that its focus was at Babylon. Compare Jeremiah LI. 7 and Revelation XVII. Iamblichus lived chiefly at Khalkis In Syria, and was familiar with the magi and learned men of Persia and Assyria. Hence as Abammon he refers the Gnosis to that region.

6.

The Stellae, Pillars or Tablets of Thoth, appear to be little else than a figurative expression for the sacred learning in possession of the Sacerdotal Caste in Egypt. When we call to mind that the Pyramids in that country, before their spoilation, were cased all over with tablets of stone on which hieroglyphic writing was engraved, we shall the better apprehend the significance of the allusion of Abammon.

7.

Greek, ergatheia divine works or performances; the exhibitions at the Mystic Rites. As these were dramatic representations to prefigure experiences of a spiritual character, we substitute the term "drama" as more likely to afford a clearer conception of the meaning. Element designated the 8.

Mr. Gale, editor of the Greek text of this work as published at Oxford, was of the opinion that the reading of the original was corrupt, and suggested an emendation which may be rendered as follows: "It is impossible to explain by mere words." This would be in harmony with the statement in the Second Pauline Epistle to the Corinthian believers: "He was carried suddenly to paradise and heard things ineffable which it is not permitted to a human being to utter familiarly."

9.

Plato and his disciples employ the principle or being to denote the Absolute Divinity; also the phrase οντως ον real being or that which really is or has being, as contrasted with the "genesis" or objective existence.

10.

It was the practice of the philosophers to make use of abstract terms to represent the Supreme and Absolute. Of this character are το αγαθον the Good; το αληθεσ the True, ο εις the One.

11.

Power and energy are thus distinguished from their result. Damaskios remarks that "where there is not otherness, there will be no knowing. A union on conjunction, as of one to another, is superior to knowledge." Plato taught, says Professor Cooker, that man longs for the good, and bears witness by his restlessness and disquietude; that he instinctively desires it, and that he can find no rest and satisfaction in anything apart from the knowledge and participation of the Supreme Absolute Good.

12.

The Chaldaean Oracles quoted by Damaskios declare that "the prolific fountain of souls is encompassed by the two Minds." He adds that "the fiery signals which draw down the ripe ones are in God," which Simplicios explains: "The Unbodied ones are the supreme Mind and God being Source and Cause."

13.

Damaskios described the "dæmons" as tutelary spirits of a nature essentially divine. They were said to have charge of the oracles and worldly affairs generally. The "heroes" or demigods were a lower race in the order of emanation. The term denotes the son of a divinity, with a human parent. Uncontaminated souls are such as are not impure from the attraction of the genesis or domain of phenomenal existence.

14.

The Platonic philosophers before Iamblichus taught that the many gods are the "outshinings" or emanations of the one Superessential Deity and not substances complete of themselves. The Ancient Sadducees are said to have held a similar opinion, not denying the actual existence of angels and spirits, but that they existed permanently by inherent energy. The same sentiment appears in the ninety-fifth (ninety-sixth) Psalm. The Chaldaean Oracle, however, declared that "Not from the eternal source did anything run forth incomplete."

Plato defines essence as that which has "real being," and describes it as "colorless, formless, and intangible, visible only to the mind or higher reason that guides the soul."

16.

Plato bases upon this fact the immortality of the soul. The soul originates its own action and receptivity by volition. This volition is self-motion, and is that quality of moral freedom which has placed human beings above and apart from the animal tribes.

17.

In the Assyrian or Chaldaean Plan of Divine Orders, the following are instanced by Damaskios: 1. The Intellectible Gods. 2. The Hyparchs or superior archons. 3. The Archons. 4. The Archangels. 5. The Azoni or unclassified who belong to no defined jurisdiction. 6. Local Genii. This arrangement is hinted at in Part VIII, § 2.

18.

This is the common dogma of every ancient faith. In the Hindu category, the Brahman is the Good which is beyond essence and absolute, while Brahmá is identical with essence. The Parsis acknowledge Zurvan, the Unlimited, and Ahura Mazda, the Divine Creator. The Egyptian priests worshipped Amun, the hidden One, and Ptah, the Demiurgos or Architect of the Universe.

19.

Iamblichus is generally regarded as here endeavoring to reconcile the apparent discrepancy between Plato and Aristotle -- the latter described the soul as immovable, and Plato as self-moving, in which statement he refers to operation and not to essence. Syrianos explains that the soul is self-moving because it is set in motion from itself and certainly not by an agent inferior to itself. Proclus adds that the soul is self-moved in respect to the body and things of sense which plainly are set in motion from without themselves.

20.

21.

This distinction of principles is noted in the Chaldaean Oracles. Pythagoras indicates the same by the terms monad, duad, triad; Plato by περας, απειρον, and μικτον; Damaskios by the One, the many, and the union. Another version of the Oracles in place of "Substance" has Father, and for "energy" Mind or Reason.

Chapter 3. The Superior Races

PECULIARITIES OF THE GODS AND SOULS

In regard to the extreme races (the gods and souls) the former is chief, superior and perfect; the other is inferior and imperfect. The former can do all things at once uniformly and now; but the other is neither able to do anything completely nor immediately; neither speedily nor individually. The former generates all things and is guardian over them; but the latter has a natural disposition to yield and to turn submissively toward what it generates and has under guardianship. The former, being the original cause, has preeminence over all; but the latter, being dependent upon the pleasure of the gods as from a cause, is coexistent with it from eternity. The former in a single decisive moment grasps the ends of all the energies and essences; but the latter passes from some things to others and goes forward from the imperfect to the perfect. Further still, there exists with the former the highest and unlimited, superior to all measurement, and so completely formless as to be circumscribed by no formative principles; but the latter is dominated by impulse, habit and inclination, and is held fast both by longings for that which is inferior and by being familiar with things of a secondary character. At length it is moulded in various ways and proportions from them. Hence MIND, the leader and king of the things that actually are, the demiurgic art of the universe, is always present with the gods in the same manner, completely and abundantly, being established in itself unalloyed according to one sole energy. But the soul partakes of divisible and multiform mind, [\[1\]](#) adapting itself to the supreme authority over all. It also takes care of unsouled beings, having been itself born into various forms at different times. From the same causes, order itself and beauty itself are coexistent with the Superior races; or if it is desired so to express it, the First cause is coexistent with these. But with the soul the allotment of intellective order and divine beauty is always associated. With the gods, the measure of all things, or rather the cause of it, is perpetually coordinate; but the soul is confined to the divine limit and only participates of this in a limited degree. With good reason there may be ascribed to the gods dominion over all beings, by the power and supreme authority of the First Cause; but the soul has defined limits within which it can have command.

Such being the different peculiarities of the races at the highest and lowest extremes, what we have now been saying may be understood without difficulty, and also the peculiarities of the intermediates, the dæmons and half-gods; these being each next to one of the extremes, resembling both and going out from both to the intermediate region, and so effecting a harmonious union by commingling them and joining them together in due proportions.

Let such, then, be considered the peculiarities of the first divine races.

DISTINCTIONS OF THE SUPERIOR RACES

Surely we do not admit the distinction of the Superior races to be what is suggested by thee: "a classification established by difference of bodies, the gods being distinguished by ætherial bodies, the dæmons by aërial bodies, and souls by bodies pertaining to the earth." Such an arrangement would be like the assigning of Socrates to a tribe when he was a Prytanis, [2] and is not proper to be admitted in regard to the divine races, which are all by themselves, unbound and free. [3] To make bodies their own first causes, as to their specific nature, appears to be a fearful absurdity; for they are subservient to these causes and subject to the conditions of generated existence.

Further still, the races of Superior beings are not in the bodies, but govern them from outside. Hence they do not undergo changes with the bodies. Yet they give from themselves to the bodies every such good as the latter are able to receive, but they themselves receive nothing from the bodies. Hence they cannot have received from them any peculiarities. For if they were as habits of the bodies, or as material forms, or some other body-like quality, it might be possible for them, perhaps, to undergo change together with the different conditions of the bodies. But if they preexist separate from bodies, and unmingled with them, what rational distinction originating from the bodies can be developed in them?

In fact, this proposition in regard to these races makes the bodies actually superior to the divine races, since by such a hypothesis they furnish a vehicle for the superior causes and fix in them the peculiarities incident to their essence. Nevertheless, it is plain that if the allotments, distributions and assignments of those that govern are arranged with those that are governed this authority will be given to the more excellent. For it is because those that are placed over others are such that they receive thereby such an allotment, and give this a specific character; but the essence itself does not become assimilated to the nature of the corporeal receptacle. [4]

Hence I may speak as regards this subject in its turn, but a supposition of this kind must be admitted in respect to the imperfect soul. For such a mode of living as the soul projected, and such an ideal as was ready before entering into a human body, there is a corresponding organic body, joined to it and a similar nature which receives its more perfect life. [5]

In respect to the superior races and those which as being universal include the origin of all, the inferior ones are produced in the superiors, the corporeal in the incorporeal, and, being encompassed by them in one circle, are governed by them. Hence the revolutions of the heavenly spheres [6] have been induced originally by the aetherial soul and are always inherent in it. The souls of the world also being extended to their own mind, are absolutely encompassed by it and primarily generated in it. In like manner also, the Mind, both that which is divisible (into attributes and qualities) and that which is entire, is included (as essential quality) of the superior races. Hence the secondary races, being always turned toward the primary, and the superiors leading the inferiors as exemplars, essence and ideal come to the lower races from those which are superior, and those which are ignoble are produced primarily in the more excellent. Hence, accordingly, order and proportion come from the latter to the inferior races, and these are what they are through the former. But there is no transmitting of peculiarities from the inferior races to those which precede them.

Such a classification, therefore, based on corporeal conceptions, is shown by these arguments to be false. Even though in this case it may seem otherwise to thee, the false assumption is not worthy of a word. Such a case does not exhibit abundant argument, but one belabors himself to no purpose if he puts forth hypotheses and then endeavors to refute them as not being true. For in what way is essence, which is absolutely incorporeal, having nothing in common with the bodies that partake of it, to be distinguished from such bodies? Not being in any way present with the bodies as a matter of place, how is it to be separated by places after the corporeal manner? And not being separated by circumscribed divisions of subject matter, how is it to be held in a divided condition by the divisions of the world? But what is more, what is there that can hinder the gods from going everywhere? What is there to hold their power in check, from extending to the vault of the sky? For this would be the work of a cause far mightier than the one shutting them in and circumscribing them within certain parts. Real being -- that which truly is, and which is in itself incorporeal -- is everywhere, wherever it pleases. Yet, as thou takest for granted, that which is divine and which transcends all things is itself transcended by the perfectness of the entire world, and is encompassed by it in a specific division, and hence is inferior in respect to bodily dimensions. Yet if there is no divine creation and no participation of divine ideals extending through the whole world, I do not see, for my part, any opportunity for a creating and framing of them after specific forms.

In short, however, this opinion which banishes the presence of the superior races entirely from the earth is an abrogating of the Sacred Rites and theurgic communion of the gods with human beings. For it says nothing else than that the divine ones dwell apart from the earth, that they do not commingle with human beings, and that this region is deserted by them. Consequently, according to this reasoning we priests have never learned anything whatever from the gods, and since we differ in nothing from other men thou hast not done right in questioning us as though we knew more than others.

Not one of these statements of thine, however, is sound. For neither are the gods limited to parts of the earth, nor are the inferior races about the earth excluded from their presence. On the contrary, the superior races are characterized in this way: that they are encompassed by nothing and that they encompass all things in themselves. But those that belong to the earth have their being in the perfections (pleromas) of the gods, and when they become fit for the divine communion they at once, prior to their own essence, possess the gods that preexisted in it.

That this entire classification is false, that this plan of investigating peculiarities is irrational, and that the notion of distributing the gods each to a certain region does not permit the receiving of the entire essence and power which are in them, we have fully established. It would have been right, therefore, to omit the dissenting inquiry in regard to the distribution of the Superior races, as it contradicts nothing in regard to the true conceptions. On the other hand, our attention should be directed, instead, to the intelligent perception of matters relating to the gods, and not to the holding of a discussion with a man; and for this reason we shall adapt the present discourse to the disposing of subjects of probability and matters relating to the gods.

HOW DIVINE RACES ARE DISTRIBUTED

[1.9 cp. Luck 126]

I assume accordingly that thou askest a solution of that matter of which thou seemest to be in doubt, namely: "As the gods dwell only in Heaven, why are invocations at the Theurgic rites directed to them as being of the Earth and Underworld?"

This position which is thus assumed at the beginning, namely: that the gods traverse heaven only, is not true; for the universe is full of them. But thou then demandest: "How is it that although possessing power unlimited, undivided, and unrestricted, some of them are mentioned as being of the water and of the atmosphere, and that others are allotted by definite limitation to different places and distinct parts of bodies? If they are actually separated by circumscribed limitations of parts, and according to diversities of places and subject-bodies, how will there be any union of them one to another?"

One most excellent solution of all these and an infinite number of similar questions is by a survey of the manner in which the gods are allotted.

This, then, is the explanation: Whether the allotment be to certain parts of the universe, as to heaven or earth, whether to holy cities and regions, whether to certain temple-precincts or sacred images, the divine irradiation shines upon them all from the outside, just as the sun illuminates every object from without with his rays. Hence, as the light encompasses the objects that it illuminates, so also the power of the gods comprehends from without those that participate of it. In like manner, also, as the light of the sun is present in the air without being combined with it -- and it is evident that there is nothing left in the air when the illuminating agent is removed, although warmth is still present when the heating has entirely ceased -- so also the light of the gods shines while entirely separate from the objects illuminated, and, being firmly established in itself, makes its way through all existing things.

Still further, the light that is the object of perception is one, continuous, and everywhere the same entirety; so that it is not possible for a part of it to be cut off by itself, or to be enclosed in a circle, or at any time to remove itself from the source of illumination. According to the same principles, therefore, the whole universe, being susceptible of division, is distinguished with reference to the one and indivisible light of the gods. In short, this light is one and the same everywhere, and is not only present, undivided, with all things that are capable of participating of it, but it, likewise, by an absolute power and by an infinite superiority, fills all things, as a cause, joins them together in itself, unites them everywhere with itself, and combines the ends with the beginnings. The whole heaven, including with it the universe imitating this, goes around in a circular revolution, unites all to itself, and leads the elements whirling in a circle; and all things being in one another, and borne toward one another, it holds them together and defines their equal proportions; and guiding them to the remotest distances, makes the ends combine with the beginnings -- as, for example, the earth with the sky -- and effects a sole connection and accord of wholes with wholes.

Who, then, that contemplates the visible image of the gods thus united as one [7] will not have too much reverence for the gods, its causes, to entertain a different judgment and to introduce among them artificial divisions, arbitrary distinctions, and corporeal outlines? I, for one, do not think that any one would be so disposed. For if there is neither any analogy, nor scheme of proportion, nor interblending in respect to power or simple energy of that which is set in order with that which sets in order, [8] then I say that there is nothing existing in it, either of extension or in regard to distance, or of encompassing locally, or of division by due setting apart, or of any other such natural equalizing of qualities in the presence of the gods with beings inferior in their nature. For in natures that are homogeneous in essence and power, or that are in some manner of similar form or alike in race, there can be perceived an encompassing or holding fast. But in the case of those that are totally exempt from all these conditions, what opposing circumstance in respect to these things, or pathways through them all, or separate outline, or encompassing in some prescribed space, or anything of this kind, can be justly conceived? On the other hand, I think that they who are partakers of the gods [9] are, every one, of such a nature as to partake of them according to their own intrinsic quality, some as of the other, others as of the atmosphere, and others as of the water; which the technique of the Divine Performances recognizes, [10] and so makes use of the adaptations and invocations according to such a classification.

So much may be stated in regard to the distribution of the superior races in the world.

SUPERIOR BEINGS NOT CLASSIFIED AS PASSIVE AND IMPASSIBLE

After these distinctions thou suggestest another classification on thy own account, and separatest the essences of the superior races by the differentiation of "passive and impassible." I do not, however, by any means accept this classification. For no one of the superior races is passive, nor yet is it impassible in such a manner as to be thus contradistinguished from any that is susceptible, as being adapted by nature to receive impressions, or as freed from them through inherent virtue or some other excellent condition. On the other hand, it is on this account, because they are entirely exempt from the inconsistency of being either passive or not passive, because they are in no way susceptible to impression, and because they are unchangeably fixed in regard to essence, that I set them down in all these respects as impassible and unchangeable.

Consider, if thou art willing, the last one of the divine races, the soul pure from the defilement of bodies. Being superior to the realm of nature, and living the unbegotten life, what does it want of the generated life with sensual pleasure and of the restoration thereby into the realm of nature? [11] Being outside of everything corporeal, and of the nature which is divisible in respect to the body, and being likewise entirely separate from the accord in the Soul which goes down into the body, why is it to participate of the pain that leads to decay and dissolution of the structure of the body? On the contrary, it has no occasion for the susceptibilities which are forerunners of sensation, for it is neither held at all in a body nor in any way environed by it so as to have occasion for bodily organs in order to perceive different bodies outside of these organs. In short, however, being indivisible, remaining in the one same form, being essentially incorporeal, and having nothing in common with the generating and susceptible body, it can be affected by nothing in regard to classification or transformation, nor in short has it any concern whatever with change or condition.

But on the other hand, whenever the soul comes into the body it is not itself, nor are the rational faculties which it imparts to the body susceptible to impression. [12] For these are simple and single ideals, not admitting any disturbing element or entrancement, so far as relates to them. It is, therefore, the something that yet remains that is the cause of such experience to the composite nature. Nevertheless, the cause is not in any way the same as the effect. [13] Hence, the Soul being the first genesis and origin of the composite living beings that come into existence and pass to dissolution, is itself, so far as relates to itself, unbegotten and imperishable; so also those that participate of the soul are susceptible to impression and do not possess life and essence in their completeness, but are entangled in the indefiniteness and alien conditions of the realm of matter. [14] Yet the soul, as relates to itself, is unchangeable, as being in its own essence superior to impression, and as neither being moved by any preference inclining in both directions (passiveness and impassibility), nor as receiving an acquired versatility in the participating of habitude and power.

Since, therefore, we have shown, in respect to the last race of the superior orders, namely, the soul, that it is impossible for it to participate in any passive or impressionable condition, how is it proper to attribute this participation to dæmons and half-gods who are sempiternal and follow the gods, and themselves according to their respective grades preserve, and likewise in their several places make the regular arrangement of the divine beings always complete, and do not leave any unoccupied space between the different orders? For this we know for certain: that the passive condition is not only undisciplined but also discordant and unstable, never being in any case its own master, but attached to that by which it is held fast and to which it is subservient in reference to the sphere of generated existence. This condition of passiveness, therefore, pertains to some other race rather than to one always existing and allied to the gods, not only maintaining the same arrangement but likewise going around the same circuit with them. Hence, therefore, the dæmons, and all who rank with them after the superior races, are impassible.

Notes:

1.

The Chaldaean Oracles also recognize this twofold mind. The one, the Pure Reason or Intelligence, was placed over the first Triad. "The Mind of the Father named all things in threes, and governed them all by Mind." This mind they considered as sole, unparticipating, and essential. The other was described as participant and divisible into parts or qualities.

2.

The Prytanis of Athens were fifty in number, and were selected from the Boulé or Senate. Socrates, at the age of sixty, was chosen to that dignity.

3.

The Chaldaean Theology did not unequivocally describe all the gods as "unbound." The seven cosmokrators, or rulers of the world, the lords of the zodiacal houses and the cosmic gods assigned to regions of the world, were bound to their respective jurisdictions.

4.

The pre-existence of the soul in the eternal world, before becoming involved in the genesis and conditions of the earth-life, was generally believed. Even after being set free at death, it was supposed to be, after a period of less or greater length, again attracted back to the mundane sphere. Plato illustrates this by the Vision of Eros in the Republic. The choice of the earthly condition is made by the soul itself, and very generally it differs from what it had been in the preceding term of life in the world. "The cause is in him who makes the choice, and the divinity is without blame in the matter." Eros adds that after the souls had chosen their new lives according as they drew the lots, they all went in their order to Lachesis, and she gave to every one the dæmon that he had chosen, and sent the dæmon along with him to be the guardian genius of his life, and the accomplisher of the fate which he had chosen. Then he was born anew into the earth.

5.

The cause or incentive for the coming of the soul into generated life is variously explained by different writers. According to Plotinus, the universal soul does not come to a body as the body may come to it, nor does the body contain the soul, but is contained by it. Simplicios accepted the statement of Iamblichus, that "the soul projects certain lives for itself."

6.

The stars and planets were regarded as abodes or receptacles of souls.

7.

Plato affirms this in the Epinomis. "It is Heaven that we should honor," says he; "it is the cause of all benefits to us." Abammon, doubtless, alludes to Ra, of the Egyptian Pantheon, who was regarded as the source of light, and also as being the whole heaven united as one eikon and personality.

8.

Proclus reiterates this declaration, so often insisted upon, that the superior nature and essence can receive nothing from one that is inferior.

9.

Intelligent readers will understand from what has been said, that as the gods are spiritual essences, the partaking of them, or, in other words, of their irradiation, is analogous to the partaking of light. The luminance itself is in no way affected, but the partaker is filled and pervaded by it.

10.

This is the Theurgic Rite. "This Theurgy," says Thomas Taylor, "is, doubtless, the same as the 'Magic of Zoroaster,' which was no 'Black art,' but a peculiar mode of worship."

11.

The soul was called by Damaskios, our last echo of Divinity. In the mundane region it was considered as not a whole and united essence, but as divided into qualities and traits of character.

12.

Plotinus, using the comparison that the workman does not contract the imperfections of his tools, remarks that it is not necessary that the soul shall be itself affected by the conditions of the body. It simply uses the body as its instrument: It is incorporeal, and hence the passions and susceptibilities of the body do not penetrate into its substance, but only into its powers and energies.

13.

Proclus illustrates this by the analogy of a man viewing his own image in a stream of water. He is unchanged in his own person and individuality, but the image exhibits great perturbation. So the soul contemplates its own image as reflected in the body, and though it is itself impassible and unaffected, it may be perplexed by the incidental disturbances.

14.

Greek, ὕλη, wood, rubbish; the negative or inert quality called matter, from which natural objects proceed. Aristotle first adopted the term. Plato, unable to conceive of matter as substance per se, made use of terms signifying the "nurse" and the "receptacle" or passive force. The term "matter" is from materia, the mother-principle. The phrase "realm of matter" is adopted here, as the term implies a department in the universe, and not simply matter itself.

Chapter 4. Rites, Symbols, and Offerings

"Why then, are many ceremonies performed histrionically in the Sacred Rites, as though the gods were moved by passion?"

I think that this is said without an intelligent understanding in regard to the Sacerdotal technique of the Mysteries. For of the ceremonies performed from time to time in the Sacred Rites, some have an ineffable cause and a divine principle; others are consecrated to the Superior beings from eternity as symbols are consecrated [1]; others preserve some other image, just as Nature, the Supreme Genetrix also from invisible concepts, molds visible semblances. Others are brought forward from some motive of veneration, [2] or they are endeavors at figurative representation, or some concept of a family relationship. Some prepare us for something that is useful, or in some way purify and free our human passions, or turn away some of the evils that may be impending over us. Yet it may not be admitted that any part of the Holy Observance is performed to the gods or dæmons as to impressionable beings. For the essence which is subjectively everlasting and incorporeal is not of a nature to permit any change from the bodies (offered at the Rites. [3])

Not even though it be admitted that it has use especially of such a kind, would it ever need it from human beings in a religious service of this kind. It is supplied from itself, and from the nature (or feminine principle) of the world, and from the abundance which is in the genesis (or generative energy); and if it is permissible to say this likewise, it receives a sufficiency before it can be in any want, through the unflinching complete supply of the world and its own ample abundance, and because all the superior races are fully supplied with the good things pertaining to them respectively. Let there be, therefore, this general encouragement for us in regard to the worship of the uncontaminated races, that they are likewise affiliated by kindred relationship to the beings that are otherwise superior to us, and on this account the pure are attracted to the pure, and the impassive to the impassive.

Following every point in its turn, we remark that the planting of "phallic images" is a special representing of the procreative power by conventional symbols, and that we regard this practice as an invocation to the generative energy of the universe. On this account many of these images are consecrated in the spring, when all the world is receiving from the gods the prolific force of the whole creation. [4]

I think, however, that the immodest language to which you refer, affords an illustration of the absence of moral virtues [5] in the realm of matter, and the unseemly rudeness existing beforehand with the unformed elements that are to be organized. These being utterly destitute of orderly arrangement, are passionately eager for it, so to speak, to such a degree as they are conscious of the unbecoming condition of things around themselves. Hence, again, perceiving from the speaking of vile utterances, what is vile, they follow to the (divine) sources of the ideals and more beauties.

They accordingly not only turn aside from evil action, but through the words, it is manifest in its forms and changes the impulse to a contrary direction. [6]

There is, however, still another reason of analogous character for these customs. The powers of the human passions that are in us, when they are barred on every side, become more vehement: but when they are brought into activity with moderation and reasonable measure, they are sufficiently delighted and satisfied, and becoming pure in consequence, are won over and set at rest. In the same way, likewise, in comedy and tragedy, when we behold the emotions of others, we repress our own, make them more moderate and are purified from them. In the Sacred Rites, also, we are, by certain spectacles and relations of ugly things, delivered from the harm that is likely to befall through the events represented by them. [7]

Things of this character are brought into use, therefore, for the healing of the soul within us, the moderating of the evils which have become nature to it through the genesis [8] or nativity, and likewise for the sake of its unloosing and deliverance from its bonds. On this account, probably, Herakleitos names them "Remedies" [9] as being cures for terrible maladies, and restoring the souls sound from the experiences incident in the generated life.

WHAT THE INVOCATIONS ACCOMPLISH

But the objection is also made: "The invocations are made as to gods that are impressionable beings; so that it is implied that not the dæmons only are impressionable, but the gods likewise."

This, however, is not as thou hast supposed. For the illumination which is present through the invocations is self-appearing and self-subsisting; it is also far removed from the being attracted downward, and goes forth into manifestation through the divine energy and perfection, and it excels voluntary choice and activity by so far as the Divine Purpose of the Absolute Goodness is superior to the deliberately chosen of life. By such a purpose, therefore, the gods being gracious and propitious, give forth light abundantly to the Theurgists, both calling their souls upward into themselves, providing for them union to themselves in the Chorus, [\[10\]](#) and accustoming them, while they are still in the body, to hold themselves aloof from corporeal things, and likewise to be led up to their own eternal and noetic First Cause. [\[11\]](#)

From these Performances [\[12\]](#) it is plain, that what we are now discoursing about is the Safe Return of the Soul, for while contemplating the Blessed Spectacles, [\[13\]](#) the soul reciprocates another life, is linked with another energy, and rightly viewing the matter, it seems to be not even a human, for the most blessed energy of the gods. If, indeed, the upward way through the invocations effects for the priests a purifying of the passions, a release from the condition of generated life, and likewise a union to the Divine First Cause, why, indeed, does any one impute to it any of the passion? [\[14\]](#) For such invocation does not draw down beings that are impassive and pure, to that which is susceptible and impure. On the contrary, it makes us who had become impressionable through the generated life, pure and steadfast. [\[15\]](#)

On the other hand, even the "favorable inclinations" do not bring the priests into union with the gods through a passive condition, but they open the way for an indissoluble communion through the attraction which binds the universe together. It is by no means, as the term seems to imply, an inclining of the mind of the gods to human beings, but on the contrary, as the truth itself will teach the adapting of the human intelligence to the participating of the gods, leading it upward to them, and bringing it into accord through persuasive harmonies. Hence, both the reverend names of the gods, and the other divine symbols, being of an elevating tendency, are able to connect the invocation with the gods. [\[16\]](#)

Proclus also declares that "the gods are readily persuaded by invocations and enable the initiants to behold perfect, tranquil, and genuine spectacles."

PROPI TIATORY RITES

What is more, "the propitiations of anger" will be plain enough if we learn thoroughly what the anger of the gods really is. It certainly is not, as some imagine, an inveterate and persistent rage. On the contrary, so far as the matter relates to the gods, it is a turning away from their beneficent guardianship. We ourselves turn away from this just as we bring darkness upon ourselves by shutting away the light at noon-day and so rob ourselves of the priceless gift of the gods. Hence the "propitiation" can turn us to the participation of the superior nature, [\[17\]](#) lead us to the guardian fellowship of the gods, which we had cast from us, and bind to each other harmoniously both those participating and the essences participated. Hence so far is it from accomplishing its particular work through a passive condition, that it leads us to desist from any passionate and disorderly turning away from, the gods.

Nevertheless, because evil is present in the regions of the earth, [\[18\]](#) the "expiatory sacrifices" act as a remedy and prepare us so that no change or any passive condition may occur with reference to us. Hence, whether it is through the gods or dæmons that a result of this kind takes place, it appeals to them as helpers, averters of evil, and as saviors, and through them turns away every harm that may be liable to follow from what has occurred. Let it be understood that those superior powers that turn away the blows incident to the realm of nativity and nature, are not preventing them in any way through passive conditions.

Indeed, if anyone has imagined that the intercepting of the protecting influence may bring on some chance injury, the endeavor at persuading of the Superior races "through the expiatory sacrifices" recalling them to their generosity, and taking away the sense of privation, may be in every respect pure and unchangeable. [\[19\]](#)

"THE NECESSITIES OF THE GODS"

Further still, we will consider what are called "the necessities of the gods." The whole fact is this: The "necessities" are peculiarities of the gods, and exist as pertaining to gods, not indeed as from without, nor as from compulsion; but, on the contrary, as the goodness is of use from necessity, so also are they likewise in every particular and they are not in any respect otherwise inclined. Such necessity is itself combined with a purpose ideally good and is the beloved consort of Love. [\[20\]](#)

It is not only the same and unalterable in the order pertaining to the gods, but because it is at the same time, and in like manner, circumscribed in one boundary, it abides in this and never goes out of it. For all these reasons the very contrary takes place to what was inferred. If in Theurgy there are really genuine powers of such a character as we have set forth, the conclusion is inevitable that the Divine Being is proof against enchantment, impassive and not to be compelled.

SUPPLICATIONS AND THEIR UTILITY

Nevertheless, after this, thou passest over to another classification of gods as contrasted with dæmons. For thou remarkest that "gods are pure mental essences," proposing the opinion as the basis of an argument, or telling it as acceptable to certain individuals. Then thou addest: "that the dæmons are psychic beings, participating of mind."

It is not hidden from me that these notions are entertained by many of the Grecian philosophers. [\[21\]](#) nevertheless, I do not think it proper to hide from thee the manifest truth, for all opinions of such a character are somewhat confusing. They carry the attention from dæmons to souls, for these are also partakers of mind; and they wander from the gods to mind that is non-material in respect to operation which the gods excel in every particular. Why, then, should we attribute these peculiarities to them, which are by no means exclusively theirs? This much will be sufficient in regard to this classification. Otherwise, so far as it may be thought worthy of a mention of such a kind, it is overmuch. But in regard to the matters of which thou art in doubt, they should have due attention inasmuch as they have to do with the sacerdotal function.

Having further affirmed that "pure mental essences are not to be charmed or mingled with things of sense," thou doubtest whether it is necessary to pray to them. On my part, I do not think it necessary to pray to any others. For that something in us that is divine, mental essence and one -- or mental alone, if you choose to call it so -- is then vividly aroused in the prayers, and when it is awakened it longs vehemently for its counterpart, and becomes united to the absolute perfection.

If, however, it appears incredible to thee that an incorporeal being hears a voice in any way, and there is need of a special sense and of ears in order that the things uttered by us in the prayers may be heard, thou art voluntarily forgetful of the superior powers of the Primary Cause, both in the perceiving of all things, and the encompassing of them at once in themselves. The gods certainly do not receive the prayers in themselves through faculties of sense, or through organs, but they encompass in themselves the full purport and energies of the pious utterances, and especially of those which happen through the Sacred Rites to have been established and brought into one with the gods. For then the Divine essence itself is simply present to itself, and does not share the conceptions in the prayers as distinct from itself.

But thou affirmest that "the supplications which are offered are entirely foreign to the purity of mental substances." Not at all: for it is on this very account, because we are excelled by the gods in power, purity, and everything, that it is most opportune to supplicate them even with exaggeration of speech. If we are judged by being compared to the gods, the consciousness of our own nothingness causes us to betake ourselves to supplication, and we are led from supplication to the object of supplication, and from the familiar intercourse we acquire a similarity to it, [\[22\]](#) and from imperfection we quietly receive the Divine Perfection. [\[23\]](#)

If, however, it is conceived that the sacerdotal supplications are inspired into human beings as from the gods themselves, that they are symbols or tokens of the very gods, and are recognized by the gods alone, and have likewise after a certain manner the same power with the gods, how may it be justly supposed that supplication of this kind is still a matter of the physical senses, but not divine and of the higher intelligence? Or, what may in any likelihood insinuate itself into it when the most excellent human morals cannot be easily made pure? [\[24\]](#)

"But," it is remarked by thee, "the things that are offered are offered as to sensitive and psychic natures." If, indeed, they consisted of corporeal and composite powers alone, or of such as pertained merely to the service of the physical organism, thou wouldst be correct. But since the offerings partake also of incorporeal ideals, special discourses, and simpler metres, the peculiar affinity of the offerings is to be considered from this point alone. And if any kindred relationship, near or far away, or any resemblance is present, it is sufficient for the union about which we are now discoursing. For there is not anything which is in the least degree akin to the gods, with which the gods are not immediately present and conjoined. It is not, then, as to "sensitive or psychic," but actually to divine ideals and to the gods themselves, that the intimate union is effected so far as may be. Hence we have spoken sufficiently in opposition to this classification.

CLASSIFICATION CRITICISED

The next thing in thy letter is the question, "Are gods separated from dæmons by the distinction of bodied and unbodied?" [\[25\]](#)

This distinction is much more common than the former one; but it is so far from indicating their peculiarities of essence, that it does not even constitute a reasonable guess in respect to them, or anything incident to them. For it is not possible from these things to apprehend intelligently whether they are living beings or beings without life, and whether they are deprived of life or do not need it at all. Besides, also, it is not easy to form a judgment as to how these terms are to be applied, whether in Common or in relation to many different things. If they are to be applied in common, if both a piece of writing and a period of time, a god and dæmons likewise, and also fire and water, are under the same class as being incorporeal, the distinction is absurd. If, however, they are employed with reference to the chief differences, why, when thou speakest of incorporeal things, dost thou indicate gods rather than tokens; or when thou sayest "body" why should it not be taken to mean the Earth rather than dæmons? For this point is not itself defined, whether they have bodies as a part of themselves, or are carried by bodies as a vehicle, or make use of them on occasion, or encompass them, or are merely identical with the body.

Perhaps, however, it is not necessary to scrutinize this distinction critically; for thou dost not put it forward as thy own concept, but on the contrary, displayest it as the conjecture of others.

THE GODS OF THE SKY NOT CORPOREAL

We will, therefore, take up in place of this subject, the matter in relation to the present opinion, about which thou seemest to be in doubt. For thou hast proposed this question: "If only the gods are incorporeal, how shall the Sun, the Moon, and the luminaries visible in the sky, be accounted as gods?"

We reply: That they are not encompassed by the bodies, but that on the contrary, they encompass the bodies with their own divine lives and energies; also that they are not converted to the body, but possess the body which has been converted to the divine cause; and that the body does not interfere with their spiritual and incorporeal completeness, nor occasion any obstacle to it by intervening. hence it does not even require more attention, but follows (the divinities) after a manner spontaneously, and by its own motion, not needing a self-operating superintendence, but urging on by itself [\[26\]](#) uniformly by the leading of the gods upward toward the One. [\[27\]](#)

If, however, it is necessary, we will say this: The body (of the divine guardian of the star) in the sky is very closely akin to the incorporeal essence of the gods. For the essence being one, the other is unique; that being undifferentiable this is undivided; that being unchangeable this is in like manner unchanged. [\[28\]](#) But if even it is taken for granted the energies of the gods are after one ideal, the divine one in the sky has also a single orbit. Nevertheless it also imitates their sameness in respect or a perpetual activity constantly in the same manner, by the same impulses, according to one law and one order of arrangement; and also the life of the gods which is the life natural to the bodies in the aether. Hence, their body is not constituted of incongruous and different elements in the way that our body is composed; nor does their soul join with the body to bring out from two, one living being. On the contrary, the living forms of the gods in the sky are, in every respect, similar and united, and are likewise complete, uniform and uncompounded through their entire substance. For the superior divinities are always excelling in these respects, and the lesser ones being dependent upon the rule of those that are prior and never obtaining this rule for themselves, the whole are brought into one joint arrangement and one common activity, and are all of them, in a manner, incorporeal and wholly divine. Hence, wherefore the divine ideal predominates in them, and implants through them all everywhere, the same One universal essence.

So, therefore, the gods that are visible in the sky, are likewise all of them in a certain sense, incorporeal.

THE GODS IN THE SKY NOT MALIGNANT

Thy next question raises a difficulty in another form "How is it that some of these gods are givers of good and others bring evil?"

This conjecture is taken from the casters of nativities, but it falls short of actual fact in every particular. For they all are not only good, but in like manner, also the causes and authors of benefits, and they likewise all revolve (in their orbits) with reference simply to the One God, according to the beautiful and good alone. Nevertheless the bodies which are subject to them, [\[29\]](#) themselves possess extraordinary powers; some of these powers being firmly established in the divine bodies themselves; but others going forth from them into the productive principle of the world, even into the world itself, and likewise passing down in proper order through the whole realm of generation, [\[30\]](#) and extending without impediant even to incomplete races.

In respect, therefore, to the powers which inhere in the bodies of the divine ones in the sky, there is no doubt that they are all similar. Hence it is left for us that we shall discourse upon those which have been sent down here, and which have become intermingled with the sphere of generated existence. They extend in the same way preservation of the universe, and encompass the whole realm of generated existence after the same manner. They are both impassive and unchangeable, although they are present in the changeable and passive. The realm of generated existence being of many kinds and constituted of things diverse in character, contends against the oneness and indivisible essence of the gods with its own contrary and factious nature, discordantly and factiously. But it admits the impassive essence after the passive manner; and in short it participates of them according to its peculiar nature and not according to their power. As, therefore, that which comes into existence partakes of real being, as by heredity, and the body receives the incorporeal essence after a corporeal manner, so likewise the natural and material bodies in the realm of generated existence, it may be, participate in a disorderly and discordant manner of the non-material and ætherial bodies, which are above the realms of nature and generated existence. They are absurd, therefore, who attribute color, figure and the sense of feeling to mental forms, because those that participate of them are of such a kind; and so are they also who impute malignity to the bodies in the sky because their participants are sometimes bad. For unless the one who is participating had some such aberration at the beginning, there would be no such communication. But if that which is imparted is received as being foreign and inimical, it may, perhaps, become as something different, and to those belonging about the earth, it is evil and disorderly. This participation, therefore, and the commingling of aura of the realm of matter with that of the non-material realm, becomes a cause of much essential diversity in the inferior races; and besides these, that which is given forth in one way, is received after another. Thus, for example, the aura of Kronos (Seb) is dense, but that of Arês (Mandu) is impulsive; [31] yet the passive generative receptacle in those belonging in the realm of matter receives the former according to its consolidation and coolness, but the latter according to the warmth beyond the usual condition. Hence do not corrupting influence and the disproportionateness come through the deviation of the recipients, which is productive of inharmoniousness, pertaining to the realm of matter and impressionable? Hence the feebleness. incident to regions in the realm of matter and earthly existence, not being capable of the genuine power and absolutely pure life of the divine ones of the ætherial region, refers its own condition to the Primary Causes -- just as though a person distempered in body and not able to endure the life-giving warmth of the Sun, should have the audacity to affirm from his own condition, the falsehood that the Sun is of no benefit to health or life.

Something of this kind, however, may be the case in the general order and constitution of the universe, as the same things may be the means of safety to the universe and to every one, through the completeness, both of the things that are possible and those by which they are possible, but are harmful to the imperfect through their specific lack of harmony. Likewise in the motion of the universe, the revolutions in like manner maintain order in every respect, but some one of the parts is injured now and then by another, as we see occurring in a dance. [32]

To repeat the statement once more, it is the natural tendency of partial and incomplete things to decompose and undergo change. It is not proper, however, to attribute this peculiarity to the universal and primary causes, either as being inherent in them or as extending from them into this lower region.

Hence, from considerations of such a nature, it is demonstrated that neither the gods (of the planets) in the sky themselves, nor their gifts, bring evil.

THE GODS HAVE ONE COMMON ESSENCE

Come, then, let us dispose of that question also: "What is the bond of union that connects the divinities in the sky, that have bodies, with the gods that are unbodyed?"

This also is clear from what has been said already. For though as being incorporeal, intelligent and united, they ride upon the celestial spheres, they have their origins in the realm of mind, [33] and comprehending their essential being as divine, they govern the whole sky by one infinite energy, and although present in the sky as existing separately, they conduct the perpetual revolutions by their solitary wills, and are themselves unmingled with sensation and coexist with the god of the realm of Mind.

It is proper, nevertheless, to examine the present question thoroughly. I state the proposition accordingly, that the images of the gods which are visible (in the sky) are from the divine models in the realm of Mind, and are engendered around them; [34] and having come into existence they are established in these absolutely, [35] and being extended to them, they have the likeness which has been produced from them. They are likewise wrought into another arrangement after a different manner. They are held here in connection with those models in one stable union, and the divine spiritual forms, which are present with the visible bodies of the gods, exist separately before them, but their noetic models unmingled and super-celestial remain permanently by themselves, all as one in their everlasting exaltation.

There is, therefore, the common indissoluble bond with reference to spiritual energies, but there is one also in the common participations of forms, since nothing separates these, and there is nothing intervening between them. Besides, the non-material and incorporeal essence, being neither parted by spaces nor by subject-bodies, nor marked off by delineations into separate parts, comes together at once, and coalesces into an absolute identity. The issuing forth of all from the One, the returning again into the One, and the absolute rule of the One in everything effect the communion of the gods themselves in the Cosmic world, with those that pre-exist in the realm of Mind.

Moreover, the conversion of the secondary to the superior spiritual beings and the bestowing of the same essence and power from the primary to the secondary gods, holds their association indissoluble in one. In regard to things of another quality, as for example, soul and body, and those of unlike kinds, such as material forms, and also of substances which are in some other way separated from each other, the natural union, which exists between them both, originates from the Powers above and is cast off in consequence of the limited periods of time. However far we may ascend in regard to the height and the unchangeable sameness of the divinities, who are first as to form and essence, and raise ourselves from imperfect beings to perfect, by this much the more do we find the union which is sempiternal, and likewise behold the self which is principle and dominant, [36] possessing diversity and multitude around itself and in itself.

Inasmuch as the gods are all arranged as absolutely one, the primary and secondary races, even the many that are self-existent with them, preside together over the universe as one, everything in them is one, and the first, the intermediate and lowest races coexist as the One itself. Hence, in respect to these, it is of no use to enquire whence the One is brought into reciprocal relations with them all, for the self-same essence that is indeed in them is the one of their own substance. [37] The secondary races not only remain together in the unity of the primary divinities, but the primary gods bestow upon the secondary races the oneness from themselves, and they all maintain the common bond of an indissoluble relationship to one another.

From the same cause, moreover, the gods that are entirely incorporeal are united with the gods (in the sky) that have bodies and are perceptible to the senses. For the gods that are visible are really outside of bodies, and therefore are in the world of Mind; and those of the world of Mind, through their unconditioned unity, encompass the visible divinities within their own substance, and both are established by a common union and a single energy. In like manner, also, this is characteristic of the cause and arrangement of the gods, and for this reason this very oneness of them all extends from above to the very last in the order of divine beings. Suppose, however, that this seems to be a statement to be doubted, the contrary supposition, that there is nothing of the kind, would be matter of wonderment.

So much may be declared in regard to the bond which unites the gods, that are established in a manner perceptible to the senses, with the gods of the world of Mind.

OTHER MODES OF DISTINGUISHING

[1.20. Cp. Luck 219-20.]

After this, however, thou takest up again the very questions in regard to which the things which have been stated already will suffice amply for a solution. Since, however, as the saying is, it is necessary to tell and examine often the things which are beautiful, we will not pass these matters by as having received sufficient answer, but by pounding away repeatedly with arguments we may perhaps get out of them all some complete and important benefit in true knowledge. For thou art still in doubt, as the question shows: "The gods that are visible (in the sky) being included in the same category with the invisible, what distinguishes the dæmons from the visible, and likewise the invisible gods?"

Beginning at this starting point, I will set forth the difference. It is because the gods in the sky are united with the gods in the world of Mind, and have the same idea or principle of existence with them; but the dæmons are far distant from them in essence, and scarcely compare with them in ally resemblance. On this account they are distinct from the visible divinities, while they differ from the invisible gods in regard to the difference of their peculiar invisibility. For the dæmons are indeed imperceptible to sight, and in no way to be apprehended by a sense; but the gods are beyond the scope of the knowledge and perception incident to the realm of matter. Because they are in these respects unknowable and invisible, they are so named, or it may be in a sense very different in respect to the dæmons that they are described as invisible. What, then, do the invisible gods have, so far as they are invisible, which is superior to the gods that are seen in the sky? Nothing at all. For the divine quality, whatever it may be, and whatever allotment it may have, possesses the same power and dominion over all subordinate things. Even if they were visible they would not be subordinate to the invisible daemons, and though they were to belong to the Earth, they would reign over the dæmons of the air. For neither the place nor the part of the world that may receive it, makes any change in the Supreme authority of the gods; but the entire essence of the gods, indivisible and unchangeable, which all the inferior races in the order of nature revere in like manner, remains everywhere the same.

Setting out from the same point of beginning, we also find another difference between them. For the visible and invisible gods concentrate in themselves the whole government of existing affairs, both in regard to the sky and world, and in relation to the entire invisible forces of the universe. But those that are allotted to authority among the dæmons, extending it over certain prescribed regions of the world, govern these, and themselves likewise have an incomplete form of essence and power. They are even in some manner akin and inseparable from those that are governed by them.

The gods, however, even those that go upon bodies as their vehicles, are separated and diverse from these in all respects. Hence the supervising of the bodies brings no specific lessening of rank to those to whom the body is subject; it is encompassed by the superior essence, and is turned back to it, and is no obstacle to it. But on the other hand, the close affiliation to the generative nature and the imperfection ensuing by it, give the dæmons necessarily an inferior destiny. In short, the divine race is predominant and takes precedence in the general arrangement among existing things; but the dæmonian order is ministrant, receiving whatever directions the gods may give, and responding promptly by own effort, in regard to whatever the gods contemplate, will and command.

Hence the gods are freed from the forces which incline downward to the realm of generated existence, but the dæmons are not wholly purified from these.

So much, therefore, we have subjoined in regard to this solution of the problem, and we think that from the former and the present arguments the matter will become better known.

CLASSIFICATION REJECTED

For the reasons which we have before stated, the classification of passive and impassive which thou makest, should be rejected as not being suitable for any of the superior races, on account of the causes which we formerly mentioned. Indeed it deserves to be overturned, because it argues from the Sacred Dramas that "they are impression able." What Holy Rite, and what act of worship performed according to the Sacerdotal Regulations, is accomplished through a passive condition, or effects any satisfying of passive conditions? Was it not ordained from the beginning, according to the ordinances [38] of the gods and likewise intelligently? The Rite both copies the order of the gods, both that of the gods of the world of Mind and that of the gods in the sky, and contains the eternal metres of things that are, and wonderful spectacles which were sent down from the Creator (Demiurgus) and Father of All, by which also the things of Silence are represented by arcane symbols, the things without form are held firmly in forms, the things which are superior to any likeness are represented unshapen, and everything is accomplished by a sole Divine Cause, which is so far remote from passive conditions that no reasoning faculty can reach to it.

This fact, therefore, I suppose, becomes the cause why many turn away to the multitude of projects. For men who are unable to acquire the deeper knowledge of the reasonings themselves, yet who imagine themselves able, are entirely carried away by their own peculiar human emotions, and form their judgment of matters relating to the gods from things incident to themselves. Hence they err in two ways: because they fail of the true concept of divine things; and because when they miss these, they drag their notions of these down to the level of human emotions themselves. [39] Nevertheless, it ought not to be supposed that the things which are performed alike to gods and human beings, -- such as acts of homage, salutations, offerings, first-fruits, are to be regarded as after the same plan of action in both cases; but that each is established apart from the other with regard to the distinction of being more honorable -- the one venerated as being for the gods and the other held in low esteem as relating to human concerns. Thus is given a completeness to passive conditions, both of those doing homage and those to whom it is rendered, for they are human and of a corporeal nature; but honor is to be bestowed unstintingly upon the operation of the others, as being performed through unchanging admiration and a reverent condition of mind, because they are rendered to the gods.

Notes:

1.

Symbols constituted a prominent feature in the ancient religious worship. They were undoubtedly to a large extent fetishes, there being a measure of the essence and operation of the deity supposed to exist in them. The Egyptian, and indeed the whole Oriental worship consisted of them, and even at the present time, there is no ritual that is without them. But then, human language is made up of symbols and representative sounds.

2.

This is distinctly denied in Part V, Chapter VI.

3.

See Part V, Chapters II and IV.

4.

The custom here described was universal in ancient times, and it is still found in parts of India. Its remains also exist in architecture and ornamentation. In the worship of the Ashera and Venus of Eryx, and of the Great Mother in Syria and Western Asia, the observances were carried to greater extremes. King Asa of Judea is said to have deposed his mother, Maacha, from royal dignity for her participation -- "because she made a phallos to an Ashera," I Kings XV: XIII. It has been generally believed that the Festivals and Initiatory, or Perfective Rites, of the different countries, included the same feature, as indeed, is here admitted. It should be borne in mind, however, before any hasty judgment, that the different faiths had their two sides, like the right or the left, and that worshippers regarded them and took part in them according to their inherent disposition. Thus, in India, there are the Asceticsiva-worshippers, and the Saktas, to this day. In this way the Mysteries presented themes for the highest veneration, as well as phases that are esteemed as gross and lascivious. Every curious person, therefore, sees in them what he has eyes to see, and is often blind to the rest.

5.

Greek, καλὸν from καλόν, good, beauty, moral virtue, excellence. Mr. M. W. Hazeltine, in the New York Sun, remarks upon this apparent confounding of moral with physical beauty, which this word exhibits, that "the ancients had not that conception which forms the basis and aim of Æsthetics in our time. To a Greek, if a thing was beautiful it was good, and if it was good it was beautiful; that, at least, was the prevailing attitude of the Hellenic mind."

6.

These opinions were anciently entertained, the universe itself being regarded not as a fabric but as a birth, a creation or genesis, and evolution. But the philosophers generally disapproved of the doleful rites and immodest speech. Plutarch enumerates the various practices, such as the eating of raw flesh, the days of fasting and mourning for the slain divinity, (Matthew XI, 16; Amos VIII, 10) and the uttering of filthy and unseemly language. He explains that they were "not in honor of the gods, but rather to avert, mollify and appease the wrath of evil dæmons." The Emperor Julian, however, forbade the using of words that should not be spoken or heard.

7.

"This doctrine is so rational," says Mr. Thomas Taylor, "that it can never be objected to by any but quacks in philosophy and religion. For as he is nothing more than a quack in medicine who endeavors to remove a latent bodily disease before he has called it forth externally, and by this means diminished its fury, so he is nothing more than a pretender in philosophy, who attempts to remove the passions by violent repression, instead of moderate compliance and gentle persuasion."

8.

By the genesis or generation, Plutarch explains Plato to mean "only that substance or underlying principle which is subject to change and motion, placed between the forming cause and the thing formed, transmitting hither those shapes and figures which have been contrived and modelled" in the eternal world. Hence it means more than mere procreating, it is no less than transition from eternity where the soul is native, into the region of time and space, where it is only a sojourner.

9.

The Library of Alexandria bore the inscription of "Remedies for the Soul." A similar term is said to have been placed over the collection of Papyri in the "House of Seti" at Thebes, in Egypt.

10.

Plato describes this chorus in the Phaidros. "Divine beauty was then splendid to the view," says he, "when we, in company with Zeus, and others with other gods, beheld together with the Blessed Chorus, the divine Spectacle and were initiated into the Perfective Rites, which are rightly called most happy. Being ourselves entire and unaffected by the evils which await us in the Aftertime, we took part in the Orgiac Drama, and having become both Mystics and Beholders (mystæ and epoptæ) we beheld in the pure light, apparitions that were complete, unique, calm, and felicitous -- being ourselves pure from earthly contamination and not encompassed in this investiture which we now call 'Body' and by which we are carried about, fastened like an oyster to his shell."

11.

Socrates in his last discourse remarks that "While we live we shall approach nearest to the superior knowledge if we hold no partnership with the body, except what absolute necessity requires, and do not permit ourselves to be tainted by its nature, but keep ourselves uncontaminated by it till God himself shall release us." This is what a later poet has portrayed as living above while in the world.

The dramas or performances of the Mystic or Theurgic Rites and their ulterior significance are here denoted -- the experiences of the Soul and its return to the Eternal World, as it enters into the conditions of worldly existence. The Egyptian "Book of the Dead" treats of the same matters.

13.

The histrionic scenes and ceremonies which were exhibited to the Beholders of the Rites.

14.

The Chaldaean Oracles reiterate this sentiment.

"The soul of articulate-speaking men will in some way bring God into itself.

"holding fellowship with nothing mortal, it is all intoxicated with God."

15.

This is explained by the hierophant in Moore's romance, The Epicurean. The aim of the initiation and "blessed spectacle" is thus set forth; "to retrieve the ruin of the blessed soul, to clear away from around her the clouds of earth, and, restoring her lost wings, facilitate her return to Heaven -- such is the great task of our religion, and such the triumph of those Divine Mysteries, in whose inmost depths the life and essence of our holy religion is treasured."

16.

The names of the gods in the ancient Skythic and Euphratean languages were believed to possess some inherent virtue as well as charm. Hence the Oracle gives the injunction:

"Never change the barbarous names;

For among them are terms God-given,

That have ineffable virtue in Sacred Rites."

17.

Epistle of Peter II, 1, 4, "That by these ye might be partakers or communicants of the divine nature."

18.

Plato: Theaetetus. "It is necessary that there should be always something opposed to God; and it cannot be seated among the gods, but of necessity hovers around this mortal nature and this region of earth."

19.

It was held that the vital emanation from the blood of the sacrificed animals was invigorating to spiritual beings (Odyssey, Book XI). But Plutarch is severe about it. He affirms that the murderous and lascivious customs at the festivals only served "to avert and appease the malice of certain evil spirits, or to satisfy the violent and raging lusts of some that either could not, or would not, enjoy with their bodies or by their bodies." Such, he declared, bring plagues and famine into towns, raise wars and dissensions, till such time as they obtain and enjoy that which they love.

20.

Proclus affirms that the Divine Necessity was always coincident with the Divine Will and Purpose. Plato explains it as a habitude of the Efficient Cause or Author of Existence and Matter. Thus, also, there is a necessity in the thoughts and actions of human beings, yet the soul is self-moving, and so is its own "Cause."

21.

Thales, Pythagoras, Plato, and the Stoics generally held that the dæmons were beings of a psychic, rather than of an actual divine nature. Plutarch ascribed to them only a limited term of existence.

22.

It may be observed in this treatise that the divine personalities are very commonly indicated by terms in the neuter gender. The same is true in other instances. Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson was once in conversation with the Rev. Cyrus Bartol, the Transcendentalist clergyman of Boston. The latter mentioned the Supreme Being, using the masculine pronoun. "Why not say 'It,' " Mr. Emerson asked?

23.

Whatever we keep most closely in thought, whether with favor or aversion, we gradually become like in character. Paul wrote like a philosopher to the Corinthian disciples. After referring to Moses with a vail, he adds "We all with face unveiled, looking on the glory of the Lord as in a mirror, are transformed from glory to glory into the same image from his spirit."

24.

In the Theurgic discipline of neophytes, there were several stages to be surmounted before arriving at the degree denominated "Perfection" or purity. We may trace them in the chapter, as follows: 1. The coming to the divinity who is supplicated. 2. The assimilation into the likeness of the divinity, and 3. Perfection. In the first of these degrees the candidate was styled Most Excellent; in the second, Divine; and in the third, Theopator; as now being fully identified with Deity itself.

25.

Origen affirmed that the angels have bodies, and that God alone is a spiritual essence, without body. Hence the clause in the Confession, "without body, parts, or passions."

26.

Plato has explained this very similarity in the Timeus. "When each of the stars necessary for the constitution of Time had obtained a motion adapted to its condition, and their bodies bound or encompassed by living chains, had become beings possessing life, and had learned their prescribed duty, they pursued their course."

27.

That the Supreme Being is One and Absolute is the leading principle of every ancient faith, however bizarre and polytheistic it may be esteemed. Amon, the tutelar god of Thebes in Egypt who may have been in the mind of Abammon when writing was denominated: "The One, the Maker of all that have being." The Mysteries of Ser-Apis (Serapis) were favored by Iamblichus, and the Rites of Mithras by Porphyry.

28.

Plato makes use of an expression signifying "not subject to decay or disease;" Aristotle, "not being increased or changed."

29.

These are the astral globes which these divinities, being themselves in reality spiritual essences, were supposed to encompass and permeate.

30.

In this sentence the feminine and masculine relation, as typifying the procedure of the divine operation, is very distinctly set forth. The phusis and genesis actually signify as much. In this treatise, as in other philosophic works, genesis signifies the descending of the creative energy from the sempersistent world into the sphere and condition of created existence, and phusis, or nature, is the female or productive agency, by which the transition is accomplished. The sentence admits accordingly to be also rendered as follows: "Others go forth from them into the womb of the world (Kosmos), even the world itself, and likewise descend in due order through the whole generative process, continuing, without hindrance, as far as the incomplete races."

31.

Abammon follows the Egyptian category and adopts the Grecian names for divinities supposed to be nearest in character and quality. In this description, Kronos or Saturn represents the centripetal and Aries or Mars the centrifugal force.

32.

It would be easy to imagine this as happening in the case of the hundred and more asteroids, that exist in the space between the orbits of the planets Mars and Jupiter, or of the comets that so often come rushing through space.

33.

See Chapter VIII.

34.

Damaskios remarks that "the Divine Intelligence which encompasses all things after the manner of models, brings them forth from itself as likenesses."

35.

That is, all are brought back to their source and rooted in their cause.

36.

In other words, this atman, or self, is at once all-receptive and all-procreative, as having the joint powers of procreation and production.

37.

We are thus brought to the central principle of the ancient philosophy and worship; that the many divinities are in essence the One Sole Deity, and comprised in the Paternal Cause of the Universe. The Orphic Carmen in the same way inculcated that all the gods and both the sexes are included in the same Zeus. They are attributes, or qualities, of the One, personalities rather than individuals.

38.

The older laws of the Athenians were called thesmá as being ordained by the gods, or rather the priests. The laws of Drako were thesmoi, those of Solon nomoi or regulations.

39.

Damaskios remarks, that "we discourse after the manner of men respecting principles that are extolled as divine."

Part II

Chapter 5. The Superior Races and their Manifestations

DÆMONS AND HALF-GODS DIVERSE IN ESSENCE

[2.1. Cp. Luck 220-21.]

This it now becomes necessary to describe to thee: "in what a dæmon differs from a hero or half-god and a soul, whether in essence, in power, or in energy."

I say accordingly, that dæmons are produced by the generative and creative powers of the gods, in the furthest extreme of emanation and the last divisions: but that the heroes or half-gods have their origin by the forces of life in the gods; and that the superior and highest in rank of the souls are brought to completeness and distinguished from these forces.

The nature of the dæmons and half-gods being thus derived from different sources, their essence is of necessity different. Thus that of the dæmons is effective of purposes, bringing to maturity the natures about the world, and exercising guardianship individually over those coming into existence. [1] That of the heroes is life-sustaining, promotive of the reasoning faculty, and directive of souls.

The powers likewise may be defined accordingly. Those of the dæmons pertain to coming into existence and also to the oversight of the souls and of the connection of the souls with the bodies. It is also proper to assign to the heroes powers life-imparting, directive of human beings, and setting free from the nativity.

THE ENERGIES

It follows now that their energies should be explained. Those of the dæmons may be described as being employed around the world and as extending generally among the things accomplished by themselves; but those of the heroes not only as not extending so far, but as being engaged with the distribution of the souls. So, therefore these being explained, the Soul is next, and ranks as the end of the series of divine beings. Having received from these two races a specific allotment of powers, it both augments the apportionment by other more abundant additions from itself, and likewise projects from itself at one time various forms and principles of life which are entirely different, and at another time still others. Thus making use of different lives and ideals according to each region of the world, it is united with those that it likes, and draws away from those from which it may wish to be separate, becoming assimilated to all, and separated from them by otherness. In this way, choosing principles akin both to the things that are sempersistent and to those that come into existence in time, it allies itself to the gods by harmonies of essence and power other than those by which the dæmons and half-gods are likewise entwined with them. Though possessing in a less degree than they the everlasting condition of similar life and energy, nevertheless, through the good will of the gods and the luminance imparted by their light, it often goes higher and is exalted to a higher rank, even to that of angels. It, then, remains no longer in the limitations of the psychal condition, but is developed completely through its whole substance into an angelic soul and an uncontaminate life. Hence, manifestly, the Soul seems to contain in itself manifold essences, different rational qualities, and all manner of idealities. If, however, we must speak the honest truth, the contingency exists, that it is always limited in reference to one particular thing; yet being in communication with the Causes it is at different times allied to different ones.

So great, therefore, being the differences among them in all these respects, it is no longer worth while to dispute in regard to the particular thing which is the cause of difference among them. Whatsoever nature they every one have, by that they are to be distinguished from the others. So far also, as they form one common society, to such an extent their common quality may be contemplated; for in this way it will be possible to comprehend without mistake, and to define distinctly the view to be entertained of the whole subject.

EPIPHANIES OR "APPARITIONS"

Let us now proceed to the Epiphanies or apparitions (which are seen at the Initiations). What is the difference in them? For thou putttest the question: "What is the token (at the Sacred Rites) of the presence of a god, an angel or an archangel, or a dæmon, or of some archon, or a soul?" [2]

I will, therefore, in a single statement lay down the proposition that the apparitions are in accord with their essences, powers and energies. For such as they are as such do they manifest themselves to those who are making the invocations; and they not only exhibit energies and forms which are characteristic of themselves, but they likewise display their own particular tokens. In order, however, to draw the distinctions minutely, this is the explanation: The spectral forms of the gods are uniform; those of the dæmons are diversified; those of the angels are more simple in appearance than those belonging to the dæmons, but inferior to those of the gods; those of the archangels approach nearer to the divine Causes; those of the archons -- if those that have charge of the sublunary elements seem to thee to be the lords of the world [3] -- will be diversified but arranged in proper order; but if they are princes of the region of Matter, they will not only be more diversified but much more imperfect than the others; and those of the souls will appear in every kind of style.

In the (Eoptic) Vision the figures of the gods shine brilliantly; [4] those of the archangels are awe-inspiring and yet gentle; those of the angels are milder; those of the dæmons are alarming. Those of the half-gods, although these are left out in your question, yet there should be an answer for the sake of the truth because they are more gentle than those of the dæmons. Those of the archons are terrifying to the Beholders, [5] if they are the archons of the universe; and hurtful and distressing, if they are of the realm of Matter. The figures of the souls are similar to those of the half-gods except that they are inferior to them.

Moreover, the figures of the gods in regard to size, aspect, external appearance and everything around them, are absolutely unchangeable. Those of the archangels are very near to those of the gods in these respects, but come short of being actually the same. Those of the angels are inferior to these, but are unchangeable. Those of the dæmons are seen in different shapes and appear great and small at different times; but the manifestations are the same. Those of the archons who are rulers are unchangeable, but the apparitions of those that belong to the realm of Matter are apt to change into innumerable forms. Those of the half-gods are like those of the dæmons, and those of the souls conform in no small degree to changeableness, peculiar to the dæmons.

Further still, to the gods there pertain order and tranquillity; and with the figures of the archangels there exists a dramatic representation of order and quietude. With the angels there is present the disposition for order and peacefulness, but they are not free from motion. The figures of the dæmons are accompanied by tumult and disorder. With those of the archons there are objects to be seen analogous to each class which we have already mentioned: those of the realm of Matter being borne along tumultuously. Those of the half-gods are constantly in motion and are never exempt from change, and those of the Souls resemble the figures of half-gods, but at the same time are inferior to them.

With these peculiarities there flashes out from the gods Beauty which seems inconceivable, holding the Beholders fixed with wonder, imparting to them an unutterable gladness, displaying itself to view with ineffable symmetry, and carrying off the palm from other forms of comeliness. The glorious views of the archangels have themselves very great beauty, but it is by no means ineffable and admirable as that of the gods. Those of the angels partake in a degree of the beauty which they receive from the archangels.

The spirits at the Autopsia, the dæmons and half-gods, [6] both of them possess beauty in defined forms; but that of the dæmons is set forth in ways that make their essence distinct, and that of the half-gods displays a manlike character. The figures of the archons are classified by the twofold distinction. For those of the one class display a beauty predominant and self-originated; and those of the other class exhibit an ingenious mock-representation of a beautiful shape. The figures of the souls are themselves arranged in definite forms, but these are more diverse than is the case with the half-gods, being more particularly circumscribed and controlled by a single ideal.

If, however, it is necessary in regard to them all that they shall be defined by a common rule, I say that as every one of them all is constituted, and as it has its own peculiar nature, even so do they all participate of the Absolute Beauty according to the existing allotment.

MANIFESTATIONS AT THE RITES

Proceeding therefore to other peculiarities of the superior races, we will remark that in the Sacred Performances there is with the gods an incredible celerity, and although they themselves are immutable and steadfast, they shine out swifter than mind itself. But with the archangels the swift movements are commingled in some way with the dramatic performances. Those of the angels, however, are connected with a certain moving impulse and take part no further in a similar manner in the Perfective Rite [7] by way of speaking.

With the dæmons there is a show of rapidness in the Performances which is more than genuine. But with the figures of the half-gods, there appears a certain grandness in the motions; nevertheless it is not possible to effect these things, which they desire at the Perfective Rite as quickly as it is for the dæmons. In the case of those of the archons, those of the former class possessing authority, exhibit performances that appear highly creditable; and those of the second class have more display, but fall short in regard to results at the end. The figures of the souls are seen to be incessantly in motion, but feebler than in the case of those of the half-gods.

In addition to these points, the magnitude of the apparitions may be considered. In the case of the gods it is displayed to such a degree as sometimes to hide from view the entire sky, the sun and the moon, and likewise to make it no longer possible for the earth to stand firm while they are making their descent. [8]

When archangels appear, there are certain regions of the world set in motion, and a divided luminance goes in advance before them. But they themselves according to the magnitude of their dominion display also light in correspondence with its dimension. The angelic luminosity is very much less, and is likewise greatly divided. In the case of the dæmons themselves, it is still more diffused than with the angels, and their magnitude is observed to be not always equal. The manifestation of the half-gods is less than this, but it exhibits more of pride of condition. The figures of the archons that are rulers of pericomic forms appear large and indeed of huge dimensions, but those that are distributed over the realm of Matter employ more ostentation and false pretending. Those of the souls do not all seem equal, and they appear smaller than the figures of the half-gods. In short, it is according to the magnitude of the powers in each of the Superior races, according to the vastness of the dominion through which they are extended and in which they exercise authority, and according to the due proportion itself, that the magnitude of the manifestations is graciously exhibited in every one of them.

After these explanations let us define the characteristics of these images thus individually manifest. In the autoptic visions of the gods, the most brilliant spectacles of reality itself are to be beheld. They not only shine steadily but they are plainly visible as if in organic shapes. The images of the archangels present themselves to view genuine and perfect. Those of the angels preserve the form itself, but they come short in the completeness of distinctive tokens. Those of the dæmons are scarcely perceptible, and those of the half-gods are still inferior. Those of the cosmic archons are clear, and those of the archons of the realm of Matter are indistinct, but both classes seem to be exercising authority. Those of the souls appear like mere shadows.

In like manner, let us explain also, in regard to the luminosity. The images of the gods glow with abundance of light, and those of the archangels are surpassingly luminous. [9] Those of the angels are resplendent with light, but the dæmons present the appearance of smouldering fire, and the half-gods a commingling from many sources. The cosmic archons are relatively more pure from such admixture, but those of the realm of Matter exhibit a mingling of dissimilar and incongruous elements. The Souls are more distinctly visible from many admixtures in the sphere of generated existence, the light being supplied only by partial gleams.

In the same manner we will speak further of the things which have been discussed. The Fire of the gods shines brilliantly an undivided flame without sound, and it fills all the depths of the world like a conflagration, but not after the manner of a worldly occurrence. [10] The fire of the archangel is unbroken, but there is to be seen around it a great mass going before it or following after it. The fire of the angels is disjoined, yet it appears in very perfect forms. That of the dæmons is not only circumscribed into still briefer dimensions, and may be explained in a word, but it is not worthy to be noticed by those who are contemplating spectacle of the superior beings. That of the half-gods contain after a manner the same peculiarities, but at the same time it falls short of an exact similarity to that of the dæmons. That of the archons of the higher class is observed to be more glowing; but in the case of those belonging to the realm of Matter, it is darker. That of the Souls themselves exhibits many divisions and various forms mingled together from many of the natures around the world.

To repeat: The fire of the gods is always stable to the view. That of the archangels is mild; that of the angels is in constant motion; that of the dæmons is unstable; that of the heroes is for the most part in swift motion; that of the archons of the first class is mild, but that of those of the lower order is full of fluctuation. That of the souls changes with innumerable motions.

THE SUPERIOR RACES AND MATTER

Nevertheless, that which operates to purify the souls (from impurity incident in the realm of generated existence) is complete in the gods, but is simply of an exalting character in the archangels. The angels only loosen the bonds which fasten them to the sphere of matter. Dæmons draw them into the realm of nature, [11] and the half-gods bring them down into the province of the operations of the senses. The archons either entrust them with the charge of things pertaining to the cosmic world, or with the dominion of those belonging to the realm of matter, as the case may be. Souls, when they appear to the Beholders, attract in some manner downward to the sphere of generated existence.

And, further, this fact is to be kept in view: that everything of the visible likeness that is pure and stable thou shouldst attribute to the Superior Races. Whatever of them is very brilliant and firmly fixed in itself, ascribe to the gods. Whatever is luminous and nevertheless exists as by something else than itself, impute to the archangels; and whatever remains in a different form assign to the angels. Whatever is borne along as by a breeze and is not stably fixed, but is permeated by alien natures, all which is conformable to the inferior orders, is to be credited to some foreign source.

This classification, however, may also be made according to the difference of the commingling. For with the dæmons emanations from the planetary worlds are mingled and are borne along unsteadily by the motion of the astral world. With the half-gods, groups of spirits belonging to the department of generated life are again mixed up around which they are also themselves constantly in motion. The cosmic archons likewise remain exhibiting the cosmic character which they possess; but those archons that belong to the realm of matter are filled with exhalations of the material region. Souls are infected with extraordinary defilements and alien spirits. With these accompaniments each of these races exhibits itself at the epiphanies.

To thee it will be no unimportant evidence that on these occasions there is in the case of the gods a consuming of matter all at once as by lightning. With the archangels it is destroyed in a short time. In the case of the angels there is a loosening and leading away from it. With the dæmons there is an arranging of it in an orderly manner. With the half-gods it is to be observed that they become adapted to it in due measures and give careful attention to it ingeniously. The archons that rule the planetary worlds are placed with it as though they were superior, and so shine forth as from themselves; but those of the realm of matter exhibit themselves as entirely filled up from matter. As for the souls, those also, that are pure manifest themselves outside of matter, but those of the opposite character are encompassed by it.

BENEFITS DERIVED FROM INITIATION

Moreover, the benefits acquired from the manifestations, are neither all alike, nor do they have the same fruits. [12] The advent of the god imparts to us health of body, virtue of soul, purity of mind, and indeed, to speak to the point, the leading of everything in us upward to its own first principles. It not only takes away the cold and destructive quality in us, but it augments the vital warmth and makes it more potent and predominant. It likewise brings everything into accord with the soul and mind. The light not only shines in the mental constitution, but it also exhibits that which is not body as body; to the eyes of the soul through those of the body.

The coming of the archangels likewise brings the same benefits, but it does not give them at all times, nor to all persons, nor such as are sufficient, or complete, or that may not be taken away; nor does the light shine in a manner equal to what is beheld at the manifestations of the gods. The presence of the angels dispenses benefits as if making a distribution of them, and the energy through which it is manifested comes far short of including in itself a perfect light. That of the dæmons weighs down the body and chastens it with diseases, drags down the Soul into the realm of nature, and also fails to remove from bodies the sensibility born with bodies, detains in this region those who were hastening toward the fire, and does not set free from the bonds of Fate. The appearing of the half-gods is similar in various respects to that of the dæmons, but it differs in this respect, that it arouses the individual to noble and important deeds. The display of the cosmic archons at the autopsia imparts advantages of a general character and everything pertaining to the business of life; and that of the archons of the realm of matter extends benefits incident to the sphere of matter, and such works as pertain to the earth. Still further, moreover, the Vision of the Souls that are uncontaminate and established in the order of angels is elevating in its influence and salutary to the soul. It likewise imparts a sacred hope and bestows those benefits to which a sacred hope aspires. But the Vision of Souls of a different quality produces a tendency downward into the sphere of generated existence, corrupts the fruits of hope, and fills the Beholders with Perturbations that nail them fast to corporeal conditions.

Notes:

1.

Plato, Republic, X, Ch. 15. "This is the beginning of another period for men of mortal race. The dæmon will not receive you as having been allotted to him, but you will choose the dæmon; the cause is in him who makes the choice."

2.

Scutellius enumerates nine classes of spiritual beings, namely: 1. Invisible Gods; 2. Visible Gods of the Sky; 3. Archangels; 4. Angels; 5. Dæmons; 6. Leaders; 7. Princes; 8. Heroes or Demi-gods; 9. Souls. Paul in his epistle to the Ephesians enumerates the following: 1. Princes; 2. Authorities; 3. Kosmokrators or princes of the Cosmos; 4. Spiritual essences in the super-celestial spheres. Damaskios enumerates six orders in the Chaldaean Categories as follows: 1. God that are purely mind; 2. The Gods subsisting before all subordinate dominion; 3. Rulers; 4. Archangels; 5. Divinities that are confined to no specific place or service; 6. Divinities or geniuses with specific duties.

3.

These, the Kosmokrators, are supposed by Thomas Taylor to be the rulers of the planets. The Assyrians and Chaldaeans enumerated nine distinct orders -- three Triads of three classes each. The Archangels correspond to the seven Amshaspands of the Zoroastrian category; and the archons of the sphere of Matter appear to have been often regarded as evil potencies. The ancients, however, did not always distinguish good and evil quite as the moderns with their ethical standards.

Proclus following Iamblichus gives this description: "In all the Perfective Rites and Mysteries, the gods project many shapes of themselves, and display many changing figures; there will be a formless luminance radiating from them; then again it will be represented in a human form, and again it will go into some different shape." Some of the figures were empousæ and not gods, and excited alarm; others were attractive, and others encouraged.

5.

The "Beholders," epopæ or seers, were the individuals engaged in being initiated, or "perfected." We have preserved this term uniformly to avoid confusing readers.

6.

The Greek term "autoptic spirits," meaning those which appear at the "Autopsia," or Perfective Rite. Mr. Robert Brown, Jr., ably describes it. The candidates, or Beholders, having passed the preliminary discipline as Mystæ, are ushered into the Sekos, or chamber of Initiation. "Here, deeply excited and agitated by all they have gone through, ready to believe anything and everything, in that state of abstinence, which is, or is supposed to be, most favorable to the reception of supernatural displays, with their minds more or less affected by drugs and their whole being permeated with the impression and expectation of a revelation of the more than mortal, they were allowed to see. This is the Autopsia, or Personal inspection, the Crown of Mysteries, the Etopteia, or Divine Beholding, which was used as a synonym to express the highest earthly happiness, and he who enjoyed it became an Epoptes, or Contemplator, beyond which this world could afford him nothing." - Great Dionysiak Myth, VI, ii, 3. Compare also Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, XII, 2-4.

7.

Greek, Tó apotelestikon, the perfective rite. The Romans termed the ceremonies "Initiations," as signifying the beginning of a new life, while the Greeks regarded it as denoting a completing of the Herculean labors of the Soul. The services were conducted after the form of a dramatic representation, and Clement styled them accordingly, "the Drama of the Mysteries." The ancient Theatre took its rise from these rites, as the Modern Theatre had its origin in the Mystery-Plays of the Monks in the Middle Ages. The Athenian Theatre was a Temple of Bacchus.

8.

The Chaldaean Oracles describe these scenic displays in very similar terms:
"If thou invoked me often, thou wouldst behold what thou desirest:
For then the concave vault of heaven does not appear,
The stars shine not, the moonlight wastes away,
The earth no more stands still;
All things are to be seen by the flashes of the lightnings."

9.

The Chaldaean Oracles disapprove of invoking those manifestations "Thou shalt not invoke the Autoptic Image of Being, for it is not proper for thee to see these things before the body is perfected, or initiated."

10.

The divine essence was anciently described in every religion as fire, and so the "eternal fire" was preserved in temples and on altars, as its symbol. Hence, the Chaldaean Oracle commands: "When thou shalt behold the Very Holy Fire without form, shining in flashes down into the depths of the world, then listen to the Voice of the Fire." Zoroaster at the Altar and Moses on Mount Sinai (Deuteronomy IV, 4) are described as hearing the Voice of the Supreme Being from such a source.

11.

Minutius Felix remarks that "the dæmons bear downward by heavy weight, and turn from God to material conditions." The Chaldaean Oracle also says: "When bewitching (magnetizing) souls they always draw them away from the Sacred Rites." Much that is considered spiritual, and even divine influence, is of this character.

12.

The Chaldaean Oracles have this declaration: "From those descending from the Empyrean regions the soul obtains the soul-nourishing flower."

Chapter 6. The Order Exhibited at the Rites

Besides, there takes place at the Autopsies an exhibition of the order which those that are beheld, carefully maintain, namely:

That of the gods, having gods or angels around them.

That of the archangels, having angels either that precede them, keep in line with them, or follow after; or else being accompanied by another company of angels acting as an escort.

That of the angels exhibiting the peculiar operations of the order to which they have attained.

That of the good dæmons presenting for contemplation their own works and the benefits which they bestow.

That of the avenging dæmons displaying the forms of vengeance.

That of other evil dæmons encompassed by hurtful, bloodsucking and fierce wild beasts. [\[1\]](#)

That of the archons (of the cosmos) exhibiting along with themselves certain regions of the universe.

That of the other class of archons attracting the disorder and discord of the realm of matter.

That of a soul that is entire and not held fast in a specific form; it is beheld around the whole cosmic region as a formless fire, indicative of the Soul of the World, entire, one, undivided and without form.

That of the purified soul; the glowing shape is seen, the fire pure and without mixture. Then are seen its innermost luminance, and the form pure and steady; and it follows after the upward leading guide rejoicing with hearty good will and itself by its operations showing its proper rank.

The soul, however, that bows, carries along with it the symbols of bonds and punishments, and is not only weighed down by groups of spirits belonging to the realm of matter, but it is also held fast by the anomalous disorders incident to that realm, and there are also seen dæmons of the generative order placing their authority directly before it.

In short all these races make their respective orders duly distinguishable, and they show at once the regions which have fallen to them, and the allotments in which they abide. Those that are of the air display aerial fire; the earthly ones a chthonian and darker light, and the celestials a more splendid luminance. All these races are distributed in these three regions (the earth, air, and superior heaven) in the threefold order of beginning, intermediary and last; those of the gods displaying the highest and purest causes pertaining to this threefold order; those of the angels being reckoned from the archangels; those of the dæmons being manifest as attendant upon these and those of the half-gods in like manner ministrant -- not indeed after the same services as the dæmons, but after other and different ways of their own. Those of the archons have the allotment which is set apart to them; to one class the superintendence of the cosmic world and to the other that of the realm of matter. Those of the souls are classed as the last of the superior races.

Hence they all indicate their places by themselves; the first classes having the first; the second class the second, and the third class the third, and the others are arranged as belonging to some of these.

OTHER PHENOMENA AT THE RITES

Meanwhile, the gods beam forth light to such a degree of thinness that the bodily eyes are not able to sustain it, but are affected in the same way that fishes are when they are drawn from a muddy and thick fluid into rare and transparent air. For the men, the Beholders of the Divine Fire not being able to breathe because of the thinness of the fire, become enfeebled as they come to the sight, and are excluded from natural respiration. Archangels also give forth a luminant atmosphere which is not endurable for breathing; yet they neither shine with the same pure light, nor are they as overpowering as the gods their superiors. The presence of the angels makes the temperature of the air endurable, so that it is possible for the theurgic priests to approach them. In the case of the dæmons there is nothing to affect the air, and in consequence the atmosphere around them does not become more tenuous; a luminosity does not precede them, in which their form might become visible from being taken and fixed by the air, and there occurs no radiation around them. In the case of the half-gods, certain parts of the earth are moved as by an earthquake, and noises echo around; but the air does not become at all thinner, or unsuitable for the theurgic priests, so as to render it impossible for them to endure it. In regard to the archons, whether those of the cosmic worlds or those that belong to the realm of matter, an assemblage of many luminous apparitions, hard to endure, surrounds them; but there occurs no attenuation of the air, such as is incident to the supramundane region, or to the Zodiacal signs on high. [2] But with the manifestations of the souls the air is evidently affiliated more closely, and being united to them receives in itself their limitations.

ACQUIREMENTS FROM THE SUPERIOR RACES

Accordingly, at the last stage, when the gods appear, the dispositions of soul of those who are invoking them, realize a thorough removing of passive conditions and the transcendent perfection, and not only the energy superior in every respect, but they also participate in divine love and a tranquillity of mind, almost beyond estimation. When the archangels are beheld, these dispositions acquire a pure constancy of condition, spiritual insight and stable power. At the coming of the angels into view, they receive an allotment of wisdom and truth, and likewise of pure excellence, sure knowledge and order in harmony with these bestowments. But when the dæmons are contemplated the tendencies take on eager desire incident to the sphere of generated nature, and likewise not only acquire zeal for the completing of the Performances according to allotment of such exercises. If there is a view of the half-gods, then they are not only borne away by other such impressions, but also share in many anxieties of a character relating to a communion of souls. But when the archons are brought within purview, then movements are set up in the soul, cosmic or such as pertain to the realm of matter, as the case may be. And with the visions of the souls, there are brought into activity the generative appetites and natural solicitude as regards the care of the bodies and such other matters as relate to these.

In connection with these things, the apparition of the gods imparts sincerity and power, and likewise success in undertakings, and also gifts the greatest benefits; and at the appearing of the others everything is bestowed abundantly as it may be consistent with the rank of the several orders. For example that of the archangels, gives the perception of what is true, not simply in regard to all things collectively but definitely in relation to specific matters, and this not at all times but occasionally -- not indefinitely to all or everywhere, but singly in a particular manner or to some special purposes. In short it does not confer power in like manner neither upon all, nor at all times, nor everywhere, but only sometimes and in some particular way. At the appearing of the angels, there are still narrower limitations than these in the circuit in the bestowing of benefits. The coming of the dæmons into view does not impart gifts good to the soul but either those of the body or which relate to the body. These they dispense wherever the order of the universe permits. According to the same conditions, the presence of the half-gods imparts benefits of the second and third order, aiming to acquire supervision of the entire polity of souls, but those of the earth and those of the cosmic realm. At the manifestation of the archons, the cosmic and the other class, the former confer blessings of a cosmic nature and those of this life; but those of the inferior rank bring out not a few advantages incident to the realm of matter, they exhibit to the Beholders things which contribute to the welfare of human life.

Thus we have set forth particularly the boons received from these superior races according to the respective order of every one, and have likewise made a complete answer to what thou hast asked in regard to matters of importance in relation to their appearings to view. So much, then, let us set forth respecting these subjects.

BOASTFUL SPEECH AND DECEPTIVE IMAGES

The matter, however, which thou hast brought to us for a decisive solution respecting these superior races, whether as thy own opinion or whether as what thou hast heard from others, is neither correct nor rightly expressed. Thou sayest: "It is a common thing for the gods and dæmons alike, and with all the Superior races, to speak boastfully, and to project an unreal image into view."

Such is not the fact as thou supposest. For a god, an angel, and a good dæmon (when they appear at the Rites) give instruction freely to human beings, in regard to their own essence, but never in addition, make use in their teachings, of any expression greater than their transcendent power or inherent good qualities. For truth is essentially coexistent with the gods as light is coexistent with the Sun. At the same time we affirm that a God is in no want of excellence or any virtue which can be added to him through words. Besides the angels and dæmons always receive truth beforehand from the gods; [3] hence they never say anything else than this. Being every one of them perfect in their essence, it is not possible to add anything more to it by praising.

When, therefore, does the untruthful act of "speaking boastfully" mentioned by thee, take place? When there occurs some errancy in the theurgic technique, and the images which ought to be at the Autopsia are not, but others of a different kind are encountered, then the inferior races assume the guise of the more venerable orders, and pretend to be the very ones which they are counterfeiting; [4] and in such cases they abandon themselves to boastful speeches and pretensions of power which they do not possess. For I think that if anything spurious grows out like an excrescence from the first beginning, there will a great mass of falsehood flow forth from the perversion. It is necessary, therefore, for the priests to learn this thoroughly from the entire arrangement among the apparitions, and being on their guard against this, they can detect and reject the misleading assumptions of these pretenders as not being spirits that are good and true.

It is not proper in the faithful judging of things to bring forward conspicuously the errors. In the case of other sciences or arts we do not pass judgment from the failures that may have occurred in them. Things, therefore, which through inexpertness in evocation are hardly ever performed quite successfully in ten thousand representations thou shouldst not characterize from the untoward incidents, but shouldst instead bring to notice something different in respect to them. For though the performances at the self-revealing display [5] are such failures as thou sayest, boastful and false, those of the true adepts around the Fire are both genuine and true. For as in regard to everything else, the ruling powers begin first by themselves and furnish to themselves that which they bestow to others -- as for example, in essence, in life, in action -- so also supplying the truth abundantly to all beings, they are true first of all in respect to themselves and at the very outset show their own essence to the Beholders. hence, likewise, they exhibit the Autoptic fire to the theurgic priests. For it is not the operation of heat to freeze, nor of light to make dark or to hide anything from view, nor in anything else the function of which is to accomplish a particular thing, is there the power to perform some contrary operation at the same time. But on the other hand those that are not of that nature and are contrary to them in essence are able to receive these contrary impulses, or are naturally disposed to fall into evil.

We say the same things now in regard to phantasms, or apparitions. [6] For if these are not themselves genuine, but others of the kind are so, that really exist, they certainly will not be among the self-revealing spirits, but are of the kind that display themselves ostentatiously as genuine. These participate in deception and falsehood after the manner of the forms that appear in mirrors; and they thus attract the understanding to no good purpose, in regard to matters which never will be true of the superior races but will be among fraudulent deceptions. For the counterfeit of that which really is, and that also which resembles it faintly, as well as that which has become a source of deception, are characteristic of the races that are genuine and distinct to the view. On the other hand the gods and those that come after the gods reveal true likenesses of themselves, but never project apparitions such as are formed in water or in mirrors. Why should they exhibit these phantasms? Would it be to bring evidence of their own essence and power?

On the contrary these things are not at all necessary. They become a source of error and deception to those who believe, and they draw away the Beholders from the genuine knowledge of the gods. What useful thing do they bestow on those who are contemplating these things in the epoptic vision? What profit can be derived from that which is false? Yet unless divinity has this nature will it project a phantasm from itself? How possibly can a race that is stable and firmly established in itself and that is the source of essence and that which is genuine, create in an alien seat, a deceptive counterfeit from itself? By no means, certainly, does a god either transform himself into phantasms or project them from himself into other things, but he causes to shine forth from himself true intuitions in the true moral nature of the souls. According to these facts, they also who accompany the gods are zealous in regard to the genuineness of the gods that appear at the Autopsias.

Next, however, thou affirmest that it is "a common thing for the gods and dæmons and other races to make likenesses and speak boastfully of themselves." Such a mode of speaking confounds all the races of superior beings with each other, and leaves no difference between one and another. For in this view of the matter all qualities will be common with them and nothing that is choice will be conceded to the exalted ones. It is more just, therefore, to ask by way of denial: "in what way, then, will the race of gods be superior to that of the dæmons?" But the fact is, that these races have no common plane: it is not imaginable, and it is not proper to argue from the last and lowest races and from the false steps among the last races, in regard to the first orders and the genuine impressions seen of them. Any one thus thinking in regard to these matters will come close to what is right, and will become acceptable to the gods.

BECOMING AT ONE WITH DEITY

[2.11. Cp. Luck 127.]

Thou also affirmest that "ignorance and delusion in respect to the gods is irreligiousness and impiety," and submittest the true doctrine in relation to these things. In all this there is no conflict of sentiment, but it is confessed by all alike. For who will not agree that the superior knowledge which is possessed of real being is most closely affiliated to the gods, but that the condition of not knowing falls infinitely far away from the divine causes of true ideals, sinking down to non-being? As, however, there has not enough been said upon this matter, I will add what is wanting; and because thy statement is made in a philosophic and logical manner rather than according to the working technique of the priests, I think it necessary to say something of a more theurgic character in regard to these matters.

Be it so that "not-knowing and delusion are discord and impiety." It does not follow on this account that the offerings and invocations which are made particularly to the gods, and also the Divine Performances are thereby made fallacies. For it is not the concept that unites the theurgic priests to the gods: else what is there to hinder those who pursue philosophic speculation contemplatively, from having the theurgic union to the gods? Now, however, in actual truth, this is not the case. On the other hand, it is the complete fulfilling of the arcane performances, the carrying of them through in a manner worthy of the gods and surpassing all conception, and likewise the power of the voiceless symbols which are perceived by the gods alone, that establish the Theurgic Union. Hence we do not effect these things by thinking. [\[7\]](#)

For thus the spiritual energy will be of these things, and imparted from ourselves; neither of which suppositions is true. For even when we are not revolving these things in mind the sacred emblems themselves are accomplishing their own work, and the ineffable power of the gods to whom these emblems belong, recognizes of itself its own likenesses. This, however, is not from having been aroused by our intelligence; for it is not in the nature of things that those that encompass should be set in motion by those that are encompassed, nor things that are perfect by those that are imperfect, nor wholes by parts. Hence, the divine causes are not called forth beforehand into operation by our acts of thinking; nevertheless it is necessary to acknowledge these and also all the best conditions of the soul, and the purity pertaining to us as certain joint causes before existing. Yet the things which arouse the divine will as by authority are the divine countersigns themselves. Thus the activities of the gods are set in motion by themselves and do not receive into themselves from an inferior source any principle of their characteristic energy.

I have prolonged this discussion to this extent in order that thou mayst not be led to think that all command of the operation in the Theurgic Rites is from us, and that thou mayst not suppose that the genuineness of these performances is actually regulated by conditions in our acts of thinking, or that they are made false by deception. For although we may know the peculiarities which are incident to each race of the superior beings, we may fail to hit upon the truth in regard to their operations. Yet without this knowledge the mystic union never takes place; nevertheless the union and the knowledge are by no means the same thing. So, the divine purity is in no sense by means of the right knowledge, as that of the body is not through health; but on the other hand it is more completely one and more pure than knowledge. Nothing, therefore, of such qualities in us, or anything whatever that is human, helps in any way to the accomplishment of the divine exercises.

Accept this accordingly which indeed is said in addition but is a sufficient reply to thy whole conception in regard to technique of Theurgy. But those statements of thine have the same force with these in which thou acknowledgest that "the superior knowledge in respect to the gods is holy and helpful," and callest the not-knowing in respect to things revered and beautiful "Darkness," but the knowing of them, "Light" -- adding that "the former condition will cause human beings to be beset with every form of evil through ignorance and restlessness, and the other will be the source of everything beneficial." For all these things tend in the same direction with those which have been mentioned, and obtain a fitting notice with them. It is necessary, therefore, to pass them by. and to proceed with the inquiries respecting the Oracular Art, in order to resolve them.

Notes:

1.
"Sometimes," says Potter, "terrible apparitions astonished the trembling spectators" at the Perfective Rites. This was the case everywhere. In the Chaldaean Oracles mention is made of these direful creatures. They are called "dogs of the earth." "Thy vessel (the body) the chthonian beasts shall make their home." This implies obsession and evil influences from the spiritual world.
2.
The Supreme elements, ákra stoixeía, are the signs of the Zodiac, which constituted an important feature in theurgy as allied to astrology.
3.
Damaskios also declares that "a general distribution takes place from the One Origin of all things, and Plato calls this, the Truth."
4.
Emanuel Swedenborg, in his Memoirs and Spiritual Diary, describes spirits of this character.
5.
Greek, αντοφαναυσ δειξεωσ. Perhaps this refers to the fact also that fit the final vision witnessed at the Perfective Rite, or Autopsia, the Beholder was revealed to himself in the impression which it gave him. Certainly Plato and Alkibiades regarded it with different sentiments.
- 6.

Professor Taylor Lewis defines phantasma as signifying an apparition. Chrysippos, the philosopher, gives the following meanings: phantasia, imagination which leads to contemplation of the Cause or origin; phantaston, something to impress the imagination; phantastikon, a fancy or vain impulse from the mind proceeding from nothing truly imaginable; phantasma, a phantom to which we are drawn by fanciful attraction. Liddell and Scott would define a phantasia as an opinion presented from sensation; phantaston, as something leading to such opinion; phantastikon, as the faculty of such presentation; and phantasma, as an image presented to the mind by an object.

Here Abammon makes a new departure in the New Platonic philosophy. Plotinus and Porphyry had taught a system of doctrine analogous to the later Persian scheme, with the Absolute One at the summit from whom proceeded by emanation, the Over-Mind, the Universal Soul, and Nature. To this Absolute, there might, by philosophic discipline, contemplation and ecstasy, be attained for brief periods, the enosis or intimate union. Iamblichus, however, seems to discard this doctrine with its theory of impassiveness, and to make theurgic or sacerdotal virtues the condition of excellence by which the divine part of the Soul exalts itself even above the Over-Mind, and becomes at one with the Absolute. Hence he inculcated the utility of religious rites and initiations as explained in the reply of Abammon. He was followed in this path by Eunapios, Syrianos, and by Proclus, the great light of the later philosophy.

Of Being and Unity

(De Ente et Uno)

By Giovanni Pico della Mirandola translated by Victor Michael Hamm, 1943. [\[1\]](#)

To Angelo Poliziano

PREFACE

You were telling me lately of the dispute which you and Lorenzo de' Medici had concerning being and unity, and how, taking his stand with the Platonists, that man of a genius so powerful and versatile that he seems made for all things, who finds (wonderful to relate!) even in the incessant occupations of the State leisure for some literary study or conversation, argued against Aristotle, whose Ethics you expounded publicly this year. And since those who estrange Aristotle from Plato estrange themselves also from my point of view -- for I hold to the concord of both systems --, you ask me how we might defend the Stagirite on this point and bring him into agreement with his master, Plato. I have told you what came into my mind at that time, and it was rather a confirmation of your own objections against Lorenzo than a contribution of anything new. But you are not content with that. Without waiting for the developments which will come to the subject in my future Concord of Plato and Aristotle, [\[2\]](#) you beg me to run over for you now, in the shape of a brief commentary, those things which I told you in the presence of our friend Domenico Benevieni, so dear to us for his knowledge and his integrity. How can I refuse you? Especially in a literary matter like this, and in the case of a friend who is almost my self? Pardon me, nevertheless, if I risk at times to employ words which perhaps have not yet received the stamp of true Latinity. The novelty of the subject, and I might almost say necessity, have demanded this license. Do not then expect a style too elegant and chaste. As our Malius [3] says, the subject itself needs no ornament; simple exposition is enough. The following, therefore, if I remember well, were the things about which we had a discussion.

Notes:

1. In this translation I have used the text of the 1557 (Venice) edition of Pico's Opera Omnia, as reprinted by Festugière in Archives d'Histoire Doctrinale et Littéraire du Moyen Age Vol. VII (1932), pp. 208-224, which text I have compared with that of the 1519 edition, available to me at the Newberry Library, Chicago. I have been aided by Father Festugière's French version of the Latin original, as well as by his notes. I have accepted Festugière's emendations of the text.
2. This was the projected work left unwritten because of Pico's early death.
3. "Malius" cannot be identified.

Chapter I. For the Neo-Platonists Unity precedes Being.

In more than one place Aristotle says that unity and being are convertible and reciprocal (the same is true of truth and goodness, but we shall speak of these later). This the followers of the Academy [4] denied, saying that the one is anterior to being; by which they meant that they regarded the former as a concept more simple and universal. Wherefore they would define even God, the Sovereign Simplicity, as the One rather than as Being. Similarly, say they, prime matter, that crude and formless matter which is found in all things, ought to be included under the category of the one, and therefore they would exclude it from the category of being. Then, they say, unity and being have not the same opposites: to being is opposed non-being, to the one, the many. By the same law, therefore, by which their opposites are reckoned as two, being and unity are to be considered non-convertible and non-reciprocal.

Notes:

4. Pico means especially the Neo-Platonists Plotinus and Proclus. Cf. L. Robin La théorie platonicienne des Idées et des Nombres d'après Aristote, (Paris 1908), passim: E. Brehier, Les idées philosophiques et religieuses de Philon d'Alexandrie, (Paris, 1908), 71 ff.

Chapter II. Plato nowhere says that the one is superior to being, but rather that the two are equal.

Such are the reasons they rest upon. Before we refute them, it would not be impertinent to find out what Plato himself thought on this point. I discover that he treats twice of being and unity: namely, in the Paramenides and in the Sophist. In these two places, therefore, according to the Academy, Plato gives the one priority over being.

I shall say at once, as regards the Parmenides, that in this entire dialogue one does not find a single strict affirmation, [5] and that, in any case, even if there were such an affirmation, nothing would allow one to draw such an inference with certitude. Actually there is nothing less dogmatic than this hook, which, taken in its totality, is nothing else than a sort of exercise in dialectic. [6] Indeed, so far are the words of this dialogue from being opposed to my opinion, that all the attempts of critics to read something else into them achieve only arbitrary and willful interpretations. But let us dismiss all the critics. Let us instead inquire into the argument of the dialogue itself, and examine its beginning and its development, its promises and its performance.

Here, then, is the content of the Parmenides:

The discussion having started with the question whether all things that exist are one or many, [7] Socrates turned it in the direction of the problem of ideas and overwhelmed Parmenides with questions on that subject, [8] whereupon the latter exclaimed how he admired that transport, that energy of mind, which drove Socrates on to the definition of the highest truths. [9] 'Exercise yourself,' -- these are Parmenides' words -- 'train yourself thoroughly in this gymnastic while you are still young. Many will call it vanity, and accuse you of trifling and prating; yet if ever you cease from it, truth will escape you.' [10] Everyone recognizes, -- and what follows makes it plain -- that Parmenides is here referring to dialectic.

Thereupon, a propos of a new query of Socrates -- 'But in what, Parmenides, does this gymnastic consist?' -- the sage answered by first referring him to Zeno's argument as his model. Then, passing on to a more particular instruction, he with ingenious subtlety invites his adversary to consider not only what would follow from the existence of an object, but also what would follow from its non-existence; for example, in the case of this thing (the one) of which we posit or deny the existence, one must inquire what would follow both as regards the thing in itself, and in regard to other things, and, as regards other things, both in themselves and in respect to the one. [11] While he is preparing to develop these points, Socrates cries out: "What a difficult task you set me there! I do not completely understand. But why do you not demonstrate this method which you vaunt so highly, by giving me a model on some point? I should then understand it better." Parmenides replies that this would be a great labor for a man of his advanced years. Thereupon Zeno insists that Parmenides ought to speak because the assembly is not numerous; if it were, the case would be different, for it is not becoming that an old man treat of such matters before a large public, since few people understand that it is necessary to consider questions so discursively in order to attain the truth. [\[12\]](#)

These words of Zeno fully confirm what we have said concerning the nature of the subject which Parmenides is going to treat. They do so at any rate if one agrees with Zeno that 'it is not becoming that an old man treat of such matters before a large public.' If, as some pretend, [\[13\]](#) it were a question here of the divine hierarchies, of the first principle of all things, what discourse could we imagine more appropriate to an old man, or less calculated to make him blush? But it is beyond all dispute (unless we want to deceive ourselves) that Parmenides' subject is the dialectic method; besides, Socrates had demanded nothing else. Now, it is precisely such a subject which is, to Zeno, appropriate to a young man rather than to an old one. But for those who want other proofs, let us run through this dialogue. We shall nowhere find any dogmatic assertion, but everywhere only this question: 'If this is, what follows, and what if this is not?'

The Academy, however, has taken occasion to defend its doctrine regarding being and unity because, in the first hypothesis, [\[14\]](#) where he attacks the problem: if all things are one, what follows? Parmenides answers that that one of which existence is posited would be without parts, limitless, and therefore would be nothing; [\[15\]](#) among many conclusions of this kind, he brings up this: 'that sort of one would not be being.' [\[16\]](#) But is this not a mere exercise in dialectic? Is it really a dogmatic discourse on unity and being? There is a great difference between these two assertions: 'the one is above being,' and 'if all things are one, that one is not being.' But enough of the Parmenides.

As regards the Sophist, Plato there rather indicates the equivalence of unity and being [\[17\]](#) than the priority of the one over being. Nowhere, indeed, do I find him speaking of priority, whereas there is an abundance of texts indicating equivalence. Take for example this passage: 'considering the question thus, you will confess that to say "something" is to say "some one thing;" and soon after: "He who says "not something" necessarily says "not some one thing," that is, he says nothing.'" ' [\[18\]](#)

Thus Plato. Not-one and nothing are therefore for him the same, rather, identical. Then the one and something are equal. After this he proves in the same way that it is impossible to say that not-being is one, and concludes thus: 'Being cannot be coupled with non-being; [\[19\]](#) therefore unity cannot be coupled with non-being.' [\[20\]](#) Now, he is speaking here of the unity which he had already called equal to that which is something. It seems then that he holds the identity of being and unity to be beyond doubt.

Very well. We may agree that Plato arrived at that affirmation, though we do not find it explicitly stated in any of his writings. Let us see, then, in what sense it might have been so stated. And first of all let us discuss in these terms the foundations of the doctrine of Aristotle. [\[21\]](#) argumentation.' Cornford, Plato and Parmenides, (London, 1939), p. vii, writes: 'The conviction that Plato's purpose was serious and not merely destructive grows, the more clearly the Hypotheses are studied. If it is justified, the theory of the humorous polemic falls to the ground.'

But whereas Aristotle as a rule sets out with a systematic enumeration of the meanings of ambiguous terms, Plato makes his point by indirect procedure. . . . As we proceed, we shall find that Plato, in scattered passages, unobtrusively indicates the many ambiguities lurking in the phrase: 'If a One (or the One) is.' . . . Owing to certain peculiarities of Greek grammar, 'the one' (το εν) can mean (1) Unity or Oneness in general; (2) the unity of anything that has unity or is one thing; (3) that which has unity, anything that is one; (4) the one thing we are speaking of as opposed to 'other ones,' and so on. The words for 'being' (το ον, ειναι, ουσια) are even more ambiguous, 'Being' can mean (1) the sort of being that belongs to any entity, whether it exists or not; (2) an entity which has being in this sense, any term that can be the subject of a true statement (3) the essence or nature of a thing; (4) existence; (5) that which has existence, or (collectively) all that exists."

Chapter III. From the testimony of Parmenides, of Dionysius, and of Simplicius, we conclude the convertibility of unity and being.

This word being, concerning which there is doubt whether it is equal to the concept unity, can be taken in two senses. The first is this: When we say 'being' we may mean anything that is outside of nothing. This is the sense of the word with Aristotle, wherever he makes being equivalent to unity. And this meaning is not unreasonable, for, as it is truly said, we ought to think with the few, but talk like the many. We think and judge for ourselves; we speak for the multitude, and we speak so that we may be understood. The vulgar, then, the unsophisticated, so understand being that they call anything 'being' (ens) which does not lack existence (esse), and which cannot properly be called nothing. But do we not find that those who are considered the wisest among the opposition [\[22\]](#) have not understood being in any other way?

When Parmenides the Pythagorean said that the one is that which is, he meant God, if we credit Simplicius [\[23\]](#) and all the many others who want to defend Parmenides against those who falsely accuse him of saying that all things are one. [\[24\]](#) For they all agree in answering that, in employing the word 'one', Parmenides never believed that division, multiplicity, and plurality do not attach to things, since in other passages of his poems he himself openly affirms the contrary. But, they say, when he said 'one' what he meant is that to which the name of being truly applies, and which is truly the one being (esse), which one is God. Thus, for Parmenides and his defenders, even the 'Platonists,' the one cannot be above being unless it be above God. However, far from denying that God is being, it is to God alone that Parmenides accords, as is in truth fitting, the name of being. And so we solve the first difficulty of the 'Platonists.'

As regards Dionysius the Areopagite, [\[25\]](#) whom our opponents invoke in favor of their opinion, he will not deny that God verily said to Moses: 'I am who am,' which reads in Greek: ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ὢν, that is, 'I am being' (ens). Of a truth, they themselves, when they say that nothing, or non-being is opposed to being as the many to the one, concede that of necessity that which is not being is nothing or non-being, in just the same way that what is not one is multiple or plurality. However, if they observe the same manner of speaking, they must say either that God is nothing, which appalls the ears, or that He is being. But to understand being in this fashion is to return to that which we have established as the first axiom and universal proposition, namely, that concerning anything it is necessary to say that it is or is not, and that concerning anything it is impossible to say or think both together at the same time. Since, therefore, outside of everything there is nothing but nothingness itself, if being understood in this sense excludes nothing but only nothingness, it is evidently necessary that being encompass all that is. Therefore the extension of unity cannot be greater unless it included nothingness itself, a possibility which Plato denies in the Sophist when he says that non-being or nothing cannot be called one. Besides, if unity cannot have less extension than being, it follows that being and unity must be convertible concepts.

24. The universe -- a pantheistic interpretation, the only legitimate one, Cf. Cornford, op. cit., 29: "This One Being is not a mere abstraction; it proves to be a single continuous and homogeneous substance filling the whole of space."

25. Cf. The Divine Names, I, paragraph 6 (Patrologia Graeca, vol. III, 596 A-B). A convenient English translation of this work as well as of the Mystical Theology may be found in C. E. Rolt, Dionysius the Areopagite, (Macmillan, 1920).

Chapter IV. In what sense one can say that something is superior to being.

We have explained one of the senses which we said could be given to being. Understanding it so, -- a perfectly legitimate usage of the word -- one affirms most truly that there is nothing more common than being. It remains to explain the second sense, according to which it will be manifest that one can no less justly say that there is something that surpasses in eminence being itself.

Words are either concrete or abstract. Concrete are, for example, hot, bright, white, man; abstract: heat, light, whiteness, humanity. This is their power and diversity: that what is called abstract connotes that which is such by itself (a se), not by another (ab alio), while concrete signifies that which is what it is not by itself, but by virtue of another. Thus the luminous is such in virtue of light, the white is such through whiteness, and man is man by virtue of his humanity. Moreover, since there is nothing which participates in itself, and since the same thing cannot possess the same quality at the same time by itself (a se) and by participation in another thing, it follows that the abstract cannot take its denomination from the concrete. Wherefore it is incongruous to say that whiteness is white, blackness black. Indeed, it is ridiculous to speak thus, not because whiteness is black or heat cold, but because such is the distance of the one from blackness and of the other from coldness, that all that is white is so by participation in the first, and all that is hot is so by participation in the second. When, then, we refuse to attribute such or such qualities to such or such an object, it is either because that object does not possess them, for example in the expression "black is not white," or because we want to signify that it possesses them in a more excellent and more perfect way than we do: as when we deny that whiteness is white, not because it is black, but because it is whiteness itself.

But let us return to the subject. The word 'being' (ens) has the aspect of a concrete word. For to say 'being' (ens) and to say 'that which is' (id quod est) is to say the same thing. The abstract of this would seem to be the word esse, in that one calls ens that which participates in esse, in the same way that one calls luminous that which participates in light. [26] If we look at this meaning of being which we have thus defined, we shall have to deny being not only to that which is not, and to that which is nothing, but also to that which is so that it is that being (esse) itself which is of itself (ex se) and by itself (a se), and by participation in which all things are: just as we not only deny that that is hot which lacks heat, but also that which is heat itself. Now, such is God, the plenitude of all being, the sole being a se, and from Whom alone, without the intervention of any intermediary, all things have come to be.

We have, therefore, the right to say that God is not being but is above being, and that there is something to being, namely God Himself. If we give to God the name of the One, it follows that we avow the one to be above being.

However, in calling God the One, we do so less to indicate what He is than to show in what manner He is all that is, and how other beings are through Him, 'God is called the One,' says Denys, 'because He is in a unique way all things,' [27] and again: 'God is called the one because He is the principle of all things, just as unity is the principle of all numbers. [28] Wherefore if (as the Academy pretends) Plato, in the first hypothesis of the Parmenides, affirms that the one is superior to being, that one will be nothing else than God. They (the Academy), indeed, themselves recognize this, since they admit by universal consensus that Plato here treats of the first principle of all things. [29]

But, some will say, on this point at least Aristotle differs from Plato, for Aristotle never understands being as subordinate to the one and as not including God in its extension. Those who speak in this way have not read Aristotle, for he does this very thing, and much more plainly than Plato.

In the sixth book of his Metaphysics [30] he divides being into being-by-itself (per se) and being-by-accident (per accidens). When being-by-itself (per se) is divided into ten categories, there is no doubt on the part of good interpreters of the philosopher that God is not included under this being, since He is neither being-by-accident nor is He contained under any one of the ten classes into which being per se is divided. Nothing is more of a commonplace among the Peripatetics than that division of being into substance and accident. Since this is so, we understand being so that God is above being and not below it, as St. Thomas himself teaches in the first book of his Commentaries on the Theological Sentences. [31] I shall add that certain Platonists do wrong in vaunting themselves as if they possessed a secret unknown to Aristotle, when they say that God has two proper appellations, namely, the One and the Good, as if the good and the one were superior to being. Just as we have demonstrated that it did not escape the Peripatetics in what sense God can be understood as superior to being, so we are able to show that it was particularly these two names, the Good and the One, that Aristotle gave to God.

In the second book of the Metaphysics, [32] after having treated of being in its totality and of separate minds, [33] he asks finally (as if, after all the rest, he wanted to turn to the investigation of the attributes of God alone), if, besides the good which is in the universality of things as in an army, there were some separate good like the person of the chief of this army, and he answers that this good exists, and that it is God. Of this God, in the same chapter, he demonstrates the unity, citing in testimony of this, after strong arguments, the phrase of Homer; εἰς κοῖρανός εἰστω, εἰς βασιλευς. [34] Where then is his error?

Where is Aristotle at odds with Plato? Wherein is he profane? Wherein does he fail to give God the honors which are due to Him?

Chapter V. In which is shown why the Peripatetics attribute to God many qualities which the Platonists deny Him, and how one may ascend through four degrees even to the cloud which God inhabits.

Let us respond now to the arguments which the Platonists invoke to sustain against Aristotle -- not in the sense with which we agree, but absolutely speaking -- the superiority of the one over being. We have, I think, already answered adequately the first of these arguments by which God is considered one and nevertheless is not being, but it is worth the labor to pursue the discussion in order to show that not only with the Platonists and Peripatetics, who disagree with one another, but often in the same single writer, there can be, with respect to the divine attributes, many affirmations and many negations equally just.

God is everything, and he is everything in the most eminent and perfect way. Now, He would not be this unless He included in Himself all perfections in such a manner that He rejected all that has to do with imperfection in things. However, one must distinguish two kinds of imperfection. On the one hand, that is imperfect which in its class does not attain the perfection of that class or type. On the other, that is imperfect which, although perfect of its kind, is not absolutely perfect, because it has only the perfections of its kind, and there exist outside of it a number of kinds of things enriched with perfections that are proper to them and which, on its part, it does not include. As an example of the first case consider sense-knowledge, the imperfection of which comes not only from the fact that it is merely knowledge, and not appetite, but also from the fact that it is an imperfect kind of knowledge, both because of the organs which it must use, and which are brute and corporeal, and because it attains only to the superficial aspects of things and does not penetrate to the innermost reality, namely, the substance. So likewise is that human knowledge which one calls rational an imperfect knowledge, being vague, uncertain, mobile, and laborious. Even the intellectual knowledge [36] of those divine intelligences called angels by the theologians, is nothing but an imperfect knowledge, if only because of the obligation it is under to seek without that which it does not possess within, at least in plenitude, namely, the light of truth which it needs for its actuation.

Take another example: life. The life which resides in plants, indeed that which moves every body, is imperfect not only because it is life and not appetite, but because it is not pure life, but rather an influx of life derived from the soul in the body, constantly flowing, constantly mixed with death, fitter indeed to be called death than life. Are you unaware of it? We begin to die as soon as we begin to live, and death extends along with life, so that we stop dying only at that instant when corporeal death delivers us from the body of this death. [37] But even the life of the angels is not perfect: unless the unifying ray of the Divine light incessantly vitalized it, it would slip completely into nothingness. So for all the rest. When therefore you make God knowing and living, attend first to this, that the life and knowledge which you ascribe to Him be understood as free from all these detriments.

But this is not enough. There remains the second kind of imperfection, of which the following is an example. [38] Imagine the most perfect kind of life possible, a life completely or perfectly alive, having in it nothing mortal, nothing mixed with death, a life which needs nothing outside or itself by means of which to remain stable and permanent. Imagine likewise a kind of knowledge which perceives everything at once and perfectly. Add this: that he who thus knows all things, knows them in himself and need not search outside himself the truth to be known, but be himself the very truth. Nay, to whatever high degree of perfection this life and this knowledge have attained in their proper natures, and though one could find them nowhere except in God, if, even in this degree of perfection one divides the one from the other, they are unworthy of God.

For God, in short, is perfection in all its modes and in an infinite manner, but He is not such perfection merely because He comprehends in Himself all particular perfections and those in infinite number. For in that case, neither would He Himself be perfectly simple, nor would the perfections which are in Him be infinite; but He would be nothing more than a unique infinite, composed of many things infinite in number but finite in perfection. [39] Now, to think or speak so of God is blasphemous. However, if the most perfect life possible is nonetheless only life, and not knowledge, and the same for all other similar perfections which are assembled in God, there will manifestly ensue a divine life of finite perfection, since it will have the perfection which pertains to life and not that which pertains to knowledge or to appetition. Let us then take from life not only that which makes life imperfect, but also that which makes it life merely, and do the same as regards knowledge and the other qualities which we have ascribed to God. Then what remains of all this will necessarily correspond to the idea which we want to have of God, namely, a Being one, absolutely perfect, infinite, altogether simple. And since life is a certain particular being, and wisdom likewise, and justice, if we remove from them this condition of particularity and limitation, that which remains will not be this or that being, but being itself, simple being, being universal, not with the universality of attribution but with the universality of perfection. [40] Similarly wisdom is a particular good, because it is that good which is wisdom, and not that other which is justice. Take away, says St. Augustine, [41] this, and take away that, that is to say, this limitation of particularity by which wisdom is that good called wisdom, and not that good called justice, and by which, similarly, justice has the particular goodness of justice and not that of wisdom; then only will you see in an obscure way [42] the face of God, i.e. all good in itself, simple good, the good of all good. So also as life is a particular thing, it is one particular thing. For it is a certain perfection; and similarly wisdom is a certain perfection. Cast off the particularity, and there remains, not this or that unity, but the one itself, the absolute One. Since therefore God is that being which, as we said in the beginning, when the imperfections of all things are removed, is all things, certainly that which remains when you have rejected from all things both that imperfection which each one possesses in its kind, and that particularity which reduces each to one kind, will assuredly be God. God is, then, Being itself, the one Himself, the Good, and the True.

In thus purifying the Divine names of all the stains that come from the imperfection of the things signified by them, we have already moved two steps in the ascent to the cloud which God inhabits. There remain two more, one of which indicates the deficiency of language, the other the weakness of our intelligence.

These terms: being (ens), true, one, good, signify something concrete and as it were participated; wherefore we say again of God that He is being (esse) itself, truth itself, goodness itself, unity itself. Thus far indeed we are in the light, but God has placed His dwelling in the shadows. [43] We have then not yet come to God himself. So long, in short, as that which we say of God is fully understood and entirely comprehended, we are in the light. But all that we say and perceive thus is a mere trifle, considering the infinite distance which separates Divinity from the capacity of our minds. In climbing to the fourth step we enter into the light of ignorance, [44] and, blinded by the cloud of the Divine splendor, we cry out with the Prophet: 'I have fainted in Thy halls, O Lord,' [45] finally declaring this one thing about God, that He is incomprehensibly and ineffably above all that we can speak or think of most perfect, placing Him pre-eminently above that unity and that goodness and that truth which we had conceived, and above being (esse) itself. Thus Denys the Areopagite, when he had written his Symbolic Theology, his Theological Institutes, [46] the treatise on the Divine Names, and the Mystical Theology, and come to the end of the last-mentioned work, like a man already, so to speak, standing in the darkness and trying to find words most adequate to God, after some essays exclaimed: 'He is neither truth nor kingdom, nor unity, nor divinity, [47] nor goodness, nor spirit, as we know it; one cannot apply to Him the names of son or of father or of any other things in the world known to us or to any other being. He is nothing of that which is not, nothing of that which is. Things which are do not know Him as He is, nor does He know things as they are. [48] of Him there is no definition, neither is there a name nor a science of Him. He is neither darkness nor light, neither error nor truth, [49] in short, every affirmation and every negation in regard to Him is equally impossible.' This is how that divine man expresses it.

Let us gather up our conclusions. We learn, then, in the first degree, that God is not body, as the Epicureans say, nor the form of a body, as those say who affirm that God is the soul of the sky and of the universe -- the opinion of the Egyptians, according to the testimony of Plutarch [50] and Varro the Roman theologian, [51] whence they draw great nourishment for idolatry. Yet there are some even among the Peripatetics [52] so stupid as to hold this the true doctrine and moreover as the teaching of Aristotle. How far they are from knowing God truly! They rest in the starting-place as if they had already reached the goal, and believe themselves already come to the heights of the Divinity while in fact they are lying on the ground and have not even begun to move a foot towards Him. For from this point of view God could be neither perfect life nor perfect being nor even perfect intelligence. But we have elaborately confuted these profane opinions in the fifth section of our Concordia. [53]

We learn, in the second degree, a truth which few men understand correctly, and in regard to which we risk deceiving ourselves the more however little we deviate from true intelligence, namely, that God is neither life nor intelligence nor intelligible, but something better and more excellent than all these. For all these names state one particular perfection, and there is nothing of the sort in God. Mindful of this, Denys [54] and the Platonists have denied God life, intellect, wisdom, and the like. But since God unites and gathers up in Himself by His unique perfection which is His infinitude, in short, Himself, the totality of perfection which is found is these divided and multiplied, and because He does this not as a unity composed of these multiple perfections, but as a unity anterior to them, certain philosophers, especially the Peripatetics, [54a] imitated insofar as is permissible on almost all these points by the theologians of Paris, [54b] concede that all these perfections are in God. We agree with them, and we believe that in so doing we are not only thinking justly but that we are at the same time in agreement with those who deny these same perfections, on condition that we never lose sight of what St. Augustine says, [55] namely, that God's wisdom is not more wisdom than justice, His justice not more justice than wisdom, nor His knowledge more knowledge than life. For all these things are in God one, not by confusion of mixture, or mutual penetration of distinct entities, but by a simple, sovereign, ineffable, and fundamental unity in which actuality, all form, all perfection, hidden as if in the supreme and pre-eminent jewel in the treasury of the Divine Infinity, are enclosed so excellently above and beyond all things that it is not only intimate to all things, but rather united with all things more closely than they are with themselves. Assuredly words fail us, altogether unable to express this concept.

But see, my dear Angelo, what folly possesses us! While we are in the body we are able to love God better than we can know or describe Him. In loving there is for us more profit, and less labor, the more we obey this tendency. Nevertheless, we prefer constantly to seek through knowledge, never finding what we seek, rather than to possess through love that which without love would be found in vain. But let us return to our subject. You already see plainly by what convention one can call God spirit, intelligence, life, wisdom, and on the other hand place Him above all these determinations, both having good proofs to witness to their truth and their accord. Nor does Plato dissent from Aristotle, because when, in the sixth book of the Republic, [56] he calls God "the idea of the Good" which surpasses intelligibles, he shows Him giving to Intelligence the power of intellection, and to intelligibles their intelligibility, [57] while the latter of them (Aristotle) defines God as the being who is at once intelligence, intellect, and intelligible. [58] Denys the Areopagite, also, though he talks like Plato, is nevertheless obliged to affirm with Aristotle that God is ignorant neither of Himself nor of other beings; wherefore, if He knows Himself, it is because He is both intelligence and intelligible; for he who knows himself is necessarily both knower and known. And yet, if we consider these perfections as particular perfections, as I have said, or if, when we say intelligence, we mean to signify that nature which tends to the intelligible as to something exterior to itself, there is no doubt that Aristotle, like the Platonists, would firmly deny that God is intelligence or intelligible.

In the third degree, the more we approach the darkness, the more light we have to see that not only is God not (impious to say!) something imperfect or a mutilated being, as He would be if we called Him a body, or the soul of a body, or an animated being composed of soul and body, nor some particular genus however perfect, which human wisdom can fashion, [59] like life, or spirit, or reason, but that we ought to conceive of Him as superior to all that these universal terms which include in their extension all things, i.e., the one, the true, the good, and being, signify.

In the fourth degree, finally, we know Him as superior not only to these four transcendentals, but also to every idea which we could form, to every essence which we could conceive Him to be. Then only, with this total ignorance, does true knowledge commence.

From all this we conclude that God is not only the being than which, according to St. Anselm, [60] nothing higher can be conceived, but the being who infinitely transcends all that can be imagined, as David the prophet put it in the Hebrew: "Silence alone is Thy, praise." [61]

So much for the solution of the first difficulty. The window is now wide open for a true understanding of the books composed by Denys the Areopagite on Mystical Theology and The Divine Names. Here we must avoid two mistakes: either to make too little of works whose value is great, or, seeing that we understand them so ill, to fashion for ourselves idle fancies and inextricable commentaries.

Chapter VI. In which is solved the second difficulty of the Platonists, namely that with respect to prime matter.

As regards their objection on the subject of prime matter, this is frivolous. For insofar as this matter is being, it has unity. Indeed, those who wish to follow Plato's words to the letter, must concede that it has less unity than it has being. For Plato it is not nothing, but a sort of receptacle of forms, a kind of nurse, a special kind of nature and similar things, as he establishes in the Timaeus. [62] It is therefore not nothing; it is not altogether outside of being, if we credit Plato, who even calls it, in his Philebus, [63] not merely multiplicity -- opposed to the one as nothing is opposed to being -- but infinity. Now multiplicity, if it is finite, is not entirely outside the confines of unity, since insofar as it is finite it is one. On the other hand, an infinite multiplicity escapes equally the nature of the one and that of limit. Prime matter is then for Plato rather being than one.

However, those who have argued to prove the superiority of unity over being, have said that prime matter is not being, though it is a unity. Thus the Platonist Iamblichus, in his book On the Pythagorean Sect, [64] designates prime matter as duality because duality is the first multiple and the root, as it were, of all other multiplicity. According, then, to him who is so great among the Platonists that he is called "divine," prime matter is not only not one, but a multitude, and the root of all multiplicity in things. Their own arguments condemn them. Still, prime matter does not entirely escape any more from the category of unity than from that of being. The same form that imprints being on it, also imposes unity. I pass over all the arguments pro or con the unity of prime matter since they are so well-known to all those who have gone any distance at all with Aristotle.

Chapter VII. In which is solved the third difficulty of the Platonists, on the subject of multiplicity, and in which it is demonstrated that it is not possible to say that unity is more common than being, without coming to a conclusion which Plato rejects.

The third objection is their worst error. For the opposition between multiplicity and unity is not of the same sort as the opposition between non-being and being. Here it is a case of contradiction; there, of privation or contrariety. Aristotle discusses this distinction at length in the tenth book of his Metaphysics.

[\[65\]](#)

But see into what disaster those philosophers fall who call themselves Platonists and yet wish to say that unity is superior to being. It is certain that, when two genera are reciprocally in a relation of dependence such that one is more common than the other, an object can escape from the extension of the inferior without being excluded from the superior. That is because the latter is more common. An example off-hand --- animal is more common than man: it can happen, therefore, that a being may not be man, and yet be animal. By the same token, if unity were more common than being, it could happen that something might be non-being or nothing, which would notwithstanding be one, and thus unity might be predicated of non-being, a possibility which Plato expressly rejects in the Sophist. Chapter VIII. In which is shown in what manner these four attributes: being, unity, truth, and goodness, are present in all that exists beneath God.

Most true, indeed, is the statement that there are four attributes which embrace all that exists, namely, being, unity, truth, and goodness, provided that they are taken in the sense that their negations be: nothing, division, falsity, evil. Two others, something (aliquid) and thing (res), have been added to these by the late disciples of Avicenna, who interpolated the philosophy of Averroes in more than one place, wherefore Averroes attacked them vigorously. [67] But, to tell the truth, on this point there is little reason for discord. For they merely divide what is subsumed under 'one' into 'one' and 'something,' a procedure that is not contrary to Plato who, in the Sophist, [68] enumerates unity among the most extense genera; and that which is contained under 'being' they divide into being and thing. But of this later. To return to our subject, -- these four attributes exist in one way in God, and in another way in beings created by God, since God has them from Himself, other beings from Him.

Let us see first how they pertain to created things. All things that are beneath God have an efficient, an exemplary, and a final cause. For from Him, and through Him, and for Him, are all things. If then we consider things as constituted by the efficient causality of God, we call them beings (entia), since it is because of this efficiency that they participate in being (esse). If we consider them as conforming to and according with the Divine exemplars which we call Ideas, and according to which God has created them, namely, being, unity, truth, goodness, something, thing -- the two last due to the disciples of Avicenna --, we call them true. The true picture of Hercules is, for example, said to be that which conforms to the true Hercules himself. If, again, we consider things as tending to God as their last end, we call them good. And finally, if each thing is considered absolutely, according to itself, we call it one. Now, the order is such that each thing must first be conceived under the idea of being, since every thing, whatever it be, must be produced by an efficient agent before being anything particular in itself, lest that which it is do not depend in its totality from the efficient cause. Thus it happens that a thing which comes after God cannot be conceived without being immediately thought of as a dependent being: finite being is being by participation. To being succeeds unity. Third comes truth, since it is only when a thing exists as such that one can inquire if it corresponds to the exemplar according to which it has been formed. If it resembles that exemplar, it has only to turn towards it by its attribute of goodness, in virtue of a sort of affinity or relationship.

Who does not see, however that all these attributes have equal extension? Give me any being; it is certain that it will be one. For to say 'not one' is to say 'nothing,' according to Plato's expression in the Sophist. [69] For whatever is, is undivided in itself and divided from other things which are not it. When we say this we mean 'one,' or, to use Plato's words, identical with itself, different from others'; and this he declares, in the same dialogue, attributable to each thing. [70]

Necessarily, also, this being is true. For if it is a man, it is certainly a true man. It is the same thing to say: 'This is not true gold' and 'This is not gold,' for, when you say: 'This is not true gold,' you mean: 'This appears to be gold, it resembles gold, but it is not gold.' Therefore St. Augustine gives the following definition of truth in his Soliloquies: [71] "Truth is that which is." One ought not to understand this to indicate that being and truth are the same, for though they are identical in a thing, they are diverse in principle and definition; wherefore one ought not to define the one by the other. What Augustine wanted to say is that a thing is true when it is really what it is called and said to be, as for example, that gold is true when it is really gold and not something other than gold. This is the sense of the words: "Truth is that which is." Those who do not perceive this, falsely attack Augustine's definition.

Similarly, this being is good. For whatever is, insofar as it is, is good. And Olympiodorus seems to me to make a great mistake in believing that being and good are different because we desire the good absolutely and in itself. [72] However, it is not being pure and simple, but well-being that he means; thus, it can happen that if we are suffering we desire not to be. Passing over the point whether, when one is suffering from misery one can, by a right and natural appetite, desire not to be, Olympiodorus did not see that good is as multiple as being.

There is first of all the natural being of things, as, for example, of a man his humanity, of a lion his lioninity, of a stone its stoniness. To this natural being corresponds, for each individual thing, a natural goodness.

But there are other modes of being, which may be called adventitious, as, for man, to be wise, to be handsome, to be sane. Now, just as wisdom and beauty are different, as regards being, from humanity, so it is with goodness. The quality of humanity by which man is man is a different good from the quality of wisdom by which he becomes, not a man merely, but a wise man. All the same, there are here two different modes of being, and one is justified in speaking of them so.

Just as, therefore, all things desire being, so all desire the good, and first of all they desire that good which corresponds to their natural being, since that is the foundation of all other goods, which come to it in such a way that they are unable to stand without it. For how will he be happy who is altogether without being? That good, however, which they acquire with their being, does not suffice them; they desire to attain also all the other goods which complete and adorn this primary good. Just as, then, we rightly say that besides the first good we desire other goods, so we can rightly say that besides the first being we desire other modes of being, for it is one thing to be happy, another thing to be man. And if any one grants that it might happen that one preferred not to be if one could not be happy, it does not follow, as Olympiodorus thinks, that goodness of man is one thing, and happiness another, so that one does not desire the one (being man), except on condition that one possess also the other (happiness).

I omit the consideration whether there is an exact correspondence between the good taken absolutely and being taken absolutely, or whether being taken absolutely is called a certain good, or the good taken absolutely is called a certain being. For this is not the place to discuss all things.

Truly, therefore, did we say that whatever is, is good in the measure that it is. "God saw all the beings He had made, and behold, they were very good." [73] And why not? They are the work of a good artificer Who engraves His image on all things that are from His hand. In the entity of things therefore, we can admire the power of the Maker, in their truth we can adore the wisdom of the Artist, in their goodness we can return love to the liberality of the Lover, in their unity, finally, we can grasp the idea of the unifying simplicity, so to speak, of the Creator, which unites all things among themselves and to Himself, calling them all to love themselves, their neighbors, and ultimately God.

Let us examine now if the opposed terms have likewise the same extension. That the false and the non-existing are identical, we have shown above. And if we say that evil and non-being are different, philosophers and theologians will again object: to make something evil is to make nothing; therefore is one wont to say that the principle of evil is not an efficient but a deficient cause. Thus is refuted the folly of those who have posited two principles, one for good, the other for evil, as if there could exist an efficient cause of evil. But to divide a thing is the same as destroying it, nor can we take away from any thing its natural unity without at the same time robbing it of its integrity of being. For a whole is not its parts, but that unity which springs out of the sum of its parts, as Aristotle demonstrates in the eighth book of his Metaphysics. [74] Wherefore if one divides a whole into its parts, these parts remain something although the whole which is divided does not remain, but ceases to exist actually, and is only potentially, just as its parts, which earlier were in potency, now commence to exist in actuality. Before, when these parts were in the whole, they had no real unity in actuality; this they first acquire when they subsist by themselves, apart from the whole.

Chapter IX. In which it is indicated how these four attributes pertain to God.

Let us examine once more how these four attributes find themselves in God. They do not pertain to Him in the relation of a cause, since there is no question of cause with God. He himself being the cause of all things, and caused by nothing. They can be considered in God in two ways, (1) either as He is taken absolutely in Himself, or (2) as He is the cause of other beings, a distinction inapplicable to created things, since God can exist without being cause, whereas other beings cannot exist unless caused by Him.

We conceive God, then, first of all as the perfect totality of act, the plenitude of being itself. It follows from this concept that He is one, that a term opposite to Him cannot be imagined. See then how much they err who fashion many first principles, many gods! At once it is clear that God is truth itself. For, what can He have which appears to be and is not, He who is being itself? It follows with certainty that he is truth itself. But He is likewise goodness itself. Three conditions are required for the good, as Plato writes in his Philebus: [75] perfection, sufficiency, and desirability. Now the good which we conceive will be perfect, since nothing can be lacking to that which is everything; it will be sufficient, since nothing can be lacking to those who possess that in which they will find all; it will be desirable, since from Him and in Him are all things which can possibly be desired. God is therefore the fullest plenitude of being, undivided unity, the most solid truth, the most perfect good. This, if I am not mistaken, is that τετρακτυς or quaternary, [76] by which Pythagoras swore and which he called the principle of ever-flowing nature. Indeed, in this quaternary, which is One God, we have demonstrated the principle of all things. But we also swear by that which is holy, true, divine; now, what more true, more holy, more divine than these four characters? If we attribute them to God as the cause of things, the entire order is inverted. First He will be one, because He is conceived in Himself before He is conceived as cause. Then He will be good, true, and finally being (ens). For since the final cause has priority over the exemplary cause, and that over the efficient (we first desire to have something to protect us from the weather, then we conceive the idea of a house, and finally we construct one by making it materially), if, as has been described in Chapter VIII above, the good pertains to the final cause, the true to the exemplary, being to the efficient, God as cause will have first of all the attribute of good, then of true, and finally of being. We shall here terminate these brief remarks on a subject teeming with many important problems.

76. On τετρακτυς, cf. the formula οὐ μὰ τὸν ἀμετέρα γενεὰ παραδόντα τετρακτυν, by which the Pythagoreans were wont to swear. Cornford (op. cit., 2): 'These four numbers are the tetractys of the decad: 1 2 3 4 10 . . . The tetractys was a symbol of great significance and, like other such symbols, capable of many interpretations.'

Chapter X. In which the whole discussion is related to the conduct of life and the reform of morals.

Let us, lest we speak more of other things than of ourselves, take care that, while we scrutinize the heights, we do not live too basely in a manner unworthy of beings to whom has been given the divine power of inquiring into things divine. We ought, then, to consider assiduously that our mind, with its divine privileges, cannot have a mortal origin nor can find happiness otherwise than in the possession of things divine, and that the more it elevates and inflames itself with the contemplation of the Divine by renouncing earthly preoccupations while yet a traveler on this pilgrimage here below, the more it will approach felicity. The best precept, then, which this discussion can give us, seems to be that, if we wish to be happy, we ought to imitate the most happy and blessed of all beings, God, by establishing in ourselves unity, truth, and goodness.

What disturbs the peace of unity is ambition, the vice that steals away from itself the soul which abandons itself to it, tearing it, as it were, in pieces, and dispersing it. The resplendent light of truth, who will not lose it in the mud, in the darkness of lust? Avarice and cupidity steal from us goodness, for it is the peculiar property of goodness to communicate to others the goods which it possesses. Thus, when Plato asked himself why God had created the world, he answered: "because he was good." [77] These are the three vices: pride of life, concupiscence of the flesh, concupiscence of the eyes, which, as St. John says, [78] are of the world and not of the Father who is unity, goodness, and truth indeed.

Let us therefore fly from the world, which is confirmed in evil [79]; let us soar to the Father in whom are the peace that unifies, the true light, and the greatest happiness. But what will give us wings to soar? [80] The love of the things that are above. [81] What will take them from us? The lust for the things below, to follow which is to lose unity, truth, and goodness. For we are not one and integrated if we do not link together with a bond of virtue our senses, which incline to earth, and our reason, which tends to heavenly things; this is rather to have two principles ruling in us in turn, so that, while today we follow God by the law of the spirit, and tomorrow Baal by the law of the flesh, our inner realm is divided and as it were laid waste. And if our unity is purchased by the enslavement of a reason submitted to the rule of the law of the members, that will be a false unity, since thus we shall not be true. For we are called and appear to be men, that is, animate beings living by reason; and yet we will be brutes, having for law only sensual appetite. We will be performing a juggling trick to those who see us, and among whom we live. The image will not conform to its exemplar. For we are made in the likeness of God, and God is spirit [82] but we are not yet spirits, to use St. Paul's words, [83] but animals. If, on the contrary, by grace of truth, we do not fall beneath our model, we have only to move towards Him who is our model, through goodness, in order to be united with Him in the afterworld.

Since, finally, these three attributes: unity, truth, and goodness, are united to being by a bond which is eternal, it follows that, if we do not possess them, we no longer exist, even though we may seem to do so; and although others may believe we exist, we are in fact in a state of continuous death rather than of life.

Giovanni Pico della Mirandola: Conclusiones sive Theses DCCCC

This HTML edition Copyright © 2001 by Joseph H. Peterson. All rights reserved.

A younger and "impertinent" contemporary of Ficino's, Pico della Mirandola was "a prodigious philologist and theologian." (Couliano, EMR, 1987, p. 53) His contribution to the evolution of Renaissance magic was the addition of practical Kabbalah, which invokes angels and other powers of God, particularly through the power of the Hebrew language (Yates, GBHT, p. 84).

His 900 Theses were brought to Rome in 1486, which Pico intended to be debated publicly, but the debate never happened. Some of the theses were strongly objected to by theologians, and Pico was condemned by Pope Innocent VIII. He was later absolved from the charge of heresy by Innocent's successor Pope Alexander VI.

Yates (op. cit.) has described this text as "indeed, the great charter of Renaissance Magic, of the new type of magic introduced by Ficino and completed by Pico" and in fact is "absolutely fundamental ... for the whole Renaissance."

8. In hoc articulo precise a suis appendiciis: Utrum angelus potuerat divinam equalitatem simpliciter appetere, non discordat Thomas et Scotus.
9. In materia, quid prius congruoscatur, magis an minus universale concordant Thomas et Scotus, qui maxime in eo discordare existimantur, de qua pono infra tres scriptas conclusiones ex utriusque mente.
10. De re nominaliter concepta, primus conceptus qui habetur, est conceptus universalissimus.

17. De modo, quo angeli sint in loco, non differunt Thomas et Scotus.

[30] Conclusiones philosophice secundum propriam opinionem numero LXXX, que licet a communi philosophia dissentiant, a communi tamen philosophandi modo non multum abhorrent.

1. Potest a specie in sensu exteriori existens immediate abstrahi species universalis.
2. Intencio secunda est ens rationis, habens semper modum forme qualitativae, ab operatione intellectus proveniens consequutive, non effective.

3. Nec prima intentio, nec secunda intentio, alicubi sunt subiectiue.
4. Est deuenire in corporibus ad aliquid, quod ita corporaliter locat, quod corporaliter non locatur, et illud est ultima sphaera, sicut in intelligibilibus est deuenire ad aliquid, quod ita intelligibiliter locat, quod nullo modo locatur, et illud est Deus.
- Correlarium. Non est querendum, quomodo ultima sphaera locatur, sed absolute concedendum, quod non locatur.
5. Singulare non intelligitur ab intellectu, nec secundum veritatem, nec secundum eciam opinionem Aristotelis commentatoris et Thome.
6. Licet intellectus non intelliget singulariter, ab ipso tamen est quod perfecte cognoscatur singulare.
7. Quelibet res quecunque sit illa, in puritate sui esse constituta, est intelligens, intellectus et intellectum.
8. Ex predicta conclusione habetur, quare materia sit principium incognoscibilitatis, et intellectus agens cognoscibilitatis.
9. Illa dicitur actio immanens, que non est subiectiue in illo, quod passiuie per causam denominatur, et per hoc distinguitur a transcunte.
10. Omnis alius modus preter eum, quem predixit precedens conclusio, est insufficiens ad distinguendum actionem immanentem atranseunte.
11. Cum dicit Auenrois, non esse aliud medium ad probandum abstractum preter eternitatem motus, non intelligit de quocunque abstracto, sed de eo quod ultimato gradu abstractionis est abstractum a corpore.
12. Esse corporeum non habet res ab aliqua forma substantiali, vel gradu forme substantialis.
13. Sex transcendentia, que posuit communis doctrina, a iunioribus latinis sunt efficta: ea et Greci peripatetici, et princeps eorum Aristotelis nescit.
14. Necessarium est apud Aristotelem primam causam movere de necessitate.
15. Impossibile est, et omnino irrationale apud Aristotelem omnis euenire de necessitate, respectu cuiusque cause illa necessitas accipiatur.
16. Tractatus suppositionum ad Logicum non pertinent.

17. Non potuit mundus esse a Deo ab eterno efficienter, efficientia vera, que est reductio de potentia ad actum.
18. Potuit produci et fuit de facto secundum Aristotelem et Commentatorem productus ab eterno mundus a deo, efficiencia que est naturalis fluxus et effectualis consecutio.
19. Qui negat celum esse animatum, ita ut motor eius non sit forma eius, non solum Aristoteli repugnat, sed totius philosophie fundamenta destruit.
20. In actibus nostri intellectus non est successio ratione potenciarum sensitivarum et deseruiencium, ut credunt moderni, sed eo quia rationalis est.
21. Noticia de nouo acquisita fit ex precedenti cognitione tanquam ex termino a quo, et tanquam ex causa effectiua parciali, formali, directiua, et tanquam ex causa predisponente materiali.
22. Ille habitus est practicus, qui est formaliter regulatiuus alicuius operationis habituati.
23. Habitus habet esse practicum et speculatiuum ab objecto relato ad subiectum in quo est: Intellectus autem dicitur practicus vel speculatiuus a fine, quam sibi proponit habituatus.
24. Habitus practicus a speculatiuo finibus distinguitur.
25. Praxis est operatio, que non est formaliter cognicio, et potest esse recta et non recta, rectificabilis per habitum, et per parciale rectificationis effectiuum, quo practicans habituatur.
26. Practicum et speculatiuum sunt difference accidentales habitus.
27. Theologia viatoris ut viatoris est, simpliciter practica dicenda est.
28. Totam medicinam practicam esse, et ut verum asserimus, et ut consonum dictis et sentencie Auenrois.
29. Logica est practica.
30. Sensus communis non est distinctus a sensu visus, auditus, odoratus, gustus, et tactus.
31. Non dari species intelligibiles a phantasmatibus abstractas, et ut veram, et Commentatoris et Alberti sentencias asserimus.
32. In omni questione per demonstrationem scibili oportet precognoscere quid subiecti et passionis, non intelligendo per quid, quid nominis, ut intelligunt expositores, sed quid rei.

33. Possibilis est regressus a causa ad effectum absque negociacione quam somniat Burleus.
34. Tenentes minima naturalis in qualitatibus, non propterea habent negare motum alterationis fieri in tempore succesive.
35. Necessarium est tenere secundum Auenroem, quod forma generis sit realiter alia a forma speciei, nec oppositum stat cum principiis doctrine sue.
36. Demonstratio Aristotelis in VII. physicorum quod omne, quod mouetur, mouetur ab alio, nichil probat eorum, que vel Thomas, vel Scotus, vel Egidius, quem sequitur Johannes de Gandauo, vel Gratiadeus, vel Burleus, vel alii, quos ego legerim, intendunt. Sed tantum, quod optime dixit Commentator, a latinis omnibus expositoribus male intellectus, et est, quod in quolibet moto, motor est alius a mobili vel secundum naturam, vel secundum subiectum.
37. Demonstratio VII. physicorum probat euidenter, quod celum non mouetur a se, datis principis Auenrois, veris utique et firmissimis.
38. Ordo librorum naturalis philosophie ab Aristotele tradite est iste: liber physicorum, celi et mundi, de generatione, meteorum, mineralium, de plantis, de generibus animalium, de partibus animalium, de progressu animalium, de anima, tum libri que dicuntur parui naturales.
- Correlarium. Qui librum de anima sextum naturalium vocant, ab Aristotelis mente omnino discordant.
39. Omnis via saluans dictum Aristotelis, quod venti orientales sint calidiores occidentalibus, preter viam animacionis celi, est friuola et nulla.
40. Nec ab Aristotele, nec ab expositoribus adducte rationes, de salsadine maris sunt sufficientes, nec potest ulla, maxime stante Mosaica veritate sufficiencior assignari, quam causalitas eiusdem universalis prouidence, que et in terra disoperationem operata est.
41. Nulla pars celi differt ab alia secundum lucidum et non lucidum, sed secundum magis et minus lucidum.
42. Modus ab Aristotele datum, quomodo calefiant inferiora a superioribus, nullo modo rectus apparet.
43. Nec duo stant simul, et ambo credo simul esse vera, et quod ratio Auenrois ubi commento ultimo primi physicorum contra Avicennam concludat, et omnes hec rationes Avicenne ad probandum primum principum sunt bone et efficaces.
44. Si intelligencias esse in genere secundum Aristotelem, dixerit Thomas, non minus sibi, quam Aristoteli repugnabit.

45. Si unitas generis non est solum ex parte concipientis, sed etiam ex parte concepti, necesse est quecunque sunt in eodem genere logico esse in eodem genere physico.
46. Sciencia est realiter relatiua, et scibile ad eam per accidens refertur.
47. Tenendo communem modum doctorum, quod scilicet de Deo aliquid formaliter predicetur, dico duas conclusiones proximas, quarum hec est prima: Quod solum Deus ita est substantia, quod nullo modo est non substantia.
48. Secunda: Deus ideo non est in genere, quia est substantialiter substantia.
49. Ponere differentias inter similitatem et albedinem, aut consimilia accidentia, per hoc quod illud separabile sit, illud inseparabile a certo subiecto, fictium est.
50. Differentia que inter suprascripta accidentia apparet ex sola voluntaria nominum impositione originatur.
51. Necessarium est dicere secundum Auenroem, quod substantia est de intrinseca quiditate accidentis, et est opinio et Aristotelis et philosophie maxime consona.
52. In definitione substantiarum naturalium non esse ponendam materiam, et Auenroi et Alberto consentanea sententia est.
53. Si Thomas dixerit, in intelligentiis secundum Aristotelem esse accidentia, non Aristoteli modo, sed sibi ipso contradicet.
54. Iste propositiones sunt concedende, ut omnino vere. Materia prima sit asinus, bos et similis.
55. In composito materiali non sunt due precise entitates et distincte, sed una entitas.
56. Sonus non est motus aëris intercepti inter duo corpora se percutiente, ut tenet Aristoteles et expositores eius, sed ex contactu talium vel talium corporum, talem vel talem sonum causari dico.
57. Rationes quas adducunt peripatetici ad probandum, quod in causis essentialiter ordinatis non eatur in infinitum, non conuincunt de necessitate falsitatem positi.
58. Virtutem sensitivam sensus communis, sicuti non a virtutibus sensitivis sensuum exteriorum, ut dixit conclusio XXX, ita nec a virtutibus sensitivis sensuum interiorum, phantastica, siue imaginatiua, cogitatiua, et memoratiua, subiecto, id est, re differre, et ut veram, et ut Aristotelis Platonisque sententiam asserimus.

59. Dico omnes qualitates elementorum symbolas esse diuersarum specierum.
60. Si qua est ponenda figura quarta syllogismorum, illa est ponenda, quam Galienus ponit, non ut Franciscus Maironis, et Petrus Mantuanus pueriliter confinxerunt, rectius est tamen nullam ponere.
61. De materia, ut ex ea per se fiunt res, tractare metaphysicum, physicum autem, ut ex ea res fiunt per accidens, habemus dicere secundum doctrinam Aristotelis.
62. Dictio exclusiua addita uni relatiuo, correlarium non excludit.
63. Non debet concedi partem in toto quantitatio a suo toto esse aliquo modo actu distinctam.
64. Opinio que Avicenne ascribitur, quod illud unum, quod cum ente convertitur, sit unum quod est principium numeri, et ita consequenter, quod unqueque res sit una per intencionem additam essencie sue, si non est necessario vera, est tamen probabilis, et defendetur a se.
65. Licet potencia intellectiua in nobis sit accidens, in angelis tamen est substantia.
66. Formalitas est actualitas apta per se perficere possibilem intellectum.
67. Si ex concursu elementorum fiat mixtum, quocunque modo ponantur elementa manere, immixto fiet mixtum ex elementis, ut ex materia digesta a calido spirituali vaporoso eleuato in eis.
68. In omnibus infra Deum eadem est materia secundum essenciam, diversa secundum esse.
69. Quiditates physicarum naturarum adequato concepto et proprio, concipi possunt sine accidentibus, siue a metaphysico, siue a physico considerantur.
70. Corpus organicum, quod est materia anime, et ponitur in diffinitione eius ab Aristotele, est corpus et organicum per formam essentialiter distinctam ab anima eum perficiente.
71. Secundum omnes philosophos dicendum est, Deum necessario agere quicquid agit.
72. Qui dubitat ex inteiligibili et intellectu magis vere et substantialiter fieri unum, quam ex materia et forma materiali, non est philosophus.
73. Tenendo opinionem de anima intellectiua, quam tenet commentator, uidetur michi racionabiliter tenendum illam animam nullius accidentis esse subiectum, et positionem hanc tanquam veram defendam, quamquam utrum hoc ille tenuerit, ego non definio.
74. Dico secundum Thomam dicendum esse, in actu reflexo intellectus consistere beatitudinem nostram.

75. Diffinitio nature celestis comprehendit, et ly, et copulatiue tenetur, et non disiunctiue.
76. Sicut quilibet philosophus habet dicere, quod virtutes sensitiue sunt in corde, ita quilibet medicus habet dicere, quod sint in cerebro.
77. Quod dicitur a communi schola philosophantium omnium latinorum de prima operatione intellectus, error est, quia non est alia operatio partis rationalis quam ille due, quas ipsi secundam et terciam ponunt. Compositio scilicet et discursus.
78. Accidentia nullo modo debent dici essencia, sed entis.
79. Sex principia sunt forme absolute.
80. Si qua est lingua prima et non casualis, illam esse hebraicam multis patet coniecturis.

[31] Conclusiones paradoxe numero LXXI. secundum opinionem propriam noua in philosophia dogmata inducentes.

1. Sicut esse proprietatum preeditur ab esse quiditatiuo, ita esse quiditatum proceditur ab esse uniali.
2. Non possumus dicere, quod de re precisissime sumpta, aliquid predicetur predicatione proprie dicta.
3. Qui attingit rem in diffinitione, attingit rem in alteritate.
4. Solus ille, qui attingit rem in precisione sue unionis, attingit rem, ut est ipsa.
5. Quanto unusquisque modus cognitionis est eminentior, tanto in intellectu disproportionate imperfectior euadit et illi inutilior.
6. Sicut cognitio per demonstrationem habita homini pro communi statu, quem hic experiamur, est perfectissima cognitio, ita simpliciter inter cognitiones est imperfectissima.
7. Sicut Deus est simpliciter cognitio totius esse, ita intellectus est diffinitio totius esse, et anima sciencia totius esse.
8. Si theologia theologice traditur, erit ut de primo subiecto, de eo, quod est unialiter unum, et de quolibet, quod est secundum suum esse uniale tanquam de subiecto secundano.

9. Vera Metaphysica, tradita metaphysicaliter, est de quolibet quod est vera forma, ut de primo subiecto, et de quolibet quod est secundum suum esse formale tanquam de obiecto secundario in modo procedendi demonstrationem negligens.

10. Sicut in creatura non valet consequentia. Est ens, ergo est, ita in Deo non valet, est, ergo est ens.

11. Eadem res in creature ratione sue actualitatis dicitur esse, et ratione sue determinationis dicitur essentia.

12. Sicut angelus necessario componitur ex essentia et esse, ita anima necessario componitur ex substantia et accidente.

13. Contradictoria in natura actuali se compatiuntur.

14. Licet sit vera precedentis conclusio, tamen magis proprie dicitur, quod in natura intellectuali non sint contradictoria, quam quod se compatiuntur.

15. Contradictoria coincidunt in natura uniali.

16. Racionabiliter posuit Aristoteles in suis scienciis, primum principium de quolibet dici alterum contradictorium, et de nullo simul.

17. In intellectu est hoc et illud, sed non est hoc extra illud.

18. Ideo in anima apparet impossibilitas contradictorium, quia est prima quantitas ponens partem in extra partem.

19. Unumquodque in natura intellectuali habet a suo intelligibili unitate, et quod quodlibet sibi uniat, et quod immaculatum ac impermixtam sibi suam seruet proprietatem.

20. Ipseitas uniuscuiusque tunc maxime est ipsa cum in ipsa sunt omnia, ut in ipsa omnia sint ipsa.

21. Per predictas conclusiones intelligi potest, que sit omiomeria Anaxagore, quam Opifex intellectus distinguit.

22. Nemo miretur, quod Anaxagoras intellectum appellaverit immixtum, cum sit maxime mixtus, quia maxime mixcio coincidit cum maxima simplicitate in natura intellectuali.

23. Sicut forme substantiales in secundo mundo sunt per modum accidencium, ita forme accidentales sunt in primo mundo per modum substantiarum. Correlatiuum. Sicut in primo mundo non est album, sed albedo, ita in secundo mundo non est ignis, sed igneum.

24. Non potest dici, quod in intellectu ideo, verbi gratia, ignis, aqua, et aëris, sint tres idee, sed oportet dicere quod sunt ternarius.

25. Nisi destruamus naturam intellectualem, non possumus intelligere ideas numerari, nisi per intentionem idee numeri per reliquas, sicut est cuiuslibet per omnes.

26. Ex precedentibus conclusionibus potest intelligi, qui sit formalis numerus, quem dixit Pythagoras esse principium omnium rerum.

27. Quinque ponenda sunt prima predicamenta: Unum, Substantia, Quantitas, Qualitas, et ad aliquid.

28. Rectius ad quinque suprascripta reducitur encium diversitas, quam ad decem, qua Architas primum, deinde Aristoteles posuit, vel quinque, que ponit Plotinus, vel ad quatuor, que ponunt Stoici.

29. Ratio predicamenti unius est absoluta precisio ab omni extraneo.

30. Ratio predicamenti substantie est unita perfectio imparticipate substantie.

31. Ratio predicamenti quantitatis est extrapositio partis ad partem.

32. Ratio predicamenti qualitatis, est veritas denominationis per inherentem participationem.

33. Ratio predicamenti ad aliquid est esse imaginarium.

34. Nullum est predicatum formale imparticipatum, quod parcialiter predicari non possit de intelligencia.

35. Sicut de solo intellectu vere dicitur, quod est ignis, et quod est aqua, quod est motus, et quod est status, ita de sola anima vere dicitur, quod frigeat, quod caleat, quod stat, quod mouetur.

36. Sicut intellectus dei unitatem multiplicat, ita anima intellectus multitudinem quantificat et extendit.

37. Primum intelligibile cum primo intellectu, et primum mobile cum primo sciente coincidit.

38. In animis deterioris nota est ratio per modum sensus, in animis sublimioribus est sensus per modum rationis.

39. Dictum illud mirabile illius barbari Nympharum et Daemonum consortis de CLXXXIII mundis in figura triangulari cum tribus unitatibus angularibus, et una media constitutis, rectissime intelligetur, si ab unitate intelligibili trinitatem intellectualem, animalem, et seminalem, et principalium mundi partium per primum sphericum numerum computationem intellexerimus.

40. Posse animam per viam purgatoriam absque alio studio vel investigatione per solam modicam et facillimam collationem et advertenciam super iam desuper habita intelligibilia perfectam omnium scibilium scienciam acquirere, non solum Platonici philosophi, sed etiam inter Peripateticos hi, de quibus minus videtur, Avenrois sequaces, habent concedere.

41. Sicut se habet sensus communis in cognitione accidentalium qualitatum, et qualitatis materialis, ita se habet ratio in cognitione substancialium qualitatum et quantitatis formalis, servata proporcione, quod ille sensualiter, hec racionaliter agit.

42. Infinitas Dei per superexcedenciam ad esse intellectuale et viam mystice Theologie probari potest, et ad id probandum omnia alia via inefficax est.

43. Actus que felicitatur natura angelica et rationalis ultima felicitate, non est actus intellectus, nec voluntatis, sed est unio unitatis, que est in alteritate anime cum unitate, que est sine alteritate.

44. Aristoteles in libro Metaphysice de Deo non tractat nisi in ultimo capitulo duodecimi quod incipit: Considerandum est etiam vtroum modo universum habet bonum.

45. Ordo librorum metaphysice post naturales eo modo, quo eos ordinavit Aristoteles, secundum nullum processum, siue compositium, siue resolutium, potest esse rectus.

46. Dato quocunque objecto practicabili, nobilior est operatio, que eum praticat, quam que eum contemplatur, Si cetera sint paria.

47. Melius potest saluari textus Aristotelis, qui dicit omnem animam esse immortalem, quam qui dicit omnem animam esse mortalem.

48. Preter tria demonstrationis genera: quia, propter quid, et simpliciter, que ponunt Aristoteles et Commentator, datur quartus genus demonstrationis, que dici potest demonstratio conversibilitatis fortius omnibus predictis.

49. Magis improprie dicitur de Deo, quod sit intellectus vel intelligens, quam de anima rationali, quod sit angelus.

50. Sola materia sufficit ad id saluandum, cuius gracia Aristoteles et alii philosophi priuacionem inter principia naturalis posuerunt.

Correlarium. Priuacio non est ponenda inter principia naturalia.

51. Tria sunt principia rerum naturalium, materia, motus, et forma.
52. Eadem est sciencia de Deo, homine, et materia prima, et qui de vno scienciam habuerit, habebit et de reliquis seruata proporcione extremi ad extremum, medii ad extrema, et extremorum ad media.
53. Qui primam materiam negat, nec sensui contradicit, nec rationem physicam negat.
54. Ad probandum primam materiam esse, magis certificatur vel via numerorum, vel via catholice philosophie, quam vlla ratio physica, in qua sensus habeat introitum.
55. Qui ordinem hebraice lingue profunde et radicaliter tenuerit, atque illum proporcionaliter in scientiis seruare noverit, cuiuscunque scibilis perfecte inveniendi normam et regulam habebit.
56. Preter distinctionem rei et rationis ponenda est distinctio tertia, quam ego appello inadequationis.
57. Species inimicitie, que a lupo ad ouis estimatiuam multiplicantur, non accidentis alicuius, sed substantie species sunt.
58. Formalitas est adequatum obiectum intellectus.

60. Nichil intelligit actu et distincte anima nisi ipsam.
61. Tota substantia anime rationalis est pars intellectualis.
62. Anima se ipsam semper intelligit, et se intelligendo quodammodo omnia entia intelligit.
63. Quamuis in anima ita sit actu natura intellectualis, per quam cum angelo conuenit, sicut est natura rationalis, per quam ab eo distinguitur. Nichil tamen intrinsecum est in ea, per quod possit sine propria specie aliquid a se distinctum intelligere.
64. Intellectualis natura que est in anima rationali, supra naturam rationalem, precise differt a natura intellectuali pura, sicut differt pars a toto.
65. Quia intellectus animalis differt ab intellectu intellectuali, ut pars media, non ut pars tantum, ideo intellectuali totalitati magis pacificatur.
66. Potest anima per intrinsecam informationem ad hoc deuenire, ut omnia per substantialem suam formam indivisibiliter intelligat.

67. Cuilibet seriei animarum vnus correspondet purus intellectus.

68. Omnes anime celestes in primo intellectu vnum sunt.

69. Racionabile est secundum philosophiam omnem seriem animalem in proprio beatificari intellectu, quod tamen non, assertiue, sed probabiliter dictum sit.

70. Cum tres fuerint, qui dicerent omnis esse vnum, Zenophanes, Parmenides, et Melissus, dicebit qui diligenter eorum dicta perscrutabitur, Zenophanis unum illud esse, quod est simpliciter vnum. vnum Parmenidis non vnum absolute, vt creditur, sed ens vnum. vnum Melissi esse vnum habens ad vnum Zenophanis extremalem correspondenciam.

71. Empedocles per litem et amiciciam in anima nichil aliud intelligit, quam potenciam sursum ductiuam et deorum ductiuam in quas ego credo proporcionari in sciencia Sephirot eternitati et decori.

[32] Conclusiones in Theologia numero XXIX. secundum opinionem propriam a communi modo dicendi Theologorum satis diverse.

1. Qui dixerit accidens existere non posse, nisi inexistat, Eucharistie poterit sacramentum tenere, eciam tenendo panis substantiam non remanere, vt tenet communis via.

2. Si teneatur communis via de possibilitate suppositionis in respectu ad quantumque creaturam, dico, quod sine conversione panis in corpus Christi vel paneitatis annihilatione potest fieri, vt in altari sit corpus Christi secundum veritatem sacramenti Eucharistie, quod sit dictum loquendo de possibili, non de sic esse.

3. Ideales rerum formalesque rationes effectiue a deo in prima creata mente formaliter primo reperiri, cum theologica veritate tenemus.

Correlarium. vbi idee sunt idealiter, ibi non sunt formaliter, vbi sunt formaliter, ibi non sunt idealiter.

4. Si ponamus Deum cognoscere creaturas, vt obiectum secundarium sue intuicionis, vt communiter ponitur, dico, quod pater prius producit verbum, quam creatura cognoscat.

5. Attributales perfectiones nec in Deo, nec secundum se quiditatiue sumpta dicunt diversas rationes in recto, et principaliter diffinibiles, vel descriptibiles.

6. Intuitus divine cognitionis ad creaturas tanquam ad obiecta primaria vel secundaria formaliter non terminatur, vt dicit communis scola theologorum, sed se tantum, et nichil aliud a se intuens primarie nec secundarie.
- Correlarium. Non est aliqua multitudo intellectorum in Deo nec creature, ut intellecte ponunt in numerum cum divina essentia vt intellecta, sed est penitus vnum simplicissimum intellectum.
7. Tria transcendentia in quibus consistit imago, non dicunt diversas rationes in recto, et principaliter diffinibiles vel descriptibiles.
8. Cristus non veraciter, et quantum ad realem presentiam descendit ad inferos, vt ponit Thomas et communis via, sed solum quoad effectum.
9. Licet ita michi videatur probabile, non est tamen pertinaciter asserendum, quod anima christi per alium modum nobis ignotum non potuerit in infernum descendere.
10. Illa verba, Hoc est corpus, etc., que in consecratione dicuntur, materialiter tenentur non significatiue.
11. Si teneatur communis via, quod actu intellectus attingatur Deus, dico duas sequentes conclusiones, quarum haec est prima, quod videntes verbum eo actu, quo essenciam diuinam attingunt, creaturas non attingunt nisi eminenter aequipollenter ad formalem cognitionem, equipollencia non actus, sed obiecti.
12. Beati duplicem habent cognitionem de creaturis eas formaliter attingentem, quarum altera illatiue est ex ea qua verbum attingunt, altera secundum quam in re creata creaturam contemplantur.
13. Non assentior communi sentencie theologorum dicentium, posse Deum quamlibet naturam suppositare, sed de rationali tantum hoc concedo.
14. Nec crux Cristi, nec ulla imago, adoranda est adoracione latrerie, eciam eo modo quo ponit Thomas.
15. Si non peccasset Adam, Deus fuisset incarnatus, sed non crucificatus.
16. In quo lumine Iohannes Apocalipsim vidit, in eo apocalipsim non intellexit.
17. Primum peccatum angeli fuit peccatum ommissionis, secundum peccatum luxurie, tertium peccatum superbie.
18. Dico probabiliter, et nisi esset communis modus dicendi Theologorum, in oppositum firmiter assererem: assero tamen hoc dictum in se esse probabile, id est, quod sicut nullus opinatur aliquid ita esse precise, quia vult sic opinari, ita nullus credit aliquid esse verum precise, quia vult credere id esse verum.

Correlarium. Non est in potestate libera hominis credere articulum fidei esse verum, quando placet, et credere eum esse falsum, quando sibi placet.

19. Nisi essent dicta sanctorum, que in manifesto sui sermonis videntur dicere oppositum, firmiter assererem hanc, et sequentem conclusionem, essere tamen eas probabiles esse et defendi posse rationabiliter, quarum prima est, quod peccatum mortale in se est malum finitum.

20. Secunda est, quod peccato mortali finiti temporis non debetur pena infinita secundum tempus, sed finita tantum.

21. Non omnis voluntas Dei beneplaciti est efficax.

22. Dictum apostoli dicentis, Deus vult omnes homines salus fieri, positue de voluntate beneplaciti antecedente intelligenda est.

23. Voluntas antecedens sic potest describi. Voluntas Dei antecedens est illa, que Deus dat alicui naturalia vel antecedencia, quibus potest aliquid consequi, cui Deus paratus est coagere si alius velit, nec sibi contrarium manifestabit cum precepto vel consilio exequendi, permittens eum libere velle agere ad consequutionem sue salutis.

24. Tenendo communem viam Theologorum, quod felicitas sit in intellectu vel in voluntate, dico duas conclusiones, quarum prima est hec: Quod intellectus ad felicitatem non perueniret nisi esset actus voluntatis, qui in hoc est ipso actu intellectus potior.

25. Secunda conclusio est hec. Licet actus intellectus formaliter felicitantis attingat obiecti essenciam, tamen quod actus suus circa ilium actus sit felicitatis, formaliter habet ab actu voluntatis.

26. Persone in divinis numero distinguuntur.

27. Personalitates in divinis sunt primo diverse.

28. Theologice loquendo, dico, quod in aevo non est successio formaliter intrinseca continuatiua, sed bene terminatiua, secundum phiiosophos tamen aliter dicerem.

29. Racionabilius est credere Origenem esse saluum, quam credere ipsum esse damnatum.

[33] Conclusiones secundum propriam opinionem numero LXII. in doctrinam Platonis, de qua pauca hic adducuntur, quia prima paradoxa conclusio totam sibi assumit Platonis doctrinam discutiendam.

1. Per numeros triplares, quas a Platone in Timeo ponuntur in triangulo animam significante, admonemur quousque in formis numerandis sit progrediendum per naturam illius, quod est prima forma formans. Per numeros vero duplares ibidem positos admonemur, quatenus positus duobus extremis terminis coordinanda sunt media per naturam eius, quod est medium in universo.
2. Cum queritur a Platone, an ad exemplar genitum an ingenitum factum sit mundus, nichil aliud queritur, nisi an ad animales rationes, an ad ideas intellectuales.
3. Qui noverit modum illuminationis superiorum super media, intelligat idem significare et Platonicos per congregationem animarum in monte Ida, et Hebreos per congregationem in monte Synao in auditione legis.
4. Qui sciverit rationem cause presupponere rationem perfecti, intelliget iuxta platonice doctrinam, quare dixerit Pherecides, non prius Iouem mundum fabricasse, quam in amorem fuerit transformatus.
5. Empedocles per spheram intelligibilem a Venere contentam, nichil aliud intelligit, quam mundum archetypum ab ordine intra ea manentia prime providencie contentum.
6. Ideo amor ab Orpheo sine oculis dicitur, quia est supra intellectum.
7. Cum dicit Plato in Timaeo, in medio mundi positam animam, quicquid dicant ceteri Platonici, ego per medium Lunam intelligo.
8. Infra habitum terminati entis, recte quinque illa Platonis pro transcendentibus ponuntur: Ens, Idem, Alterum, Status, et Motus.
9. Platonice loquendo de anima, dico animam vivere cum Saturno vitam contemplativam, cum Ioue politicam et practicam, cum Marte irascibilem et ambiciosam, cum Venere concupiscibilem et voluptuosam, cum Mercurio vegetalem cum stupido sensu.
10. Ex precedenti conclusione habetur, que sit virga Mercurii soporifera.
11. Prima septenerius vite humane est sub Mercurio, secundus sub Venere, tercius sub Marte, Quartus sub Ioue, quintus sub Saturno, et reliqui septenarii secundum eum, qui fuerit predominatus in precedentibus.
12. Predictis vitis cooperantur Sol et Luna, ut cause universales, et per appropriationem, Luna Mercurio et Saturno, Sol Veneri et Marti, simul uterque Ioui.

13. Si Syriani theologiam sequamur, rationabile est ecclesiastice hierarchie sacerdotes in celestia hierarchia anagogice virtutibus proporcionari.

14. Cum Platonem audimus Palladem et amorem philosophos deos vocantem, ita intelligemus, ut amor sit philosophus ratione vie, Pallas ratione termini.

15. Per extremorum et medii rationem, cognoscere possumus conuenienter universi gradus sic in quinque posse dividi. Insuper ens, vere ens, non vere non ens, vere non ens.

16. Per ipsum tale, vere tale, semper tale, in Platonis doctrina debemus intelligere proprietatem intellectus, anime, et primorum corporum.

17. Si Syriani doctrinam sequamur, conueniens est per unitatem totalis, intellectualis, que et trifariam diniditur, in substantialem, potentialem, et operatiuam, ponere trinarium intelleccionis, partialis scilicet participate et imaginarie.

18. Quidquid dicant ceteri Platonici de rationalis anime parcium distinctione assero ego, si νοῦν id est rationalem partem, in διανοιαν et αἰσθησιν dividamus, eandem partem ut phantasie coniungitur δοξαστιχον dici, ut intellectui λογιστιχον, ut sibi ipsi.

19. Possibile est ut pars rationalis anime nostre, quam secundum peripateticos possibilem intellectum voco, ad hoc perueniet, ut sine coniunctione ad phantasmata discurret et operetur.

20. Perfectius et verius reperitur pluchritudo in intelligibilibus, quam in sensibus.

21. Cum dicit Plato, amorem natum ex congressu Panis et Pori in ortis Iouis, in natalibus Veneris diis discumbentibus, nichil aliud intelligit, quam in angeli mente tunc primum amorem, id est desiderium pluchritudinis esse natum, cum in eo idearum splendor imperfectior tamen refulsi.

22. Amor de quo in Symposio loquiritur Plato, in deo nullo modo esse potest.

23. Per duplicem Venerem, de quo in Symposio Platonis, nichil aliud intelligere debemus, quam duplicem pulchritudinem, sensibilem et intellectualem.

24. Pulchritudo est in Deo per causam, in totali intellectu vere essencialiter totaliter, in particulari intellectu vere parcialiter essencialiter, in anima rationali vere participaliter, in visibilibus celi accidentalibus imaginarie parcialiter essencialiter, in substantialibus qualitatibus visibilibus imaginarie parcialiter essencialiter, in quantitibus imaginarie participaliter.

27. Cum dicit Plato, Omne quod fit a causa fierit, referendum est per se ad per se, et per accidens ad per accidens.

28. Cum dixit Plato in Timeo, ex individua dividuaque substantia conflatam animam, per individuum substantiam animalem intellectum significavit, per dividuum animalem rationem.

29. Non est credendum in doctrina Platonis animam quicquam intelligere per inspectionem ad ideas, nisi cum paruenit ad illum statum, qui est supremus gradus contemplatiue perfectionis.

Correlarium. Errant qui credunt secundum Platonem, quod ea, que nos quotidie cognoscimus et intellegimus, in idearum lumine cognoscamus.

30. Modus cognoscendi per ideas est ille, cuius dixit Plato in Timmeo paucos homines esse participes, sed bene deos omnes.

31. Exponere in Fabula Cricie per quinque partus, quinque formas corporis, omnino est inconueniens.

32. Per aliam vitam in Epinomide intelligere debemus connexionem partis cum suo toto, et credo idem esse, quod apud Cabalistas dicitur seculum venturum.

33. Qualiter verum sit, quod in Epinomide dicitur, Arithmeticam scienciam inter omnes speculatinas maxime facere ad felicitatem, intelligi potest per conclusiones nostras de mathematicis.

34. Per celum in Epinomide, quod dicit Plato, esse nobis causam omnium bonorum, non ideam celi, sed ipsum celum, quod celeste animal intelligere debemus.

35. Per necessitatis regnum in Symposio Platonis, nichil aliud intelligere debemus quam superabundanciam nature alterius supra naturam eiusdem, et infiniti supra terminum.

36. Per demonstrationem Platonis in Phedro de anime immortalitate, nec de nostris animis, ut Proclus, Hermias, et Syrianus credunt, nec de omni anima, ut Plotinus et Numenius, nec de mundi tantum anima, ut Poseidonius, sed de celesti qualibet anima probatur, et concluditur immortalitas.

37. Tempus essencialiter est in incorporeis, participatine in corporeis.

38. Tempus, ubi habet esse essenciale, habet esse totaliter extra animam.

39. Tempus habet ab anima suum esse participatum, a prima quidem anima per modum effectiue causalitatis, ut ultima vero per modum obiectiue consequutionis.

40. Motus primi celi, et universaliter, quilibet motus eius localis, siue alteracionis, secundario et per accidens tempore mensuratur.

41. Licet natura intellectualis simul omnia intelligat, non tamen hoc est per virtutem et unitivam continenciam, sed per mutuam penetrationem formarum, et indissociatam concatenacionem totius esse participati, id est, formalis.

42. Per demonstracionem Platonis in Phedro de immortalitate anime, firmitus demonstratur eternitas mundi, quam per ullam rationem Aristotelis in VIII. Physicorum.

43. Cur homo non possit non videri si sit presens, a recte disposito in potencia visiva, demon autem tunc solum videatur, cum vult videri, ex modo quo unusquisque eorum videtur haberi potest.

44. Sicut et videtur et auditur homo ab homine, per motionem sensus ad extra, ita et videtur et auditur demon ab homine et demone per motionem sensus ad intra.

45. Sensus nature, quam ponunt Alchindus, Bacon, Guilielmus Parisiensis, et quidem alii, maxime autem omnes Magi, nichil est aliud quam sensus vehiculi, quam ponunt Platonici.

46. Cum dicit Plato, neminem nisi inuitum peccare, nichil aliud intelligitur, quam illud quod Thomas tenet, scilicet, non posse esse peccatum in voluntate, nisi sit defectus in ratione.

47. Providentia est statutiua in Deo, ordinatiua in intelligencia, executiua in anima, denunciatiua in celo, terminatiua in toto universo.

48. Non solum per dicta in Epimenide et Philebo a Platone, in quibus dialogis expresse ponit Plato felicitatem in contemplacione, sed per dicta in Phedro de furore amatorio, constat secundum Platonem non esse felicitatem in actu amoris, quia furor non est felicitas, sed impetus et estrum concitans, urgens et impellens ad felicitatem.

49. Ex eo nomine, que dei nominant amorem, patet diligenter advertenti, quod in actu amoris non est felicitas.

50. Ista propositio in Phedro. Omnia anima totius inanimati curam habet simpliciter de quacunque vere anima, intelligenda est.

51. Ex dicto illo Platonis in Phedro, quod nisi anima hominis ea, que vere sunt intuita esset, in hoc animal non venisset, si recte intelligatur, quod opinio Plotini ponens transmigrationem animarum in bruta, non est ad mentem Platonis.

52. Ex oratione Socratis in Phedro ad Pana, habetur complete opinio Platonis de felicitate.

53. Opinio Cratili de nominibus ita est intelligenda, non quod talia sint nomina, sed quod talia esse debent, si sint recta.
54. Ideo dixit Socrates in Cratilo se somniare circa ideas, quia ideis non utimur in hoc statu, sed earum imaginibus proximis vel secundariis.
55. Per unum in Sophiste intellige unum in alteritate.
56. Dictum illud in Sophiste, Qui unum non dicit, nichil dicit, illud quod ab Aristotele dicitur, Qui unum non intelligit, nichil intelligit.
57. Dictum illud Platonis in Sophiste de simulachris, que dicit demonica machinatione conficta, et si multis aliis modis possit verificari: conueniens tamen est exponere per hoc, quod illa ut gradum medium in entitate tenent, demonico ordine proportionantur.
58. Venatio illa Socratis, de qua in Protagora, conuenienter per sex gradus potest sic distribui, ut prima sit esse materie extrinsece, Secundus esse particulare immateriale, Tertius esse universale, Quartus esse rationale, Quintus esse particulare intellectuale, Sextus esse totale intellectuale. In septimo tanquam in sabbato, cessandum est a venacione.
59. Qui dicitur in Euthidemo, non in habitu, sed actu consistere felicitatem, intelligo de actu reflexo.
60. Per id quod in Lachete dicitur, Quorumcunque est sciencia, non esse aliam eorundam ut preteritorum, aliam ut presentium, aut aliam ut futurorum, illud potest intelligi tritum apud peripateticos, non esse scienciam nisi universalium.
61. Dictum illud Platonis in Gorgia, Si orator scit iusta, est iustus, dico absoluta secundum se non, ut ad hominem tantum posse saluari, si unum ab alio esse intelligamus non formaliter, sed illatiue.
62. Licet ratio Platonis in Phedone per viam contrariorum absolute non concludat, expositis tamen a Cebete ad hominem, aliquid concludit.

[34] Conclusiones secundum opinionem propriam in doctrina Albucaten Auenan, qui dicitur auctor De Causis, numero X.

1. Cum dixit Abucaten Auenam, animam esse supra tempus, intelligendum est de anima absoluta secundum substantiam, prescindendo ab omni operatione, que competit ei in quantum est anima.

2. Cum dicit Abucaten, omnis anima nobilis tres habet operationes, divinam, intellectualem, et animalem, ita est intelligendum, quod primam habeat per imaginem proportionalitatis, secundam per formalitatem participationis, terciam per proprietatem essentialitatis.
3. Cum dixit Abucaten, Omnem causam primariam plus influere, per plus intelliges eminenciam modi causandi, et intimitatem eius quod in re producitur.
4. Quamuis dicat Abucaten, quod esse quod est primum creatum est super intelligenciam, non credas tamen illud secundum hipostasim esse distinctum ab intelligencia.
5. Cum dixit Abucaten, causam primam superiorem esse omni narratione, non tam propter id habet veritatem, quod prio affert, quia scilicet causam ante se non habet, quam propter id quod secundario innuit, quia omne intelligibile unialiter antecedit.
6. Quod dicit Abucaten, intelligenciam esse substantiam, que non dividitur, maxime est verum, per indiscretam in ea intelligibilium ad inuicem penetracionem.
7. Ex precedenti conclusione potest haberi, quomodo intelligendum est dictum Abucaten, quod omnis intelligencia est plena formis.
8. Per ultinam propositionem Abucaten possumus intelligere, quid sibi velit illa divisio, quam fecit Plato in principio tractatus Timei, et possumus scire, quod sub ea non comprehenditur anima, nisi per viam extremalis combinacionis.
9. Ex antepenultima propositione Abucaten colligi potest, quod declinare plus ad sensum quam ad intellectum, non est anime ut anima est, sed ut cadens est.
10. Cum dicit Abucaten intelligenciam, ut diuma, est regere res, intelligendum est de regirnine statuitiuo, non ordinatiuo, qui Si competit, ut intelligencia est.

[35] Conclusiones de mathematicis secundum opinionem propriam, numero LXXXV.

1. Mathematice non sunt vere scientie.
2. Si felicitas sit in speculatiua perfectione, mathematice non faciunt ad felicitatem.
3. Mathematice sciencie non sunt propter se, sed ut via ad alias sciencias querenda.

4. Sicut subiecta mathematicorum, si absolute accipiantur, intellectum nihil perficiunt, ita si ut (imagines) accipiantur superiorum, immediate nos ad intelligibilium speculationem manu ducunt.
5. Sicut dictum Aristotelis de antiquis dicentis, quod ideo errarunt in physica contemplatione, quia mathematicae res physicas tractarunt, verum esset, si illi materialiter mathematica non formaliter accipissent, ita est verissimum modernos, qui de naturalibus mathematicae disputant, naturalis philosophiae fundamenta destruere.
6. Nichil magis nocuum theologo, quam frequens et assidua in mathematicis Euclidis exercitatio.
7. Sicut medicina mouet spiritus principaliter, ut regunt corpus, ita musica mouet spiritus, ut seruiunt anime.
8. Medicina sanat animam per corpus, musica autem corpus per animam.

[37] Conclusiones numero XV secundum propriam opinionem de intelligencia dictorum Zoroastris et expositorum eius Chaldeorum.

1. Quod dicunt interpretes chaldei super primum dictum Zoroastris de scala a tartaro ad primum ignem, nichil aliud significat, quam seriem naturarum universi a non gradu materie ad eum, qui est super omnem gradum graduate potensum.
2. Ibidem dico, interpretes nichil aliud per virtutes mysteriales intelligere, quam naturalem magiam.
3. Quod dicunt interpretes super dictum secundum Zoroastris de duplici aëre, aqua, et terra, nichil aliud sibi vult, nisi quodlibet elementum, quod potest dividi per purum et impurum, habere habitatores racionales et irracionales, quod vero purum est tantum, racionales tantum.
4. Ibidem per radices terre nichil aliud intelligere possunt, quam vitam vegetalem, conuenienter addicta Empedoclis, qui ponit transanimacionem eciam in plantis.
5. Ex dicto illo Zoroastris, Ha ha hos, terra deflet usque ad filios, sequendo expositionem Osie Chaldei, expressam habemus veritatem de peccato originali.
6. Dicta interpretum Chaldeorum super XI. aphorismo de duplici ebriacione Bachi et Sileni, perfecte intelligentur per dicta Cabalistarum de duplici vino.
7. Que dicunt interpretes super XIV. aphorismo, perfecte intelligentur per ea, que dicunt Cabaliste de morte osculi.

8. Magi in XVII. aphorismo nichil aliud intelligunt per triplex indumentum, ex lino, panno et pellibus, quam triplex anime habitaculum, celeste, spirituale, et terrenum.

9. Poteris ex precedenti conclusione aliquid intelligere de pelliceis tunicis, quas sibi fecit Adam, et de pellibus, que erant in tabernaculo.

10. Per canem nichil aliud intelligit Zoroaster, quam partem irrationalem anime et proportionalia, quod ita esse nidebit, qui diligenter dicta omnia expositorum consideraverit, qui et ipis sicut et Zoroaster enigmatice loquuntur.

11. Dictum illud Zoroastris, nec exeas cum transit lictor, perfecte intelligitur per illud Exodi, quando sunt prohibiti Israhelite exire domos suas in transito angeli interficientis primogenita egyptiorum.

12. Per Syrenam apud Zoroastrem nichil aliud intelligere, quam partem anime rationalem.

13. Per puerum apud interpretes nichil aliud inteilige, quam intellectus.

14. Per dictum illud Zoroastris, ad huc tres dies sacrificabis, et non ultra, apparuit muchi per arithmetica superioris merchiaue illos computandi dies esse, in eo dicto expresse predictum aduentum Christi.

15. Quid sit intelligendum per capras apud Zoroastrem, intelliget qui legerit in libro Bair, que sit affinitas capris et que agnis cum spiritibus.

[38] Conclusiones Magice numero XXVI secundum opinionem propriam.

1. Tota Magia, que in usu est apud modernos, et quem merito exterminat ecclesia, nullam habet firmitatem, nullum fundamentum, nullam veritatem, quia pendet ex manu hostium prime veritatis, potestatum harum tenebrarum, que tenebras falsitatis, male dispositis intellectibus obfundunt.

2. Magia naturalis licita est, et non prohibita, et de huius scientie universalibus theoricis fundamentis pono infrascriptas conclusiones secundum propriam opinionem.

3. Magia est pars practica sciencie naturalis.

4. Ex ista conclusione et conclusione paradoxa dogmatizante XLVII. sequitur, quod magia sit nobilissima pars scientie naturalis.

5. Nulla est virtus in celo et in terra seminaliter et separata, quam et actuare et unire magus non possit.
6. Quodcumque fiat opus mirabile, siue sit magicum, siue cabalisticum, siue cuiuscunque alterius generis, principatissime referendum est in Deum gloriosum et benedictum, cuius gracia supercelestes mirabilium virtutum aquas super contemplatiuos homines bone voluntatis quotidie pluit liberaliter.
7. Non potuerunt opera Cristi vel per viam magie, vel per viam Cabale fieri.
8. Miracula Cristi non ratione rei facte, sed ratione modi faciendi sue divinitatis argumentum certissimum sunt.
9. Nulla est sciencia, que nos magis certificet de divinitate Cristi, quam magia et cabala.
10. Quod magus homo facit per artem, fecit natura naturaliter faciendo hominem.
11. Mirabilia artis magice non sunt nisi per unionem et actuacionem eorum, que seminaliter et separate sunt in natura.
12. Forma totius magice virtutis est ab anima hominis stante et non cadente.
13. Magicam operari non est aliud quam maritare mundum.
14. Si qua est natura immediata nobis, que sit vel simpliciter, vel saltem ut multum racionaliter rationalis, magicam habet in summo, et eius participatione potest in hominibus esse perfeccior.
15. Nulla potest esse operatio magica alicuius efficacie, nisi annexu habeat opus cabale explicatum, vel implicitum.
16. Illa natura, que est Orizon temporis et eternitatis propria est Mago, sed infra eum.
17. Illius nature, que est Orizon temporis et eternitatis propria est Magia, inde est petenda per modos debitos, notos sapientibus.
18. Illius natura, que est Orizon eternitatis temporalis, est Mago proxima, sed super eum et ei propira est cabala.
19. Ideo voces et verba in magico opere afficienciam habent, quia illud in quo primum magicam exercet natura, vox est Dei.

20. Quelibet vox virtutes habet in magia, in quantum Dei voce formatur.

21. Non significatiue voces plus possunt in magia, quam significatiue, et rationem conclusionis intelligere potest, qui est profundus ex precedenti conclusione.

22. Nulla nomina ut significatiua, et in quantum nomina sunt, singula et per se sumpta, in magico opere virtutem habere possunt, nisi sint hebraica, vel inde proxime deriuata.

23. Quilibet numerus preter ternarium et denarium sunt materiales in magia, isti formales sunt, et in magica arithmetica sunt numeri numerorum.

24 Ex secretioris philosophie principiis necesse est confiteri, plus posse characteres et figuras in opere magico, quam possit quecunque qualitas materialis.

25. Sicut characteres sunt proprii opere magico, ita numeri sunt proprii operi cabale, medio existente inter utrosque, et appropriabili per declinationem ad extrema usu litterarum.

26. Sicut per primi agentis influxum, si sit specialis et immediatus, fit aliquid quod non attingitur per mediacionem causarum, ita per opus cabale, si sit pura Cabala et immediata, fit aliquid, ad quod nulla Magia attingit.

[39] Conclusiones numero XXXI secundum propriam opinionem de modo intelligendi hymnos Orphei secundum Magiam, id est, secretam divinarum rerum naturaliumque sapientiam a me primum in eis repertam.

1. Sicut secretam magiam a nobis primum ex Orphei hymnis elicita, fas non est in publicum explicare, ita nutu quodam ut in infrascriptis fiet conclusionibus eam per aphorismorum capita demonstrasse utile erit ad excitandas contemplatiuorum mentes.

2. Nichil efficientius hymnis Orphei in naturali Magia, si debita musica, animi intencio, et cetere circumstancie, que norunt sapientes, fuerint adhibite.

3. Nomina deorum, quod Orpheus canit, non decipientibus demonum, a quibus malum et non bonum prouenit, sed naturalium virtutum, divinarumque sunt nomina, et vero Deo in utilitatem maxime hominis.

4. Sicut hymni Daud operi Cabale mirabiliter deserniunt, ita hymni Orphei opere vere licite et naturalis Magie.
5. Tantus est numerus hymnorum Orphei, quantus est numerus cum quo Deus triplex creauit seculum, sub quaternarii pythagorici forma numeratus.
6. Quaruncunque virtutum naturalium vel divinarum eadem est proprietatis analogia, idem eciam nomen, idem hymnus, idem opus, seruata proporcione, et qui temptauent exponere, videbit correspondenciam.
7. Qui nescierit perfecte sensibiles proprietates per viam secrete analogie intellectualizare, nichil ex hymnis Orphei sanum intelliget.
8. Qui profunde et intellectualiter divisionem unitatis Veneres in trinitatem Graciarum, et unitatis fatalis, in trinitatem Parcarum, et unitatis Saturni in trinitatem Iouis, Neptuni et Plutonis inteflexerit, videbit, modum debito procedenti in Orphica theologia.
9. Idem sunt Curetes apud Orpheum et potestates apud Dionysium.
10. Qui precedentis conclusionis opus attentauerit, adhibeat opus Cabale secundum apropiata timori Isaac.
11. Frustra Palemonem et Leucotheam adibit, qui Nereum non attraxent, nec Nereum attrahat, qui circa primariam animalem trinitatem operatus non fuerit.
12. Per cotonarium numerum hymnorum maritimorum, corporalis nature nobis proprietates designatur.
13. Idem est Typhon apud Orpheum, et Zemael in Cabala.
14. Si quis in opera precedentis conclusionis intellectualiter operabitur, per meridiem ligabit septentrionem, si vero mundialiter per totum operabitur, iudicium sibi operabitur.
15. Idem est nox apud Orpheum et Ensoph in Cabala.
16. Ex precedenti conclusione potest quis rectius exponere, quam exponat Proclus, quid sibi velit illud dictum theologi inducentis opificem mundi, noctem consulentem de opificio mundano.
17. Ex eiusdem dictis potest intelligi, cur in Symposios Diotima Poros, consilii filius, et Ihjesus in sacris litteris angelus magni consilii nominatur.
18. Anima aquea, ut inferiora generat, superiora contemplatur, in seipsa se sistit, triplici hymno, Maris, Neptuni, et Oceani ab Orpheo decantatur.

19. Nichil habebit firmum in opere, qui Vestam non antraxerit.
20. Per septenarium hymnorum paterne menti attributorum, Protogoni, Palladis, Saturni, Veneris, Rhee, Legis, Bacchi, potest intelligens et profundus contemplator de seculi consumatione aliquid coniectare.
21. Opus precedentium hymnorum nullum est sine opere Cabale, cuius est proprium praticare omnem quantitatem formalem, continuam et discretam.
22. Qui heroas in duplices non diviserit, natiuos et aduenticios, saepe errabit.
23. Qui Apollinem adibit, mediabit opus per Bachum triethericum, et consumabit per nomen inffabile.
24. Non inebriabitur per aliquem Bacchum, qui sue Muse prius copulatus non fuerit.
25. Per quaternarium hymnorum prime forme mundane attributorum sui formabilis nature nobis designatur.
26. Qui perfecte in animarn redierit, prime forme suam formam equaverit.
27. Qui precedentis conclusionis opus tentaverit, Iouem adibit tercium, ut niventem, non ut vivificantem.
28. Frustra adit naturam et Protheum, qui Pana non attraxerit.
29. Sicut post universalem animacionem est particularis animacio, ita post universalem prouidenciam est particularis prouidencia.
30. Ex precedenti conclusione sciri potest, cur Ouidius in execracione in Ibin, post quam inuocauit numen quod terram regit et aquam, terram inuocat et Neptunum.
31. Qui annotaverit diligenter dicta ab Aristotele in exposicione definicionis de anima, videbit cur Orpheus Palladi et Veneri vigilanciam attribuerit.

[40] Conclusiones Cabalistice numero LXXI, secundum opinionem propriam, ex ipsis
Hebreorum sapientum fundamentis Cristianam Religionem maxime confirmantes.

1. Quicquid dicant ceteri Cabaliste, ego prima divisione scienciam Cabale in scienciam Sephiroth et Semot, tanquam in practicam et speculatiuam distinguerem.
2. Quicquid dicant alii cabaliste, ego partem speculatiuam Cabale quadruplicem divideram, correspondenter quadruplici partitioni philosophie, quam ego solitus sum affere. Prima est scientia, quam ego voco alphabetarie reuolucionis, correspondentem parti philosophie, quam ego philosophiam catholicam voco. Secunda, tertia et quarta pars est triplex merchiaua, correspondentes triplici philosophie particularis, de divinis, de mediis, et sensibilibus naturis.
3. Sciencia, que est pars practica Cabale, practicat totam metaphysicam formalem et theologiam inferiorem.
4. Ensoph non est aliis numeracionibus connumeranda, quia est illarum numeracionum unitas abstracta et incommunicata, non unitas coordinata.
5. Quilibet hebreus Cabalista secundum principia et dicta sciencie Cabale, cogitur ineuitabiliter concedere de trinitate et qualibet persona divina, patre, filio, et spiritu sancto, illud precise sine additione vel diminutione, aut variatione, quod ponit fides catholica cristianorum.

Correlarium. Non solum qui negat trinitatem, sed qui alio modo eam ponunt, quam ponat catholica ecclesia, sicut Arriani, sicut Sabelliani, et similes, redargui possunt manifeste, si admittantur principia cabale.

6. Tria magna Dei nomina quaternarii, que sunt in secretis Cabalistarum per mirabilem appropriationem tribus personis trinitatis, ita debere attribui, ut nomen יְהוָה sit patris, Nomen יֵשׁוּעַ sit filii, יְהוֹשֻׁעַ Nomen sit spiritus sancti, intelligere potest, qui in sciencia cabale fuerit profundus.

7. Nullus hebreus cabalista potest negare, quod nomen Jhesu, si eum secundum modum et principia Cabale interpretemur, hoc totum precise et nichil aliud significat, id est, Deum, dei filium patrisque sapienciam per terciam divinitatis personam, que est ardentissimus amoris ignis, nature humane in unitate suppositi unitum.

8. Ex precedenti conclusione intelligi potest, cur dixit Paulus, datum esse Jhesu nomen, quod est super omne nomen, et cur in domine Jhesu dictum sit: omne genu flecti, celestium, terrestrium, et infernorum, quod eciam est maxime cabalisticum, et potest ex se intelligere, qui est profundus in Cabala.

9. Si qua est de nouissimis temporibus humana coniectura, inuestigare possumus per sacratissimam viam Cabale, futuram esse consumacionem seculi hinc ad annos quingentes, et quatuordecim, et dies vigintiquinque.

10. Illud quod apud Cabalistas dicitur אֵלֶּךָ, illud est sine dubio quod ab Orpheo Pallas, a Zoroastre materna mens, a Mercurio Dei filium, a Pythagora sapientia, a Parmenide sphaera intelligibilis nominatur.
11. Modus quo rationabiles anime per archangelum Deo sacrificantur, qui a Cabalistis non exprimitur, non est nisi per separationem anime a corpore, non corporis ab anima nisi per accidens, ut contigit in morte osculi, de quo scribitur, praeciosa in conspectu domini mors sanctorum eius.
12. Non potest operari per puram Cabalam, qui non est racionaliter intellectualis.
13. Qui operatur in Cabala sine admixtione extranei, si diu erit in opere, morietur ex binsica, et si errabit in opere aut non purificatus accesserit, deuorabitur ab Azazele per proprietatem iudicii.
14. Per litteram Scin, que mediat in nomine Jhesu, significatur nobis cabalistiche, quod tum perfecte quieuit tanquam in sua perfeccione mundus, cum Iod coniunctus est cum Vau, quod actum est in Cristo, qui fuit verus Dei filius et homo.
15. Per nomen Iod, he, vahu, he, quod est nomen ineffabile, quod dicunt Cabaliste, futurum esse nomen Messie, euidenter cognoscitur futurum eum Deum dei filium per spiritum sanctum hominem factum, et post eum ad perfectionem humani generis super homines paraclytum descensurum.
16. Ex mysterio trium litterarum, que sunt in dictione Sciabat, id est úáù, possumus interpretari cabalistiche tunc sabbatizare mundum, cum Dei filius fit homo, et ultimo futurum sabbatum, cum homines in Dei filium regenerabuntur.
17. Qui sciverit quid est vinum purissimum apud cabalistas, sciat cur dixerit Daud, inebriabor a ubertate Domus tua, et quam ebrietatem dixerit antiquus vates Museus esse felicitatem, et quid significant tot Bacchi apud Orpheum.
18. Qui coniurixerit Astrologiam Cabale, videbit quod sabbatizare et quiescere conuenientius fit post Christum die dominico, quam die sabbati.
19. Si dictum illud prophete, Vendiderunt iustum argento, cabalistiche exponamus, nichil aliud nobis significat, quam hoc scilicet, ut Deus redemptor venditus fuit argento.
20. Si interpretationem suam adverterint Cabaliste super hoc dictione æà, que significat tunc, de trinitate mysterio multum illuminabuntur.
21. Qui coniurixerit dictum Cabalistarum dicentium, quod illa numeracio, que dicitur iustus et redemptor, dicitur etiam Ze, cum dicto Thalmudistarum dicentium, quod ita Isaac ibat, sicut Ze portans crucem suam, videbit illud, quod fuit in Isaac prefiguratum, fuit adimpletum in Cristo, qui fuit verus Deus venditus argento.

22. Per dicta Cabalistarum de rubedine Esau, et dictum illud, quod in libro Bresit Rhaba, quod Esau fuit rubeus, et rubeum eum ulciscetur, de quo dicitur, Quare rubeum vestimentum tuum, habetur expresse, quod Cristus de quo nostri doctores eundem textum exponunt, esse erit, qui ulcionem facit de virtutibus immundis.

23. Per illud dictum Hieremie, laceravit verbum suum, secundum expositionem Cabalistarum habemus intelligere, quod Deum sanctum et benedictum laceravit Deus pro peccatoribus.

24. Per responsionem Cabalistarum ad questionem, quare in libro numerorum coniuncta est particula mortis Marie, particula vitule ruffe, et per expositionem eorum super eo in libro Zoar [Zohar] super eo textu: Et eius liuore sancti sumus, redarguuntur ineuitabiliter Hebrei dicentes, non fuisse conueniens, ut mors Cristi satisfaceret pro peccato humani generis.

25. Quilibet Cabalista habet concedere, quod Massias eos a captivitate Diabolica et non temporali erat liberaturum.

26. Quilibet Cabalista debet concedere ex dictis doctorum huius sciencie hoc manifeste dicentium, quod peccatum originale in aduentu Messie expiabitur.

28. Per dictionem et, ûà, que bis ponitur in illo textu, In principio creauit Deus celum et terram, ego credo significari a Moyse creacionem nature intellectualis, et nature animalis, que naturali ordine precessit creacionem celi et terre.

29. Quod dicitur a Cabalistis, quod linea viridis gyrat universum, conuenientissime dicitur ad conclusionem ultimam, quam diximus ex mente Porphyrtii.

30. Necessario habent concedere cabaliste secundum sua principia, quod verus Messias futurus est talis, ut de eo vere dicatur, quod est Deus et Dei filius.

31. Cum audis cabalistas ponere in Thesua irformitatem, intellige informitatem per antedecenciam ad formalitatem non per priuacionem.

32. Si duplex aleph; quod est in textu, Non auferetur sceptrum, etc. coniunxerimus ad duplex aleph, quod est in textu, Deus possedit me ab inicio, et ad duplex aleph, quod est in textu, Terra autem erat inanis, per viam Cabale intelligemus, ibi Jacob de illo vero Messia locutum, qui fuit Iesus Nazarenus.

33. Per hanc dictionem ùéà que scribitur per Aleph, Iod et Scin, (et significatur virum), que Deo attribuitur, cum dicitur Vir belli, de trinitatis mysterio per viam Cabale perfectissime admonemur.

34. Per nomen àää, id est quod tribus literis scribitur, he, vau, et aleph, quod nomen Deo propriissime attribuitur, et maxime conuenienter, non solum ad cabalistas, qui hoc expressen sepius dicunt, sed etiam ad theologiam Dionysii Areopagite, per viam Cabale trinitatis mysterium cum possibilitate incarnationis nobis declaratur.

35. Si Deus in se ut infinitum, ut unum, et secundum se intelligatur, ut sic nichil intelligimus ab eo procedere, sed separacionem a rebus, et omnimodam sui in seipso clausionem, et extremam in remotissimo sue divinitatis recessu profundam ac solitariam retractionem, de eo intelligimus ipso penitissime in abyssu suarum tenebrarum se contegente, et nullo modo in dilatacióne ac profusione suarum bonitatum ac fontali splendoris se manifestante.

36. Ex precedenti conclusione intelligi potest, cur dicatur apud Cabalistas, quod Deus induit se decem vestimentis, quando creauit seculum.

37. Qui intellexerit in dextrali coordinatione subordinationem pietatis ad sapienciam, perfecte intelliget per viam Cabale, quomodo Abraam in die suo per rectam lineam vidit diem Cristi et gauisus est.

38. Effectus, qui sunt sequuti post mortem Cristi, debent conuincere quemlibet cabalistam, quod Iesus Nazarenus fuit verus messias.

39. Ex hac conclusione et trigesima superius posita sequitur, quod quilibet Cabalista habet concedere, quod interrogatus Iesus quis esset, rectissime respondit, dicens, Ego sum principium, qui loquor vobis.

40. Hoc habent ineuitabiliter concedere Cabaliste, quod verus Messias per aquam homines purgabit.

41. Sciri potest in Cabala per mysterium mem clausi, cur post se Cristus miserit paracletum.

42. Scitur per fundamenta Cabale, quod recte dixerit Iesus, Antequam nasceretur Abraam, ego sum.

43. Per mysterium duarum litterarum uau, et iod, scitur quomodo ipse Messias, ut Deus, fuit principium sui ipsius ut homo.

44. Scitur ex Cabala per mysterium partis setentrionalis, cur iudicabit Deus seculum per ignem.

45. Scitur in Cabala apertissime, cur dei filius, cum aqua baptismi venerit, et spiritus sanctus cum igne.

46. Per eclipsacionem Solis, que accidit in morte Cristi, sciri potest secundum fundamenta cabale, quod tunc passus est filius Dei et verus messias.

47. Qui sciat proprietatem Aquilonis in cabala, sciet cur Sathan Cristo promisit regna mundi, si cadens eum adorasset.

48. Quicquid dicant ceteri cabaliste, ego decem sphaeras sic decem numeracionibus correspondere dico, ut edificio incipiendo, Iupiter sit quarte, Mars quinte, Sol sexte, Saturnus septime, Venus octaue, Mercurius none, Luna decime, cum supra edificium firmamentum tertia, primum mobile secunda, celum Empyreum prima.

49. Qui sciverit correspondenciam decem preceptorum ad prohibencia per coniunctionem veritatis astrologice cum veritate theologica, videbit ex fundamento nostro precedentis conclusionis, quicquid alii dicant cabaliste, primum preceptum prime numeracioni correspondere, secundum secunde, tertius tercie, quartum septime, quintum quarte, sextum quinte, septimum none, octauum octaue, nonum sexte, decimum decime.

50. Cum dicunt Cabaliste a septima et octaua petendos filios, ita dicas in marchiaue inferiori accipi, ut ab una petatur ut det, ab altera ne prohibeat. Et que det et que prohibeat potest intelligere ex precedentibus conclusionibus, qui fuerit intelligens in Astrologia et Cabala.

51. Sicut suit Luna plena in Salomone, ita fuit plenus Sol in vero Messia, qui fuit Iesus, et de correspondencia ad diminucionem in Sedechia potest quis coniectare, si profundat in Cabala.

52. Ex precedenti conclusione intelligi potest, cur Euangelista Mattheus in quatuordecim illis generacionibus ante Cristum quasdam dimiserit.

53. Cum fieri lucem nichil sit aliud quam participare lucem, conueniens est ualde illa cabalistarum expositio, ut in li, fiat lux, per lucem speculum lucens intelligamus, et in ly. facta est lux, speculum non lucens.

54. Quoc dicunt Cabaliste, beatificandos nos in speculo lucente resposito sanctis in futuro seculo, idem sit precise sequendo fundamenta eorum, cum eo, quod nos dicimus beatificandos sanctos in filio.

55. Quod dicunt Cabaliste lumen repositum in septuplo lucere plus quam lumen relictum, mirabiliter conuenit arithmetice pythagorice.

56. Qui sciverit explicare quaternarium in denarium, habebit modum, si sit peritus cabale deducendi ex nomine ineffabili nomen LXXII. litterarum.

57. Per precedentem conclusionem potest intelligens in Arithmetica formali intelligere, quod operari per Scemamphoras [schemhamphoras] est proprium rationali nature.

58. Reccius forent illud Becadmin, quod ponit glossa Chaldaica super dictionem Bresit, exponere sapientialibus ideis, quam de triginta duabus viis, ut dicunt alii Cabaliste, utrumque tamen est rectum in Cabala.

59. Qui profunde considerauit quadruplices rerum statum, primo unionis et stabilitate mansionis, secundo processionis, tercio reversionis, quarto beatifice reunionis, videbit literam beth cum prima littera; primum cum media, medium cum ultimis, ultima operari.

60. Ex precedenti conclusione potest contemplatiuus homo intelligere, cur lex Dei a beth littera incipit, de qua scribitur, quod est immaculata, quod erat cum eo cuncta componens, quod est convertens animas, quod facit dare fructum in tempore suo.

61. Per eandem conclusionem sciri potest, quod idem filius qui sapientia patris, est qui omnia unit in patre, et per quem omnia facta sunt, et a quo omnia convertuntur, in qua demum li. sabbatizant omnia.

62. Qui profunde consideraverit nouenarium beatudinum numerum, de quo apud Matheum in euangelio, videbit illas mirabiliter conuenire nouenario nouem numerationum, que sunt infra primam, que est inaccessibilis diuinitatis abyssus.

63. Sicut Aristoteles diuiniorum philosophiam, quam philosophi antiqui sub fabulis et apologia velarunt, ipse sub philosophice speculacionis facie dissimulauit, et verborum breuitate obscurauit, ita Rabi Moyses Aegyptius in libro, qui a latinis dicitur dux neutrorum, dum per superficiale verborum corticem videtur cum philosophia ambulare, per latentes profundi sensus intelligencias mysteria complectitur Cabal.

64. In textu, Audi Israel, dominus deus noster dominus unus, rectius est, ut intelligatur ibi colleccio ab inferiori ad superius, et a superiori ad inferius, quam ab inferiori ad superius bis.

65. Reccius est, ut Amen Tipheret dicat et regnum, ut per viam numeri ostenditur, quam quod dicat regnum tantum, ut quidam volunt.

66. Ego animam nostram sic decem Sephirot adapto, ut per unitatem suam sit cum prima, per intellectum cum secunda, per rationem cum tertia, per superiorem concupiscibilem cum quarta, per superiorem irrascibilem cum quinta, per liberum arbitrium cum sexta, et per hoc totum ut ad superiora se convertitur cum septima, ut ad inferiora cum octaua, et mixtum ex utroque potius per indifferenciam vel alternariam adhesionem, quam simultaneam continenciam cum nona, et per potenciam qua inhabitat primum; habitaculum cum decima.

67. Per dictum Cabalistarum, quod celi sunt ex igne et aqua, simul et veritatem Theologicam de ipsis Sephirot nobis manifestat, et philosophorum veritatem, quod elementa in celo sint tantum secundum actiuam virtutem.

68. Qui sciverit quid sit denarius in Arithmetica formali, et cognoverit naturam primi numeri spherici, sciet illud quod ego adhuc apud aliquem cabalistam non legi, et est, quod sit fundamentum secreti magni Iobelei in Cabala.

69. Ex fundamento precedentis conclusionis sciri pariter potest, secretum quinquaginta portatum intelligencie, et millesime generacionis, et regni omnium seculorum.
70. Per modum legendi sine punctis in lege, et modus scribendi res divinas, et unialis continencie per indeterminatum ambitum rerum divinarum nobis ostenditur.
71. Per id quod dicunt Cabaliste, de Egypto, et attestata est experientia, abemus credere, quod terra Egypti sit in analogia, et sub ordinacione proprietatis potencie.
72. Sicut vera Astrologia docet nos legere in libro Dei, ita Cabala docet nos legere in libro legis.

Finis.

Apollonius of Tyana reads your future

From The Circus of Dr. Lao, Charles G. Finney, 1935.

The widow Mrs. Howard T. Cassan came to the circus in her flimsey brown dress and her low shoes and went direct to the fortuneteller's tent. She paid her mite and sat down to hear her future. Apollonius warned her she was going to be disappointed.

"Not if you tell me the truth," said Mrs. Cassan. "I particularly want to know how soon oil is going to be found on that twenty acres of mine in New Mexico."

"Never," said the seer.

"Well, then, when shall I be married again?"

"Never," said the seer.

"Very well. What sort of man will next come into my life?"

"There will be no more men in your life," said the seer.

"Well, what in the world is the use of my living then, if I'm not going to be rich, not going to be married again, not going to know any more men?"

"I don't know," confessed the prophet. "I only read futures. I don't evaluate them."

"Well, I paid you. Read my future."

"Tomorrow will be like today, and day after tomorrow will be like the day before yesterday," said Apollonius. "I see your remaining days each as quiet, tedious collections of hours. You will not travel anywhere. You will think no new thoughts. You will experience no new passions. Older you will become but not wiser. Stiffer but not more dignified. Childless you are, and childless you shall remain. Of that suppleness you once commanded in your youth, of that strange simplicity which once attracted a few men to you, neither endures, nor shall you recapture any of them any more. People will talk to you and visit with you out of sentiment or pity, not because you have anything to offer them. Have you ever seen an old cornstalk turning brown, dying, but refusing to fall over, upon which stray birds alight now and then, hardly remarking what it is they perch on? That is you. I cannot fathom your place in life's economy. A living thing should either create or destroy according to its capacity and caprice, but you, you do neither. You only live on dreaming of the nice things you would like to have happen to you but which never happen; and you wonder vaguely why the young lives about you which you occasionally chide for a fancied impropriety never listen to you and seem to flee at your approach. When you die you will be buried and forgotten, and that is all. The morticians will enclose you in a worm-proof casket, thus sealing even unto eternity the clay of your uselessness. And for all the good or evil, creation or destruction, that your living might have accomplished, you might just as well have never lived at all. I cannot see the purpose in such a life. I can see in it only vulgar, shocking waste."

"I thought you said you didn't evaluate lives," snapped Mrs. Cassan.

"I'm not evaluating; I'm only wondering. Now you dream of an oil well to be found on twenty acres of land you own in New Mexico. There is no oil there. You dream of some tall, dark, handsome man to come wooing you. There is no man coming, dark, tall, or otherwise. And yet you will dream on in spite of all I tell you; dream on through your little round of hours, sewing and rocking and gossiping and dreaming; and the world spins and spins and spins. Children are born, grow up, accomplish, sicken, and die; you sit and rock and sew and gossip and live on. And you have a voice in the government, and enough people voting the same way you vote could change the face of the world. There is something terrible in that thought. But your individual opinion on any subject in the world is absolutely worthless. No, I cannot fathom the reason for your existence."

"I didn't pay you to fathom me. Just tell me my future and let it go at that."

I have been telling you your future! Why don't you listen? Do you want to know how many more times you will eat lettuce or boiled eggs? Shall I enumerate the instances you will yell good-morning to your neighbor across the fence? Must I tell you how many more times you will buy stockings, attend church, go to moving picture shows? Shall I make a list showing how many more gallons of water in the future you will boil making tea, how many more combinations of cards will fall to you at auction bridge, how often the telephone will ring in your remaining years? Do you want to know how many more times you will scold the paper-carrier for not leaving your copy in the spot that irks you the least? Must I tell you how many more times you will become annoyed at the weather because it rains or fails to rain according to your wishes? Shall I compute the pounds of pennies you will save shopping at bargain centers? Do you want to know all that? For that is your future, doing the same small futile things you have done for the last fifty-eight years. You face a repetition of your past, a recapitulation of the digits in the adding machine of your days. Save only one bright numeral, perhaps: there was love of a sort in your past; there is none in your future."

"Well, I must say, you are the strangest fortuneteller I ever visited."

"It is my misfortune only to be able to tell the truth."

"Were you ever in love?"

"Of course. But why do you ask?"

"There is a strange fascination about your brutal frankness. I could imagine a girl, or an experienced woman, rather, throwing herself at your feet."

"There was a girl, but she never threw herself at my feet. I threw myself at hers."

"What did she do?"

"She laughed."

"Did she hurt you?"

"Yes. But nothing has hurt me very much since."

"I knew it! I knew a man of your terrible intenseness had been hurt by some woman sometime. Women can do that to a man, can't they?"

"I suppose so."

"You poor, poor man! You are not so very much older than I am, are you? I, too, have been hurt. Why couldn't we be friends, or more than friends, perhaps, and together patch up the torn shreds of our lives? I think I could understand you and comfort and care for you."

"Madam, I am nearly two thousand years old., and all that time I have been a bachelor. It is too late to start over again."

"Oh, you are being so delightfully foolish! I love whimsical talk! We would get on splendidly, you and I; I am sure of it!"

"I'm not. I told you there were no more men in your life. Don't try to make me eat my own words, please. The consultation is ended. Good afternoon."

She started to say more, but there was no longer anyone to talk to. Apollonius had vanished with that suddenness commanded by only the most practiced magicians. Mrs. Cassan went out into the blaze of sunshine. There she encountered Luther and Kate. It was then precisely ten minutes before Kate's petrification.

"My dear," said Mrs. Cassan to Kate, "that fortuneteller is the most magnetic man I ever met in my whole life. I am going to see him again this evening."

"What did he say about the oil?" asked Luther.

"Oh, he was frightfully encouraging," said Mrs. Cassan.

THE SPHERE OF SACROBOSCO

An early 13th century treatise on astronomy, by Iohannes de Sacrobosco.

Translated by Lynn Thorndike, 1949.

PROEMIUM

CONTENTS OF THE FOUR CHAPTERS. -- The treatise on the sphere we divide into four chapters, telling,

- first, what a sphere is, what its center is, what the axis of a sphere is, what the pole of the world is, how many spheres there are, and what the shape of the world is.
- In the second we give information concerning the circles of which this material sphere is composed and that supercelestial one, of which this is the image, is understood to be composed.
- In the third we talk about the rising and setting of the signs, and the diversity of days and nights which happens to those inhabiting diverse localities, and the division into climes.
- In the fourth the matter concerns the circles and motions of the planets, and the causes of eclipses.

CHAPTER ONE

SPHERE DEFINED. -- A sphere is thus described by Euclid: A sphere is the transit of the circumference of a half-circle upon a fixed diameter until it revolves back to its original position. That is, a sphere is such a round and solid body as is described by the revolution of a semicircular arc.

By Theodosius a sphere is described thus: A sphere is a solid body contained within a single surface, in the middle of which there is a point from which all straight lines drawn to the circumference are equal, and that point is called the "center of the sphere." Moreover, a straight line passing through the center of the sphere, with its ends touching the circumference in opposite directions, is called the "axis of the sphere." And the two ends of the axis are called the "poles of the world."

SPHERE DIVIDED. -- The sphere is divided in two ways, by substance and by accident. By substance it is divided into the ninth sphere, which is called the "first moved" or the primum mobile; and the sphere of the fixed stars, which is named the "firmament"; and the seven spheres of the seven planets, of which some are larger, some smaller, according as they the more approach, or recede from, the firmament. Wherefore, among them the sphere of Saturn is the largest, the sphere of the moon the smallest, as is shown in the accompanying figure.

By accident the sphere is divided into the sphere right and the sphere oblique. For those are said to have the sphere right who dwell at the equator, if anyone can live there. And it is called "right" because neither pole is elevated more for them than the other, or because their horizon intersects the equinoctial circle and is intersected by it at spherical right angles. Those are said to have the sphere oblique who live this side of the equator or beyond it. For to them one pole is always raised above the horizon, and the other is always depressed below it. Or it is because their artificial horizon intersects the equinoctial at oblique and unequal angles.

THE FOUR ELEMENTS. -- The machine of the universe is divided into two, the ethereal and the elementary region. The elementary region, existing subject to continual alteration, is divided into four. For there is earth, placed, as it were, as the center in the middle of all, about which is water, about water air, about air fire, which is pure and not turbid there and reaches to the sphere of the moon, as Aristotle says in his book of Meteorology. For so God, the glorious and sublime, disposed. And these are called the "four elements" which are in turn by themselves altered, corrupted and regenerated. The elements are also simple bodies which cannot be subdivided into parts of diverse forms and from whose commixture are produced various species of generated things. Three of them, in turn, surround the earth on all sides spherically, except in so far as the dry land stays the sea's tide to protect the life of animate beings. All, too, are mobile except earth, which, as the center of the world, by its weight in every direction equally avoiding the great motion of the extremes, as a round body occupies the middle of the sphere.

THE HEAVENS. -- Around the elementary region revolves with continuous circular motion the ethereal, which is lucid and immune from all variation in its immutable essence. And it is called "Fifth Essence" by the philosophers. Of which there are nine spheres, as we have just said: namely, of the moon, Mercury, Venus, the sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, the fixed stars, and the last heaven. Each of these spheres incloses its inferior spherically.

THEIR MOVEMENTS. -- And of these there are two movements. One is of the last heaven on the two extremities of its axis, the Arctic and Antarctic poles, from east through west to east again, which the equinoctial circle divides through the middle. Then there is another movement, oblique to this and in the opposite direction, of the inferior spheres on their axes, distant from the former by 23 degrees. But the first movement carries all the others with it in its rush about the earth once within a day and night, although they strive against it, as in the case of the eighth sphere one degree in a hundred years. This second movement is divided through the middle by the zodiac, under which each of the seven planets has its own sphere, in which it is borne by its own motion, contrary to the movement of the sky, and completes it in varying spaces of time -- in the case of Saturn in thirty years, Jupiter in twelve years, Mars in two, the sun in three hundred and sixty-five days and six hours, Venus and Mercury about the same, the moon in twenty-seven days and eight hours.

REVOLUTION OF THE HEAVENS FROM EAST TO WEST. -- That the sky revolves from east to west is signified by the fact that the stars, which rise in the east, mount gradually and successively until they reach mid-sky and are always at the same distance apart, and, thus maintaining their relative positions. they move toward their setting continuously and uniformly. Another indication is that the stars near the North Pole, which never set for us, move continuously and uniformly, describing their circles about the pole, and are always equally near or far from one another. Therefore, from those two continuous movements of the stars, both those that set and those which do not, it is clear that the firmament is moved from east to west.

THE HEAVENS SPHERICAL. -- There are three reasons why the sky is round: likeness, convenience, and necessity. Likeness, because the sensible world is made in the likeness of the archetype, in which there is neither end nor beginning; wherefore, in likeness to it the sensible world has a round shape, in which beginning or end cannot be distinguished. Convenience, because of all isoperimetric bodies the sphere is the largest and of all shapes the round is most capacious. Since largest and round, therefore the most capacious. Wherefore, since the world is all-containing, this shape was useful and convenient for it. Necessity, because if the world were of other form than round -- say, trilateral, quadrilateral, or many-sided -- it would follow that some space would be vacant and some body without a place, both of which are false, as is clear in the case of angles projecting and revolved.

A FURTHER PROOF. -- Also, as Alfraganus says, if the sky were flat, one part of it would be nearer to us than another, namely, that which is directly overhead. So when a star was there, it would be closer to us than when rising or setting. But those things which are closer to us seem larger. So the sun when in mid-sky should look larger than when rising or setting, whereas the opposite is the case; for the sun or another star looks bigger in the east or west than in mid-sky. But, since this is not really so, the reason for its seeming so is that in winter and the rainy season vapors rise between us and the sun or other star. And, since those vapors are diaphanous, they scatter our visual rays so that they do not apprehend the object in its true size, just as is the case with a penny dropped into a depth of limpid water, which appears larger than it actually is because of a like diffusion of rays.

THE EARTH A SPHERE. -- That the earth, too, is round is shown thus. The signs and stars do not rise and set the same for all men everywhere but rise and set sooner for those in the east than for those in the west; and of this there is no other cause than the bulge of the earth. Moreover, celestial phenomena evidence that they rise sooner for Orientals than for westerners. For one and the same eclipse of the moon which appears to us in the first hour of the night appears to Orientals about the third hour of the night, which proves that they had night and sunset before we did, of which setting the bulge of the earth is the cause.

FURTHER PROOFS OF THIS. -- That the earth also has a bulge from north to south and vice versa is shown thus: To those living toward the north, certain stars are always visible, namely, those near the North Pole, while others which are near the South Pole are always concealed from them. If, then, anyone should proceed from the north southward, he might go so far that the stars which formerly were always visible to him now would tend toward their setting. And the farther south he went, the more they would be moved toward their setting. Again, that same man now could see stars which formerly had always been hidden from him. And the reverse would happen to anyone going from the south northward. The cause of this is simply the bulge of the earth. Again, if the earth were flat from east to west, the stars would rise as soon for westerners as for Orientals. which is false. Also, if the earth were flat from north to south and vice versa, the stars which were always visible to anyone would continue to be so wherever he went, which is false. But it seems flat to human sight because it is so extensive.

SURFACE OF THE SEA SPHERICAL. -- That the water has a bulge and is approximately round is shown thus: Let a signal be set up on the seacoast and a ship leave port and sail away so far that the eye of a person standing at the foot of the mast can no longer discern the signal. Yet if the ship is stopped, the eye of the same person, if he has climbed to the top of the mast, will see the signal clearly. Yet the eye of a person at the bottom of the mast ought to see the signal better than he who is at the top, as is shown by drawing straight lines from both to the signal. And there is no other explanation of this thing than the bulge of the water. For all other impediments are excluded, such as clouds and rising vapors.

Also, since water is a homogeneous body, the whole will act the same as its parts. But parts of water, as happens in the case of little drops and dew on herbs, naturally seek a round shape. Therefore, the whole, of which they are parts, will do so.

THE EARTH CENTRAL. -- That the earth is in the middle of the firmament is shown thus. To persons on the earth's surface the stars appear of the same size whether they are in mid-sky or just rising or about to set, and this is because the earth is equally distant from them. For if the earth were nearer to the firmament in one direction than in another, a person at that point of the earth's surface which was nearer to the firmament would not see half of the heavens. But this is contrary to Ptolemy and all the philosophers, who say that, wherever man lives, six signs rise and six signs set, and half of the heavens is always visible and half hid from him.

AND A MERE POINT IN THE UNIVERSE. -- That same consideration is a sign that the earth is as a center and point with respect to the firmament, since, if the earth were of any size compared with the firmament, it would not be possible to see half the heavens. Also, suppose a plane passed through the center of the earth, dividing it and the firmament into equal halves. An eye at the earth's center would see half the sky, and one on the earth's surface would see the same half. From which it is inferred that the magnitude of the earth from surface to center is inappreciable and, consequently, that the magnitude of the entire earth is inappreciable compared to the firmament. Also Alfraganus says that the least of the fixed stars which we can see is larger than the whole earth. But that star, compared with the firmament, is a mere point. Much more so is the earth, which is smaller than it.

THE EARTH IMMOBILE. -- That the earth is held immobile in the midst of all, although it is the heaviest, seems explicable thus. Every heavy thing tends toward the center. Now the center is a point in the middle of the firmament. Therefore, the earth, since it is heaviest, naturally tends toward that point. Also, whatever is moved from the middle toward the circumference ascends. Therefore, if the earth were moved from the middle toward the circumference, it would be ascending, which is impossible.

MEASURING THE EARTH'S CIRCUMFERENCE. -- The total girth of the 700 stades for each of the 360 parts of the zodiac (sic). For let one take earth by the authority of the philosophers Ambrose, Theodosius, and Eratosthenes is defined as comprising 252,000 stades, which is allowing an astrolabe on a clear starry night and, sighting the pole through both apertures in the indicator, [1] note the number of degrees where it is. Then let our measurer of the cosmos proceed directly north until on another clear night, observing the pole as before, the indicator stands a degree higher. After this let the extent of his travel be measured, and it will be found to be 700 stades. Then, allowing this many stades for each of 360 degrees, the girth of the earth is found.

AND DIAMETER. -- From these data the diameter of the earth can be found thus by the rule for the circle and diameter. Subtract the twenty-second part from the circuit of the whole earth, and a third of the remainder -- that is, 80, 181 stades and a half and third part of one stade -- will be the diameter or thickness of the terrestrial ball.

CHAPTER TWO

OF THE CIRCLES AND THEIR NAMES

CELESTIAL CIRCLES. -- Of these circles some are larger, some smaller, as sense shows. For a great circle in the sphere is one which, described on the surface of the sphere about its center, divides the sphere into two equal parts, while a small circle is one which, described on the surface of the sphere, divides it not into two equal but into two unequal portions.

THE EQUINOCTIAL. -- Of the great circles we must first mention the equinoctial. The equinoctial is a circle dividing the sphere into two equal parts and equidistant at its every point from either pole. And it is called "equinoctial" because, when the sun crosses it, which happens twice a year, namely, in the beginning of Aries and in the beginning of Libra, there is equinox the world over. Wherefore it is termed the "equator of day and night," because it makes the artificial day equal to the night. And 'tis called the "belt of the first movement."

THE TWO MOVEMENTS AGAIN. -- Be it understood that the "first movement" means the movement of the primum mobile, that is, of the ninth sphere or last heaven, which movement is from east through west back to east again, which also is called "rational motion" from resemblance to the rational motion in the microcosm, that is, in man, when thought goes from the Creator through creatures to the Creator and there rests.

The second movement is of the firmament and planets contrary to this, from west through east back to west again, which movement is called "irrational" or "sensual" from resemblance to the movement of the microcosm from things corruptible to the Creator and back again to things corruptible.

THE NORTH AND SOUTH POLES. -- 'Tis called the "belt of the first movement" because it divides the primum mobile or ninth sphere into two equal parts and is itself equally distant from the poles of the world. It is to be noted that the pole which always is visible to us is called "septentrional," "arctic," or "boreal." "Septentrional" is from septentrio, that is, from Ursa Minor, which is derived from septem and trion, meaning "ox," because the seven stars in Ursa move slowly, since they are near the pole. Or those seven stars are called septentriones as if septem teriones, because they tread the parts about the pole. "Arctic" is derived from arthos, which is Ursa Major, for 'tis near Ursa Major. It is called "boreal" because it is where the wind Boreas comes from. The opposite pole is called "Antarctic" as opposed to "Arctic." It also is called "meridional" because it is to the south, and it is called "austral" because it is where the wind Auster comes from. The two fixed points in the firmament are called the "poles of the world" because they terminate the axis of the sphere and the world revolves on them. One of these poles is always visible to us, the other always hidden. Whence Virgil:

This vertex is ever above us, but that
Dark Styx and deep Manes hold beneath our feet. [2]

THE ZODIAC. -- There is another circle in the sphere which intersects the equinoctial and is intersected by it into two equal parts. One half of it tips toward the north, the other toward the south. That circle is called "zodiac" from zoe, meaning "life," because all life in inferior things depends on the movement of the planets beneath it. Or it is derived from zodias, which means "animal," because, since it is divided into twelve equal parts, each part is called a sign and has its particular name from the name of some animal, because of some property characteristic of it and of the animal, or because of the arrangement of the fixed stars there in the outline of that kind of animal. That circle in Latin is called signifer because it bears the "signs" or because it is divided into them. By Aristotle in On Generation and Corruption it is called the "oblique circle," where he says that, according to the access and recess of the sun in the oblique circle, are produced generations and corruptions in things below.

THE TWELVE SIGNS. -- The names, order, and number of the signs are set forth in these lines:

There are Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra and Scorpio, Architenens, Capricorn, Amphora, Pisces.

Moreover, each sign is divided into 30 degrees, whence it is clear that in the entire zodiac there are 360 degrees. Also, according to astronomers, each degree is divided into 60 minutes, each minute into 60 seconds. each second into 60 thirds, and so on. And as the zodiac is divided by astronomers, so each circle in the sphere, whether great or small, is divided into similar parts.

While every circle in the sphere except the zodiac is understood to be a line or circumference, the zodiac alone is understood to be a surface, 12 degrees wide of degrees such as we have just mentioned. Wherefore. it is clear that certain persons in astrology lie who say that the signs are squares, unless they misuse this term and consider square and quadrangle the same. For each sign is 30 degrees in longitude, 12 in latitude.

THE ECLIPTIC. -- The line dividing the zodiac in its circuit, so that on one side it leaves 6 degrees and on the other side another 6, is called the "ecliptic," since when sun and moon are on that line there occurs an eclipse of sun or moon. The sun always moves beneath the ecliptic, but all the other planets decline toward north or south; sometimes, however, they are beneath the ecliptic. The part of the zodiac which slants away from the equinoctial to the north is called "northern" or "boreal" or "Arctic," and those six signs which extend from the beginning of Aries to the end of Virgo are called "northern." The other part of the zodiac which tips from the equinoctial toward the south is called "meridional" or "austral," and the six signs from the beginning of Libra to the end of Pisces are called "meridional" or "austral."

EXTENDED USES OF "SIGN." -- When it is said that the sun is in Aries or in another sign, it should be understood that in is taken for beneath according as we now accept sign. In another meaning a sign is called a "pyramid," whose quadrilateral base is that surface which we call a "sign," while its apex is at the center of the earth. And in this sense we may properly say that the planets are in signs. "Sign" may be used in a third way as produced by six circles passing through the poles of the zodiac and through the beginnings of the twelve signs. Those six circles divide the entire surface of the sphere into twelve parts, wide in the middle but narrower toward the poles, and each such part is called a "sign" and has a particular name from the name of that sign which is intercepted between its two lines. And according to this usage stars which are near the poles are said to be "in signs." Also think of a body whose base is a sign in this last sense which we have accepted but whose edge is on the axis of the zodiac. Such a body is called a "sign" in a fourth sense, according to which usage the whole world is divided into twelve equal parts, which are called "signs," and so whatever is in the world is in some sign.

COLURES. -- There are two other great circles in the sphere which are called "colures," whose function is to distinguish solstices and equinoxes. "Colure" is derived from colon, which is a member, and uros, which is a wild ox, because, just as the lifted tail of the wild ox, which is its member, describes a semicircle and not a complete circle, so a colure always appears to us imperfect because only one half of it is seen.

The colure distinguishing the solstices passes through the poles of the universe and through the poles of the zodiac and through the greatest declinations of the sun, that is, through the first degrees of Cancer and Capricorn. Wherefore, the first point of Cancer, where that colure intersects the zodiac, is called the "point of the summer solstice," because, when the sun is in it, the summer solstice occurs and the sun cannot approach further toward our zenith. The zenith is a point in the firmament directly above our heads. The arc of the colure which is intercepted between the point of the summer solstice and the equinoctial point is called the "sun's greatest declination" and is, according to Ptolemy, 23 degrees and 51 minutes, according to Almeon, 23 degrees and 33 minutes. Similarly, the first point of Capricorn is called the "point of the winter solstice," and the arc of the colure intercepted between that point and the equinoctial is called the "sun's greatest declination" and is equal to the former.

The other colure passes through the poles of the universe and through the points of Aries and Libra where are the two equinoxes, whence it is called the "colure distinguishing the equinoxes." Those two colures intersect at the poles of the world at spherical right angles. The signs of the solstices and equinoxes are stated in these verses:

These two solstices make, Cancer and Capricorn,
But Aries and Libra equal the nights to days.

THE MERIDIAN. -- There are yet two other great circles in the sphere, namely, the meridian and the horizon. The meridian is a circle passing through the poles of the world and through our zenith, and it is called "meridian" because, wherever a man may be and at whatever time of year, when the sun with the movement of the firmament reaches his meridian, it is noon for him. For like reason it is called the "circle of midday." And it is to be noted that cities of which one is farther east than the other have different meridians. The arc of the equinoctial intercepted between two meridians is called the "longitude" of the city. If two cities have the same meridian, then they are equally distant from east and from west.

THE HORIZON. -- The horizon is a circle dividing the lower hemisphere from the upper, whence it is called "horizon," that is, "limiter of vision."

It is also called the "circle of the hemisphere." Moreover, the horizon is twofold -- that is, right, and oblique or slanting. Those have a right horizon and right sphere whose zenith is on the equinoctial, since their horizon is a circle passing through the poles of the world cutting the equinoctial at right angles, wherefore it is called "right horizon" and "right sphere." But those to whom the pole of the world is raised above the horizon have an oblique or slanting horizon, since their horizon intersects the equinoctial at unequal and oblique angles and is called "oblique horizon" and the sphere "oblique" or "slanting." Moreover, the zenith over our heads is always the pole of the horizon.

ELEVATION OF THE POLE. -- From these things it is evident that the elevation of the pole of the world above the horizon is as great as the distance of the zenith from the equator, which is shown in this way. Since in every natural day either colure twice joins or becomes identical with the meridian, whatever is true of one holds for the other. Take, then, a fourth part of the colure distinguishing the solstices, which is from the equinoctial to the pole. Take another fourth part of the same colure, which is from zenith to horizon. Since the zenith is the pole of the horizon, those two quarters, since they are quarters of one and the same circle, are equal. But if equals are subtracted from equals, or the same thing common to both is subtracted, the remainders will be equal. Therefore, if we subtract the common arc, namely, that between the zenith and the pole, the remainders will be equal, namely, the elevation of the pole above the horizon and the distance of the zenith from the equinoctial.

TROPICS OF CANCER AND CAPRICORN. -- Having told of the six great circles, we must speak of the four smaller circles. Be it noted, then, that the sun, when in the first point of Cancer or the summer solstice, as it is carried by the firmament describes a circle, which is the one last described by the sun in the direction of the Arctic pole. Wherefore it is called the "circle of the summer solstice" for the reason aforesaid, or the "summer tropic" from tropos, which is "turning," because then the sun begins to turn toward the lower hemisphere and to recede from us. The sun again, when in the first point of Capricorn or winter solstice, as it is carried by the firmament describes another circle which is the one last described by the sun in the direction of the Antarctic pole, whence 'tis called the "circle of the winter solstice" or the "winter tropic," because then the sun turns toward us.

ARCTIC AND ANTARCTIC CIRCLES. -- Since the zodiac slants from the equinoctial, the pole of the zodiac will decline from the pole of the world. Therefore, since the eighth sphere and the zodiac, which is a part of it, are moved about the axis of the world, the pole of the zodiac, too, will move about the pole of the world. And that circle which the pole of the zodiac describes about the Arctic pole of the world is called the "Arctic circle." And that circle which the other pole of the zodiac describes about the Antarctic pole is called the "Antarctic circle."

As great as is the maximum declination of the sun, so great is the distance of the pole of the world from the pole of the zodiac, which is shown in this way. Take the colure distinguishing the solstices which passes through the poles of the world and the poles of the zodiac. Since all quarters of one and the same circle are equal, the quarter of this colure between equator and pole is equal to the quarter of the same colure from the first point of Cancer to the pole of the zodiac. Then, if we subtract from those equals the common arc from the first point of Cancer to the pole of the world, the remainders will be equal, namely, the maximum declination of the sun and the distance from the pole of the world to the pole of the zodiac. Moreover, since the Arctic circle at every point is equidistant from the pole of the world, it is evident that that part of the colure which lies between the first point of Cancer and the Arctic circle is almost double the maximum declination of the sun or the arc of the same colure intercepted between the Arctic circle and the Arctic pole, which is equal to the maximum declination of the sun. Since that colure, like other circles in the sphere, has 360 degrees, a quarter of it will be 90 degrees. Then, since the maximum declination of the sun according to Ptolemy is 23 degrees and 51 minutes and of as many degrees is the arc which is between the Arctic circle and the Arctic pole, if those two combined, which make about 48 degrees, are subtracted from 90, the remainder will be 42 degrees, as is the arc of the colure which lies between the first point of Cancer and the Arctic circle. So it is clear that that arc is almost double the maximum declination of the sun.

It is also to be noted that the equinoctial with the four small circles are called "parallels," as it were equidistant, not that the first is as far from the second as the second is from the third, because this is false, as has already been shown, but because any two taken together are equidistant at every point. They are called the "equinoctial parallel," the "parallel of the summer solstice," the "parallel of the winter solstice," the "Arctic parallel", and the "Antarctic parallel." It is further to be noted that the four minor parallels, namely, the two tropics and the Arctic parallel and Antarctic parallel, distinguish five zones or five regions in the heaven. Therefore, Virgil:

Five zones possess the sky, of which one is ever
Red from blazing sun and ever burnt by fire. [\[3\]](#)

Also a like number of zones is distinguished on earth directly beneath the said zones. Wherefore, Ovid:

... and just as many zones are marked on earth. [\[4\]](#)

THE FIVE ZONES. -- That zone which lies between the tropics is said to be uninhabitable because of the heat of the sun, which ever courses between the tropics. Similarly, the zone of earth directly beneath it is said to be uninhabitable because of the fervor of the sun, which ever courses above it. But those two zones which are described by the Arctic circle and the Antarctic circle about the poles of the world are uninhabitable because of too great cold, since the sun is far removed from them. The same is to be understood of the zones of earth directly beneath them. But those two zones of which one is between the summer tropic and the Arctic circle and the other between the winter tropic and the Antarctic circle are habitable and tempered from the heat of the torrid zone between the tropics and from the cold of the extreme zones which lie about the poles. The same is to be understood of the stretches of earth directly beneath them.

CHAPTER THREE

RISINGS AND SETTINGS OF THE SIGNS. -- The risings and settings of the signs are taken in two ways, according to the poets and according to the astronomers. The rising and setting of the signs according to the poets is threefold, namely, cosmic, chronic, and heliacal.

COSMIC RISING. -- Cosmic or mundane rising takes place when sign or star ascends above the horizon from the east by day. And albeit in each artificial day six signs rise, yet antonomastically that sign is said to rise cosmically with which and in which the sun rises in the morning. And this is rising in the strict and chief and daily sense. Of this rising we have an instance in the Georgics, where the planting of beans and millet in springtime, when the sun is in Taurus, is taught thus:

The white bull with gilded horns opens the year,
And the dog, yielding to adverse star, sets. [\[5\]](#)

COSMIC SETTING. -- Cosmic setting is a matter of opposition. When the sun rises with a sign, the opposite sign sets cosmically. This setting is spoken of in the Georgics, where is taught the sowing of wheat in late fall when the sun is in Scorpio. For when Scorpio rises with the sun, Taurus, where the Pleiades are, sets.

Ere Eoe Atlantides are hidden from you,
Consign the seed as you should to the furrow. [\[6\]](#)

CHRONIC RISING AND SETTING. -- Chronic or temporal rising takes place when sign or star, after sunset, emerges above the horizon from the east at night. It is called "temporal rising" because astronomical time begins with sunset. Of this rising we have an example in Ovid's From Pontus, where he complains of his prolonged exile, saying,

Pleias having risen makes four autumns, [\[7\]](#) signifying by four autumns that four years had passed since he was sent into exile. But Virgil made the Pleiades set in the autumn, so they seem contradictory. But the explanation of this is that according to Virgil they set cosmically and according to Ovid they rise chronically, which may well happen on the same day but differently, since cosmic setting is with respect to daytime, but chronic rising is in the evening.

Chronic setting is a matter of opposition. Hence Lucan:

Then the short night shot Thessalian arrows. [\[8\]](#)

HELIACAL RISING AND SETTING. -- Heliacal or solar rising occurs when sign or star can be seen by departure of the sun from it, which previously could not be seen because of the nearness of the sun. Ovid gives an example of this in the Fasli, saying:

Now aged Aquarius sits below with urn inclined. [\[9\]](#)

And Virgil in the Georgics:

And the Gnosian Star of the burning crown descends, [\[10\]](#) which star, being next to Scorpio, was not visible while the sun was in Scorpio.

Heliacal setting takes place when the sun approaches a sign and by its presence prevents it from being seen. An example of this is the following verse:

And the dog, yielding to adverse star, sets. [\[11\]](#)

RIGHT ASCENSIONS. -- We next consider the rising and setting of the signs according to the astronomers and first in the right sphere. It should be remarked that the rising or setting of a sign is nothing else than the rising of that part of the equinoctial circle which rises with that sign, when it comes above the horizon, or the setting of that part of the equinoctial which sets with that sign when it sets, that is, moves westward below the horizon. A sign is said to rise "vertically" when a larger part of the equator rises with it, "obliquely" where a smaller part rises with it. The same is to be understood of setting.

It should be known that in the right sphere the four quarters of the zodiac beginning from four points, namely, from the two solstices and two equinoxes, are equal in their ascensions, that is, as much time as a quarter of the zodiac consumes in rising, so much time the quarter of the equinoctial corresponding to it takes to rise; but the parts of those quarters vary and do not have equal ascensions, as will now appear.

There is the rule that every two arcs of the zodiac opposite and equal, equally distant from one of the four points already mentioned, have equal ascensions. Whence it follows that opposite signs have equal ascensions. And this is what Lucan says in speaking of the march of Cato into Libya toward the equator:

They do not move obliquely, nor is Scorpio straighter
Than Taurus, or Aries give its time to Libra,
Or Astrea bid Pisces to descend slowly.
Chiron is par with Gemini, the same as burning Carcinus
Is humid Aegoceros, nor is Leo moved more than the Urn. [\[12\]](#)

Here Lucan says that to dwellers beneath the equinoctial opposite signs have equal ascensions and settings. Moreover, the opposing signs are indicated by this verse:

Sunt li. an. scor. tau. sa. gemi. cap. can. a. le. pis. vir.

Note that this argument does not hold: these two arcs are equal and begin to rise together and always a greater part of one rises than of the other; therefore, that arc rises more rapidly of which a larger part always rises. An example of this argument is shown in the case of parts of the aforesaid quarters. For if the fourth part of the zodiac is taken, which extends from the beginning of Aries to the end of Gemini, a larger part of the quarter of the zodiac always rises [\[13\]](#) than of the quarter of the equinoctial corresponding to it. Yet those quarters complete their rising simultaneously. The same is the case with the quarter of the zodiac from the beginning of Libra to the end of Sagittarius. Also if the quarter of the zodiac is taken which extends from the beginning of Cancer to the end of Virgo, a larger part will always rise of the quarter of the equinoctial than of the quarter of the zodiac corresponding to it. Yet those two quarters complete their rising simultaneously. The same is true of the quarter of the zodiac from the first point of Capricorn to the end of Pisces.

OBLIQUE ASCENSIONS. -- In the oblique or slanting sphere, halves of the zodiac equal their ascensions. I mean the halves which are taken from the two equinoctial points, because the half of the zodiac which extends from the beginning of Aries to the end of Virgo rises with the half of the equinoctial corresponding to it. Similarly, the other half of the zodiac rises with the other half of the equinoctial. But the parts of those halves vary in their risings, since in the half of the zodiac from the beginning of Aries to the end of Virgo a larger part of the zodiac always rises than of the equinoctial. Yet those halves complete their rising simultaneously. The opposite happens in the other half of the zodiac, which extends from the beginning of Libra to the end of Pisces, for always a larger part of the equinoctial rises than of the zodiac. Yet those halves complete their rising simultaneously. So this case is clearly against the argument aforesaid.

Moreover, the arcs which succeed Aries to the end of Virgo in the oblique sphere lessen their ascensions compared to the ascensions in the right sphere; and the arcs which succeed Libra to the end of Pisces in the oblique sphere increase their ascensions over the ascensions of the same arcs in the right sphere. That is, they increase by the same quantity as the arcs succeeding Aries lessen.

From this it is evident that two equal and opposite arcs in the slanting sphere have their combined ascensions equal to the ascensions of the same arcs taken together in the right sphere, because as much as is the diminution on the one hand, so much is the addition on the other.

The rule, indeed, is that any two arcs which are equal and equally distant from either of the equinoctial points have unequal(?) ascensions.

INEQUALITIES OF DAYS. -- From the aforesaid it is also clear that natural days are unequal; for a natural day is the revolution of the equinoctial with as much as the sun covers meanwhile by its own movement against the firmament. But, since the ascensions of those arcs are unequal, as is evident from the foregoing, alike in right sphere as in oblique, and natural days are reckoned according to the increase of those ascensions, they will of necessity be unequal, in the right sphere for a single reason -- the obliquity of the zodiac -- in the oblique sphere for two reasons -- the obliquity of the zodiac and the obliquity of the oblique horizon. Moreover, a third cause is wont to be assigned -- the eccentricity of the sun's orbit.

MOVEMENT OF THE SUN. -- It also should be noted that the sun, moving from the first point of Capricorn through Aries to the first point of Cancer with the sweep of the firmament, describes 182 parallels, to which parallels, although they are not really circles but spirals, since there is no sensible error in this, no violence is done if they are called "circles," of which number of circles are the two tropics and the equinoctial. Also the sun describes these circles with the sweep of the firmament as it descends from the first point of Cancer through Libra to the first point of Capricorn; and those circles are called the "circles of natural days." But the arcs above the horizon are the arcs of artificial days, and the arcs below the horizon are the arcs of the nights.

In the right sphere the horizon, since it passes through the poles of the world, divides all those circles into equal parts, whence the arcs of days are the same as those of nights for persons living at the equator. Hence it is evident that for persons living at the equator it is always equinox, wherever the sun may be in the firmament.

But in the slanting sphere the oblique horizon divides the equinoctial alone into two equal parts. Hence, when the sun is at either equinoctial point, the arc of day equals the arc of night, and there is equinox the world over. But the oblique horizon divides all the other circles into unequal parts, so that in all the circles from the equinoctial to the Tropic of Cancer and at the Tropic of Cancer itself the arc of day is greater than that of night, that is, the arc above the horizon than that below the horizon. Hence all the time that the sun is moved from the beginning of Aries through Cancer to the end of Virgo, the days are longer than the nights and so much the more as the sun comes closer to Cancer. In all the other circles which are between the equinoctial and the Tropic of Capricorn the arc is greater below the horizon than above. Hence the arc of day is less than the arc of night; and, according to the proportion between the arcs, the days grow less than the nights, and the closer the circles get to the winter tropic, the more the days shorten.

DAY AND NIGHT. -- Wherefore it appears that, if two circles are taken equidistant in their various parts from the equinoctial, as great as is the arc of day in the one, so great is the arc of night in the other. From this it seems to follow that if two natural days in the year are taken equally remote from either equinoctial point in opposite directions, as long as is the artificial day in one case, so long is the night in the other, and conversely. But this is with reference to ordinary observation in fixing the horizon. For reason determines more exactly by discounting the movement of the sun contrary to the firmament in the obliquity of the zodiac.

The more the pole is elevated above the horizon, so much more are the days of summer lengthened when the sun is in the northern signs. Conversely, when the sun is in the southern signs the days are so much shorter than the nights.

RIGHT AND OBLIQUE ASCENSIONS. -- It is to be noted that the six signs from the beginning of Cancer through Libra to the end of Sagittarius have their combined ascensions greater than the ascensions of the other six signs from the beginning of Capricorn through Aries to the end of Gemini. Hence those six signs first mentioned are said to rise erect, but the others obliquely. Wherefore the verses:

They rise aright, oblique descend from Cancer's star
Till Chiron ends, but the other signs
Are prone at birth, descend by a straight path.

And when we have the longest day of summer, when the sun is in the beginning of Cancer, then six signs rise vertically by day but six obliquely at night. Conversely, when we have the shortest day of the year, when the sun is in the beginning of Capricorn, then those six signs which rise by day do so obliquely, but by night the other six rise vertically. When, moreover, the sun is at either equinoctial point, then by day three signs rise vertically and three obliquely, and at night the same.

For the rule is: However short or long the day or night may be, six signs rise by day and six by night, nor because of the length or brevity of day or night do more or fewer signs rise.

From these facts it is gathered that, since a natural hour is the space of time in which half a sign rises, there are twelve natural hours in each artificial day, and so also in the night. Moreover, in all the circles which parallel the equator to north or south, days or nights are lengthened or shortened according as more or fewer signs rise vertically or obliquely by day or night.

DWELLERS AT THE EQUATOR. -- Moreover, it is to be noted that in the case of those whose zenith is in the equinoctial the sun twice a year passes directly overhead, namely, when in the beginning of Aries and in the beginning of Libra; and then there are two high solstices for them when the sun passes directly overhead. Again there are two low solstices for them when the sun is in the first points of Cancer and Capricorn, and they are called "low" because then the sun is farthest removed from their zenith. From what has been said it is clear that, while they always have equinox, they will have in the course of a year four solstices, two high and two low. It also is evident that they have two summers when the sun is in either of the equinoctial points or nearly so, and likewise two winters when the sun is in the first points of Cancer and Capricorn or thereabouts. And this is why Alfraganus says that for them summer and winter are of one and the same complexion, since those two seasons which are winter and summer for us are for them two winters, and the difference is made clear by these lines of Lucan:

'Tis understood this is the place where the circle
Of the high solstice hits that of the signs midway. [\[14\]](#)

Here Lucan calls the equinoctial "the circle of the high solstice," on which two high solstices happen to those living at the equator. He calls the zodiac "circle of the signs," which the equinoctial "hits," that is, divides "midway," that is, halved or divided in two.

These also during the year have four shadows; for, when the sun is in either equinoctial point, their shadow in the morning falls toward the west, in the evening in the opposite direction. At noon their shadow is perpendicular, when the sun is overhead. When the sun is in the northern signs, their shadow lies toward the south; but when the sun is in the southern signs, then their shadow falls toward the north.

For them, too, the stars which are near the poles rise and set, and for others living near the equator. Hence Lucan:

Then Roman fury moves the remote Orestae
And Carmanian leaders whose ether, now turned Southward, yet does not see Arcton quite submerged,
And there swift Boötes shines in scant night. [\[15\]](#)

Therefore it is setting and shines little. Ovid, too, says of the same star:

The guardian of the Erimanthean bear is dipped in ocean
And with his star disturbs the waters of the sea. [\[16\]](#)

That is to say, it sets vertically. But in our locality those stars never set. Wherefore Virgil:

This vertex is ever above us. [\[17\]](#)

And Lucan:

Axis never-setting, bright with both Bears. [\[18\]](#)

Also Virgil:

Arctos dreading to touch the ocean wave. [\[19\]](#)

BETWEEN THE EQUATOR AND TROPIC OF CANCER. -- To those whose zenith is between the equinoctial and the Tropic of Cancer it happens twice a year that the sun passes directly overhead, which is shown thus. Suppose a circle parallel to the equinoctial passes through their zenith. That circle will intersect the zodiac at two points equidistant from the beginning of Cancer. Therefore, when the sun is at those two points it passes through their zenith; wherefore they have two summers and two winters, four solstices and four shadows, like those living at the equator. And some say Arabia is so situated. Hence Lucan, speaking of the Arabs coming to Rome to aid Pompey, says:

You Arabs have come to a world unknown to you
And marvel that the shade of trees is never leftward, [\[20\]](#)

since in their country shadows were sometimes to their right, sometimes to their left, sometimes perpendicular, sometimes to the east, sometimes to the west. But when they came to Rome beyond the Tropic of Cancer, then the shadows were always northward.

AT THE TROPIC OF CANCER. -- To those whose zenith is at the Tropic of Cancer it happens that the sun once a year passes through their zenith, namely, when it is in the first point of Cancer, and then for one hour of one day of the whole year their shadow is perpendicular. The city of Syene Is said to be so situated. Hence Lucan:

Syene's never varying shadow. [\[21\]](#)

Understand this as applying to noon of a single day; for all the rest of the year their shadow is northward.

BETWEEN THE TROPIC AND THE ARCTIC CIRCLE. -- But to those whose zenith is between the Tropic of Cancer and the Arctic circle it happens that the sun is never directly overhead and their shadow always lies toward the north. Such is our situation. Also it is to be noted that, according to some persons, Ethiopia or a part of it is this side of the Tropic of Cancer. Hence Lucan:

And Ethiopia which alone is untouched
By any region of the sign-bearing pole,
Except the hoof tip of curvetting Taurus. [\[22\]](#)

For they say that sign is here taken equivocally, both for a twelfth part of the zodiac and for the outline of the animal which, for the most part, is within the sign to which it gives its name. Wherefore Taurus, although it is, for the most part, within the zodiac, extends its foot beyond the Tropic of Cancer and so touches Ethiopia, although no part of the zodiac touches it. For if the foot of Taurus were extended toward the equinoctial so that it was in the direction of Aries or another sign, then it would be touched by Aries and Virgo or other signs, which is evident by drawing a circle parallel to the equinoctial through the zenith of the Ethiopians and Aries and Virgo or other signs. But, since philosophical reason is opposed to this, for they would not be so black if they were born in the temperate habitable zone, it must be said that that part of Ethiopia of which Lucan is speaking is beneath the equinoctial circle and that the foot of Taurus, of which he speaks, extends toward the equinoctial. But there is a distinction between cardinal signs and regions; for "cardinal signs" are the name for the two signs in which the solstices occur and the two in which the equinoxes occur, while the intermediate signs are called "regions." And in this way it becomes clear that, although Ethiopia is at the equator, it is not touched by any region but merely by two cardinal signs, namely, Aries and Libra.

AT THE ARCTIC CIRCLE. -- To those whose zenith is at the Arctic circle it happens on every day of the year that their zenith is identical with the pole of the zodiac, and then they have the zodiac or ecliptic as their horizon. And this is what Alfraganus says, that there the circle of the zodiac is bent over the circle of the hemisphere. But, since the firmament is in continual motion, the circle of the horizon will intersect the zodiac instantaneously, and, since they are great circles in the sphere, they will intersect in equal parts. Hence one half of the zodiac rises immediately above the horizon, and the other sinks below the horizon. And this is what Alfraganus says, that six signs set suddenly there, and the other six rise with the whole equinoctial. And, since the ecliptic is their horizon, when the sun is in the first point of Cancer they will have a day of 24 hours and a quasi-instant for night, since the sun touches the horizon for an instant and straightway rises, and that amount of contact is their night. The opposite happens when the sun is in the first point of Capricorn, for then they have a night of 24 hours and a quasi-instant for a day.

BETWEEN THE ARCTIC CIRCLE AND THE NORTH POLE. -- To those whose zenith is between the Arctic circle and the North Pole, it happens that their horizon will intersect the zodiac in two points equidistant from the beginning of Cancer. And, as the firmament revolves, this intercepted portion of the zodiac always remains above the horizon. Hence it is clear that, so long as the sun is in that portion, there will be continuous day without night. Therefore, if it is as much as one sign, there will be continuous day there for one month without night. If the sun remains for the extent of two signs, there will be continuous day without night for two months, and so on. It likewise happens that the portion intercepted between two points equidistant from the beginning of Capricorn is always left below the horizon. Hence, when the sun is in that intercepted portion, there will be one continuous night without day, short or long according to the extent of the portion intercepted. Moreover, the remaining signs which rise and set for them, rise and set preposterously. They rise preposterously, as Taurus before Aries, Aries before Pisces, Pisces before Aquarius. Yet the signs opposite these rise in right order. They set preposterously, as Scorpio before Libra, Libra before Virgo, <Virgo before Leo>. Yet the signs opposite these set vertically.

AT THE NORTH POLE. -- To those whose zenith is at the Arctic pole it happens that the horizon is identical with the equinoctial. Hence, since the equinoctial intersects the zodiac in equal parts, their horizon leaves half of the zodiac above and half below it. Wherefore, while the sun is moving through that half which extends from the beginning of Aries to the end of Virgo, there will be one continuous day without night; and when the sun is moving in the other half, which extends from the beginning of Libra to the end of Pisces, there will be one continuous night without day. Wherefore, one half of the whole year will be one artificial day, and the other half one night. Hence there the whole year is one natural day. But since there the sun is never more than 23 degrees below the horizon, it seems that they have continuous day without night; for we speak of its being day before the rise of the sun above the horizon. But this is according to popular usage; for in a scientific sense it is not artificial day except from the rising of the sun above the horizon to its setting beneath the horizon. As for that argument again, that there ought to be perpetual light there, it should be said that the air there is misty and dense, for the rays of the sun there are feeble and raise more vapors than they can consume, so that the air is not clear.

THE SEVEN CLIMES. -- Let a circle be imagined on the earth's surface directly under the equinoctial. And suppose another circle on the earth's surface passing from east to west through the poles. These two circles will intersect in two places at right spherical angles and divide the whole earth into four parts, one of which is our habitable region, namely, that which is intercepted between the semicircle drawn from east to west along the equator and the semicircle carried from east to west through the Arctic pole. Nor is that quarter entirely habitable, since parts of it near the equator are uninhabitable because of too great heat, and parts near the pole because of too great cold. Suppose, then, a line parallel to the equator dividing the parts uninhabitable on account of heat from those habitable parts toward the north. And suppose another line equidistant at all points from the Arctic pole dividing the parts which are uninhabitable for cold from the habitable parts toward the equator. Between these two extreme lines suppose six lines parallel to the equator, which, with the two former, divide the whole habitable quarter into seven parts which are called the "seven climes."

FIRST CLIME. -- The middle of the first clime is where the length of the longest day is 13 hours and the pole is elevated above the horizon 16 degrees, and it is called the "clime of Meroe." It begins where the length of the longest day is $12 \frac{3}{4}$ hours and the pole is elevated above the horizon $12 \frac{3}{4}$ degrees. And its breadth extends to the place where the length of the longest day is $13 \frac{1}{4}$ hours and the pole is elevated above the horizon $20 \frac{1}{2}$ degrees, which distance is 440 miles.

SECOND CLIME. -- The middle of the second clime is where the longest day is $13 \frac{1}{2}$ hours and the elevation of the pole above the horizon is $24 \frac{1}{4}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Syene." Its breadth from the end of the first clime to a place where the longest day is $13 \frac{3}{4}$ hours and the pole is elevated $27 \frac{1}{2}$ degrees, is a distance of 400 miles.

THIRD CLIME. -- The middle of the third clime is where the length of the longest day is 14 hours, and the elevation of the pole above the horizon is $30 \frac{3}{4}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Alexandria." Its breadth is from the end of the second clime to where the longest day is $14 \frac{1}{4}$ hours, and the altitude of the pole $33 \frac{2}{3}$ degrees, which is a distance of 350 miles.

FOURTH CLIME. -- The middle of the fourth clime is where the longest day is $14 \frac{1}{2}$ hours and the altitude of the axis is $36 \frac{2}{5}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Rhodes." Its breadth is from the end of the third clime to where the longest day is $14 \frac{3}{4}$ hours and the elevation of the pole is 39 degrees, which distance is 300 miles.

FIFTH CLIME. -- The middle of the fifth clime is where the major day is 15 hours and the elevation of the pole is $41 \frac{1}{3}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Rome." Its breadth is from the end of the fourth clime to where the longest day is $15 \frac{1}{4}$ hours and the elevation of the axis is $43 \frac{1}{2}$ degrees, which distance is 255 miles.

SIXTH CLIME. -- The middle of the sixth clime is where the longest day is $15 \frac{1}{2}$ hours and the pole is elevated above the horizon $45 \frac{2}{5}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Boristhenes." Its breadth is from the end of the fifth clime to where the length of the longest day is $15 \frac{3}{4}$ hours and the elevation of the axis is $47 \frac{1}{4}$ degrees, which distance is 212 miles.

SEVENTH CLIME. -- The middle of the seventh clime is where the longest day is 16 hours and the elevation of the pole above the horizon is $48 \frac{2}{3}$ degrees, and it is called the "clime of Ripheon." Its breadth is from the end of the sixth clime to where the maximum day is $16 \frac{1}{4}$ hours and the pole is elevated above the horizon $50 \frac{1}{2}$ degrees, which space of earth is 185 miles.

BEYOND IT. -- Beyond the end of this seventh clime there may be a number of islands and human habitations, yet whatever there is, since living conditions are bad, is not reckoned as a clime. Therefore, the whole difference between the initial limit of the climes and their end is $3 \frac{1}{2}$ hours, and of elevation of the pole above the horizon 38 degrees. So then we have made clear the breadth of each clime from its beginning toward the equator to its end toward the Arctic pole, and that the breadth of the first clime is greater than the latitude of the second, and so on. The length of a clime may be said to be the line drawn from east to west parallel to the equator; wherefore the length of the first clime is greater than the length of the second and so on, which happens because the sphere narrows down.

CHAPTER FOUR

MOVEMENT OF THE SUN. -- It should be noted that the sun has a single circle in which it is moved in the plane of the ecliptic, and it is eccentric. Any circle is called "eccentric" which, like that of the sun, dividing the earth into equal parts, does not have the same center as the earth but one outside it. Moreover, the point in the eccentric which approaches closest to the firmament is called aux or augis, meaning "elevation." The opposite point, which is farthest removed from the firmament, is called the "opposition" of the aux.

Moreover, there are two movements of the sun from west to east, one of which is its own in its eccentric, by which it is moved every day and night about 60 minutes. The other is the slower movement of the sphere itself on the poles of the axis of the circle of the signs, and it is equal to the movement of the sphere of the fixed stars, namely, 1 degree in a hundred years. From these two movements, then, is reckoned the sun's course in the circle of the signs from west to east, by which it cleaves the circle of the signs in 365 days and a fourth of one day, except for a small fraction which is imperceptible.

OF THE OTHER PLANETS: EQUANT, DEFERENT, AND EPICYCLE. -- Every planet except the sun has three circles, namely, equant, deferent, and epicycle. The equant of the moon is a circle concentric with the earth and in the plane of the ecliptic. Its deferent is an eccentric circle not in the plane of the ecliptic -- nay, one half of it slants toward the north and the other toward the south -- and the deferent intersects the equant in two places, and the figure of that intersection is called the "dragon" because it is wide in the middle and narrow toward the ends. That intersection, then, through which the moon is moved from south to north is called the "head of the dragon," while the other intersection through which it is moved from north to south is called the "tail of the dragon." Deferent and equant of each planet are equal, and know that both deferent and equant of Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, and Mercury are eccentric and outside the plane of the ecliptic, and yet those two are in the same plane. Also every planet except the sun has an epicycle. An epicycle is a small circle on whose circumference is carried the body of the planet, and the center of the epicycle is always carried along the circumference of the deferent.

STATIONARY, DIRECT, AND RETROGRADE. -- If, then, two lines are drawn from the center of the earth to include an epicycle, one on the east and the other on the west, the point of contact on the east is called the "first station," while the point of contact to the west is called the "second station." And when a planet is in either of those stations it is called "stationary." The upper arc of the epicycle intercepted between those two stations is called "direction," and when the planet is there it is called "direct." But the lower arc of the epicycle between the two stations is called "retrogradation," and a planet existing there is called "retrograde." But the moon is not stationary, direct, or retrograde because of the swiftness of its motion in its epicycle.

CAUSE OF LUNAR ECLIPSE. -- Since the sun is larger than the earth, it is necessary that half the sphere of earth be always illuminated by the sun and that the shadow of the earth, extended into the air like a cone, diminish in circumference until it ends in the plane of the circle of the signs inseparable from the nadir of the sun. The nadir is a point in the firmament directly opposite to the sun. Hence, when the moon, at full is in the head or tail of the dragon beneath the nadir of the sun, then the earth is interposed between sun and moon, and the cone of the earth's shadow falls on the body of the moon. Wherefore, since the moon has no light except from the sun, it actually is deprived of light and there is a general eclipse, if it is in the head or tail of the dragon directly but partial if it is almost within the bounds determined for eclipse. And it always happens at full moon or thereabouts. But, since in every opposition -- that is, at full moon -- the moon is not in the head or tail of the dragon or beneath the nadir of the sun, it is not necessary that the moon suffer eclipse at every full moon.

CAUSE OF SOLAR ECLIPSE. -- When the moon is in the head or tail of the dragon or nearly within the limits and in conjunction with the sun, then the body of the moon is interposed between our sight and the body of the sun. Hence it will obscure the brightness of the sun for us, and so the sun will suffer eclipse -- not that it ceases to shine but that it fails us because of the interposition of the moon between our sight and the sun. From these it is clear that a solar eclipse should always occur at the time of conjunction or new moon. And it is to be noted that when there is an eclipse of the moon, it is visible everywhere on earth. But when there is an eclipse of the sun, that is by no means so. Nay, it may be visible in one clime and not in another, which happens because of the different point of view in different climes. Whence Virgil most aptly and concisely expresses the nature of either eclipse:

Varied defects of the moon, and of the sun travails. [\[23\]](#)

ECLIPSE DURING THE PASSION MIRACULOUS. -- From the aforesaid it is also evident that, when the sun was eclipsed during the Passion and the same Passion occurred at full moon, that eclipse was not natural -- nay, it was miraculous and contrary to nature, since a solar eclipse ought to occur at new moon or thereabouts. On which account Dionysius the Areopagite is reported to have said during the same Passion, "Either the God of nature suffers, or the mechanism of the universe is dissolved."

In Service To

For those of you who have always wanted to skry but just didn't know how, or maybe you are looking for some more techniques.....

You are the to make it past my opening page!

Skrying is the art and practice of evoking entities into a medium; which allows the magikian to 'see', 'hear' and comprehend them so as to learn from them. Skrying is not an automatic talent that just comes naturally for the first time, well not for most of us anyway! Many people have to practice for weeks before any results occur, and those who are naturally and extraordinarily psychic, become more so with practice.

For those who think they already know how to skry, but want to get to the specifics of enochian: Yes I am adept at skrying, and I don't need this beginners info.

Enochian skrying 110

Step 1

Go find your crystal ball or magik mirror

First you need something to skry into. Ceremonial magickians generally use either a crystal ball (like Beavis) or a magik mirror; wiccans however do not limit themselves to this, they also use: water; fire; clouds; etc. etc. Only crystal balls and magik mirrors will be covered, as these are the standard implements for enochian skrying.

How to find and pick out a good crystal ball

Crystal balls should be chosen only by what feels right to you. When you go into a store that sells crystal balls ask to see each one and hold it in your hands, and intuitively feel if it is the right ball for you. Perfectly clear crystal balls are the best, although hard to find. You should also beware of 'lead crystal' balls. These are man made and totally useless (nearly anyway.) Lead crystal is just glass and lead, sort of like what they use for candle holders, chandeliers etc.

The magik mirror; the alternative that allows you to skry without putting a second mortgage on your house!

Magik mirrors can be easily come by. All you have to do is go to your local glass supply store, and ask them to cut a circular piece of glass for you about 4 to 12 inches wide (whichever size feels right/fits in your temple). Next take this glass home, sand off any rough edges, then either put it in a stream for a while (best option.) If you do not have access to a stream, you can put it under running water. As you do this visualize/feel the mirror being cleansed. After it is dry, paint two coats of black paint on the back, (make sure not to get any on the front accidentally, it is a pain in the butt to remove later.)

Step 2

Learn to skry

The great secret method of learning to skry efficiently, Practice! If you are specifically going to be doing enochian skrying you must make your watchtower tablets first. This is a means of both building your temple and getting used to the enochian energies.

Methodology

Choose what you are going to skry first. It could be an enochian letter, a square from a watchtower tablet, one of the eathyres, or an entity. Always do your opening rituals before any skrying session. First you must go into an altered state this can be done via ritual work, meditation, drumming, chanting etc. Have your "temple" completely dark except for the light of one or two candles. Make sure that the candles do not reflect onto your mirror or ball. Burn copious amounts of incense. Evoke the entity you wish to communicate with, or project the appropriate square, letter etc. into the mirror. When you skry you gaze softly into the mirror or crystal; relax your eyes, do not stare. Have your mind as free of thoughts as possible while gazing into your ball or mirror (especially: "am I doing this right?") At first only continue for about 15 minutes, or less if you want to stop. When you start skrying you may get nothing, (very common, don't worry, more will appear with practice,) or just a glimpse of an image. It is very important, write everything down! Only a small glimpse of what may seem trivial to you now may actually be very important later.

Welcome to Khephera's Angelic Magick Page. My methods tend to be "Dee Purist" in thier basis- meaning that I do not draw much from Golden Dawn or Thelemic sources at this time. Instead, I work directly with the original system as presented by Dee, and expand on it from there based on the direction I personally see the material pointing, and on what the Angels Themselves reveal to me. You'll note that there isn't a lot on this page, but you can be sure that what you do find here is of top quality and usefulness.
